HUGE BOMB IS EXPLODED IN CUBAN REVOLUTION

Seven Officers Hurt By Blast On Street Car

Interior Cities Threatened by Actual Food Shortage; Government Orders Distribution of Provisions; Liberals Expected to Modify Declaration Against United States; Small Chance of Ending Strike Today

Havana, Cuba, Aug. 11.—(AP)—As the drive to oust President Gerardo Machado neared its climax today a huge bomb was exploded beneath an Havana street car loaded with policemen, seven of whom were injured, one probably fatally.

President Machado remained at the head of the government but it was expected that his liberal party would modify its declaration against what the liberals termed "the intermeddling" of the United States ambassador, Sumner Welles.

A street car bearing policemen to their beats was bombed at Linea and Sixth streets. In addition to the injured occupants, the bomb badly damaged the car.

Judicial police in charge of settling the labor conflict frankly admitted there was small chance of strike car and omnibus workers going back on the job today as they reportedly promised.

Havana was better provisioned but the government recognized the danger of possible looting by distributing 10,000 rations at four distributing stations.

NEWS 'CODE' DRAWS FIRE

General Johnson Declares Certain Provisions Unsatisfactory to Administration

Washington, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Hugh S. Johnson, the industrial administrator, today said there were "proposals which are unsatisfactory" in the proposed code of hours and wages submitted by the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Johnson declined at a press conference to intimate what sections he considered objectionable but said the publishers' representatives were due at his office some time today to talk over the program.

Those who signed the blanket re-employment agreement will be the only ones immediately entitled to the Blue Eagle adherence to the recovery program.

It has been intimated in circles close to Johnson that he feels there are too many reservations in the newspaper code and that he objects to its failure to specify short hours for reporters and copy editors.

The merchandise missed following a check up included tobacco, cigars, cigarettes, snuff and dress goods. The entire supply of tobacco and cigarettes was reported as missing.

Entrance to the store was believed to have been made between midnight and daylight and was discovered when employees went to the store early next morning to open for the day's business.

Major Fletcher said he had been told the Florence Mills employed between 350 and 500 workers.

Last night Commissioner Fletcher was advised by Inspector Lang that he had arranged a conference for today between a strikers' committee and the mill owners. Fifty men walked out from one department of the mill and 150 others were now threatening to strike, he was told.

Larger Leaf Crop Forecast

Washington, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Tobacco production this year as indicated by the August canvass of the Department of Agriculture was announced today for the principal producing state.

The country's total indicated crop is 1,299,154,000 pounds and the condition on August 1 was 68.9 per cent of the normal last year's crop.

LARGE CROWD EXPECTED AT LEAF MEETING

J. Con Lanier to Speak at Gathering Of Farmers Here Tomorrow

J. Con Lanier, Greenville lawyer recently appointed to the tobacco division of the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, today accepted an invitation to attend the meeting of tobacco growers here tomorrow afternoon to discuss reduction plans for next year and improved prices for this year's crop.

Mr. Lanier wired his acceptance about the noon hour, today following receipt of an invitation from the Pitt County Department of Agriculture that he be present to explain the government proposal to the tobacco growers of this section.

As head of the tobacco contract department, Mr. Lanier is well informed regarding the situation as it affects the entire country, and was expected to be of great assistance as growers draft resolutions for presentation to the federal government for fair prices for the crop.

Hundreds of farmers with the thought of leaf prices foremost in their minds were expected to attend the session. J. E. Winslow, president of the Pitt County Farm Department, will preside, and E. F. Arnold, county farm agent, will outline the nature of the meeting and the proposal of the government to curtail acreage during the coming season.

Committees who took such a prominent part in the cotton reduction drive were in charge of the advertising campaign for tomorrow's gathering and reports from them today indicated practically every township would be well represented.

The thing concerning the farmer most seriously at this time is the price he is going to be paid for this year's crop, considered one of the best in years. With prices for commodities advancing rapidly, it is realized that tobacco prices must be well above last year's average if the growers are able to keep their heads above the water.

"Living prices for bright leaf" will be the war cry to those who gather here and it was expected resolutions would be adopted urging the government to take some action to assume fair prices for this year's crop before going into details for reduction next year.

