EIGHT LENOIR COUNTY FARMERS KILLED BY TRAIN

Four Injured A Tobacco Truck Runs Into Train

CRASH OCCURS NEAR HEART OF LUMBERTON

Truck Loaded With Tobacco for Fairmont Market Strikes Side of Seaboard Air Line Gas Train Bound for Wilmington; One of Injured Said View of Train Obstructed by Dwellings Along Route.

LEAD-EIGHT DIE... PR—Lumberton, Aug. 22—(AP)—Seven persons were killed today when a tobacco truck carrying 12 men and boys from Deep Run, Lenoir county, crashed into a Seaboard Air Line passenger train near here.

Three were killed instantly, two died while being carried to hospitals and two died soon after reaching the hospitals.

Lumberton, Aug. 22—(AP)—Eight Lenoir county farmers were killed and four seriously injured here today when their tobacco truck crashed into a Seaboard Air Line gas-propelled passenger train running from Hamlet to Wilmington.

The truck, loaded with tobacco for the Fairmont market and occupied by a group of farmers from Deep Run, 10 miles from Kinross, crashed into the side of the train about a quarter of a mile from the heart of the city.

Heads of several of the occupants were cut off from their bodies. Arms and legs of others were cut off. Bodies of three of those killed were strewn along the tracks for thirty yards.

Police said the driver of the truck apparently did not see the train approaching the station here and ran into its side.

The truck crashed into the baggage car of the two-car train and was demolished. A steam train was immediately dispatched here to tow the train to Wilmington. Bodies of the killed were taken to two funeral homes here and the injured were taken to two hospitals.

This killed were identified as: Jesse Davenport, Louis Davenport, Wesley Davenport, Burdard Smith, Hicks Harper, Walter Smith and Clyde Taylor. One of the dead could not be identified immediately.

Three of the injured were: Zeb Brown, serious head injuries; Millard Davenport, possible fracture of the skull; Haywood Smith, driver of the truck, lacerations.

Smith was the least injured and at the hospital was able to say he remembered the names of only a few on the truck. He carried the names in a notebook in his pocket.

He said his view of the train was obstructed by houses and that he did not see the swiftly approaching train until it was too late to prevent the crash.

The truck was dumped into a ditch after the impact.

Three ambulances were brought into use to take the dead and injured to hospitals and funeral homes.

Almost instantly hundreds gathered about the scene. Captain Buck Williams was in charge of the train which was number 14.

SENTENCE OF ED DEEVER IS COMMUTED

Columbus Man Doomed to Die draws Life Imprisonment For Crime.

Raleigh, Aug. 22—(AP)—Ed Deever, 22-year-old Columbus county white man who killed Isaiah Hester farmer, in an argument over a watermelon today had his sentence of death in the electric chair commuted to one of life imprisonment.

Governor Ehringhaus announcing the clemency action through Parole Commissioner Edward Gill's office here, said he was convinced Deever does not have the mental balance of a child.

"I don't believe that he has the restraint or mental power to refrain from violent action when he is under the illusion that an injustice has been done him," the governor wrote.

Deever who was convicted in August, 1932, had been granted six reprieves, three by former Governor Gardner and three by Governor Ehringhaus since he took office in January.

Gill said there had been no recommendation for clemency in the case of Johnnie Lea, young Harnett county negro, who is scheduled to die in the electric chair Friday for the murder of Jack Hill. Lea's execution as a result is expected to proceed without intervention.

CIVIL COURT ACTIVE HERE

Several Cases Disposed of in the Opening Session Here Yesterday.

Several cases were disposed of at the opening session of the two week term of Superior court which convened in this city yesterday morning for the hearing of civil and criminal cases.

Judge J. Paul Frizzelle, of Snow Hill, resident judge of the Fifth Judicial district, is presiding over the term. The first week is being confined to the hearing of civil actions. Criminal cases will hold attention the second week.

J. B. Colt and Company, distributors of lighting plants, was awarded judgment for $306 in the opening session yesterday against J. H. Mills, administrator of the estate of the late Nonie Stokes. The suit grew out of the purchase of a lighting plant by the deceased.

The Knight Commander Lighting Company failed to recover in its suit for $200 against Joseph Daniels and wife. The suit grew out of the purchase of a lighting plant.

