CUBAN PRESIDENT DECIDES TO GIVE UP HIS POST

Machado Plans To Take Leave And Then Resign

SECRETARY TO CONTINUE FOR AWHILE

President's Decision To Resign Follows On Heels of Army's Seizure Of Fortresses; Colonel Farrar Regarded as Outstanding Candidate For Presidency

Havana, Cuba, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The Cuban state department today formally advised the diplomatic corps that President Machado will take a leave of absence and that it is the president's purpose later to resign.

The department of communication said that Orestes Ferrara, secretary of state, previously resigned, but was continuing and that the department would attend to routine matters until Ferrara's successor could be named.

The resignation of the secretary of state as well as the president was part of the American peace plan in order to permit the appointment of a new secretary of state acceptable to all factions who should succeed to the highest office.

The president's decision to retire from office followed closely on the heels of the army's seizure of military units in Havana and other strategic points in Havana and demanded that Machado get out.

Summer Welles, United States ambassador, recently presented a proposal to the president calling for his retirement as a solution for the political turmoil in the island republic. Strikes in Havana and throughout the island have added dislocation of normal activities in Cuba.

Colonel Horatio Farrar 61 year old doctor, was regarded today as the outstanding candidate for the presidency. Alberto Herrera, secretary of war and Machado's choice, having been rejected by leaders of the military revolt.

A number of other Cuban political figures both in the island and now in exile or on duty elsewhere have been mentioned as Machado's successor until a stable regime could be established.

It was learned from authentic but unofficial sources that the resignation of all cabinet members had been presented.

JUDGE DUNN NEW TRUSTEE

Greenville Attorney Appointed Member of Board of Industrial School

Judge Albion Dunn of Greenville received notice today from Raleigh of his appointment as a member of the board of trustees of the East Carolina Industrial School for boys at Rocky Mount. The term will expire June 30, 1937.

The appointment bore the signature of Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus and is one of many made by the Chief Executive since taking office during the early part of the year.

Recognition of the ability of Judge Dunn was received with interest by his many friends here and other parts of the state.

In addition to being one of the outstanding members of the bar, he has served as a superior court judge and a position he resigned in order to take care of his extensive law practice here.

The East Carolina Industrial school is an institution operated by the state for the reformation of unruly boys.

BATTERY TO DEPART FOR CAMP SUNDAY

Military Unit Here To Spend Two Weeks In Training At Fort Bragg

Battery A, local military unit of 118th Field Artillery, will leave tomorrow afternoon for two weeks' encampment at Fort Bragg.

A detail of the unit under command of Lieut. C. W. Porter left for camp this morning to make arrangements for the arrival of the entire contingent tomorrow.

It was stated today by Commander Herbert Waldrop, who is in charge of the battery, that 65 men and four officers would make the trip to camp.

He said the company was in fine trim for the strenuous training period ahead and hoped to live up to the high record of service established in recent years.

The unit has been training for some time in preparation for camp and when they hit the trail tomorrow every piece of artillery will be spick and span ready for inspection of high officers of the camp.

The men were looking forward to the training period with interest in spite of the grueling test they are subjected to from day to day, and had hopes of winning out in various fields of competition offered by units from other parts of the state.

The soldiers will board a special Norfolk and Southern train here tomorrow at 1:45 and go to Wilson where they will be transferred to an A. C. L. train for the final lap of the trip to camp. The train will also carry other contingents from this part of the state.

Commander Waldrop, who has been connected with the battery for a number of years and who was recently placed in command upon the resignation of J. C. Lanier, described himself as well pleased with the battery and felt sure they would come out with honors flying during the two weeks' stay at Fort Bragg.

SPURIOUS TEN-DOLLAR NOTES IN CIRCULATION

Tarboro, Aug. 12.—Mrs. Milton Gorb, secretary of the Tarboro Merchants' Association, states that there are in circulation in this section of North Carolina many bogus $10 bills, one having been seen yesterday afternoon by a merchant of Scotland Neck. While this bill was counterfeit, yet it resembled real money but it had about it a certain amount of stiffness not noticed in real money.

The merchants and others of Tarboro have been warned to be on the lookout for this bogus money by carefully scrutinizing every $10 bill they take in across the counters or otherwise.

