CUBAN GOVERNMENT BEGINS HOUSE-CLEANING JOB

All Vestiges Of Machado Regime Being Wiped Out

PEOPLE WILL GO TO POLLS FEBRUARY 24

All International Obligations Will be Observed Even Though Contracted by Old Administration; Congress Dissolved and Other Steps Taken in Face of Opposition By American Ambassador.

Havana, Aug. 25.—(AP)—Taking a firm grip on power, provisional President De Cespedes today issued a decree wiping out all vestiges of the ousted Machado regime, dissolving Congress and calling a new election for February 24, 1934.

The message, issued with the cabinet's approval and effective immediately, declared unconstitutional the Machado administration and its actions since May 20, 1925, when Machado was inaugurated president for a second term.

All international obligations were to be observed even though contracted since that date. The action followed widespread clamor for house-cleaning of the regime that went on two weeks ago. It was taken over the opposition of United States Ambassador Sumner Welles who in his capacity as mediator had maintained that it is necessary to continue constitutional forms.

Secretary of Justice Carlos Salasria pointed out that although the government maintained Machado Machado acquired power through a coup d'etat against unconstitutionality, all foreign obligations contracted by Machado and all legislation passed the last four years would be considered as "things done" and therefore still in effect.

COLLEGE ENDS SUMMER TERM

Dr. Wright Delivers Address Before Graduates at E. C. T. C. Today

With a summer of intensive training behind them, students who attended the summer term of East Carolina Teachers college were on their way home in various parts of the country today after attending commencement exercises this morning at 10 o'clock.

One of the features of the finals was the awarding of the M. A. degree to Miss Deane Boone Haskett, of Greenville.

It marked the first time in the history of the college that this degree had been conferred and the occasion was of much interest to the student body and former students as well as to members of the faculty.

Degrees were also conferred on 43 A. B. graduates and 53 two-year graduates, bringing the total for the summer term to 96.

Declaring that North Carolina is entitled to a program of education, Dr. R. H. Wright, president of the college, delivered the address to the graduates.

He discussed the period of rapid change that the world, especially our own country, is passing through at the present time. The task of a teachers college, Dr. Wright said, under present conditions, is a tremendous one. It must train the teachers who are to train the youth for the future citizenship and no one knows just what the requirements of that citizenship will be in the future, for we are living in a period of the most rapid changes.

BOATS SEARCH FOR SOLARINA

Ship Reported Safe In Winyah Bay, S. C., Yesterday Unheard From Today

Wilmington, Aug. 25.—(AP)—Two coast guard cutters cut through uneasy waters of the Atlantic today in search of the motor ship Solarina unreported since it put out from Winyah Bay, S. C., Tuesday morning for Southport, N. C.

Carrying a crew of 12, the Solarina left Georgetown, S. C., Wednesday after being held in Winyah Bay two days by the hurricane. It should have reached Southport at 4 p. m. that day, coast guardsmen said.

The coast guard yesterday reported the Solarina safe in Winyah Bay but last night announced this was a mistake and that the vessel was still unaccounted for.

The ship was the only one listed as missing along the North Carolina coast following the storm.

Trade Anxiety Linked To Silver Outlook

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
London.—(AP)—With a mixture of hope and skepticism world markets are awaiting the effects of the eight-power silver pact.

The Lancashire cotton industry, which comprises the best foreign customer of the growers of the American staple—is particularly hopeful that its trade with China may be revived.

Silver bullion brokers, however, say that it was too much to hope that any sudden bulge in silver prices would ensue.

Danger In Extreme Rise
In fact should silver prices push up rapidly and in advance of the recovery of general world price levels some authorities warn that it might prompt exports of metal from the

DAMAGE SUIT NON-SUITED

Court Sustains Motion For Non-Suit in Action Against Strickland

Non-suit was ordered in civil court yesterday in the case of Mary House vs. David Strickland and M. O. Blount & Sons.

The woman was suing for $5,000 in connection with the death of her husband, the late George House, who was killed when hit by a car driven by Strickland and which was being pushed by a truck operated by M. O. Blount & Sons.

The wreck occurred near Tar river bridge a short distance from Greenville. House was driving along the highway with a mule and cart when Strickland's automobile propelled by the truck, ran into the cart and killed the occupant instantly.

The case was taken up the day before and the motion of non-suit was sustained by Judge Fritzelte at conclusion of plaintiff's testimony.

Court then began hearing in the action of Georgia Redmond, colored, against Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in which the plaintiff is seeking payment of a policy for $1,000 which her husband was said to have had with the company at the time of death.