Tom Jackson was granted divorce from Annie May Jackson on the grounds of a five year separation.

Several other minor cases were disposed of during the day, and court delved vigorously into the calendar today in the hope of completing the work set for the day.

Scores of cases await action next week but only three or four are of important nature and the bulk of the docket was expected to be completed.

ROTES HEAR OF HOME BANK HIGH PRICES

Two Speakers Tell of Activities of Home Owners Loan Corporation.

Rotarians meeting in regular weekly session here last night heard considerable information dealing with the operation of the Federal Home Owners Loan Corporation which opened here several weeks ago to help hard pressed home owners hold their property.

The speakers were Senator Askew, acting manager of the local branch, and Julius Brown, Pitt county attorney for the organization.

Senator Askew told of the procedure necessary to obtain loans from the corporation, and Mr. Brown spoke of the object of the organization started by the federal government with a view to helping refinancing small home owners to enable them retain their homes.

Both talks were of an illuminating nature and gave the clubmen a keener appreciation of the splendid work of the administration to protect the homes of the nation—the backbone of every phase of human life.

Martin Swartz superintendent of the Water and Light Commission told of the proposed municipal swimming pool for Greenville. He said the city would apply to the government for funds with which to build the pool. Present plans, he stated, call for a $10,000 plant and this will give Greenville one of the most modern pools in the state, especially for a town of the same size.

R. L. Powell, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, told of the radio station to open here in the near future, and displayed a large belt with a silver buckle which Greenville colored firemen captured at the State convention of colored firemen held recently at Elizabeth City.

The secretary said the public generally should be proud of the record of the colored protectors of public life and property and help them remain in the forefront of the fire-fighting game. The belt, along with several other trophies, was won in various fields of competition against some of the oldest fire-fighting organizations of the state and members of the company are justly proud of the distinction.

Dr. Charles Outland, former public health director of Pitt county, but who is now medical director of Richmond schools, was a guest and expressed appreciation of being able to mingle with old associates again.

It was family night and numbers of members of the families of various clubmen were present and were presented to the club. Family night will come to a close next Monday evening but will be resumed again next year to give the folks at home an opportunity to see what dad is doing the hour spent at the club.

The program was in charge of the Community Service committee, F. C. Harding, chairman.

Late News Flashes From Over World

Stormy At Manteo. Manteo, Aug. 22—(AP)—Cape Hatteras just before noon today reported a northeast wind and rain with high tide running over the beach from Nags Head to Ocracoke. Capt. Exiles Welcomed. Havana, Aug. 22—(AP)—Forty thousand persons gave a thundering welcome to Col. Carlos Mendizet and Col. Roberto Mendez Penate today when they returned to Cuba from the exile to which they were sent for planning the quickly suppressed revolt against the Machado government in August, 1931.

Kill's Husband And Mother. Gainesville, Ga., Aug. 22—(AP)—E. C. Acting Chief of Police J. H. Richardson announced.

The first reports were that Mrs. Palmour had died of a wound to the head but later R. B. Horsch, a neighbor, who answered the call at the Palmour home, said she was still alive. He added that doctors did not expect her to live until nightfall.

FIVE SETS OF BUYERS TO BE ON JOB HERE

Market Will Be Officially Thrown Open to Receive Thousands of People from This District at Nine O'clock on Tuesday Morning; Factories and Warehouses Improved to Take Care of Enormous Offerings Expected This Year.

One week from today Tuesday, August 29—Greenville will be a scene of feverish activity as the tobacco market here—the largest bright leaf market in the world—swings open for its annual auction sales.

Today found thousands of people, including hundreds of business firms preparing for that eventual period and when the market actually throws open its doors to receive unestimated thousands from all sections of Eastern Carolina it will find Greenville in a receptive mood for the revival of business always occurring at this season of the year.

Everybody today was looking forward to one of the best seasons in years, and hearts fluttered in keen anticipation today as preparations were made for the sale of the greatest money crop of this part of the country.

In the face of advancing prices for all farm products, brought about by the federal government's efforts to improve prices and increase purchasing power of the American people, growers of bright leaf were anticipating better prices for their crop. With the yield this year considerably heavier than last year, the increased price should aid them materially in recovering from some of the financial stringency produced by low prices in recent years.