TO DISCUSS BRIGHT LEAF HERE TODAY

J. C. Lanier of U. S. Department of Agriculture, To Address Growers

J. C. Lanier, prominent Greenville attorney, who was recently appointed to the tobacco division of the United States Department of Agriculture to address a mass meeting of tobacco farmers here this afternoon regarding the proposed plan of the government for cutting the crop next year.

Mr. Lanier arrived in Greenville last night and was on the streets today shaking hands with his hundreds of friends who sometime ago received news of his appointment to the important position with interest. He will return to his post at Washington during the week-end.

J. E. Winslow, chairman of the Pitt County Department of Agriculture, was scheduled to preside over the gathering and E. F. Arnold, director of the Department of Agriculture, was to outline the nature of the meeting.

Resolutions were expected to be drafted petitioning action of the federal government for improved prices for this year's tobacco crop in the face of continued advances of the necessities of life.

Mr. Lanier, who was invited by the Board of Agriculture to appear here, was expected to outline the government's plan for reduction of next year's crop, a subject thousands of growers in this great bright leaf producing area are interested in. He is thoroughly familiar with the problems affecting the growers because of his close association with the industry here in past years, and the information he imparts was expected to be of great value to the growers.

Mr. Lanier is head of the contract department of the tobacco division and will play an important part in the arranging of contracts between the federal government and the farmer for the reduction of next year's crop.

LOCAL ROTARIES AYDEN GUESTS

Greenville Rotarians went to Ayden last night where they were guests of the Rotary club there. The speakers were Rev. A. W. Fieschmann, pastor of Memorial Baptist church, Greenville; Rev. Billy Brunson, of Ayden and K. W. Cobb, president of the Greenville club. (Continued On Page Four)

GOVERNMENT EXPECTED TO USE IRON HAND

Several Developments Forseen in Activities Of Recovery Administration

Washington, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Several things led various officials today to forecast that the government might soon be peeling back the harder hand that is guiding the national recovery drive.

First, bituminous coal men themselves expected the national recovery administration probably would settle their differences over pending wage and hour fixing codes for that industry by ruling out the point of controversy.

Other developments cited to support the contention that more than general persuasion is in store are:

Appointment of 33 women as U. S. generals in as many states to organize family buying into groups purchasing under the blue eagle.

Announcement by the NRA that motion picture stars whose names were not made public will donate their services for a feature on recovery.

Explanation by Hugh S. Johnson, the recovery administrator, that if necessary the federal trade commission and the department of justice eventually will be used to enforce the recovery act.

Refusal of Johnson to accept the code submitted by newspaper publishers.

Announcement by Harry Hopkins, emergency relief administrator, that hereafter his agency will be supplied from NRA stores.

Submission to Secretary Wallace for approval of a sugar stabilization plan despite threat of its rejection by western sugar beet growers.

APPROVE NEW ROAD PLANS IN THIS STATE

Raleigh, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Federal approval for immediate construction of 18 highway projects in North Carolina was received today by the State Highway and Public Works commission but no date for the letting of construction had been set this afternoon.

The first work to be undertaken will cost about $600,000 it is estimated. A total of about $11,000,000 will be spent on roads as fast as projects can be approved by state and federal authorities.

Projects on which work may immediately proceed were taken from the first list submitted to Washington by the commission recently.

Projects approved included: Beaufort, surface treatment of the road from Bath to Bayview.

Lower Taxes In Lee

Shanford, Aug. 12.—The county commissioners yesterday fixed the county tax rate at $1 per hundred dollars valuation. The county-wide rate last year was 75c plus school supplements in the various districts, however, the reduction of 25 per cent in real estate valuations and the elimination of school supplements will mean over taxes this year for the citizens of the county.

Tobacco Growers May Have To Be Satisfied With Prices

Late News Flashes From Over World

President's Regime Collapses.
Havana, Aug. 12.—(AP)—President Machado's regime collapsed today and its downfall was celebrated by the sacking of the presidential palace and killing of five members of the dreaded Machado secret police.

Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, former ambassador to the United States, was named provisional president as exuberant and sometimes vicious mobs were wrecking the fixtures of the presidential palace and coursing through the streets cheering and singing.

Communications with interior Cuba was cut off and the capital was ignorant of what was going on there.

Shouting opponents of Machado stormed the office of the Herald De Cuba, a newspaper which had supported him. The building was set on fire and the interior was wrecked.

