LONDON CONFERENCE TO RECESS ON JULY 27TH

Agreement To Take Time Off Reached At Meeting Of Steering Committee

FINAL WORK WILL BE DONE THE LAST DAY

Pains Will be Used to Prevent Finality at Plenary Session Set For Final Day; Continuation of Tariff Truce Desired; Couzens Takes Back Expression of Disbust Over Lack of Action Of Sub Committee

London, July 14.—(AP)—The steering committee of the World Economic Conference decided today to recess the world-wide parley on July 27. All committees were notified to have complete reports ready by next Friday.

The full bureau meeting will be conducted the following Tuesday and a final plenary session will be held on the 27th.

It is understood that great care will be taken to avoid a note of finality at the plenary session.

There will be a clear indication that the conference is expected to resume work at a future date. This attitude would permit continuation of the tariff truce which for the duration of the parley and which many desire not to end.

The plenary session will have to confirm the steering committee's decision to close deliberations but leaders consider this a mere formality.

Senator James Couzens of Michigan was the center of interest today in a private meeting of the sub-committee considering the question of commercial indebtedness.

It was understood that the senator expressed distrust at the lack of progress and declared that the sub-committee might as well adjourn.

James M. Cox of Ohio, then called his colleagues aside for a few minutes of confidential talk after which Couzens withdrew his remarks.

Henry L. Stimson, former secretary of state, visited conference headquarters today and had a consultation with his successor at Washington, Cordell Hull. This was the first time Stimson had visited the delegation's office.

Miss Barnard was born and reared in Greenville, the daughter of the late Dr. William Barnard and Mrs. Mary Ann Barnard. She lived here many years before moving to other sections of the state. She was well known and is survived by a number of relatives in this community. News of her death was received with regret.

Late News Flashes From Over World

Says Cotton Drive Success.
Washington, July 14.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace today announced fulfillment of the cotton acreage reduction plan.
He said sufficient offers have been received from growers to cut this year's crop 3,500,000 bales.
At the same time he announced that President Roosevelt had approved the cotton processing tax of 42-10 cents per pound which will go into effect on August 1.
Secretary Wallace said that in contracts from growers so far received from 16 cotton states, farmers have offered to take out of production more than 9,000,000 acres. This figure may exceed 10,000,000 acres when all reports are in and several weeks will be required to tabulate contracts and that first acceptances of growers' individual contracts may be made by Wednesday.

He cautioned growers not to plow up any acreage until contracts had (Continued On Page Four)

FAIL TO BRING FORGER BACK

Greensboro Officers Beat Pitt County to James Cox at Washington

Instead of awaiting trial in a Pitt county jail, James Cox, Jr., of the Winterville community, was confined in the Greensboro jail today awaiting trial on a charge preferred by Guilford county authorities.
Sheriff Sam Whitehurst went to Washington day before yesterday to bring Cox back here to face a charge of forgery, but when he arrived in the Capital City he was informed that Greensboro officers had just left with the prisoner. The sheriff did not learn the nature of the charges preferred against Cox at Greensboro.

Returning to Greenville last night Sheriff Whitehurst said he did not know whether Cox would be brought here for trial after Greensboro gets through with him. Further action, he stated must develop later.
Cox was wanted here for the alleged forgery of two checks on Bill Branch, tobacco auctioneer of this city. The checks for $12 each, were cashed at the Greenville Banking and Trust Company in 1931.

When the crime was discovered Cox had disappeared. Nothing was heard of him until Washington authorities notified the sheriff here that they were holding Cox for action of Pitt county authorities.

USE OF COTTON JUMPS SPRYLY DURING JUNE

Consumption Reported Largest Since Beginning of Monthly Record in 1912

Washington, July 14.—(AP)—Cotton consumption in June was the largest of any single month since the Census Bureau started keeping monthly records in September, 1912.
The bureau said today that 696,472 bales were required by textile establishments during the thirty days.

The next largest consumption for any month since 1912 was 693,081 bales reported for March, 1927.

Consumption during June exclusive of linters was more than double that of last year when 322,703 bales were required.