Speaking at a meeting of growers here two weeks ago, J. C. Lanier, Greenville attorney, who sometime ago was appointed as tobacco contract expert in the tobacco department, expressed his personal opinion that this year's crop of bright leaf would bring 18 cents a pound.

He made it plain he was not speaking for the government in making the statement, but made the expression a personal one, based on his long contact and observation with the tobacco industry.

Whether his prediction will come true remains to be seen—but the fact that prices have been advancing constantly in other fields, the growers of the finest cigarette tobacco in the world here feel confident they are in line for improvement of prices enjoyed by other industries.

The Greenville tobacco market with its eight large auction warehouses and nine factories is eminently prepared to handle 100,000,000 pounds of tobacco annually and with improvements reported both by warehousemen and factory managers it is to be presumed that the capacity this year will be greater than any year in history. The warehouses and factories are operated at full steam ahead throughout the season. Several factories have already set their wheels turning in compliance with the appeal of the NRA to open up fields of employment as early as possible and to take care of the leaf purchased by their buyers in other parts of the country.

The warehouse space has grown prodigiously from year to year until it covers twelve acres at the present time. This enables the market to care for 1,750,000 pounds of leaf daily, making old time blocked sales almost a thing of the past.

One of the most important agricultural sections in the world, Greenville is the heart of the great bright leaf tobacco industry in this country. In fact, Pitt county is the largest producer of bright leaf in the world. Tobacco—thousands upon thousands of acres may be seen in all directions around the city and several weeks prior to the opening. (Continued on Page Four)

PLAYGROUNDS DRAW CROWDS

Many Children of the City Taking Advantage of Supervised Recreation.

A large number of the children of Greenville are enjoying the playgrounds. Most of them come of their own accord while others are sent by mothers who work and feel content that the children are cared for as well as are doing something worth while.

Miss Rosalee Brown is chairman of the senior dramatic club at the Third street school, Jean Gaston is chairman at the Training school. SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN SOULD

Fred Perry, ace of the British Davis Cup forces, was a world's champion four years ago but I doubt if there was much, if any mention of it in the public prints on this side of the Atlantic Ocean.

He gained the distinction at the indoor sport of table tennis also known under a trade name of "ping pong" and if you think this isn't an exacting even strenuous and exciting sport, you haven't seen Fred Perry and his doubles partner Frank Wilde, in action. It's lightning-fast and Perry credits it with having much to do with the development of his eye and wrist of outdoor tennis, where the slim British star now stands around the pinnacle.

"If you want to see how it develops the wrist, feel that," suggested Perry, extending his arm to show a wrist development easily on a par with that of Gene Tunney's or Jack Dempsey's.

Perry won world championship honors at table tennis in Budapest in 1929. He says it sharpens the eye because the play is under lights and lasts from early evening until the wee small hours during a tournament.

Why U. S. Stars Lose

In a few well chosen words, Perry boiled down the American tennis situation for us, clearly showed why our lads haven't gone so well on the en-tout-cas court of Roland Garros Stadium at Paris and dwelt upon the "mental strain" of Davis Cup competition.

"Look at it this way," suggested the Englishman. "The dominant characteristic of your American stars is their service-slam-bang. It's faster on grass than on clay. But on either surface it is successfully returned for any length of time—other points of play being equal—the opponent of the American star has a better chance to win."

"Why? Perhaps it is somewhat psychological as well as the fact that players like Austin and Crawford stress speed or pace."

"Crawford learned how to take the American service last winter. I have been trying to learn how for the past four years. Austin and I had more experience and played better tennis at Paris, on the average than your players. We got the jump on the Americans in the Davis Cup play and that about explains what happened."

Won't Turn 'Pro' Now

Perry definitely dispelled the speculation about a wholesale desertion the end of this year from amateur ranks.

The British ace has no thoughts now of turning "pro". It has no attraction for him at a time when he has a chance to gain the top of the amateur heap and stay there.

Perry is only 24 now and one of the world's foremost match players. He has already beaten Vines, Cochran and Allison of the top-flight group this year. He did not play Crawford in the Davis Cup competition, yielding to a substitute after England clinched the series with Australia, but he may meet the Anzac at Forest Hill next month.

Few illustrations about the "box fight business," little worry about the "chiselers" in the racket, and no false notions about the possible return of the million dollar heavy-weight days beset the new executive head of New York's Madison Square Garden.

