SAYS INNOCENT MAN WAS EXECUTED YESTERDAY

Local Tobacconists Say Georgia Prices Very Satisfactory

FARMERS ARE WELL PLEASED

Say Dissatisfaction Was Among Those Who Had Placed Their Price Hopes Too High

Greenville tobacconists including leading warehousemen and representatives of the buying concerns, who have just returned from a tour of the Georgia markets, declared that the reports as to the dissatisfaction there were unfounded and that the price situation was most satisfactory.

They said that the rump started over the price situation on two of the small markets was the result of the fact that the farmers had been led to expect opening prices of around 18 to 20 cents and that when the opening got under way the prices were disappointing to them.

In commenting on the general tobacco situation, these local tobacconists warned growers of this section not to place their hopes for too high an opening price lest, like some of the Georgia growers, they find disappointment.

One the whole, they said the situation in Georgia is far better than it was last year and the same can be expected in this belt.

ENGLISH INVENTORS TINKER WITH NUMEROUS PROBLEMS

The comptroller general of patents received applications totaling 37,052 compared with 36,117 in 1931.

Public Support Regarded Crux Of Code Enterprise

It is next to impossible for anyone at a distance to realize how completely the Washington picture is dominated these days by the National Recovery administration. Events of higher importance are taking place in other fields. The government is launched on a multiplicity of separate major operations, ranging from a cautious "open market" campaign of currency expansion to the greatest public works program in history.

Topping Them All Probably no living man pretends to comprehend all that may be involved in this great undertaking. It rises like the highest peak in the range, but the best you can do is to get distant views of the summit.

The South Carolina growers suggested the opening date be changed to August 8th and the date fixed today was a compromise.

Gastonia, Stonewall J. Durham, prominent Gastonia attorney disclosed today that two unidentified white men told him they witnessed the slaying of W. J. Carter, Rockingham filling station operator, and that Clay Fogleman, who was executed in Raleigh yesterday was innocent of the charge.

Durham, who lives near here said the men came to his home and said they were hitch-hikers. They asked for money.

While there, the attorney said they remarked to him that the execution in Raleigh of Fogleman meant the death of an innocent man and they did not know that they were talking to an attorney.

It was then 10 a. m. Fogleman was executed at 10:30 a. m.

Durham said he left the men on his porch and immediately telephoned the Governor's office at Raleigh. He could not get in touch with the Governor but communicated with the Governor's secretary.

Nazi Doctrine In Text Books Stirs Austria

Vienna—(AP)—Educational authorities of Austria are revising school histories as one way of helping Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss' campaign for perpetuation of Austria's independence.

The movement had its motive in the fact that while Dollfuss was urging the people to resist the Nazi doctrine of union with Germany, the textbooks were preaching "anschluss" to the youngsters.

Language Passes State Lines Says one of these textbooks under the caption "Germany, Nation and State":

"The territory inhabited by the German people is Germany, which is larger than the German reich. State and nation do not always occupy identical territory; the language boundaries of people seldom coincide with state boundaries."

"And so great sections of German-speaking territory belong to foreign states. Even the union of the two purely German states, the German reich and Austria, has not yet been attainable."

DROUGHT DAMAGES CROPS IN SECTION OF OKLAHOMA

Enid, Okla.—(AP)—One of the worst droughts in Oklahoma history has left the "panhandle" and a few other counties in the western part of the state seared and almost destitute.

Sandstorms, some of which were so dense as to halt traffic and bring darkness in mid-afternoon, buried crops in fields early in the season. Heat and drought completed the work of damage to panhandle crops and pastures.

Figures recently made public revealed that during May of this year, the people of the United States consumed 12,822,972,513 cigarettes, the largest consumption for any one month in the history of the industry. In view of these figures there should certainly be a good demand this year for the cigarette type of tobacco produced in this section.

THEY COME BACK FOR MORE

We have always heard that a burned child dreads fire, which no doubt is true, but the same doesn't hold true with those grown-up children who get burned in the stock market and still come back for more. Commenting on these hogs for punishment, the Pathfinder says:

Right when everything was going well—the market took a series of nose dives. Nobody knows how many "lambs" were fleeced—and we don't have to care very much, for they had this shearing coming to them. They never get enough of it. They go away shorn, and vowing they will keep out of stock gambling in future—but the temptation to make a fortune over night is too strong for them, and when the brokers and bucket-shop touts again open up, there are always plenty more victims asking to be sheared, if not slaughtered.