Particularly noticeable was the record consumption by establishments in cotton growing states during the month, which was also double that of last year.

Southern textile mills used 565,644 bales during June compared with 275,832 bales last year.

Consumption of linters also increased for the nation with 81,468 bales consumed in June compared with 46,775 for the month in 1932.

During the month 25,540,504 spindles were active in mills compared with 20,646,966 last year.

Of these during June 17,593,128 spindles were active in cotton growing states compared with 15,247,908 active during that month last year. For New England 7,242,362 spindles were active in June compared with 4,569,172 active in June, 1932.

President State Medical Society Addresses Pitt County Society

Emphasizing the need of more attention to organization of the various medical societies of the state, Dr. Ike Manning, of Chapel Hill president of the North Carolina Medical Society, addressed the monthly meeting of the Pitt County Medical Society here last night.

Dr. Manning, one of the outstanding doctors of the state, told of the lack of attention to organization in some counties and declared medical men should throw greater support behind their societies and make them count for greater achievement.

He commended Pitt county physicians for the interest shown in the society here and expressed belief it had meant much in closer fellowship as well as increasing interest in improvement of the profession. (Continued On Page Two)

SEEK LIMITS FOR INDUSTRY

Voluntary Hour and Wage Limits to be Asked Pending Approval of Codes

Washington, July 14.—(AP)—Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of government industrial recovery enterprise, told newspapermen today that he expected it to be necessary to ask voluntary imposition of hour limits and increased wages by all businesses pending approval of the industrial codes.

This view was taken by him, although recognizing that agreements for minimum hours have been complete at a much improved rate and indicating it might not be necessary to impose fixed rates which all such cases should be in.

It was revealed that yesterday practically the entire rayon and silk industries came in a voluntarily sought to get under the cotton code of 40 hours a week and wages of $12 in the south and $13 in the north when the latter goes into effect next Monday.

This brought actually all of the spinning and weaving industry together except wool, which Johnson said was nearly ready with a code. He said it was suggested to have a general agreement between the industries and President Roosevelt as provided by the emergency plan.

A temporary injunction restraining the Page Trust Company from participating in the merger, is now in effect. Similar to the one against the Independent Trust Company it is to be argued before Judge A. M. Stack in Rockingham July 26.

Miss Avery McLean, Charlotte attorney, and other creditors of the local bank sought the restraining order.

HUGE PUBLIC WORK PROJECT IS UNDER WAY

Millions of Dollars to Be Spent in Road Improvement and Public Construction Projects; President Roosevelt Has Already Approved Spending of $400,000,000 For Highways; Additional Projects Pending

Washington, July 14.—(AP)—The public works administration today told how it intended to distribute the $115,513,610 as the first step in the program to create a million new jobs by October 1.

That $115,513,610, Secretary Ickes announced, will be apportioned this way: $64,561,542 for federal and public work; $50,000,000 for roads in parks, the Indian reservation and public lands; $952,068 for municipal water and sewerage.

This brought to $753,513,610 the total allocated from the $3,300,000,000 fund made available less than a month ago.

A vast number of additional projects are yet pending before the public works board which he heads, Ickes said, adding that only the non-controversial had been acted on first.

The biggest single amount, announced today was $38,000,000 for the Great Boulder dam canyon power and irrigation project on the Colorado river.

Besides this the bureau of reclamation got $5,800,000 for an irrigation project and $1,000,000 to finish the Vale project both in Oregon.

The International Boudry commission was allowed $528,000 chiefly for stretching out the Rio Grande river and controlling its flow. This was contingent upon Mexico furnishing part of the fund.

In most other cases, the federal fund was allotted to bureaus and departments.

Dollar Wheat The Weather Whim

Chicago, July 14.—(AP)—"Dollar wheat" may sound like big news in the headlines, but it means a combination of tragedy and good fortune for the nation's farmers this year.

When those $1 prices returned recently to glitter in the pockets of every farmer.

The damaging heat which brought a possibility of a national crop shortage into the picture is being largely responsible for the dizzy heights to which the market has climbed.

