

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT BATTLES ORGANIZED CRIME

Dozen Fronts Witness Spectacular Fight To Curb Kidnaping Evils

DRIVE BACKED BY PRESIDENT AT CAPITAL

Minute Men Organized in Indiana to Halt Forays of Criminals; Citizens of Tennessee Battle Bank Robbers; Three Killed; Two Men Still in Hands of Kidnapers in This Country

(By The Associated Press) On a dozen fronts the agencies of the federal government fought crime today.

At Washington, at Albany, in the middle west and on the Pacific coast there were new evidences of a determination to crush the kidnaping breed.

President Roosevelt has said he wants to establish a super relief force of federal agents to step in and check the growth of organized crime especially kidnaping.

Governor Balzar of Nevada said: San Francisco added their voices to the demand for action.

Governor Balzar of Nevada said: "It is up to individual governors to cooperate possibly with the federal government to do something to these gangs."

In several parts of the country there were signs today that public indignation against criminals was getting results.

There was other evidence of public sentiment against recent successful forays of criminals. The director of the Department of Public Safety in Indiana called for organization of light minute men in every community.

In Mirron, Tennessee, citizens fought bank robbers as evidence of a determination to drive out crime. One member of a posse was killed and two captured.

Despite the attack on crime by these several agencies acts of violence showed no signs of abating.

Two men are still in the hands of kidnapers—L. John O'Connell, Jr., of Albany, N. Y., and Charles F. Urschel of Oklahoma City.

ITALIAN PLANE FORCED DOWN

Other Planes Continue Flight as Single Machine Lands at Victoria Harbor

Victoria Harbor, P. E. I., July 26.—(AP)—One of the planes of the Italian armada alighted here today for repairs. The other 23 continued on toward Shoal Harbor, N. F., their destination when they took off from Sheddick, N. B., this morning.

The 23 planes completed passage over Prince Edward Island at 9 a. m. (EST) when one of the planes came down in Victoria harbor, the others circled about and then returned flight at a signal from below.

A motor boat went out from shore and towed the plane to the wharf side. The airman spoke no English and fishermen in the boat were unable to learn what was wrong but the Italian busied themselves about the motors as though they expected to make repairs and get back in the air.

Sweeping across Prince Edward Island, the armada faced cloudy weather but visibility was fair and clear weather was reported off the coast.

New Bern, July 25.—William B. Dunham of Raleigh, U. S. referee in bankruptcy, was here Monday to hold hearings in bankruptcy cases of the J. B. Blades Lumber Company and the Smith Creek Stave and Lumber Company.

GIVES PLAN FOR CUTTING COTTON CROP

Farm Director Here Advises Growers to Cut Stalks and Then Plow Up

"Cut down your cotton and then plow it up," is the advice of E. F. Arnold, director of the Pitt County Farm Department, to farmers who agreed to take part of their crop out of cultivation in connection with the government drive to reduce this year's acreage.

Mr. Arnold declared this was the best plan to prevent new growth of the staple and opens the way for the planting of feed crops.

As soon as permits have been signed by growers, the farm director said committeemen would visit all farms and determine if growers had lived up to their contracts for taking the staple out of production.

Pitt county signed to destroy approximately 5,000 acres of cotton, the equivalent of 2,400 bales and planters will be paid around $130,000 for doing so.

Last of the special permit blanks which the department here started issuing last Saturday were expected to be in hands of farmers by today or tomorrow. The destruction of cotton got underway Monday and has increased in scope each day in spite of the fact that growers are rushed with the annual task of getting tobacco out of the fields and cured.

Clark had been tied up for about an hour and a half when he was released by Dave McDaniel, farmer living in the section.

McDaniel said he was in bed and heard Clark "nollering" but did not get up.

RAY IS AGAIN BEHIND BARS OF JAIL HERE

Alleged Robber Who Escaped Several Days Ago Surrenders At Chapel Hill

M. P. "Railroad" Ray, who escaped from the county jail here about two weeks ago was back behind the bars here again today, vindicated of the charge of having taken part in the recent robbery of the Battleboro National bank.