Colonel John Reed Kilpatrick All-American end at Yale when the gridiron spotlight was focused brightly on the Elis, all-around athlete, soldier and business man steps into the spot once dominated by Tex Rickard with the fist side of the business pretty well battered but not by any means hopeless.

"It is my observation that the last fighter a champion's manager wants to send his man against is the logical or popular contender," said Colonel Kilpatrick. "This is, of course, one of the strange features of boxing. We may not be able to cure it but the less secrecy and less bargaining we do under cover the more likely we are to make the matches that the public wants to see."

"My idea would be to say, frankly, that so-and-so makes the most desirable match, then make it clear to everyone exactly what obstacles if any arise to prevent making the fight on a reasonable basis. Of course I know there are all sorts of subterfuges, that the managers of fighters find ways and means to get around the rules and regulations. But by more direct dealing, the promoter at least can make his own position clear and let the public's attitude take care of the fighters."

"Looks Better--Sells Higher"
GREENVILLE, N. C.

Our good friend, Mr. W. M. Nichols, sent us a piece of poetry which he has written about us and it is so good that we cannot refrain from publishing it.

Incidentally, Mr. Nichols, besides being a good poet, had some of the finest tobacco that was sold on the Greenville market last year and says that he has a better crop to bring us this year.

This is what Mr. Nichols wrote:

Sell your tobacco with Keel and Long
With Joyner on the sale, you can't go wrong.
Their active force is about fourteen
As fine gentlemen as you ever have seen.

When you drive in their house on a busy day
And don't know where to park, just call "Loan May."
He will meet you politely and show you a place
And in a few minutes you'll be in the race.

The Weigh Man will greet you with a smile
And give you good weight on every pile.
My friend, Charlie Stafford, will carry the book
And figure your sale without any crook.

When you get to the office you will find Dick Rogers
To write your check and figure off charges.
If any of these men you don't happen to know,
They'll be glad to meet you on The Keel & Long floor.

When you get your check, if it is sunshine or rain,
You will be so pleased you will go there again.

tion from everyone during the contest with Red Oak. They challenged us and we were a bit afraid to tackle them as they are known to be a working crowd of boys and girls in their Sunday school. They were in the lead several weeks and seemed difficult for us to catch up. But we knew there was only one thing to save us. "Hard work." We all worked as we have never worked before and won the contest by 16,000 points. We are happy we have won, but there is no loser. I am sure both Sunday schools have been greatly benefited by the work and interest shown during the contest. We have had the privilege of having some of Greenville's finest men and women as our speaker each Sunday. Mr. E. D. Griffin was speaker Sunday. He began with the quarter we have been studying of the Israelites and plainly discussed through Sunday's lesson about the great prophet and judge, Samuel, whose life was spent for the service of God and his people.

Most of the speakers we have had during the contest were with us Sunday, also our old friend, Mr. Frank Harrington and Mr. Claude Gaskins.

We extend our appreciation to these good men and women who have been interested enough to help us in our Sunday school and to every visitor and all who have helped us in any way. We invite all to be with us at any time.

We hope our members will have as much interest in keeping our Sunday school at its present standing as we did during the contest and keep it growing.

RED OAK NEWS

"To the victor goes the spoils." Our contest closed last Sunday and since the Reddy Branch boys and girls won by an overwhelming majority it falls to our lot to entertain them. Therefore we, the Sunshine class of Red Oak Sunday school, extend to the Reddy Branch class of boys and girls and all the visitors who helped them to win the contest, and to all the visitors who visited our class during the contest, and to all the speakers that visited both classes, a cordial invitation to a party at the Woman's Club building in Greenville, Thursday night, August 24th, from eight until eleven o'clock. Please be present on time.

We had a splendid audience at Sunday school last Sunday to hear Hon. F. C. Harding. His discourse on "Samuel" was very much enjoyed by all present. Another most enjoyable feature was a song rendered by six young women of the Salvation Army. We had the largest crowd present that we have had at all and although we lost in the contest we feel like we won in other ways. It has brought renewed life to our community and Sunday school. We have had large numbers present each Sunday. We have had excellent speakers and all of these things have helped us to pull through the usual summer slump better than ever before.