For the lucky farmer, skyrocketing wheat quotations to the highest points since September, 1930, naturally means greater profits than for many a year.

But for countless thousands whose crops have been mostly or totally destroyed by prolonged heat and drought the irony of dollar wheat will only accentuate the misfortune of crop losses.

This year's wheat market, traders and market analysts agree, is decidedly a weather market—controlled almost exclusively by the whims of nature.

Thus the farmer with grain in his bin—or an undamaged crop in his field—will reap profits on wheat planted and harvested at pre-inflation costs. For him dollar wheat may mean gains of 100 per cent, perhaps more, for every dollar invested.

But early estimates of gigantic crop losses, resulting from late spring drought and almost unprecedented May and June heat, indicate that unfortunate farmers will be in the big majority.

Dollar wheat in the market centers, moreover, does not mean dollar wheat for the farmer. From that price must be subtracted cost of insurance, freight and profit for intermediate handlers before it reaches the market.

The average farmer gets between 80 and 90 cents for his offerings when wheat sells in Chicago for a dollar.

The same heat which has caused so much damage to wheat has affected other grains similarly—especially corn and soybeans.

PITTMAN TO SPEAK HERE

Rev. W. A. Ryan, of the Christian church, and Rev. A. W. Fleischmann, of Memorial Baptist church, delivered the first two sermons of the summer campaign and large crowds were on hand at each service.

It was fair services are held on the lawn back of the courthouse, but in case of rain they are conducted in the courthouse auditorium.

TAG DAY TO BE HELD HERE

Young Woman's Club To Attempt to Raise Money to Help Ball Club

Next Wednesday will be observed as "Tag Day" in Greenville and the Young Woman's Club will sell tags to help boost the financial standing of the Greenville Club of the Coastal Plain League.

"Tag Day" will take place the day Aiden plays the local club here, and everybody purchasing a tag will be admitted to the game. In view of the fact that Wednesday is a half holiday, a tremendous crowd was expected to be on hand to see the local club attempt to regain lead of the circuit which was relinquished to Snow Hill several days ago.

Although attendance at all games played on home grounds has been fairly good, the club has fallen slightly behind in expenses and it is the purpose of "Tag Day" to remove the red from the club ledger and put them on financial "easy street" the remainder of the season.

THE TIME TO PULL TOGETHER

With the new deal on and the fall season just ahead the extent to which Greenville and Pitt County will share in the hoped for prosperity depends to a large part upon the effort our people put forth to forge to the front.

Greenville, the Hub of Eastern North Carolina, has long claimed to be the chief city of the section and the logical shopping center, and recent recognition of the city in the way of being designated as the home of one of the Federal Loan Banks, being issued a permit for a radio station, new home of the Carolina Shippers Association, appointment of its citizens to major federal posts, and with several manufacturing industries now negotiating to come to this city, to say nothing of the fact that at present Greenville is the largest tobacco market, seems to be aiding in the fulfillment of this claim. The point that we wish to make, however, is that now more than ever is the time for our people to determine definitely to join together to make our city and county bigger and better in every way.

No town or community has ever moved forward without the full co-operation of and a co-ordinated effort on the part of its citizens and we urge that our people join together in just such an effort now in order that we might make the most of the era of prosperity that lies ahead of us.

NOT A CENT FOR EDUCATION

(Concord Tribune)
The Federal Government has made billions available for public works, not one cent is allotted for educational purposes.

The government has opened its purse in generous fashion for highways, waterways, Federal court-houses, postoffices, power developments and the like, but not one penny has been granted for the enlightenment of our children.

Money spent for educational purposes—buildings, equipment, salaries, etc.—would benefit as many persons directly and many more indirectly than will much of the cash that has been appropriated for these other things. School systems throughout the land are facing starvation incomes; many teachers haven't been paid in many states; facilities are being denied an increasing number of students and many institutions of higher learning are being closed or forced to materially curtail their curricula, all because of shortage of funds.