Ray was returned here late yesterday from Nashville where he was viewed by persons who witnessed the robbery and who said he was not one of the gang. Among those taking part in his vindication was J. A. Daughtridge, cashier of the bank while the three bandits robbed the bank. Daughtridge stated emphatically Ray was not one of the bandits.

Ray, who said he had been staying with relatives in the Chapel Hill community, surrendered to C. H. Wright, Chapel Hill police chief, who carried him to Nashville in an effort to determine whether or not he participated in the robbery.

J. H. Griffin, deputy sheriff, accompanied Ray to Battleboro. After the visit to Battleboro, Ray was lodged in the Nashville jail to await his return to Greenville.

Asked in Nashville how he escaped at Greenville, Ray was said to have stated, "No one will ever know, but I did it without even scratching the paint on the lock."

He will face trial at the next term of criminal court on a charge of taking part in the robbery of the Billow-Duncan wholesale house here several months ago. He was alleged to be one of a gang of freight car and wholesale robbers operating in this section, and other members of the band were being held in other jails as well as here.

Ray escaped through the second floor door in the front of the jail through the door on the side is known as the "main" entrance to the building. It was first supposed Ray pushed the key from the outside of the lock and fished it under the door, but this theory has been abandoned by officers. It is now presumed that with the aid of some kind of small instrument, he tripped the lock and made his way to safety. Officers said this morning this was possible while the key was on the outside.

RUN DOWN BY CAR, MAN HURT

Robert Haddock Seriously Injured By Hit and Run Driver Monday Night

Robert Haddock of Chiood township, was confined in Pitt Community Hospital today suffering from serious injuries sustained when he was run down by a hit-and-run driver at the Chiood school cross roads Monday night.

The driver of the car has not been apprehended.

Haddock, about 21 years of age, said he was walking along the road when an unlighted car approached. When about ten feet from him, he said the driver flashed on his lights. It was too late, however, for the young man to reach safety and he was knocked violently to the pavement by the speeding car which shot along the road at increased speed.

Rushed to the hospital here, Haddock was found to be in serious condition, although hospital attendants held out hope for his recovery.

ONE INJURED IN COLLISION

Gilbert Peel, Jr., Seriously Hurt When Truck Hits Hoover Cart Near Here

Gilbert Peel, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Peel of this city, was seriously injured when the Hoover cart on which he was riding, was struck last night by a truck driven by Jim Vandiford of Greenville.

The youth was said to have received a broken leg in addition to other injuries. Another occupant of the car, a Mr. Broadhurst, received minor injuries.

Both the car and truck were coming toward Greenville on the Greenville-Bethel highway near the river bridge, when the machine collided with the cart. Vandiford was said to have told officers he was blinded by the lights of an approaching car and did not see the cart ahead of him.

The cart was badly demolished by the impact. A wheel of the truck was said to have been resting on Peel's body after the crash.

India Awaits Gandhi's Next Disobedience Drive

Simla, India, July 26.—(AP)—Up here in the "hill capital" of India government officials are preparing to meet the next phase in Mahatma Gandhi's struggle for his "brand of Indian independence."

Hopes of peace in this teeming peninsula and of the final calling off of the civil disobedience movement fostered by the Indian nationalist congress, were dimmed recently when Gandhi announced his new plan of campaign.

He said that beginning August 1 individual disobedience acts would begin, although he himself would not take part in them without first warning the government of his intention to do so. Hitherto it has been a mass movement.

This pronouncement followed the break down of negotiations for a personal interview between the little nationalist leader and the viceroy, Lord Willingdon. The latter would not receive Gandhi unless the passive resistance campaign were unconditionally suspended.

LEGISLATORS N. C. RALLIES PREDICT N. C. BEHIND DRIVE WILL VOTE WET OF PRESIDENT

Raleigh, July 26.—(AP)—Legislators and former members of the General Assembly who are coming to Raleigh these days continue to predict that their home counties in practically every case appeared ready to vote for repeal of the 18th amendment.

Orange county, said "My county, I believe, will give a wet majority, but there is a strong element of dry sentiment there."

Judge Francis Winston, Lt. Governor in 1905 and veteran legislator, said his home county of Bertie will vote for repeal if the preachers let us, and Rep. C. W. Sprull, of Bertie, said: "I think Bertie will go for repeal."