Mr. and Mrs. N. T. Stokes and Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Dexter have returned from Houston and West Point, Miss., after spending ten days visiting friends and relatives.

Mrs. N. S. Tyson and Mrs. W. T. Page went to Greenville Wednesday to visit Mrs. T. J. Sachse. Mrs. Sachse's home is in Charlotte. She has been spending the last two weeks in Greenville with Miss Ella Fleming.

Miss Nannie Page, Lyman Hart and Mrs. Mary Broadhurst of Greenville, visited Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Page Sunday.

Amos Burton and Herman Evans have returned from a visit to Washington, D. C., the Luray Caverns and through the Shenandoah Valley. They also saw Natural Bridge in Virginia.

Misses Inez Forbes and Ruth Evans and Burton Evans spent Sunday in Goldsboro.

Misses Rhuebell, Ophra May and Myrtle Ruth Dickerson have returned from a visit at Misses Eleanor and Willie Dell House's in Greenville.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Allen and Misses Inez and Edith Glenn Allen went to a family reunion at the old Causey home in Craven county last Sunday. The two girls will visit relatives for the next two weeks.

Clifton Crawford and Rubelle Vandiford were among the visitors at Atlantic Beach Sunday.

K. B. Dickerson has returned from a visit at his aunt's, Mrs. Henry Forlines.

Greenville will have a modern and adequate swimming pool before next summer if plans now under way are carried to completion. Application is to be made this week for a government loan with which to finance the project and if the funds are available the swimming pool will be a certainty. Greenville has long needed a suitable place for its children and grownups to swim and the swimming pool will fill a long felt need here.

MAKE GREENVILLE YOUR MARKET

With the opening of the tobacco markets of this belt one week from today everything is in readiness on the Greenville market for the offerings that will begin to arrive this week for the opening sale. Attention of tobacco farmers is called to announcements of Greenville warehouses in this issue together with other information pertaining to the record and facilities of the Greenville market. For more than a quarter of a century Greenville has been a growing tobacco market until it now occupies the coveted position of the world's largest bright leaf market.

With more than fourteen acres of warehouse space, with nine modern factories and five sets of buyers representing all the buying companies Greenville is in position to handle more than a hundred million pounds in a single season. The coming season promises to be one of the best in the history of the market and if you have not already been selling in Greenville now is a good time to decide to make this your market.

In addition to making Greenville your selling market you will likewise do well to make Greenville your buying market for nowhere in this section will you find stores and shops better equipped and stocked to take care of your needs and nowhere will you find a warmer welcome than in Greenville. Thousands of visitors are expected here for the opening sales next week. Make your plans now to visit Greenville and we are sure that you will return home with your mind made up to repeat your visit here time and time again.

GREENVILLE TOBACCO MARKET OPENS WEEK FROM TOMORROW

(Continued from Page One) ing of the market, the entire country side is laden with the odor of the curing leaf, a reminder to the populace that the time isn't far distant for the revival of the great industry.

Referring to the wide patronage received by the Greenville market, leaders of the industry sold today records showed over 25,000 from 32 counties and three states sell their tobacco on the floors of the warehouses here. In fact, one farmer came all the way from Canada here last year to sell a part of his crop.

This recognition has been largely responsible for the rapid strides which this market has made in recent years and should result in continued growth in years to come.

Directing the activities of the Greenville tobacco market is the Tobacco Board of Trade. R. M. Garrett is president of this progressive organization; K. W. Cobb treasurer and H. H. Bost, secretary.

The harvesting of the tobacco crop as well as its sale affords employment for thousands of people and completely transforms the business section into a field of intense activity with tremendous stocks of goods passing on to the consumers.

The growth of the Greenville tobacco market the past 21 years has been unbroken and enables it to attain the distinction as the largest sales center in the world. The sales for each year follow:

Nineteen-twenty-eight was the best year the Greenville tobacco market has ever had. Over twenty-one million pounds were sold with four sets of buyers. The market made what is conceded to be a world's record of selling sixty million pounds of bright leaf tobacco in sixty days with four sets of buyers. The tobacco sold on the Greenville tobacco market is graded close and sold in small piles by the farmers.

The buying companies this year will be the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company; Liggett-Myers Tobacco Co.; Person-Garrett Tobacco Company; The Greenville Tobacco Company; E. B. Ficklen Tobacco Company; The American Supplies, Inc.; The Imperial Tobacco Company; The Export Tobacco Company and The China-American Tobacco Company.