If we provide modern highways for our tourists, adequate quarters for our courts, waterway systems that will benefit commerce, and sundry other services that meet physical needs, why shouldn't we take the more important step and allot some of this emergency money for the upbuilding of our millions of children whose chief benefits are derived from adequate educational facilities?

A New Script by Ruby M. Ayres

SYNOPSIS: Georgie Bancroft has hurried to Nicholas Boyd's apartment immediately after his return from Germany, a disappointed man because the operation he has undergone has not removed the scar that ruined his movie career. Georgie tells Nicholas she loves him; Nicholas reminds her that he is married, but finally confesses that he cares for Georgie. Meanwhile Bernie Boyd, Nicholas' wife, has decided to attach Bishop, Georgie's wealthy stepfather, to her string of admirers.

Chapter 41 BERNIE'S CONQUEST

Bernie's hand touched Bishop's sleeve again.

"Now, your wife, of course, is quite different. I do admire her so. You are a most fortunate man." He moved a little, squaring his shoulders with a sort of weariness. "In the course of my life, which is a fairly long one," he said thoughtfully, "I have made the interesting discovery that all people appear to be happy and fortunate until one knows them well, and then the cupboard door opens—perhaps only a trifle—and the skeletons peep out—no doubt you have noticed that."

"I have, indeed, I have," Bernie murmured. She was rather superstitious, and the mention of skeletons made her shiver. "I suppose none of us are really happy!" she murmured.

Bishop's grave mouth twisted into a smile.

"You are an exceedingly observant woman," he said. Bernie's eyelids fluttered. "I suppose to look at me," she said with a pathetic note, "people would say that I am perfectly happy and contented." She waited for a comment, but Bishop remained silent, and the long lashes swept upwards again, revealing her starry eyes. "But I am not. Life has been a big struggle."

"One can hardly imagine so, with a husband so famous," Bishop said. Bernie sighed. "Poor Nicholas! It's too sad. I really do not know what will become of him. Since his terrible accident he seems to have changed so much. I am afraid we shall never be able to live together again."

"You amaze me," Bishop said. "It is quite true," Bernie insisted sorrowfully. "He left America without a word to me. I was nearly beside myself."

"Naturally," she murmured. "You are so understanding," she murmured.

There was a little silence, then Bishop said, "Fortunately divorce is comparatively easy in your country."

"In my country, yes, but Nicholas is an Englishman, and it rather complicates matters."

"Otherwise, of course, you would seek your freedom," Bishop urged softly.

The pretty lines of Bernie's mouth hardened.

"It would need a lot of consideration," she said. "There are so many complications, and I should hate people to think that I had deserted him just when he was in trouble."

"Surely nobody could think that?" "I am afraid so. Of course I married when I was terribly young—little more than a child."

"A charming child, I am sure," Bishop said courteously. "And that being so, don't you think it will be a thousand pities for you to remain tied to a man you no longer care for?"

"Why, do you want me to divorce him?" she asked slowly.

Bishop's weary eyes seemed to open a little, and then usual somberness was lit by a sudden flash. "Supposing that is the reward which I hesitated to ask of you," he said.

For three days Georgie managed to be almost happy; she had much confidence in Nicholas Boyd, now she knew that he cared for her. She was still a little afraid to use the word "loved."

It was the fourth day after her meeting with Nicholas that Clifford Asher called at the hotel. Georgie had not seen him for some time, and she felt a little shy as she waited for him to come up to Evelyn's sitting room.

"I thought I was never going to see you again," she said.

His eyes scanned her face unsmilingly.

"I've come to say goodbye," he said.

"Goodbye!" Georgie's brown eyes dilated. "Why, where are you going?"

"I've had an offer to go to South America, my uncle's firm. It means better prospects. I go next week." She paled a little.

"And you never told me," she said reproachfully.

ly, she felt a little cold sensation round her heart.

Clifford smiled, she seemed such a child.

"Well, then," he said gently. "What's the use of waiting?" "Something may happen," Georgie said.

"And if it doesn't?" She shook her head, and he said impatiently. "Are you going to waste your whole life hoping that the impossible may happen?"