Being the largest bright leaf producing county in the world, Pitt county is always concerned over the outlook for prices of the products and this year is no exception, especially in the face of advances made in cotton, grains and other great American crops. This makes it necessary for the tobacco grower to make above cost of production and if they fail, then the future is anything but rosy for them and the thousands of people depending upon them for support.

Increased purchasing power is the object of the government recovery drive but the tobacco growers will be left out in the dark all by themselves if they do not receive favorable prices for their products.

NO GAINS ON GOOD TOBACCO ON THE BORDER

B. B. Sugg Says Medium and Better Grades Selling About Same as Last Year

While prices for lower grades of tobacco are selling higher than last year on the border markets which opened yesterday, medium and better grades are about the same as last year, according to Greenville tobaccoists who visited various markets of North and South Carolina belt yesterday.

B. B. Sugg, one of the leading warehousemen in this part of the state, who was on the Fairmont market, wired the Daily Reflector concerning the price situation and reiterated his statement upon his arrival here today.

He expressed confidence that prices would be better later on, especially when the markets open in this belt.

Mr. Sugg, commenting on the general situation, said there was more tobacco in the fields on the border than in this section, where the housing and curing process has been underway for some time.

He stated the average on the border was around 11 and 12 cents a pound. The only advance over last year was in the common tobacco with the medium and better grades showing no improvement.

Mr. Sugg was joined by others in expressing belief there would be a general improvement in the price situation later on and this held out hope to growers who have been looking with lack of enthusiasm on the opening day reports from the border belt.

The opening of the Eastern Carolina markets the latter part of this month will find the bulk of the crop in this section housed and cured and growers were preparing to have it graded in readiness for the first sales of this great bright leaf belt.

Public Meeting in Various Eastern Carolina Towns Held Yesterday; Ask Federal Government to Take Hand And Guarantee Decent Returns For Tobacco Crop

Raleigh, Aug. 11.—(AP)—Appeals to the federal government to take a hand and guarantee decent returns for their tobacco went forward to Washington today from weed growers in Eastern Carolina.

Meeting at various points in the tobacco belt yesterday, the farmers unanimously expressed belief that the government ought to come to the relief of the tobacco growers.

At most of the meetings resolutions were passed asking the government to create a branch of the Department of Agriculture to look after the needs of the growers of leaf tobacco, take steps to reduce yields and lessen production.

While the meetings were being held, dispatches from Washington said that committees representing flue cured tobacco growers in the Carolinas, Virginia and Georgia would meet with the farm adjustment administration officials Monday to plan a program for raising prices during the present harvest.

The mass meetings for farmers were called for Nashville, Raleigh, Staunton, Ethel, Richmond, Beaufort, Fountaine, Wenden, Fuquay Cedar Grove, Oxford, Henderson, Warrenton, Louisburgh, Raleigh, Tarboro, Smithfield and Scotland Neck.

Officers went to Graham's home and arrested him yesterday after neighbors had telephoned them that he had beaten the child incessantly for an hour.

Although the child's body was a mass of bruises, physicians said there were no dangerous wounds and the baby would recover.

Neighbors said Graham had beaten on the child frequently for more than a month.

FINDS $20, SUES FOR IT, LOSES AND PAYS COSTS

Durham, Aug. 11.—Instituting a court action to repossess a $20 bill which he found on the floor of the J. R. Ray and Son store in Gotham on August 1, Lawrence Tilley, German resident, yesterday lost the case, the $20 bill and, in addition was required to pay the cost of the case.

When Tilley found the bill he asked the proprietor if it was his, the latter answered in the negative, but asked if he might keep it for a while to see if anyone claimed it. No one did. It remained in the store for a week.

Then, because he could not get back the money Tilley had Ray hauled before Magistrate S. O. Riley yesterday and demanded that Ray turn over the money. Ray retailed, after presenting Joe Jones, Durham Ice and Coal Company employee who said the bill belonged to him.

The case was dismissed and Tilley was taxed with the cost.

BE THERE Don't forget the mass meeting to be held in the court house tomorrow afternoon for the purpose of seeking government aid in seeing to it that farmers get a fair price for their tobacco crop this year and arrange for controlled acreage in the future. This is a matter that is vital to the people of this section and you should be there. If the farmers ever hope to get ahead they must be organized and each be willing to co-operate in a movement for the general good.