Meanwhile another mob carted a piano out of the presidential palace and carried it to the office of the Diario De Lamariania, an opposition newspaper. There the instrument was broken into bits to (Continued on page four)

PROTESTS COLLECTION OF SALES TAX ON BEER

Greensboro, Aug. 12.—A protest against the collection of a sales tax on beer sold by retailers, is planned by R. A. Gordon, president of the State Association of Restaurant Operators. His view is that the state manufacturers' tax on beer is itself a sales tax and that to collect the three per cent sales tax in addition is to put beer under the disadvantages of a double sales tax.

Plane Falls Into Sea

Valencia, Spain, Aug. 12.—(AP)—One Italian hydroplane en route to Lisbon to greet the seaplane squadron of General Italo Balbo fell into the sea three miles off Nazareth today and General Juli Valle was severely injured. The six other members of the crew were slightly injured but all were brought to a hospital here.

SALES LIGHT ON 'BORDER'

Florence, S. C., Aug. 12.—(AP)—The usual Saturday holiday was observed in the South Carolina and border bright leaf tobacco belts today but throughout the area farmers made preparations to bring their crop to market next week.

Common and medium grades of tobacco sold higher during the first two sales days of the season but the better types commanded but little more than they did last season.

Sales for the first week were light. Views of warehousemen conflicted on next week's prospects, some expecting a big increase in offerings and others did not.

Mullins, S. C., reported sales of 750,000 at an average of $12.24 per hundred; Lake City 497,332 at $11.10 and Timmonsville, 314,356 at $11.62.

FIRE DESTROYS TOBACCO BARN

A tobacco barn and contents belonging to J. H. Collins of the Ayden community was destroyed by fire Thursday morning. The loss was estimated at several hundred dollars. The barn caught fire when the attendant stepped off a few minutes to see to other duties on the farm. When he returned the flames were completely out of control.

Both the barn and tobacco were described as a total loss.

GOVERNMENT NOT EXPECTED TO ACT SOON

Agricultural Adjustment Administration Ready to Assist in Domestic Allotment Plan; Officials Say Foreign Demand Controlling Prices; Complaints Continue To Roll In At Washington

Washington, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Producers of flue cured tobacco may have to be satisfied with whatever prices the market offers on the current crop.

It is inside information of the tobacco section of the Department of Agriculture that manufacturers are not going to be subjected to any marketing agreement calling for higher prices to the growers this year.

If, however, farmers want to control production in the future, the agricultural adjustment administration stands ready to assist in a domestic allotment plan such as being offered wheat growers.

The crop of flue cured tobacco in 1933 is larger than last year and with 40 to 50 percent of the total yield going into export channels officials say the foreign market is controlling prices regardless of the machinery congress sets up to elevate price values.

Almost daily price complaints have reached the Department of Agriculture since the Georgia flue cured tobacco market opened on August 1 for a 20 day run.

Governor Eugene Talmadge of this state said in a telegram to President Roosevelt that prices averaged were 13 cents a pound gross whereas the cost of production is 20 cents a pound. He charged five leading tobacco companies were exercising a "monopoly" and said it would take "strong hand methods" to make manufacturers do the right thing by the farmers.

BETHEL LEAF GROWERS ASK FEDERAL AID

Resolutions Passed At Mass Meeting Petitioning Higher Prices This Year

Resolutions calling on the government to make every effort to improve prices for this year's tobacco crop were passed at a mass meeting of growers in Bethel on Thursday afternoon.

The meeting, one of a similar nature held in many other towns of the state during the week, was largely attended and growers were unanimous in their opinion that immediate action was necessary if living prices were to be obtained for this year's crop of bright leaf.

The resolutions also petitioned the government to act for prospective reduction of the 1934 crop in an effort to reduce the supply already on hand and to assure improved prices for the products in future years.

Notice was taken of the success of the Department of Agriculture in raising the prices of cotton and wheat without tobacco being similarly affected, and it was urged that something be done at once to bring relief to the growers.

S. M. Johnson was chairman of the meeting and numbers of persons prominent in the life of the community made brief speeches. Copies of the resolutions were mailed to Senator J. W. Bailey and George N. Peek, administrator.

The resolutions follow:

"Whereas the Department of Agriculture has had such wonderful success in raising the prices of wheat and cotton, and nothing having been done for the tobacco growers who have been growing tobacco at a heavy loss until many have become bankrupt.