SHOULD POSTPONE TAX ADVERTISEMENTS

For sometime past we have been urging that the advertisement of this year's delinquent tax list be deferred until later in the fall to give the taxpayers an opportunity to pay. Early this week a restraining order was signed by Judge Frizzelle to prevent the advertisement of the county tax list, yet at Thursday night's meeting of the Board of Aldermen the city officials taking the attitude that the law did not permit them to postpone action ordered the city list published this month with the sale set for the first Monday in September. As we have argued all along there are a great many folks who would pay their taxes to keep from being advertised but they cannot pay until the fall season opens. If the list is published this month and these people are advertised, then they will figure that all the damage for a time that can be done them has been done and the result is that they will wait the limit to pay their taxes. We honestly believe that the city would collect more taxes by postponing the advertising for another month at least than by advertising now. If as they see it, there can be no postponement without a restraining order

The HIDDEN DOOR

By Frank L. Packard

SYNOPSIS: Colin Hewitt, who now calls himself Donald Howard as part of the scheme he has adopted to evade the Mask, New York underworld killer, packs his effects in his cabin on the Bonaventure, preparing to land at Cap a l'Orage, remote settlement on the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The Mask killed Colin's friend Reddy Turner, but not before Reddy had pledged Colin to deliver a letter to Joe Lazarre, who lives near Cap a l'Orage and presumably is employed by the Mask himself. The Mask is said to have "interests" nearby. But as he packs, Colin (who is a writer of detective fiction) thinks of Germaine Tremblay.

Chapter 12. GERMAINE TREMBLAY The captain, Captain Rainville, had introduced her to him the second day out. "Mademoiselle Germaine Tremblay"—the captain had lingered over the name affectionately. "You have only to be down here but a very little while, Mr. Howard, to know what the name of Tremblay means on the coast." She had flushed prettily. "Captain Rainville is always like that!" she had protested. "Don't you believe a word he says. He is a great tease." But Captain Rainville, who had himself been born on the coast and knew somebody, had been even conservative in what he had said. Those of the coast who were aboard had treated her with the utmost deference; and Colin heard much about the fame of the Tremblays and their connection with the north shore.

They had been amongst the earliest settlers, the first Tremblay coming originally from France. Several generations. Prospering. Open-handed. Respected. In short, the story of the Tremblays was the story of the north shore—and vice versa.

Colin frowned over his packing. Her father was Dr. Louis Tremblay of Cap a l'Orage, the present head of the family. He had married an English girl. A romance begun in his college days in Montreal. But his wife was now dead. There was only a daughter and a son left. The son, following in his father's footsteps had graduated in medicine in Montreal, and was now taking a special course in New York. Germaine—Mademoiselle Tremblay—was returning from a visit to some friends in Quebec.

Marvelous hair—like burnished gold where the sun glistened on it. She inherited that from her mother, too, probably. Someone had said she could drive a dog team with the best of them—and yet she was scarcely up to his shoulder.

Colin went up on deck. Her chair was still unoccupied. He hung himself into his own chair and tugged a book out of his pocket. For some unaccountable reason he did not feel like talking to anybody—not even to Francois Jolicoeur, the old timber cruiser over there, who told entrancing tales of the coast and his own adventures—alas, not always true! A priceless old lar! A great character for a book written around these parts! A book! What book? Would he, Colin, ever write another? He had his own skin now to put it bluntly, to think of first.

Somewhere a wench suddenly spluttered and clanked—noisily, discordantly. They were getting cargo up on deck. A sure sign that another part was near at hand. Cap a l'Orage. He looked up.

She had just emerged from the captain's room up there off the lower bridge, the captain following her through the doorway. Colin heard her laugh ring out as she gayly spurned the captain's offer of assistance, and came lithely down the ladder.

How would he describe her if he were introducing her as a heroine to his readers? He wasn't much good when it came to his "girl" stuff—never had been. Always afraid of it. But he wasn't describing her now in a lame and groping paragraph as he rose from his chair to meet her and they automatically drifted over to the rail together—he was just looking at her.