"That's not a very kind thing to say."

He looked away from her. "I sail on Friday week; if you change your mind you know where I am to be found."

Georgie felt sudden tears in her eyes, and seeing them he urged again passionately. "Oh, Georgie, can't you?"

"Clifford, dear, I wish I could." And in another moment he had gone.

Another knock at the door—"Please, Miss, can you see Miss Taylor?"

Georgie was grateful for the distraction; Nelly was better than nobody to talk to, and just now she dreaded being left with her own thoughts.

Nelly rushed in breathless and excited; she looked happier and more contented than Georgie had ever seen her.

"I can't stay a minute," she said. "I've got an afternoon off, for once, and I'm meeting a friend," she giggled. "I've got a new young man," she said proudly. "Quite nice he is too. Of course he may not mean anything, but there's always hope isn't there?"

"I hope he does," Georgie said fervently.

Nelly shrugged her shoulders. "Well, it helps pass the time," she said as if the affair were of no importance. "And I'm not expecting too much. I've had some before. But that isn't what I came to tell you." She hesitated, then said, "Miss Boyd's got a new admirer running after her."

"Has she?" Georgie was not particularly interested.

"It's your step-father." "Bishop!" Georgie laughed. "I don't believe you."

"It's true. He's down at the studio every day, and he takes her out to lunch too. Sends her flowers cartloads of them, and all sorts of presents. She isn't half pleased I can tell you."

"I don't believe you," Georgie said again.

"Alright," Nelly was inclined to be offended. "Ask him if you don't believe me."

"But he's married," Georgie gasped, and then realized the futility of the argument; Nicholas was also married.

Nelly said, "Pooh! the married ones are always the worst. And he and your mother aren't too sweet on each other, you take it from me. I've heard all sorts of things since I've been on this job. What's she going to Scotland alone for I should like to know?"

Georgie flushed; it was very distasteful to hear her own people spoken of by Nelly in such terms of familiarity.

"Anyway I'm sure you're wrong about Bishop," she said positively. "I know he wouldn't do a thing like that."

Funny that she felt more anxious to defend Bishop than to defend her own mother.

Nelly laughed. "If you don't choose to believe me it's no use saying any more; perhaps you won't believe something else I'm going to tell you."

"What is it?" "I expect you know. Nicholas Boyd's going away tonight."

Washington Daybook

Washington — President Roosevelt as one capital was expressed it, may be "six" administrations and five cousins removed" from the last Roosevelt in the White House, but he evidences that sense of humor and love of a practical joke that was so pronounced in "T. R."

The little game of hide and seek that he played with the group of newspapermen while the Amberjack II was fogbound in Lakemans bay on the coast of Maine is an excellent example. Quietly slipping out of their sight for a visit to the Ellis for water, the President gave the reporters a few thrilling moments before they located him.

One can almost hear the President's chuckle when they finally found him. More than once he has had them guessing by such antics.

It was T. R., who was fond of pulling such things on the newspapermen assigned to cover his movements. Frank B. Lord, formerly Washington correspondent for half a dozen or more metropolitan newspapers, and now busy at a government job in the capital, recalls a similar joke that T. R. pulled on the newspapermen of his day.

Elusive Teddy
"We had made the swing round the circle" says Lord, "and brought up in Memphis to attend a two-day session of a convention. When the meeting had been concluded, the schedule called for the departure of the presidential party late the next afternoon for the Louisiana cane breaks where T. R. was to spend 10 days hunting."

"We retired late and very weary—traveling with Roosevelt was strenuous business. When we woke we learned to our great dismay that the President had played a joke on us. Instead of waiting for the regular train to which his private car was to be attached, he had ordered a special engine and left the city before we were up. There was no train making connections on which we could follow for eight hours."

"There we were, high and dry in Memphis with our charge speeding away to the wilderness. To add to our distress there was a nationwide telegraphers' strike and it was difficult to get dispatches through under any conditions."