"We, the tobacco growers of the Bethel community in a mass meeting held at Bethel, N. C., August 10th, 1933, respectfully petition the Department of Agriculture at Washington to make every effort possible to increase the price of tobacco this year, with prospective reduction of acreage for the year 1934. We respectfully ask that something be done at once."

LOOK INTO PROJECT FOR DEEPENING NEUSE

Smithfield, Aug. 12.—In view of a movement on foot in Johnston, Wayne and Lenoir counties to have the Neuse River dredged and prepared for light navigation, the county commissioners, in session this week, ordered that the sum of $35 be forwarded for the purpose of investigating this project.

A resolution was also prepared and directed to the State Highway Commission to have the main street in the town of Four Oaks paved for a distance of four town blocks. The commissioners were of the opinion that such paving would greatly enhance trade and sales in the business district of Four Oaks.

Near Cloudburst Occurs At Ayden

When it rains in Ayden it pours, and that was true of the near cloudburst which visited the community yesterday afternoon.

Although the depth of the precipitation was not determined it was said to have been so great that some streets of Ayden were flooded for awhile, the drainage system being unable to take care of the deluge.

Ayden citizens visiting Greenville today described the rain as the heaviest of recent years, although no damage directly attributable to it was reported. High wind, however, east of Ayden was said to have done some damage to the crop, the finest in recent years.

Sections surrounding Ayden also reported plenty of rain.

DIRECTS THAT COUNTY ASSUME SCHOOL BONDS

Asheville, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Judge F. S. Hill announced today he has decided that Catawba county should assume the school bonds outstanding against the special charter school district of Hickory and Newton.

In his decision in the case, argued before him at Newton recently, Judge Hill cited a similar case from Buncombe county in which the supreme court held that the county should assume the bonds.

FARMERS READY TO ACT

At the time of this writing indications are that the mass meeting at the court house this afternoon will be well attended. The time for our farmers to get together in co-operation with the government to assure a living price for tobacco has come, and we believe our farmers realize this and are willing to act. It goes without saying that if fair prices are to be assured there must be a definite control of acreage in the years to come and every farmer we have talked to on the matter expresses a willingness to go the limit in trying to carry out his end of the bargain. With such a spirit prevailing among our farmers, we are sure that some definite plan will soon be put into operation with the result that the tobacco growing sections will begin their upward way out of the mire of financial depression.

TO DISCUSS SWIMMING POOL

Mayor Flanagan has called a meeting Monday afternoon at four o'clock of citizens interested in a movement for a municipal swimming pool here. A special committee from the Board of Aldermen is now working on this project and the mayor is anxious for the citizens to discuss this matter in order that the committee can get the sentiment of the people.

As we have said many times in this column, Greenville needs a municipal swimming pool for the benefit of the children and grown-ups of our city and now is the time to get it while building costs are low and money is available for the project. We are sure that if our people want it, the city authorities want to take steps to get it for us but if we do not want it, of course they will let the matter drop. If you are in favor of an adequate swimming pool for Greenville, now is the time to let your wants be known. Never again will we have such an opportunity to procure this much needed recreational center for our children so we urge you to be on hand for the meeting Monday afternoon.

The HIDDEN DOOR

By Frank L. Packard

SYNOPSIS: Colin Hewitt and Germaine Tremblay, on their way to deliver a mysterious letter that has been entrusted to Colin for Joe Lazare, are caught in the fog and overhear a conversation which tells them that the "club" to which they were going is a den of thieves, connected with the Mask, New York killer whom Colin is trying to bring to justice. They turn back but Colin is determined to find Lazare. He also has discovered that he is in love with Germaine.

Chapter 18

THE TWO VISITORS

Colin sat up in bed with a start, conscious at the same time both of voices and that he had overslept himself. He had flung himself down on the bed after supper solely with the idea of relaxing a little while before strolling over to spend an hour or two with Germaine and then later, to pay a surreptitious visit to this Anatole Bouchard of whom she had spoken.

It was dark now. The voices came from the next room through Madame Premier's flimsy partition. Two men—speaking in French. He knew who they were. They had arrived on the Belle Fleur late that afternoon. Madame Premier had introduced them to him at the hotel. Larroque and Bolduc, their names were. They had come over from Gaspé, they said, to catch the Bonaventure, which was due tomorrow, and were going up the coast to Seven Islands. A brawny looking pair.