The Greenville tobacco market is located in the heart of Eastern North Carolina. The eight warehouses are operated by Forbes & Morton, Smith & Sugg, Moore, Cannon & Sugg, R. V. Keel and M. R. Long, C. H. McGowan, W. S. Moye, Clyde Webb, Tom Timberlake and Dow Lassiter.

They have 80,177 square feet of floor space; storage capacity for 4,000 hogsheds of tobacco. Their turn-over in pounds exceeds ten million each season; they employ about seven hundred and fifty men and women from August to February, and in addition to doing a general leaf business they are large buyers for foreign and domestic trade.

The Greenville Tobacco Company, Inc., is under the management of men who have spent their life in the tobacco business. They know it from the plant bed to the manufactured product.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO FLY EIGHT DAYS AND NIGHTS WITHOUT A STOP

FRANCES MARSALIS and LOUISE THADEN set the world's endurance flight record for women when they brought their plane down at Curtiss Field, Long Island, after flying more than 196 hours without a stop through fog, rain, blinding sun, and pitch-black night.

IN ADDITION to their astounding endurance flight, Miss Marsalis (Left) and Miss Thaden hold many other flying records. Miss Marsalis is the women's champion stunt flyer of the world. It takes healthy nerves to fly...doubly so to fly like these two young women. It is significant that both are enthusiastic Camel smokers.

STEADY SMOKERS TURN TO CAMELS

MISS THADEN says: "Flying is a terrific strain at times. I frankly don't know what I should do without cigarettes. But I've found that different cigarettes have different effects on my nerves. For some years I've smoked Camels. They taste better. They're much milder. And I've noticed that they never upset my nerves."

MISS MARSALIS says: "I started smoking Camels because most of my friends who were flyers seemed to prefer them. I've never changed because I can't afford to take chances with my nervous system."

Camel's costlier tobaccos do make a difference...in taste, in mildness. They never jangle the nerves. Your taste and your nerves will confirm this. Turn to Camels.

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. You will find Camels rich in flavor and delightfully mild.

WHAT A THRILL! And how a good smoke adds to its enjoyment! Light up a cigarette. And for the sake of your nerves, make it a Camel...the milder cigarette that's made from costlier tobaccos.

1ST SALE FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 1ST

1ST SALE MONDAY SEPTEMBER 4TH

Now we are ready for the opening of the coming season and I wish to thank my many friends for the patronage they have given me in the past, and ask for a continuance of their liberal support in the future.

As I am a farmer, as well as a warehouseman, I know the condition and needs of the country, and it shall be my first aim and effort to do all I can for the farmers who sell with me.

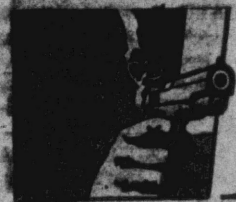

Now a few facts about the warehouse business: I own, operate, and finance my own business, and I am at the same place every year. I have no partner to criticize or complain of me buying tobacco to protect my sale when it is necessary, and I am not afraid to buy.

In handling my business this way, I have averaged right much above the market for the past several years. I have this year a competent and courteous force, and am better prepared than ever to serve my trade.

Try us with your first load. You will be satisfied. Bring you tobacco on Monday for Tuesday's opening sale. We expect a good sale.

The HIDDEN DOOR

By Frank L. Packard

SYNOPSIS: Leaving Germaine Tremblay, whom he loves, waiting in a motor boat, Colin Hewitt has crept through the dark woods to the "club" a criminal hangout, to warn Joe Lazzare that Dollaire's m-jackers plan a raid. Colin hopes for help against the Mask, New York underworld czar, from Lazzare, although the Mask operates this same St. Lawrence river 'club.' Colin is too late; he is tied to a tree; Dollaire's men shoot down the club "members" and blast their way into a secret room. Lazzare lies wounded on the porch; now Dollaire sets fire to the club.

Chapter 26 DESPERATE ATTEMPT

He stood there watching. The figure ran back to the power house. The flames began to mount skyward. And he could see Lazzare making desperate efforts, as the flames licked along the front wall toward him, to wriggle farther back from the threshold, winning his way only by a hopeless inch or two at a time.