THE MOTORISTS WHO TAKE CHANCES

You see them on streets and highways every day—motorists who take chances. You see them turning corners at high speeds. Or stealing another car's right of way. Or passing on hills and curves. Or driving on the wrong side of the road. Or cutting in and out of thick traffic. Or coming roaring into intersections and road junctions without looking to either side. Or operating at speeds which are obviously higher than are safe under driving conditions of the moment. And, every once in a while, you see such a motorist cause an accident. Perhaps there is little damage done. Or perhaps a life is lost and valuable property is needlessly destroyed. The reckless motorist comprises ten per cent or less of the driving population. But he causes ninety per cent of the accidents. If the reckless drivers simply injured each other it wouldn't be particularly important to the rest of us. But they seldom do that—they maim and kill the careful, the competent, the prudent. And you never know who's going to be next. This year about thirty thousand people are going to be killed because someone was careless, reckless, discourteous. Not one of a thousand of those deaths is really due to an unavoidable accident—an occurrence which is almost as rare as the dodo. They can all be prevented. And they will be when there is a concerted public drive against those who make places of carnage out of public highways.

Shorter Hours Adopted. Macford, Aug. 11.—Macford business houses adopted shorter hours, opening at 8 a. m. and closing at 6 p. m., but the number of persons employed has not been increased, and local merchants say the amount of business being done at this time will not justify increased expenses. It is said the number of salespeople may be raised September 1, as better prospects seem probable.

The HIDDEN DOOR

By Frank L. Packard

Synopsis: A fog drives Colin Hewitt and Germaine Tremblay ashore while she is taking him to try to deliver a mysterious letter to an equally mysterious man named Joe Lazarre, who may be at a still more mysterious fishing club near Cap a l'Orage, Germaine's home. They hear two men talking in the fog and learn that the "club" is a den of thieves and that Lazarre is one of them. Colin is in terror of the Mask, Lazarre's employer and has used an alias. Now he decides to tell Germaine the truth about himself.

Chapter 17 GERMAINE'S PROMISE

"No!" Germaine inquired softly. "And do you always go armed? It is rather obvious that this club here is very far removed from the innocent paradise of sportsmen that it pretends to be! What are you? A detective?" "Oh, Lord no!" He forced a laugh. "But I've created a lot of them—rather moldy ones. I'm afraid I'm Colin Hewitt. I write books." "I know the name," she said, "and I suppose, to be really true to form I ought to say that I have read and loved every book you have ever written, and—" "Don't!" he groaned. "I won't," she assured him calmly. "I admit I have never read even one of them." "You wouldn't," he stated confidently. "I don't write the sort of stuff that would appeal to you. Just thrillers—as bloodthirsty and as horribly creepy as possible, of course. I've never written a love story, for instance, in my life." "Oh! And why not?" "Because I can't," he confessed. "There has to be a girl because the dear publishers insist on it, but the best I can do is most awfully unconvincing—I just have to drag her in by the hair of her head." He heard the laugh ripple under her breath. "Just like I've been dragged in tonight?" "Well—er—yes, in a way," he stammered. "But this isn't a story. Nevertheless, I rather like it—being dragged in by the hair of the head—so far," she confided. But why this sudden shedding of your cloak, Mr. Hewitt—or should I say Mr. Howard?" "I see you haven't judged me harshly—offhand," he said, gratefully. "Judgment reserved," she answered. "I asked you a question." "Because," he said earnestly, "I want to exact a promise from you that, for the time being at least, you won't say anything about what has happened tonight." "Isn't that a very strange request?" Her voice was suddenly serious. "I don't understand." "I want to tell you a little story," he said quietly. "Do you mind? I will be just as brief as I can." "I am listening," she invited. The minutes passed—many of them. The story did not lend itself to brevity. There was too much to tell, so many sidelights, if she was to understand. And so he told her of Annie, and French Pete and the Mask, and Reddy Turner's murder. Everything—except his promise to Reddy, and the actual purpose of his visit to Butch Connal's room. "And so you see" he ended "why at present I am a man without a name. That brings us to tonight. I haven't said anything so far about Lazarre; but I have reason to hope that I can get him to help me pick up the Mask's trail. That's why I asked for your promise." "You have my promise," she said simply. "And somehow in the darkness their hands met. She did not draw hers away. And for a moment they sat thus in silence. He was not tongue-tied now—he was fighting to hold back the rush of words that were on his lips. He could not bring her intimately into his life as matters stood. It would not be fair to her—if he found that she cared. It would only be inviting her into danger of the ugliest kind. His hand tightened warmly over hers and then released it. "That's ripping of you!" he said. "I don't need to tell you that the club, in its own parance, will be taken for a ride in due course—and the road won't be any smoother because of the delay." "What do you think they are doing there?" she asked. "I haven't the faintest idea," he said.