The blue eyes smiled at him frankly out of a face whose only cosmetics were the sun and the out-of-doors.

"I thought you'd gone down to pack," he said.

"Oh, no," she laughed, "I did that before lunch, except, of course, just the few finishing touches. And you?"

"All set," he answered. "Captain Rainville chased me away." She waved her hand shoreward. "We'll be in shortly. That's Cap a l'Orage over there. See that bald old mountain sticking out into the water with a lighthouse on top of it? The town is just this side of it in that little bay. You can begin to see the houses now."

"I see." He nodded. "Storm Cape. I've always meant to ask how it came by its name."

Studying her, he saw the smile fade from her eyes as she shook her head gravely.

here, like the open sea, and you can't see the other shore; but then that's true in lots of other places. But the storms do seem to center her and at times are very violent. "Besides, though the Gulf is famous for its fogs, we seem to get more than our share of those too—and so often they come upon us all—and so often they come upon us all! The storms are really very treacherous, and there is scarcely a year goes by that one of our men is never heard of again. And another's sorrow in a little place like ours, you know, is one's own too."

He nodded his head. "I can well appreciate that," he said quietly. "And so that's how it came by its name, is it?"

She nodded her head in turn; and then her mood changed swiftly and she was smiling at him again—half teasingly, and yet half in earnest too, it seemed.

"Do you know," she said, "that I've really been worrying a lot about you ever since I knew you were getting off at Cap a l'Orage?"

"He fell in with her mood. "How awful!" he exclaimed tragically.

"No, really!" she returned quickly. "Madame Frenier does the best she can with her so-called 'hotel,' but it is far from being a modern hostelry and far, I am afraid, from what you will expect. It's mostly post office and general store. You know, we are supposed to be hospitable here on the coast, and I am sure father would take you completely under his wing, only—her face clouded suddenly—"I don't thank her very well."

"That's what has brought me back a little sooner than I had expected. But, in any case, I promise you won't be utterly deserted—if you like an occasional tramp through the woods—and I've got a rather jolly little motorboat, not terribly swanky, but a brave little craft just the same."

"Glorious!" he exclaimed enthusiastically. "As for the rest, I am sure that Madame Frenier and I will get along famously. And besides—"

He studied her for a moment. His thoughts raced suddenly. Why not? He couldn't go around everywhere asking for Joe Lazarre! This was the obvious, the natural, the least suspicious move to make. He didn't like that—with her! But what could he do?

"And besides," he went on, "I'm not sure that I am going to be wholly a stranger in a strange land. A friend of a friend of mine!" He laughed a little. "You know! I believe he's down here at Cap a l'Orage. His name is Lazarre. Joe—short for Joseph, of course."

"Lazarre?" she repeated, and shook her head. "It's not an uncommon name by any means, but I am sure I know everyone in Cap a l'Orage, and there is no one by that name in the village."

Colin dug for a cigarette and lighted it. Lazarre wasn't the man's real name of course. Everybody in the whole business seemed to indulge in fictitious names—himself included! But Reddy had said that it was as Lazarre the man was known here. Not so easy, apparently, from what she had just said, to pick up the trail! And yet he had scarcely expected to find the man a resident of Cap a l'Orage. Reddy's uncertainty as to Lazarre's exact whereabouts had suggested a decided question mark in that regard. But someone in the town must have seen or heard of Joe Lazarre.

"Oh, well," he said lightly, "it really doesn't matter."

"Wait!" she cried out impulsively.

He waited. He liked the dainty way in which her brow was suddenly profoundly puckered.

"Of course!" she said. "I hadn't thought of that! If he's a friend of a friend of yours, and moving in exalted social circles—she was a little witch—she made him a staid bow—perhaps he's one of the men who come down every year to the club."

"The club?" he echoed. "Then there is a club at Cap a l'Orage?"

KIWANIS CLUB HELD MEETING LAST NIGHT

In the absence of the president the meeting last night was presided over by Dr. R. S. McGeachy. Following the evening meal an enjoyable musical program was enjoyed. Berry Boetic was in charge of the club group singing and then Mrs. Harper Holaday, of Leaksville, rendered two beautiful solos, "Heart's Delight" and "Smilin' Thru". She was accompanied at the piano by her sister Mrs. Agnes Settle, of this city.