Congressional Action
"By chance I happened to think of a good friend of mine at Lake Providence, La., where the President was to embark and strike out for the hunting grounds. He was Senator Jos. E. Ransdell, then in the house, later in the senate, and now retired to private life."

"I called him over long distance and he gave me a detailed account of everything that happened upon the President's arrival there, even describing the kind of togs he wore when he mounted a buckboard and drove off for the cane brake. I bribed a railroad telegrapher and rushed my story through to New York."

"We finally caught up with the President, chucking over his prank I told him how I had circumvented his joke."

"Well, he said with a laugh, 'I never expected to get entirely free from you fellows, but I did want to test your resourcefulness.'"

Damage to corn, which may be as severe as that suffered by wheat, was caused principally by wet weather which delayed planting, plus extremely hot weather before the corn was big enough to shade itself.
Last year, in contrast, some Kansas farmers dumped wheat on the highways rather than accept the 25 cents a bushel then offered. Today many of those same farmers, their crops a total loss, gladly would exchange some of that wasted wheat for feed and seed.

Nature's somersaults have been in evidence since last September, when hot dry weather in the great wheat states caused delays in plowing and seeding, with the result that much of the new crop was not above the ground when winter came.
Then long weeks of cold, including several sub-zero blasts without a protecting blanket of snow, cut millions of bushels from the crop.
And finally, a cold wet spring, followed by excessive heat without a trace of rain in many sections, almost wiped out what prospects the wheat crop had left.

LOUISBURG SAWMILL DESTROYED BY FIRE

Louisburg, July 14—The sawmill of the Burgess Lumber Company located just outside the corporate limits of Louisburg, was totally destroyed by fire this afternoon. No water main being conveniently located, the fire department could be of little service. The mill was one of the largest in Franklin county and its destruction throws about 50 men out of employment. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

LOCALS WIN 1-0 VICTORY AT TARBORO

After blanking Tarboro 1-0 in an exhibition game at Tarboro yesterday afternoon, the Greenville club of the Coastal Plain league went to Kinston today in an effort to retaliate for the 2 to 1 victory of the Lenoir county lads here Wednesday afternoon.

Much interest is centered around the fray in view of the tight race between Ayden, Greenville and Snow Hill for the top. Although Snow Hill held the top rung by a narrow margin today, the two Pitt county teams were looking forward hopefully to knocking them off the limb in the two games this week. Greenville plays at Ayden Saturday and Kinston at Snow Hill.

Taylor, former high school star, did the mound work for Greenville yesterday. He allowed Tarboro only five hits which were so well scattered that they were not able to be converted into runs.

Loyed was on the firing line for Tarboro and give up seven safeties. A stolen base and two singles gave Greenville their only tally in the sixth frame.

Smith, new Greenville second sacker, and Bostic led the attack with the stick for Greenville, getting most of the bingles that the club was able to account for.

Taylor pitched one of the finest games of the season, and although it failed to play any part in the standing of clubs of the Coastal Plain circuit, it showed that the Greenville pitching staff is going even better than at anytime of the season.

TAX RATE OF 75 CENTS IS SEEN FOR CATAWBA

Hickory, July 14—Probability that the Catawba county tax rate for the ensuing fiscal year will be set at around 75 cents, when the county commissioners hold a special meeting the latter part of this month, is seen in comment from authoritative sources.

Final adoption of the county budget is expected to be made at the forthcoming session of the board prior to setting the tax rate.

Until the valuations for the county have been established, it is impossible to set the tax rate.

Present figures indicate that the total valuation for Catawba county will drop to about $36,000,000.

SPORT SLANTS By ALAN GOULD

It seems pretty well understood along the eastern fronts that at least a half dozen of our leading and ancient educational institutions which will be in full effect by 1934.

Carnell and Pennsylvania may complete the group for the time being, although it is also likely Columbia and Brown will join the combination later on, if not as charter members.

Old barriers or prejudices against a new football formation have already been broken down by the organization of leagues in basketball, baseball and lately, hockey, among the colleges afore-mentioned.

There have been a number of informal talks among athletic leaders, all of whom now look with a favorable eye on a closer banding-together on the gridirons.