"But Lazarre?" she questioned. "I don't understand about Lazarre. You haven't told me who he is, or how you knew he was down here."

"No," he said frankly; "I haven't. And I am afraid that is one of the things that I am not at liberty to tell you. Personally, I do not see any reason now why you should not know, but I gave my word and I have no choice other than to keep it. I'm not throwing cold water, am I?"

"Oh, no!" she declared emphatically. "Of course you're not! I can quite understand. But there is one question I do want to ask. You said you hoped to get Lazarre to help you to pick up the Mask's trail. You remember that one of those two men just said something about W. P.? That was what was on the card you found in the pocket of the man you fought with in Reddy Turner's old room, wasn't it?"

"You go up head," he applauded. "Well, that pretty definitely proves that the club here is one of the Mask's enterprises, doesn't it?" she demanded. "And therefore that Lazarre is one of the Mask's men? How can you expect help from him?"

"That's the only other thing I can't explain to you," he said, "except to say that I am armed with an approach to Lazarre which may mean everything—or nothing. I do not know any more than you do what it's worth until I have talked with him."

"This whole thing is terrible!" she exclaimed. "It is almost impossible to believe that a fiend such as you have pictured the Mask to be, exists as a human being." Colin laughed shortly.

"He exists all right. Witness Mr. Howard. But let's not talk about him for a moment. There's a question or two I'd like to ask you. Tell me all you can about the club itself."

"I can't tell you very much," she said. "I've seen it, of course, but only from a distance when I've been out in my boat. It looks very nice and father says it is very comfortably fitted up inside with electric light and—"

"Electric light!" Colin interrupted quickly. "That's interesting! That means they've got a power plant of some sort. I suppose they've harnessed up the river a bit."

"I suppose so," she said, "though I don't know very much about such things. But there are some falls right beside the clubhouse, and I don't imagine it would be a very difficult thing to do."

"You mean it's what one would expect? All the creature comforts. Mr. Waldrow Kenniston wouldn't be without them, of course. Well, is there anything else you can tell me?"

"No," she replied thoughtfully; "I don't think so. I have already told you that no one from the club ever comes near Cap a l'Orage, so I have no personal knowledge of them."

fiction—well, perhaps you know someone who could supply it?" She thought for an instant. "The best man in the village at that sort of thing" she said, "is an old timber cruiser named Anatole Bouchard. He speaks very good English too but—" "Bouchard?" he broke in. "—what sort of a man is he? Is he to be trusted?"

"If you paid him enough to make it worth his while." Her hand reached out. He felt her fingers close tensely on his arm. "Why all these questions about going overland to the club?" she asked. "You heard what those two men said. I—I am afraid. What do you intend to do?"

"Not a thing," he laughed dismally, "except to arrange a little private interview with Monsieur Joe Lazarre."

SAYS NEW DEAL CALLS FOR MORE EDUCATION

Greensboro, Aug. 11.—(AP)—A call for more instead of less education in order that the purpose of the "new deal" may be widely understood and carried to success was made in an address here yesterday by Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse of Greensboro, national president of Afluro Clubs.

Mrs. Woodhouse declared it to be her belief that the "new deal" represents a change in attitude in which most thought is being devoted to people and their interests and less to things, that welfare is at last being placed ahead of all wealth in the scheme of things.

"For this sort of a civilization," she said, "education is a prime essential. The whole program of the administration is an architectural concept of civilization. Education and the 'new deal' are terms we must think of together for the 'new deal' is impossible to realization without educated men and women to carry its purpose forward. We must have more and better education instead of less and poorer education."

Material is being assembled here for that purpose. Harrison and Wright, Charlotte contractors, will do the work, using local labor as much as possible.

The city and telephone company recently came to an agreement on the franchise question after a long controversy. The Carolina corporation has been operating without a franchise here since July 1, 1932. Final approval of the new instrument is expected at the aldermanic board Monday night.