Speaking on the subject of the "Boy Scout Movement in the light of Criminology" Hoover Taft brought to the attention of the club members the great cost of crime in this country annually and how in communities where the scout movement has gained a hold, the crime among young people has shown a great decrease. Among the statistics was the fact that up to 1932 1,568,000 boys had graduated from the Boy Scouts of America and that not one of them had ever been convicted in criminal court. He emphasized the great benefits of the movement in behalf of these future citizens and urged the club members to give the movement its hearty support at all times.

Dr. R. S. McGeachy presented

Miss Eibel Nice, home demonstration agent for this county, to the club and after a short talk covering the activities of her department in the county she introduced Miss Mildred Taylor, of Pactolus, who has recently won the honor of Health Queen for the eastern district of North Carolina. The Kiwanis club is to send Miss Taylor to Raleigh for the short 4-H club course at State College.

Attention of the members was called to the coming division meeting to be held at Wrightsville August 25th and every member was urged to attend.

Other guests last night included Kiwanian Marion S. Lewis, of Charleston, S. C., chairman of the Underprivileged Child Committee of the Carolinas District of Kiwanis. Mr. Lewis is a native of Pitt county the son of Mrs. H. L. Lewis of Grimesland.

GRAPE JUICE BEER MADE BY ITALIAN WINE EXPERT

Conegliano, Italy.—(AP)—Beer made from grapejuice has resulted in a patent for Professor Alfredo Mazzei, instructor of wine-making in the Institute of Enology here.

Professor Mazzei takes fresh grape juice and through a process not made public removes all its vinous characteristics. Then he ferments the liquid with yeast, and treats it with hops.

Professor Mazzei is a national authority on enology, or the science of wine-making, and Italian newspapers hail the invention as a cure for the serious overproduction of wine.

UTILEY—BRIDGES

The home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bowen on Library street, was the scene of a very quiet but pretty wedding this morning at sunrise, when Miss Harriet Clementine Bridges and Herbert B. Utey were married.

The home was appropriately decorated with yellow gladioli and roses, and burning tapers in silver holders.

Rev. A. W. Fleischmann, pastor of Memorial Baptist Church, performed the ceremony, using the impressive ring service.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a brown and white crepe sport ensemble, with harmonizing accessories. Her flowers were a shoulderette of sweetheart roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Utey is the daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Bridges of Elm City. For the past several years she has been a member of the faculty of the city schools, is pretty and quite popular among a wide circle of friends. She is a graduate of Columbia University and received her master's degree from the University of North Carolina.

Mr. Utey, formerly of Orange county, is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Utey. For the past ten years he has been news editor of the Daily Reflector. He is popular and held in high esteem by hosts of friends.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Utey left for a wedding trip through the Valley of Virginia. On their return to Greenville they will make their home in Chatham Circle.

DUNN PROPOSES FOR DISTRICT COUNSELLOR

New Bern, Aug. 4—At a meeting of the Fifth Judicial District Bar Saturday at Beaufort, a president and counsellor are to be elected. The meeting was called by Judge J. Paul Frizzelle, resident judge of the district, in conformance with a recent act of the Legislature.

Petitions for the election of William Dunn, local attorney, as counsellor are being circulated and it is thought the New Bern entry has bright chances for selection. The president probably will be chosen from one of the other counties of the district.

ICE MEN AND BARBERS SLOW IN GETTING CODE

Wilmington, Aug. 4—(AP)—Ice manufacturers and barbers who have been unable to agree on a local code of fair competition were told today when they appealed to the central re-employment committee to get together and compose their own differences and then come back.

J. A. Taylor, chairman, criticized the groups who appealed to the committee to step in and fix their prices for them. He declared "it's not what you want to do it's what you ought to do." Advising the ice men to get together, he declared the government would license them if they did not.

BOTTLED NOTE PICKED UP AFTER DRIFTING 1500 MILES

Pensacola, Fla., (AP)—A bottled note, probably set adrift to trace the current of the Caribbean sea and the Gulf of Mexico, came ashore here after traveling 1,500 miles.