Rep. Earnest Graham of Roberson, refused to comment on the situation in his county but "Rep. Van Watson of Nash and F. M. Taylor of Halifax, predicted repeal majorities."

Senator A. B. Corey of Pitt believes it will be for repeal by a big majority, and "I'll be darned if I don't believe the state will go for repeal by a two to one vote."

South Carolina Also Taking Steps to Boost Movement for Economic Recovery

Charlotte, July 26.—(AP)—Carolinians from cross roads stores to the largest industries in the two states rallied today under the sign of the eagle and the legend "we will do our part."

From time of President Roosevelt's plea Monday night for a volunteer code to raise wages and decrease working hours, business interests in North and South Carolina began to formulate plans with other states to bring into line working conditions looking to a nationwide economic recovery.

The president in his speech from Washington placed on the shoulders of every employer the responsibility for the success of the recovery plan and the response of the Carolinians was immediate.

While farmers in the two states were plowing up cotton today in an effort to better prices, business and industrial leaders in the states' major cities either had formulated codes or were completing plans for one applicable to their particular work. Men and women were being hired, wages were being raised and hours of work shortened.

LABOR DAY SET AS GOAL FOR WORKERS

Government Believes Millions Will be Employed by September; Johnson Encouraged by Thousands of Telegrams Promising Support Of Plan to Raise Wages and Increase Employment

Washington, July 26.—(AP)—Victory was claimed today in President Roosevelt's latest move for re-employment of jobless millions by Labor Day even though the campaign has yet to reach top speed.

Tomorrow a 5,000,000 agreement blanks for volunteer higher wages and shorter hours for all workers will be laid on the desk of the American business and tradesmen.

Today Hugh S. Johnson, the general of the industrial recovery campaign, exulted at the testimony of thousands upon thousands of telegrams that the country was ready to back the president all the way.

"Nothing can stop the program," Johnson explained last night in a nation-wide address after burrowing into 10,000,000 telegrams still growing in number and taxing facilities of telegraph companies in answer to President Roosevelt's appeal for support.

Rocky Mount Mills AT WORK ON CODE

Rocky Mount, July 26.—Officials of the Rocky Mount Mills today are completing plans for the inauguration of the industrial code here.

Pay rolls, which according to Hyman Battle, general manager will be increased, has been the object of a great deal of work during the past several days.

With regard to personnel, Mr. Battle pointed out that the force of workers in the mill has been almost doubled within the past four months so that approximately 750 now are being given work.

One of the obstacles confronted in working out the code has been with regard to piece workers, who will not be permitted to receive less than 30 cents per hour under the new regulations. Enough work must be provided so that each worker will receive work sufficient to guarantee him the stipulated 30 cents per hour.

A DANGEROUS PRACTICE

It has been noticed of late that some motorists in this city are making a practice of cutting through driveways at corner filling stations instead of driving around the corners as they should and this practice is indeed dangerous business. When one motorist sees another cut into the driveway of a filling station he naturally takes it for granted that the latter is going in for a stop and when the car speeds on out into the intersecting street beyond it affords great danger to the approaching motorist from that direction. While we have heard no complaint from the filling station operators it should be remembered that these drives are private property of the station operators for the serving of their customers and are not public thoroughfares. When you use these driveways as a short cut around the corner you are imposing upon the station operator as well as being a menace to the safety of others. It doesn't take but a few more seconds to drive carefully around the corner and it is by far the safest way after all.

GOVERNMENTAL RELIEF

The Industrial News Review is giving good advice to the farmer when it declares that while government relief will give the farmer an opportunity to bridge his present difficulties, in the long run the financial independence and well-being of the farmer is in his own hands and depends upon his own efforts. Warning the farmers against adoption of an attitude of absolute dependence upon government help as a permanent thing the Review says:

The new farm bill is swinging slowly into action. The government will undertake to balance production and demand, to improve the farmer's financial condition, to ease the burden of mortgages, and to raise the prices of his produce.

While this may be temporarily beneficial, it will be permanently harmful, if the farmer as an individual, comes to depend on government to solve his problems and smooth his path. That is always the trouble with governmental aid measures, no matter how carefully they are drawn—they are apt to create a feeling of dependence in the beneficiary that leaves him helpless when aid has been taken away.