WASHINGTON WOMAN IS VICTIM OF ATTACK

Washington, N. C., Aug. 11.—Mrs. C. B. Andrews, white woman, age 66, who resides on East Sixth street was dragged from her bed Wednesday morning at 4 o'clock by an unknown assailant and left outside the bedroom window after being brutally choked by the man who succeeded in getting away when Elva Clark, neighbor, started for the Andrews home in response to a call for help. A man's dark grey felt hat left inside the bedroom is the club local police officers have been working on.

Clark, who resides across the street from the Andrews residence, was summoned to the home by Misses Leona Wallace and Sally Williams, who live with Mrs. Andrews. The young ladies were asleep in one of the downstairs back rooms at the residence and were awakened by a noise coming from the front bedroom which sounded as if someone was being strangled. The immediately slipped out of the back window in their room and went across the street for Clark. When the three returned they found Mrs. Andrews in the yard lying on the ground in prostrated condition, having sustained an injury to her back when she was dragged through the window.

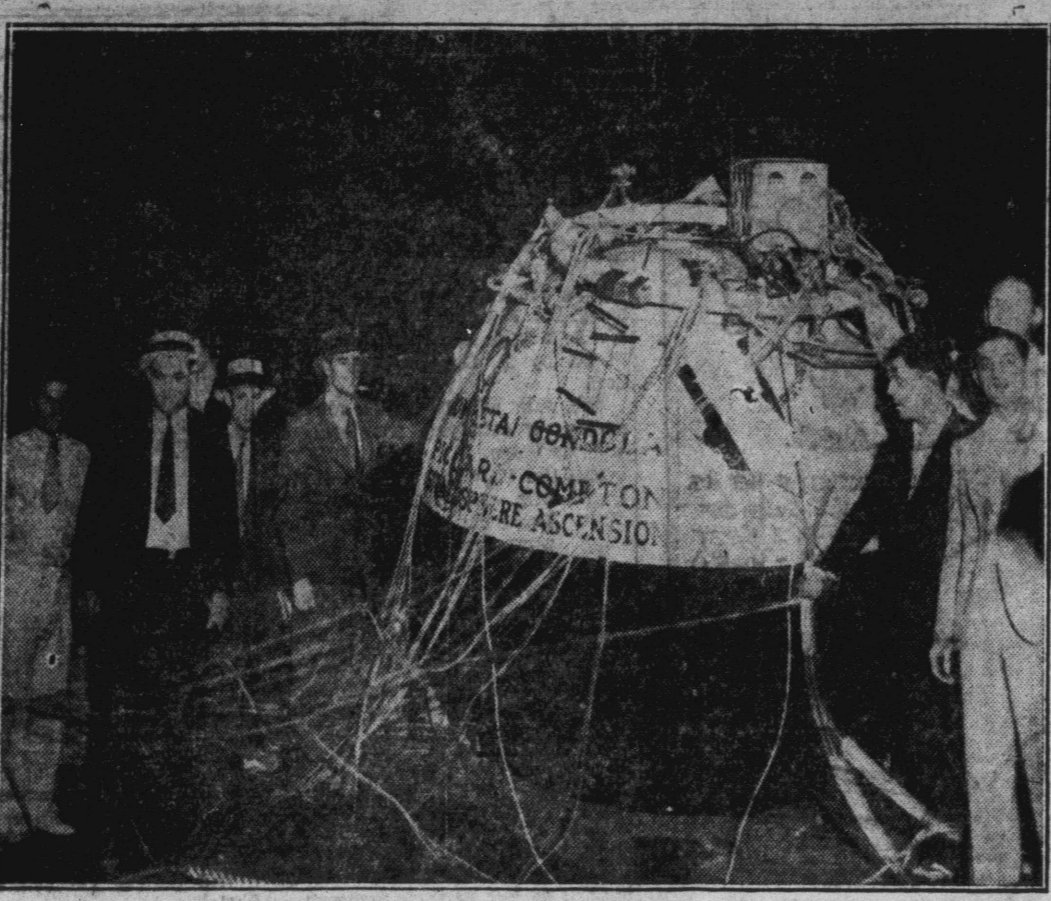

Mrs. Andrews operates a grocery store on Sixth street and it is believed that her assailant was looking for money which she sometimes carries to her home from the store, as she states that she was ordered to tell where she kept her cash.