He could see Dollaire's men coming out of the power house with arms full of little packages and bundles that contained he did not know what. And because there wasn't any more firing, he knew that the "members" of the club were pinned somewhere down there on the shore, routed and beaten.

A nightmare? It was no nightmare! It was real enough. It was only his brain that was reeling with the horror of it. To stand there and watch! In another five minutes—less than that—the flames would reach that open doorway—that dark object lying there still barely beyond the threshold. Why didn't Lazzare move faster? The man was wounded, of course, but he wasn't dead like Kenniston. Why didn't he—

A low, startled cry came suddenly from behind him. He jerked his head around. Someone was standing there on the path within a yard of him—a girl—shadowy—his mind snapped back into action. "Germaine!" he said hoarsely.

"Colin!" She was beside him now. "What is it? What has happened? I heard a lot of shots being fired and then an explosion. Ah—and you didn't come back. I couldn't stay there any longer. I—" "My wrists!" he broke in tensely. "Undo them, dear—as quickly as you can."

"Oh!" she cried in a low, shocked voice. "I didn't see. Colin, they're bleeding."

"It's nothing serious. Can you manage it?"

"Yes; in just a minute. Tell me—"

"Not now! There isn't any time." His words were coming in fast, jerky sentences. "You shouldn't have come, but thank God you did. You must go back to the launch the instant I'm free. Before you are seen. Don't leave it again. Wait for me, there."

"Wait for you!" A sudden fear was in her voice. "Colin, what do you mean? What are you going to do?"

"The fire, Lazzare's over there in the clubhouse—wounded." He was still jerking out his words. "The flames aren't far from the doorway now. That's where he is. Just inside the doorway. But there's still a chance that it's not too late. I've got to get him out if I can."

"She was working frantically at his wrists."

"But you can't reach him," she protested anxiously. "There are a lot of men around that other building. You would be seen the moment you stepped out from these trees here."

"No," he answered quickly. "I'll keep among the trees and go around this end of the clearing. It's scarcely any farther, and I can get in through the back of the clubhouse that way."

"Then I could go too," she asserted. "I might be able to be of some help. There—that awful thing is off at last!"

"The only way you can help any more now is to take care of yourself!" He was rubbing the bruised skin of his numbed wrists to restore the circulation. "Anything else is impossible. Germaine. You must get back to the launch at once."

"But, Colin, I—her voice broke in a half sob—"I can't."

"Germaine," he said huskily, "every second is counting. You've already done far more than you share—don't let that go for nothing now. For God's sake, dear—quick!"

"Oh, Colin!" she whispered, as she clung to him desperately for an instant—and then, turning, she sped back along the path.

get in through the back of the club house. Germaine! God, her courage—!

And so he ran, keeping close to the outer edge of the trees, the flames and the moonlight helping him to pick his way. It was not far. He was at the rear of the club house now. There was a back veranda—steps—close to the trees—not much clearing had been done here.

He broke through the trees and ran up the veranda steps. The back door was unlocked. He flung it open and stepped inside. A glare of light from the front of the bungalow showed him the way. He raced forward. A swirl of smoke choked him—stopped him.

The smoke cleared away. He went on again. Leaping shadows caricatured a radio, lounging chairs a table, and a settee fantastically. This was the living room. There, beyond, was the front door, open, that gave on the veranda—and, just inside the doorway, a dark shape huddled on the floor.

Lazzare! That was Lazzare, of course! He lunged forward. A wave of heat that scorched his lungs, robbing him of his breath, drove him back. Queer that he could see out through that open door! No one seemed to be coming and going in and out of the power house any more. He lunged forward again—reached the huddled form on the floor.

"Lazzare!" he called out. "Lazzare!"

There was no reply. He dragged the man a foot or two back into the room and bent down to pick him up in his arms.

He cursed his wrists again. His hands seemed to be detached from his arms. Lifting the man in his arms, he staggered across the living room and out onto the rear veranda. He sucked in the fresh air avidly as he staggered down the steps.

The man in his arms stirred—mumbled deliriously:

"W. P. W. P. Tell the Wine Press to get Dollaire. Tell the Wine Press—d'ye hear—tell 'em! It's Dollaire—damned scum—tell 'em—!"