They were talking in low tones, but even to wtones in the Hotel du Canada were little less than a broadcast throughout the entire establishment.

"Sacre nom!" exclaimed a gruff voice. "I tel you, I do not like it. It was to be tonight if he discovered anything at that devilish club, but all afternoon there has been no sign of him. He should have been here. What do you think, eh?"

Another voice answered—Bolduc's obviously.

"How do I know what to think?" returned Bolduc irritably. "It is one of two things. He has become afraid and has run away with the money Dollaire paid him in advance—in which case Dollaire will slit his throat for him if he ever finds him again; or else he has been caught down there at the club."

Colin's bed was against the partition that separated the two rooms—and so too, now was Colin's ear. It was plain the man these two were talking about was the spy at whom Lazare had taken a pot shot yesterday.

But what was it all about? It was clear that these men were not police who were trying to round up the club. The police did not slit the throats of their stool pigeons—or, at least, they weren't supposed to!

"It is that of which I am afraid—that he has been caught," La-roque responded with an oath. "They will make him talk. A man talks—eh—when they begin to gouge his eyes out?"

"Bah!" exclaimed Bolduc. "What can he talk about? He knows nothing—except that he has been well paid to find out what he can."

"Damnation!" swore Larroque. "But that is enough, isn't it? They will be on their guard."

"Bah!" Bolduc spat out again. "And suppose they are? They will not know what to expect, and we will be too many for them, anyway. That was a bad night for them two weeks ago when Dollaire put in at the club to sell some of the whiskey we had on board. Two of the crowd there were swell crooks that were pointed out to Dollaire in a night club the last time he was in New York selling a cargo."

"So when he got back on board, Dollaire lays a finger along his nose, and says, 'Viola! They are not there to fish salmon, those rascals! And times are poo with us. Even the fish do not bite in this depression. Let us see about this innocent club—and help ourselves.'"

"Just because you were with Dollaire that night is no reason why you should repeat the same story a hundred times," complained Larroque sourly. "What are we going to do now? Take one more look to see if maybe he has come back?"

"But yes!" Colin could almost see the assertive shrug of Bolduc's shoulders. "Dollaire will not have the schooner off the cape for another two hours, and in any case he will wait for us. Run along!"

The door of the adjoining room opened and closed. Footsteps thump ed down the stairs.

Colin stared into the darkness. He was thinking fast now. It was clear enough that this Dollaire was the head of a bootlegging outfit of which this precious pair were a part. And what was obviously in the wind now was a sort of hijacking expedition. He could have looked on with utter complacency, not to say applause, had it not been for Lazare.

There would be a fight—and it would not be a bloodless one. Dollaire had evidently come prepared. A choice crowd aboard that schooner, beyond question! It would probably result in a shambles. Well, the world would not miss the passing of any one of them, except that there was Lazare.

He could not afford to risk anything happening to Lazare. He must warn Lazare. That was imperative.

The fog last night had lifted just after midnight, and Germaine and he had returned to Cap a l'Orage without further mishap. He had had the whole day in which to talk to Bouchard, but caution, perhaps an exaggerated caution, had prompted him to wait until darkness had set in.

But he wished now, in view of what he had just heard, that he had gone during the day. He would have known now what to do—he would have known whether or not he cared to trust Bouchard in the first place; and secondly, whether or not Bouchard would be willing to act as guide.

If the trip overland were feasible it had, apart from the element of time, one incalculable advantage over a boat—it could be done much more secretly.

He struck a match now and looked at his watch. Half-past eight. Not so bad! He had thought it much later than that. It would take him, say, half an hour all told to reach Bouchard's shack and have a talk with the man. There was time enough. If everything sized up all right he and Bouchard would be off at once, and he would have to make his peace later with Germaine for not keeping his appointment with her this evening.

If, on the other hand, Bouchard, for whatever reason, did not fit into the picture, that was another matter and another way must be found. There was always the possibility of course, that Bouchard might not even be at home—but one thing at a time.

He swung himself off the bed, paused to slip an extra box of cartridges into his pocket, went down the stairs and out into the street.