SAYS KNAPP FORESAW RECOVERY PROGRAM

Elizabeth City, Aug. 11.—That Joseph P. Knapp in 1931 submitted to him in broad outline a national recovery program closely paralling the one which President Roosevelt is now inaugurating was the statement of W. C. Saunders, editor of the Independent in a talk before the Elizabeth City Kiwanis club at its weekly luncheon in the main dining room of the Virginia Dare hotel.

That Mr. Knapp himself through a trend close to the President had a hand in the shaping of President Roosevelt's program was Saunders' suggestion.

Mr. Saunders also quoted L. H. Windholtz president of D. Pender Grocery Company of Norfolk as saying that America is headed for three or four years of prosperity almost without parallel in the country's history. What is in store for the country after those years of prosperity Mr. Windholtz has very decided ideas Saunders intimated, but did not quote the chain store magnate further.

LOCALS FALL BEFORE THE KINSTON CLUB

By R. O. MOYE (Official Scorekeeper)

Greenville journeyed over to Kinston yesterday afternoon and was defeated by the score of 5-2 in the scariest exhibition of baseball that the local team has played this season.

Stockton, who pitched for Kinston allowed the local boys a dozen hits and in the eighth inning had three men on base with none out and then did not let the locals have but one run and this was a forced run with a base on ball by Stockton. The other run came in the first inning when Bostic hit a homer over the center field fence. Greenville had plenty of chances to score but just lacked the necessary initiative to put runs across the rubber.

Bob Forbes, who held Snow Hill to six hits the day before pitched again yesterday and he put up a good fight. The Lenoir county lads touched him for nine hits. He struck out a total of five men and allowed two walks to first. He was relieved by Sigmon in the eighth who pitched only a third of an inning.

Bostic with a homer and two singles, and Smith with three singles led the locals attack.

Humphries with a homer and a single, and Dudley with two singles led the Kinston attack. Possibly one of the fastest pieces of fielding seen in some time was a relay play pulled by Kinston in the sixth frame. The play was from the right field post to second baseman to catcher and was made with a hit with a runner on second and the play was worked so quickly that the man at home was caught out.

GREENVILLE APPEARS AT AYDEN TODAY

The Greenville club of the Coastal Plain League journeyed over to Ayden this afternoon to attempt to increase their lead in the standing of clubs.

After losing to Kinston yesterday the locals were in position to offer Ayden plenty of competition at the bat, and as both teams usually slug the ball hard, fans were promised plenty of action in this line.

Today's games found Ayden and Kinston tied for second place with Snow Hill on the bottom. Both Kinston and Ayden were expected to put their best foot forward in an effort to hold the advantage which they have gained so far and rectangular playing was in the offing.

Kinston played in Snow Hill while Ayden and Greenville were crossing bats at the thriving town only a few miles from the Pitt capital, and good crowds were expected to be present to see how the players go about adding additional scalps to their belts.

Snow Hill will play on the home lot here tomorrow and Ayden will appear at Kinston. Although the Greenville county lads are on the bottom they always do the unexpected and their dynamite-loaded bats are due to spring a surprise most any time.

With the league scheduled to close the latter part of the month it was expected larger crowds than usual will be on hand at the remainder of the games to show the boys they are behind the min. their effort to capture the flag in the first season's play of the circuit.

The action of the wheat market was reflected in the cotton market prices sagging under liquidation and selling. At midday December was around 9.98. With general list showing losses of about 15 to 20 points. Futures closed easy 35 to 39 lower spots quiet including 9.30

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Aug. 11—(AP)—The stock market dawdled indifferently today as gains displayed weakness and the speculative public apparently wrapped itself in another mantle of caution.

Professionals accounted for what little activity there was in sale transactions and both buyers and sellers were far apart in many instances and they were unable to get together quotations.

The ticker tape idled monotonously in the early hours and prices milled about unimportantly. Stocks that ranged up fractionally to around a point or so included Santa Fe, Johns Mansville, American Locomotive, National Steel, Industrial Ryon, Union Pacific and Industrial Alcohol. Among the more active losers of similar amounts were American Can, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Chrysler Dupont General Motors, Western Union, U. S. Steel, Nation Distillers.

Sales totaled 1,342,590 shares.