It has been forty years since there was any football association of eastern colleges. The last one broke up with some ill-feeling in its wake and the big colleges haven't made any real attempt to get together again, for common aims and purposes, except to govern the appointment of officials.

They have been lone wolves when it came to schedule-making, apart from the scattered and long-standing rivalries that continued to keep Yale and Harvard, Yale and Princeton, Cornell and Pennsylvania, Colgate and Sayracuse, Lafayette-Lehigh and others together.

More Power Coming Up
West Point lost a number of familiar athletic figures with the departure of this year's graduating class but the attractions of a military career still seem powerful for a number of our best college athletes.

Two of our ablest young athletes slated to do big things at the stone-gray citadel up the Hudson river are Harrison Stafford, who has done a lot of blocking, ball-running, kicking and passing for the University of Texas over the past three gridiron campaigns, and 270-pound Jack Torrance, outstanding lineman of the Louisiana State university team for several seasons as well as the current national shotputting champion.

Stafford's appointment to the military academy is already effective, this year, so that he may fit neatly into the 1934 army backfield, but Torrance is not slated to go to West Point for another season, according to his friends.

Torrance heaved the 16 pound shot a distance of 52 feet, 10 inches in the National Collegiate A. A. championship, surpassing the listed world record, and then won the National A. A. U. title at Chicago with 51 feet, 4 7/8 inches. He is only 20 years old and may be heaving the ball out of the park at the rate he is going.

Dispatches do not state whether he also packs a good right-hand appetur. He weighs more than Primo Carnera now and might be just the material the boys are looking for in the heavyweight emergency of the next few years.

BROWN WINS TENNIS CROWN

Washington, N. C. July 14—Billy Brown of Greenville, won the singles championship of the Eastern-Carolina tennis tournament here by defeating Charles Woodward, a fellow townsman 6-4, 6-4 in the finals.

The doubles finals was an all-Washington affair, with James Hamilton and Charles Gurganus defeating John Respass and Julian Lindsey 8-6 1-6, 6-4, 6-5.

In today's singles semi-finals Brown had eliminated Hamilton while Woodward had defeated George Hornbess, Rocky Mount.

The tournament opened Monday with 30 players from eight communities participating. The schedule had been delayed a day by inclement weather.

Traders were inclined to turn attention to specialties when most of leaders exhibited expected enthusiasm and some of these were run up around 7 points.

Stocks rallied 7 to more points included Allied Chemical and Industrial Rayon. Most of the distilling issues were quiet although U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Commercial Solvent got up about 2 points each.

Other gainers from one to two included U. S. Smelting American Tobacco.

American Telephone and American Can dropped a point or more and a number of other shares followed the narrow range.

Declines in the late dealing ranged from fractions to more than two points. Transfers were 5,300,000 shares.

New York Cotton

New York, July 14—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady unchanged to 7 higher in response to steeper Liverpool cables and on complaint of crop deterioration in Texas.

The opening advance met further liquidation and realizing and prices eased off sharply right after the call with December declining from 11.76 to 11.60 or about 13 points below yesterday's close.

Offerings were absorbed however, and market was steady at the end of the first half hour with December around 11.78 and the more active months showing advances of 4 to 5 points.

Trading was quiet and the market steadied later in the morning. (Courtesy Speight & Co.)

for plowing up acreage will bring $120,000,000.

Begin Tobacco Cut Drive.
Washington, July 14.—(AP)—Farm administrators will begin their acreage cut campaign for cigar leaf tobacco next Monday in all the tobacco growing states, in an effort to cut this year's harvest 50 per cent.

Plans for the growing districts vary because of the difference in tobacco raised but grades for all areas have one provision in common—the paying of cash bounties to growers who destroy portions of their growing crops.

A processing tax will become effective October 1 to finance the program. Such a levy to aid in financing the acreage reduction is applied when the tobacco is changed or processed toward the finished product. This tax will be at the rate of 6 cents a pound and will be aimed to yield some five to eight million dollars.