The insurance company contended Redmond had permitted the policy to lapse before he died and refused to pay. The woman contended that payments had been made according to agreement.

It was indicated the jury would receive the case about the noon hour and that a verdict would be forthcoming during the afternoon.

In any case the measure has yet to be ratified by the governments which have until next April 1 to act. Once ratified the five metal-producing countries will start withdrawing an annual 5,000,000 ounces from the market, which may well have a distinct effect upon the price level.

Offset To Indian Sales
These purchases by the five producers—Mexico, United States, Canada, Australia and Peru—will offset the sales from the Indian treasury since it agrees to restrict any sales that it may make to an annual average of 35,000,000 ounces during the next four years.

However, the pact does not compel exports of metal from the

Protest Low Leaf Prices

Chadborne, N. C., Aug. 25.—(AP)—A petition signed by several hundred tobacco farmers in this section was sent to President Roosevelt and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace today saying that "unless something is done about low prices ruin will result."

General dissatisfaction has been expressed in many quarters by tobacco growers in South Carolina and border belts and they say something must be done to remedy the situation.

The petition forwarded reads:

"We, the undersigned tobacco farmers, do hereby petition the president and secretary of agriculture to make special effort to remedy the low price of tobacco in the entire South Carolina belt. The prices of tobacco on sale today show a reduction of about one-third from the prices paid during the first week of sales.

SEES BETTER PRICE FOR PIGS

Government Entrance To Hog-Buying Field Boosts Barbecue Prices

Entrance of the federal government into the hog buying field should boost the price of barbecue hogs in this section of the state. E. F. Arnold, director of the Pitt County Farm Department, said today in discussing the government hog-buying program.

The government, in its effort to relieve the national meat surplus plans to take a million piggy sow off the market this year. Mr. Arnold said, and has boosted the price of pigs so that growers, who have been hard hit by low prices in recent months, will really get something out of the industry.

The farm director said the government is paying from $5 to $9.50 for pigs ranging from 25 to 100 pounds in weight, and for sows above 175 pounds is giving a premium of $4.00 in addition to the general market price.

This premium alone should offer an inducement, Mr. Arnold said in stating he had already received inquiries from Pitt county growers regarding the program.

The Chicago market price for commercial pigs at this time, the farm director said is $3.50 down and is $3.80 to $3.45 for packing sows.

This program is a part of the relief drive waged through the U. S. Department of Agriculture to put more money into the pockets of the people and by reducing the surplus it was believed prices for hogs would undergo a pronounced improvement next year.

H. C. SUGG IS WELL-VERSED IN LEAF TRADE

In writing about the change of location of the Dixie warehouse to Gorman's yesterday, reference to H. C. Sugg as one of the operators of the firm was inadvertently omitted.

Mr. Sugg has been connected with the tobacco business for many years. In addition to the operation of several farms, he has been in close touch with the tobacco warehouse business here for years. He is fully familiar with problems of the growers and has always used his influence for their betterment.

Associated with Mr. Sugg in operation of the Dixie this year is Will Moore and Biggs T. Cannon, both experienced tobaccoists whose qualifications were outlined in the story yesterday with the part about Mr. Sugg being unintentionally left out.

Billy Smith of Bethel Suffers Painful Bruises on Highway Near His Home

J. J. LASSITER DIES AT BETHEL

Funeral Services For Well Known Citizen Held This Afternoon

J. J. Lassiter, about 60 years of age, died at his home in Bethel yesterday morning as result of a heart attack. Although he had been in declining health for about two years, his condition did not become critical until a few hours before he died.

Funeral services were conducted from the Bethel Baptist Church this afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. Leslie Newman, pastor, and interment was made in the graveyard at the Nobles' place near Staton's Mill.

A native of Northampton county, Mr. Lassiter moved to Bethel about 20 years ago. He was engaged in the furniture business for many years, but retired sometime ago on account of blindness which prevented his active participation in business.

He was a member of the Baptist Church and held in esteem by a wide circle of friends who received news of his death with sorrow.

He is survived by an adopted daughter, Mrs. O. V. Coulter of Bethel.

IMPORTERS WILL ADJUST TARIFF DOWN

Exporters Accept 87 Cents a Bushel in Compromise at International Conference; Hope to Stimulate Production in Wheat Raising Territories

London, Aug. 25.—(AP)—A last minute hitch delayed the signing today of an international wheat agreement after it had been announced that importing nations had accepted the tariff and price provisions which had stood in the way of the accord.