It was inky black. Cap a l'Orage boasted no street lamps, and there was as yet no moon. But the lighted windows of the scattered houses marked the way. At the end of the street, remembering his walk with Germaine, he turned into what was no more than a wagon track that led through a stretch of sparse timberland.

Here the going was not so good. The track was full of ruts and full of holes, which in turn were filled with water. He could see practically nothing at all. The land here was marshy and besides, it had rained heavily during the past few days, so that once, verging from the track he went in over his boot tops—and swore heartily.

There was nearly half a mile of it; but finally as he rounded a sharp turn in the wagon track, he saw a light glimmering through an open window no more than a few yards away.

There was no doubt about it being Bouchard's shack, because no one else lived out this way; at least it was the only dwelling, or pretense to a dwelling, that he had seen on his walk with Germaine that day; and there was no doubt but that Bouchard was at home—his fears on that score were set at rest.

And then abruptly he halted. It was a warm, muggy night—which accounted for the open window. Bouchard was at home undoubtedly, but Bouchard was not alone. Voices, speaking in French, floated out to him on the night air. He could not hear what was said from where he stood, but his muscles tensed suddenly, seemingly of their own accord. There was something familiar about two of those voices.

LOCALS TAKE ON SNOW HILL HERE TODAY

Rain put a cramp in the schedule of the Coastal Plain league yesterday and temporarily cheated Ayden and Snow Hill out of games set for those two towns.

Today Snow Hill playing at Greenville and Ayden at Kinston. With the standing of clubs unchanged from the day before, all four clubs went to the field this afternoon in the hope of increasing their hold on their respective positions or jumping to higher ground.

Greenville continued to lead the circuit by a comfortable margin and if luck remains with the boys, indications apparently pointed to their coming out at the end of the season with a flag in their grasp.

However, with Lady Luck just as fickle as ever, there is no telling what will take place during the remainder of the month and some of the clubs on the bottom of the ladder have a chance to push the leaders from their perch.

The race all season has been tight with hardly more than two games separating the leaders from the cellarites. Greenville has managed to gain a greater lead the last two weeks than any time of the season and unless something out of the ordinary happens they are expected to stay on the high ground.

The season closes on August 26 and crowds during the intervening time were expected to be larger than any other time of the season.

His foe was Dennis Blanchard of Greenville and the bout—between featherweights—was halted in the third round. In a four-rounder between welterweights, Farris of Wilson won the decision over Snyder of Kinston. Judges were Gus Forbes, Coon Williams and A. B. Corey. Exactly how many members of the poor had been slain could not be established but the total was at least five. A howling mob carrying its leader shoulder high, marched through the streets to attack the poor headquarters. LOCAL ROTAS AYDEN GUESTS

(Continued from page one) Mr. Fleischmann discussed the National Recovery program recently inaugurated by the government with a view to putting more people at work while at the same time increasing wages, and urged his hearers to co-operate with the movement. He expressed belief the program would bring fine results if given proper consideration and support in all communities and said it should cause pronounced change in the economic condition of millions of individuals who have been suffering from the effects of depression over a period of several years. The spirit of friendship was the keynote of Mr. Brunson's remarks. He stressed the importance of community building, pointing to the world as a great community, which with a proper spirit of brotherhood should have the same aims and ideals for the improvement of living conditions of all nations. 'Snodde' Edwards, president of the Ayden club, was in charge of the program, and presented K. W. Cobb, who spoke briefly of the fine spirit existing between Ayden and Greenville, and then presented Mr. Fleischmann who made the main talk for the visitors. The meeting was held in the Beverly hotel and a delightful supper was served. Roy Turnage directed the singing of club songs, and Mr. Fleischmann did duty at the piano. This was the first out-of-the-city meeting held by the local club in two years or more and members were hearty in their praise of the splendid spirit of hospitality in evidence at Ayden, considered one of the most progressive and thriving towns of its size in this section of the state.

PROHIBITION OFFICERS FIRED, REEMPLOYED

New Bern, Aug. 12—After having been dismissed from the prohibition service by orders effective Wednesday night, H. S. Barbrey and O. A. McCaskill, local Federal prohibition officers, were re-employed Thursday morning by wire from E. E. Street of Wilson acting deputy administrator for Eastern Carolina. Due to reorganization of Federal bureaus, all officers were dismissed, most of them being re-hired under the Department of Justice. This district will continue to function with the same personnel as recently, it is said.