The wise farmer will recognize the bill for what it is—an effort to carry him through a critical period, and give him a hand in straightening out his troubles, so that he may stand on his own feet thereafter. Lasting farm progress comes from the farmer's own effort. It must be the reflection of his own will, his own aggressiveness, his own courage, if it is to be permanent.

The HIDDEN DOOR

By Frank L. Packard

Synopsis: Reddy Turner, crook, asked Colin Hewitt, mystery writer and boyhood friend, as well, to deliver a mysterious letter for him should Reddy be put on the spot. Reddy tells Colin he is the only man he can trust; also that the letter is hidden in his room, inside a curtain pole. Colin asks that Reddy explain why he is fearful of his life, and in front of a coal fire in Colin's comfortable quarters in an old stable, just off Washington Square, New York, Reddy begins his said tale.

Chapter Three

UNDERLYING TRAGEDY

Reddy's voice was suddenly flat. "She was still only a kid of course when you left the old town, because she was nearly six years younger than I am, but I guess you remember my sister Annie, don't you?"

Colin nodded uneasily. He did not like the note that had crept into Reddy's voice.

"Annie!" he said. "Rather; I've toted her around a hundred times on the handles of my bicycle, and all the while she'd sing like a little lark. She was a great youngster. I suppose she was about eleven or twelve when I finally left the town. She was a good little pal of mine—after you went away, Reddy. We the 'job' I was talking about. I'll get the man who did it—or he'll get me. That's why I've got my fingers crossed on what may happen at any time to me, because I know what I'm up against."

Reddy paused and circled his lips with the tip of his tongue.

"The police didn't get anywhere," he went on. "Anyway, it isn't a police job—it's mine."

"The code, of course," Colin nodded in understanding. "Well?"

"I know who drove the car the night Pete was bumped off, and I know who the two guys were that made a sive of him with sawed-off shotguns, but there's no hurry about them. Their turn will come—but they're still useful. It's the big noise they work for that I'm after."

"You know who he is?" Colin's voice was husky.

"If I knew who he was" Reddy stated evenly, "he wouldn't be alive tonight. No; I'm not sure yet. But I've gone a long way. Listen! Your 'master minds' and 'super crooks' are jokes compared with the one I'm talking about. He swings a mob in every racket there is, from dope and beer and booze to white-slave stuff, with a little murder organization kept on tap to round everything out. Each mob is separate, and no

"I know who drove the car when Pete was bumped off!"

both missed you a lot. What has made you mention her tonight?"

"She's part of the story I'm going to tell you," Reddy answered with a crooked smile. Her body was fished out of the river here; six months after French Pete, that we were talking about, was put on the spot. That's why French Pete was bumped off—Annie had been married to him about a week before."

"I don't think I quite understand," Colin said heavily.

"Somebody else wanted her," Reddy laughed unpleasantly. "French Pete was in the way, that's all."

Colin's hand dropped to his side and clenched.

"My God!" he exclaimed hoarsely. "Go on."

"French Pete was a pal of mine," Reddy's voice was flat again. "That's how Annie came to know him. He was a French Canadian, and his name was Mireau—Pierre Mireau. He was in the beer racket, and he wasn't any church-goer, but he was straight as a string with Annie. You see, after the mother and father died I kept Annie going in a little flat here and between stretches, I used to live with her."

"She wasn't for Pete's racket, and a whole lot less for mine, but she stuck to me through the years like a brick, and what any good woman could do to shove us both back on the straight and narrow, she did. She loved Pete and Pete loved her, understand that."

Reddy paused abruptly, strode over to the decanter, hesitated an instant, and the came back.

"No," he said. "I'll wait till I'm through. I was in stir when Annie got married. But even the walls where I was don't keep out the news. You know that. The night that Pete was bumped off, Annie disappeared. I got the low-down on it. She was kidnapped. And I couldn't get out. Six months later she was found in the river and identified as Mrs. Pierre Mireau, the wife of French Pete, who had been put on the spot."

"I remember reading about that," said Colin hoarsely. "It was front-page stuff, but the name, of course, meant nothing to me."

"No," Reddy said. "Of course it wouldn't."