London, Aug. 25.—(AP)—The international wheat conference conquered tariff and price difficulties today by ruling on a final agreement which tied foreign nations with the board program designed to boost prices of the grain by cutting production and stimulating consumption.

The chief barrier to the agreement has been the question of how high prices of wheat must go before importers would be allowed to lower the tariff. This problem was met by compromise.

The exporters who had demanded the lowering of tariff on wheat stood at the price of a bushel accepted at 82 cents a bushel instead. The figures in the United States are the present exchange equivalent of price set forth in the final agreement argued about during the negotiations.

The agreement provides that importers are to adjust their tariff downward when wheat has stood for four months at 12 pre-war gold French franc per quintal, equivalent of 63.6 United States cents in gold.

JOHNSTON'S SET TO OPEN

Tobacco Warehouse To be Operated by Timberlake and Lassiter This Year

There is no item of news that will be of more interest to the farmers of Eastern North Carolina than the announcement that J. T. Timberlake, known throughout this section as "Tom" and M. D. Lassiter better known as "Daw", have formed a partnership and will operate the Johnston Warehouse. Both of these gentlemen are well known to the tobacco growers of Eastern Carolina.

We venture to say that there is no man connected with the warehouse business who is better known to the tobacco growers than Tom Timberlake. He is a native of Pitt county and has been connected with this and other markets in this section all his life. He is familiar with every phase of the tobacco industry from the plant bed to the manufactured product. He knows the value of a pile of tobacco and what it should sell for and when running his sale never lets a pile go until he knows the highest bid has been placed on it. Tom as he is known to one and all, is a big asset to the Greenville Market and while this is just his second season as proprietor of Johnston Warehouse he has

ROGERS HORNSEBY TAKES OVER THE JOB OF PILOTING THE ST. LOUIS BROWNS.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

Joe Hauser, the Milwaukee or Minneapolis Mauler, depending upon whether you identify him with his birthplace or his present place of baseball employment, will not return to the major leagues on the strength of his latest home run hitting exploits, but he seems to enjoy a steady job slugging Class double-A pitching into unconsciousness.

To go back a few years, Hauser was in a fair way to making himself very useful to Connie Mack in the reconstruction of the Athletics when he broke his knee-cap in an exhibition game with the Phillies in the spring of 1925. He was unable to play for the rest of the season, failed to recover entirely from the accident and was relegated because of his slowness to a minor league career.

But he could still hit, so the record shows, and it was not long before Hauser was cracking the fence again with great regularity. With the Baltimore Orioles of 1930 Hauser connected for 63 circuit clouts, a new all-time minor league record, three more than Babe Ruth's major league mark. But not one of the 16 major league clubs thought well enough of this exploit to draft Joe for another experiment.

His home run output dropped to 31 the following year and then Baltimore traded Hauser to Minneapolis, where the inspiration of one of the shortest right field barriers in "AA" company sent him off on another home run spree.

Jarring Joe laced out 49 home runs in the American Association in 1932, broke the league record of 54 this year set by Nick Cullop in 1930, and at this writing was pounding his way toward a new minor league mark with much earnestness far ahead of all sluggers in organized baseball.

Minneapolis observers, among them George A. Barton, dispute the tendency to belittle Hauser's current achievement on the ground he has a pop-fly target on his home grounds, Nicollet Park. They point out Hauser has con-

United States Issue
Great Britain, the first country to print an official government stamp in 1840, has had 28 issues since that time in which there were basic changes in design.

On the other hand, the United States government, which turned out its first official stamp in 1847 has had 61 basic issues, both regular and commemorative, to date.

It is interesting to note that early British stamps were only one and two pence, while the first U. S. issue was for 5 and 10 cents, lower denominations not appearing until the 1851 issue.

What's Happening:
If'll cost collectors quite a bit to get a complete set of those recent Italian airmails issued in connection with the Balbo flight. The entire issue contains 46 different stamps—each stamp really being three stamps in one—with a total face value of $106.72. That figure doesn't take in to consideration the rating cataloguers will place on the issue, either.

TAL HENRY TO PLAY HERE THURSDAY

The Greenville Cotillion Club has completed arrangements to bring the famous Tal Henry and his North Carolinians here to play for them on Thursday, August 31. These music makers are well known in this section, having furnished music for the Rocky Mount June German in 1932 and playing many dances in this vicinity.

Tal Henry and his orchestra have been featured regularly from Hotel New Yorker in New York; Gibson Hotel in Cincinnati; Castle Farms, Walton Hotel in Philadelphia and the Waldman Park Hotel, Washington, D. C.