The words were thudding at Colin's brain as he reached the bottom of the steps and laid the other on the ground. W. P. Yes, that stood for Wine Press—but what was the Wine Press? What did that mean?

But that could wait. Where was the man wounded—How badly was he hurt? The flames from the side of the clubhouse threw into fitful relief a white, ashen face, a blood-soaked shirt—and the man was still mumbling in delirium, but Colin could not catch the words now.

He tore the shirt open. Of course it was Lazzare. Bouchard had said so. And there was the scar on the right shoulder to which Reddy had referred—a long, jagged cicatrice running parallel with the shoulder blade. But he had not torn the man's shirt open to look for that scar. He had not thought of the scar, or had any doubt in his mind but that it was Lazzare; he had torn the shirt open to look for Lazzare's wound.

And now his lips tightened. There were a good many wounds. Shot-popper wounds. Lazzare's body was peppered with them. He did not know how serious they were. What was he to do? If Lazzare—

He rose suddenly of his feet. From the back of the clubhouse here he could not see the power house; but shouts reached him now, volleying English oaths—coming nearer. That answered his question. There was nothing more that he could do for Lazzare now—except leave him to his friends.

Yes, and—he smiled grimly—it would be just as well, not only for the sake of Lazzare, but for Germaine's and his own. If he were not called upon now to explain his presence here!

He stepped quickly back in amongst the trees that were only a few yards off, and waited. They would salvage what they could, no doubt, and the only way they could get into the club at all now was by way of the back door, so they were bound to see Lazzare lying there. But he must at least make sure of that, for the fire would—His mind swerved off at a tangent. Dollaire must have collected his loot and escaped.

BEST TOBACCO MARKET IN THE STATE

Opens Tues. Aug. 29th

A Word Of Appreciation--

We desire to thank everyone for their patronage enabling Greenville to achieve the distinction of being, not only the Best Tobacco Market in the State, but excelling all other tobacco markets in number of pounds sold.

No Market Will Excel Greenville--

We positively assert, the buyers joining in with us, that during the coming season, we are determined no market will excel Greenville in prices paid for every grade of Tobacco. This is the real secret of the Phenomenal Growth of Greenville's Tobacco Market.

Poor Grading Costs Millions--

Let us call especial attention to the fact that millions of dollars are lost annually on account of Tobacco being poorly graded and marketed in soft condition. Examine your pack barns for leaks before any of your tobacco is ruined.

Better Times This Fall--

The tide has turned and better times will be experienced this Fall for those who sell their Tobacco in Greenville.

CITY SET FOR BOOSTER DAY

Thousands Expected to Attend the Final game of Ball League Here Tomorrow.

Plans were being pushed rapidly here today for the observance here tomorrow of "Booster Day" and indications were that the occasion would be one of the most important of the year.

In view of the fact that the day is the last half Wednesday holiday of the year, promoters of Booster Day decided to make an effort to get a large crowd to Third Street ground to see the local team of the Coastal Plain league play the last scheduled game on the diamond here this season.

With the league season coming to a close August 28, and with Greenville holding a two game lead at the top of the standing of clubs, it was hoped by club officials that the holiday crowds would make it a point to attend the game and help Greenville strengthen their lead at the top.

It was stated the club was badly in need of financial aid and that large attendance would mean, much to ward giving the boys the kind of support necessary for them to carry over the championship series with the winning streak still in their grasp.

The game tomorrow and those to be played away from home the remainder of the season will be crucial ones and support is absolutely necessary if the present lead is maintained in the face of strenuous opposition offered by other clubs.

Kinston will face the locals here tomorrow and the game was expected to be the most exciting of the year, and certainly for the city which has seen numbers of stirring contests during the summer months.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Stocks and staples displayed lack of enthusiasm today as prices muddled about narrowly in trading that was about on par with yesterday's quiet performance.

While no particular weakness was shown by any of the share groups there was no special buying noticeable except in some of the motors and a few specialties.

The activity was fair in the first half hour but the ticker tape was not pressed at any time and later moved at a drag.

Grains were irregular and cotton about steady. Bonds were dull and a trifle mixed. The dollar was a bit firmer in foreign exchange. Advances of fractions to around a point were shown by stocks of Chrysler, General Motors, Lowes, DuPont, National Lead, American and Company, and U. S. Industrial Alcohol.