The note was signed by the commander of the U. S. S. Mercury, a ship of the United States hydrographic service, and contained a request that that department be notified when the bottle was found.

George R. Kee found the note and says he is forwarding it to the hydrographic service.

TEACHER SUPPLY EXCEEDS DEMANDS, REPORT DECLARES

Ann Arbor, Mich., (AP)—The principle of control over production needs to be applied to the turning out of school teachers by normal schools and colleges, a report from a survey at the University of Michigan advises.

The report points out that various Michigan teacher-training institutions turned out 5,494 teachers in 1931 while 5,535 were given teachers' certificates, several times more than were needed to fill demands of the state's schools.

From 1910 to 1920 there was a 67 per cent increase in school enrollment, the report says, and during the war a shortage of teachers was increased while since 1920 enrollment has not grown at the rate of the previous decade.

POTATO ACREAGE IN CURRITUCK REDUCED

Currituck, Aug. 4—Sweet potato acreage in Currituck has been greatly reduced but the outlook is for a better yield than last year at this time.

The price outlook at present is favorable, Currituck sweets are commanding a price of $2 a basket on the Norfolk market, or $6 a barrel. Six dollars a barrel at Norfolk should mean around $5 for potatoes in the field.

GOVERNOR LEAVES FOR MONTH'S VACATION

Raleigh, Aug. 5—Seeking the peace and quiet of the countryside, Governor Ehringhaus, accompanied by his wife, left Raleigh yesterday for an "unannounced" destination in North Carolina to spend his vacation.

The Governor will be away for about a month. He said he had selected a secluded site to take a "complete rest." He did not make it known. His health has been very good since he was inaugurated in January and he has been taking treatments for a kidney ailment.

Although the Governor left Raleigh without making a number of expected appointments, he announced that during his absence his secretary, Charles G. Powell, would make known some selections.

Powell said some appointments probably would be announced today.

STRUCK BY BASEBALL, ASKS $25,000 DAMAGES

New Bern, Aug. 5—Sul for $25,000 has been entered in superior court here by W. B. Pugh against the Travelers Protective Life Association, of St. Louis, as the result of an accident that caused severe injury to his eye and nose when he was struck some weeks ago by a batte baseball in Oriental.

The insurance company has failed to pay expenses of the accident or any damage sum, it is understood, on the grounds that it had cancelled the policy before the accident; but Mr. Pugh is claiming that the policy was still in force and that the company had no right to try to cancel it.

PLAN GROUP TEACHING OF INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC

Minneapolis—(AP)—A person need not have individual lessons to learn to play the clarinet, violin or trombone, says Carlyle M. Scott, head of the University of Minnesota music department.

The university plans to teach instrumental music to small groups of students instead of giving individual instruction, he said. It will be cheaper for the student, and Scott is convinced it will be just as effective.

LOCALS WIN FROM AYDEN IN CLOSE GAME

By R. O. MOYE
(Official Scorekeeper)

Greenville baseball fans were treated to a real game of ball here yesterday afternoon as the local club defeated the Ayden club in a close game by the score of 2-1. Stankus pitched for Ayden allowed the locals only three hits, two of which came in the ninth frame and counted the winning tally.

Greenville managed to score in the seventh frame after Stephenson, Ayden catcher, made two errors and Poole had made the first hit off Stankus. Greenville was unable to get a man on first base until the seventh frame.

Ayden tied things up in the ninth frame after Wall had made a beautiful single to bring in the tying run. Greenville came back in the ninth frame and bunched two hits, which brought in the winning run.

Lefty Dean, who pitched for the locals, allowed only five scattered hits and struck out a total of six men and did not give a single pass to first base.

Stankus pitched for Ayden, did a fine piece of hurling but his support didn't match his hurling and errors brought his defeat. He struck out a total of four men and allowed two passes to first.

"Skipper" Harrington proved to be the outstanding fielder of the day. He had a total of five tries, all of which were made good, and on one or two occasions went way out of his territory to make some beautiful catches.

During the ninth inning rain broke up the game for a few minutes but play was resumed despite the slow drizzle.