"And then?" Colin prompted through tight lips.

"You said something about Annie being pretty when she was a child" Reddy's lips were working now. "Some of them don't grow up that way. Annie did. When she married Pete there wasn't anything in town that could touch her. And she was straight! There was only one way that swine could get her."

"I got out two months ago, and Annie's been dead nearly five now. I don't know whether that's the way he got rid of her when he got tired of her, or perhaps found out that she'd got to know too much or whether she managed to escape and crazy with it all, did it herself; but it was murder either way."

Reddy laughed again—it was a jangling discordant sound. "That's why I can't leave New York. That's

STEEL ALONE IS NOT ENOUGH!

—neither strong enough, nor safe enough, nor quiet enough for the body of a quality car like CHEVROLET

CHEVROLET There is only one type of body construction which Chevrolet will permit on the chassis of the cars it builds: That's the type which every test—and every experiment—and every experience has proved to be the safest, strongest, and best. Not steel alone, because steel alone is not enough. But a Fisher body of steel reinforced by hardwood! The same kind of construction used on practically all the highest-priced cars in America.

Chevrolet well knows that steel alone has one distinct advantage: it's cheaper. Steel also is strong—up to a certain point. BUT—beyond that point, steel alone will bend and crumple under severe stress or shock. And there's where hardwood does its work. Hardwood reinforces the steel and is, in turn, reinforced by the steel. Hardwood absorbs shocks—takes out rattle and rumble. The result: A steel plus hardwood body can withstand concussions that crush a body built of steel alone.

If you're thinking of buying a new low-priced car, better watch this matter of bodies carefully! Insist on steel reinforced by hardwood! Fortunately, the only low-priced car with this preferred type of body is also the only car with a proven valve-in-head six; with Fisher Ventilation; with Cushion-Balanced Power; with a genuine Synchron-Mesh gear-shift; and a Starterator. That car is Chevrolet—America's most economical automobile!

Shift Of Gibson To Rio Possibly Has Trade Angle

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—When Hugh Gibson, generally rated one of the most experienced career diplomats in the government, was shifted from Brussels to Brazil by President Roosevelt rather early in his administration, it struck some Washington observers as a bid odd.

Gibson's long years of experience with the problem of disarmament, at a time when it seemed that the Roosevelt administration was setting out with high hopes to get somewhere in the disarmament field, appeared indispensable.

Ever since President Harding called the world disarmament conference in Washington back in 1921 Hugh Gibson has been a looked upon as a sort of walking textbook on this subject.

Because he left Harvard to join an established legal firm in New York, and at 27 was able to embark on his own practice, Lodge scarcely needed to "hang out his shingle."

In fact, as an actor he had to hang out no shingle either. He was invited to take a screen test when he came here last September, partly for a rest, partly on business, mainly to accompany his wife, Francesca Braggiotti, actress and dancer, home to New York. After they got home, Paramount wired him to come back and sign a contract.

But he has had to wait. He had just a flash of a role, at his own request, for his first screen appearance in "The Woman Accused."

Then came a large assignment in "Murders in the Zoo," and thirdly, the villain role in "Under the Tom-tom." Now he has the part of John Brooke in "Little Women."

"And this," he says, "is the first time I've worked since March. However, they tell me that I'm really lucky. I have one friend who is under contract who hasn't worked in a year."

Lodge still has no plans for returning to law, although he keeps his office open in New York. "I'm interested in this," he says, "and I believe in giving all one's attention to the thing in hand. Some day, no doubt, I'll return, but I haven't made any plans for it."

His enthusiasm for pictures of course, dates back to Harvard experiences in dramatics, and an old desire to go on the stage. He likes pictures so much that he is quite willing to have his 3-year-old daughter, Lily, embark on the career when she grows up.

Lily already has had her camera baptism, having played a child's bit in "Little Women" with her father—just for fun, as he explains.

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood, July 26.—(AP)—John Davis Lodge missed the traditional experience of young lawyers when he took up practice after college. He did not have to hang out his shingle and wait.

But the movies have let him wait where the law didn't—and he thinks he is lucky at that.

Scion of Massachusetts Lodges, 6 feet 1 inch tall, Lodge is now playing his fourth role in pictures, for which he gave up what he terms a "quite good" law business. This, however, was no monetary sacrifice. It appears, inasmuch as he insisted on a contract that would compensate him financially for his forsaken business.

Tips on CONTRACI

CARD READING (By Tom O'Neil)

Correct deductions as to the holdings of an adversary are necessary for success with some contracts. From bids, leads and play masters at times come to definite conclusions without guesses. Take this card:

The bidding went: Lewis Osborn, South, one heart; West, one spade; North, two hearts; East, pass; South, four hearts.

When the dummy went down there seemed to be a strong possibility of losing a diamond and three clubs and thereby being set one.

But South eventually determined that by ducking on the lead of a club by East, he could take a trick with the club queen.

West opened the queen of spades which was won with the ace. The two top hearts exhausted the adversaries' trumps. South then led to the spade king and ruffed a spade, East discarding a low club.

It was then known that West held originally six spades and two hearts.

South crossed to dummy by a heart and led the three of diamonds, finessing the knave successfully. It was therefore certain that East held the king of diamonds.

The ace of diamonds was led, followed by the deuce on which West followed. East capturing the trick with the king.

The play now had accounted for 11 cards of West's original holdings, six spades, two hearts and three diamonds. The fall of the 10 showed he had no more diamonds, and so it was obvious he had two clubs left. One of them must be the ace.

He needed the ace to make an overcall of South's original hand bid, because his spade suit backed the top.

East led the knave of clubs, and South knew all he wanted. East must be leading from the king-knave, believing South had the queen and would cover and enable West and East to take three club tricks.

South played the five spot instead of covering, and game was certain. West had to take the trick with the ace and return a club, making South's queen good and giving West and East only one diamond and two club tricks.

If West ducked the first club lead, he would have had to take the second and would have nothing to lead but a spade, which South could ruff in the North hand, discarding a losing club South.

The same result would come about should East lead the 13th diamond, instead of a club.

Facts On New Cotton Tax

Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering has released the following information pertaining to the taxes imposed under the Agricultural Adjustment Act with respect to the basic agricultural commodity, cotton.

The tax on cotton will take effect at the beginning of the marketing year which has been proclaimed by the Secretary of Agriculture as the first moment of August 1, 1933. The rate of tax prescribed is 4.2 cents per pound on the net quantity of the lint cotton, that is, cotton which has been ginned, at the time it is put into processing or manufacture.

In determining the net weight the tare or weight of bales, ties and the jute or other bagging, should be deducted from the gross weight of the bale. All cotton in process, at the moment the tax takes effect, including yarn, fabric, thread, twine, roving, silver, laps and all other forms, will be taxed at the rate of 4.4184 cents per pound.

The cotton content of any processed product of which cotton is the component of chief value which is held for sale or other disposition on the effective date whether in the hands of processor, manufacturer, jobber or wholesaler will be taxed at the rate of 4.4184 cents per pound. The same rate of tax will apply with respect to separate retail stocks of cotton products held by a retail dealer on the effective date providing such products are not sold or disposed of within thirty days after the effective date.

GREENVILLE WINS HECTIC GAME 13-12

That old saying about a ball game never being won until the last ball has been thrown was demonstrated to the satisfaction of about a thousand fans here yesterday when Greenville nosed out a 13 to 12 victory over Ayden in the playoff of a postponed game that went for 11 innings before the winning tally could be shoved over the rubber.

Lefty Dean was the hero of that final thrilling finish. After his team mates knotted the count 11-all by sending four runners scampering home in the ninth frame, the Greenville southpaw ace, lined out a stinging grounder which Ayden erred and the winning runner went home in the twelfth.

The game was the greatest conglomeration of baseball witnessed on the local diamond this season and nearly ran wild. Each club erred freely, Greenville being credited with nine against Ayden seven. But the bats of both clubs apparently were loaded with dynamite, and each alleged the old apple until fielders almost ran themselves to death in an attempt to properly cover their territory.

Ayden fans were viewing the game complacently in that ninth inning with the score standing 13 to 8 in their favor. It really looked like they had the old game sowed up and numbers of fans had left their seats and gone home.

With two out in the ninth frame the Greenville barrage started and when the dust had cleared four runners had crossed the rubber on six hits to knot the count 13-all. It was a disheartening break for the Ayden people, but it sent Greenville fans into a frenzy of cheering that hardly ceased until the final rally that brought in the deciding tally.

In a fine demonstration of fielding interspersing the errors at the first part of the game, Bob Lang, Greenville left fielder, scintillated. He ran away over the foul line and made a one hand stab of a long drive.

For Greenville "Skipper" Harrington led with the willow, connecting for four hits out of six trips to the plate. He was followed by Miller, Dean and Lang with three each. Two of Miller's drives went for two bases.

Morris and McQuade were the bright lights for Ayden, obtaining three safeties each, one of those by Morris going for an extra base.

Forbes and Sigmon pitched the first six innings when Dean was called to the mound to halt the visitors. He allowed one more run in the remaining six innings, blasting Ayden's hope of increasing their lead. Fythe, Johnson and Holland did mound work for Ayden, but none were able to stop the Greenville bats.

The victory tightened Greenville's lead on the top of the standing of clubs column and sent Ayden hurtling to undisputed possession of the cellar. Greenville went to Ayden today and Kinston played in Snow Hill.

SPORT SLANTS

Lord David Burghley, one of the most famous and popular track athletes ever developed in England, had not heard of Jack Lovelock's record-smashing mile when he delivered his swan song to London sports writers, but he made this prophetic statement:

"On the question of continuing to better existing times, I think the human frame is developing continually and will always be capable of better and better speeds. The competitive element, too, is a great force in athletics. So long as you have one man putting up records, so long will you have twenty others trying to smash them, and eventually succeeding."

The "superiority" which Americans were usually able to claim in athletics, Lord Burghley added, came not so much from superior coaching, more intensive or more whole-hearted training, as was generally thought in England, but from their far greater number of varsity undergraduates.

"When you have an enormous number of students—there are single universities in America of 12,000 or 15,000 students—you are almost sure to have a corresponding large number of enthusiastic young athletes."

Catechized on his experiences, habits and opinions, Lord Burghley's responses are grouped thus interestingly in the London prints: Olympic Games—Despite many adverse views they are undoubtedly a powerful influence for international amity. Sixty nations in the stress of physical competition got along far better at Los Angeles than 65 nations seem able to do at the Geological Museum.

Biggest Thrill of My Career—Winning the 400 meters at the Amsterdam Olympiad in 1928 by two feet. A marvelous moment!

Training Methods—Mine are a shock to my American friends. When I am in good condition, one day's training and one day's racing a week is quite sufficient.

Diet—No fads. Regular meals and digestible food are all that matter. Hours—Reasonable. I used to be in bed by eleven most nights and get eight hours sleep.

English "Weakness" in Field Events—This will not be remedied until we get a super-man to lead the way, fire enthusiasm and form a "school" of enthusiasts.

Secret of Finns' Success—Largely a matter of temperament.

It will be a long time before American tennis enthusiasts forget Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin, the blond British youngster who twice has been a stumbling block to our Davis Cup hopes. Not since the pre-war days of John C. Parke has any British star so harassed the United States forces as Austin.

Never a national champion, possessed of limited stamina and regarded somewhat lightly by many tennis sharps, Austin has now assumed the "giant killing" role in Davis Cup play. Two years ago he whipped Frank Sneels and Sidney Wood in the singles, and his conquest of Elkowitz Vines in straight sets this July at Paris left the Americans gasping.

Austin reached the Wimbledon final of 1932 but he was then no match for Vines, losing by 6-4, 6-2, 6-0. It is noteworthy that in turning the tables in the Davis Cup play this year the British No. 2 star allowed Vines only six games.

HAS NEW THEORY IN GROWING OF PEACHES

New Bern, July 26.—It is the theory of W. C. Ernul of Ernul, that if peach trees are trimmed up from the ground so that the sun can strike the ground in which they grow much of the difficulty in growing peaches in this section can be eliminated.

Mr. Ernul recently brought to New Bern a branch a yard long from a peach tree growing on his farm. Within a space of 19 inches there were 22 fully-developed and ripened peaches. The tree never has been sprayed but the fruit was as good as any offered on the market this year.