This announcement will be of much interest for Greenville's "social lions" and will draw many out of town visitors who insist that Greenville is the best town in North Carolina.

Featured with Tal and his Twelve Victor and Vitaphone recording artists is our friend, the hunchback, shown everywhere as "The Little Man with a Big Voice," none other than Tag Walters.

The Cotillion Club to make this the finest dance Greenville has ever had, has secured the Greenville high school auditorium for the occasion and the dance will begin promptly at ten o'clock Thursday night, and will be conducted with the usual refinement of all Cotillion Club dances.

The board of directors of the club have held off giving dances in June and July, awaiting the chance to bring to its members a good orchestra, which is sure to make a good dance. We hope that everyone will take advantage of this fine music when Tal Henry is in Greenville at the high school auditorium next Thursday night, August 31.

Notice To Parents. Next week we start practicing in earnest for our Folk Games and dances which will be given on the lawn at the close of the playground. It is not too late to join the playgrounds if you come during the next week. We are glad to have all who wish to be in the pageant and between 5 and 13 years of age. However, if you do not sign up by Sept. 1st it will be too late.

Trade Anxiety Linked To Silver Outlook

(Continued from page one) pensate for another serious depressant to the price of the white metal the slump in demand from China, normally the largest consumer. Chinese imports of silver, as estimated by Handy and Harman, New York bullion brokers, fell from 137,000,000 ounces in 1929 to only about 40,000,000 ounces in 1932. At the same time, Indian consumption of the metal dropped from 82,000,000 ounces in 1929 to 12,000,000 ounces in 1932. Thus the slump in demand from the far East was greater than the drop in world production, which amounted to 261,000,000 ounces in 1929 and 161,000,000 ounces in 1932. Eastern Sales Unsettling

Talks to Parents

Overdoses Of Sunshine

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

In the first enthusiasm of getting out of the city and into the light and fresh air of the country it is very easy to overdo the modern health mania of sun-bathing.

Parents feel that all the sunshine possible must be concentrated on their children during the few weeks that it is available, and wish to expose them to its direct rays as quickly and thoroughly as they can.

The results of an excess of this treatment, however, may be serious and of long duration, and in the end it may well be that the child would have been better off without any exposure to the sun at all.

The most apparent symptoms of excessive exposure are not always the most serious. Of course, sunburn may be very painful, and, if too severe, may even injure permanently the texture of the skin.

Or a child may have what the parents will lightly call "a touch of the sun"—really a slight sunstroke, which may consist only of a slight headache and a feeling of lassitude. But often this headache is accompanied by vomiting and high fever, and the consequences may be far-reaching.

Nature builds up her own resistance to the sun's direct rays in the coat of tan which she gradually spreads over the skin. To take a child fresh from the city and expose him to the direct rays of the sun for an unlimited or even for a long period of time is to court disaster.

The child must be accustomed to the exposure gradually, beginning with only a few minutes at a time until the skin gradually darkens. This may require a week, and even then strong doses of sunshine should be broken either with a dip into the water or a period of rest in the shade.

Sales of metal from the Indian treasury during these years resulted in an abnormal and artificial source of supply and has been widely regarded by experts as perhaps the most unsettling influence of all in causing this important monetary metal to the lowest price in history.

However, it is said that removal of the pressure from the Indian Treasury should be accompanied by a restoration of something like normal demand from the Far East to restore proper conditions in the silver market.

Such a demand, it is explained should be restored by improvement in the general world level of prices, such as seems to be under way.

The opening of the tobacco market here Tuesday will bring thousands of visitors to this city and we urge every business man of the city to make it a point to visit the tobacco section and help give these folks a real welcome to our city. We are always glad to have outsiders visit our city and the best way to let them know it is to tell them and show them by our actions in helping to make their visit a pleasant one.

It seems that Secretary Wallace is confident that the tobacco buying companies will of their own accord pay a fair price for this year's crop, and certainly we hope that he is right. Shortage of amount of tobacco on hand, increased cigarette consumption in this country and a better quality crop in this section this year are all good reasons to boost the price situation but there have been years before when it seemed to us that prices should rise and they did just the reverse. Of course the tobacco companies of their own accord might come across with a good price but in our opinion the best way to assure it is for the government to get its administrative machinery ready so that government action can be taken immediately in case the opening prices do not indicate good prices for the season.

UNsung HEROES

Stories of a ship battling a storm and coming through successfully after a hard fight always brings most of us somewhat of a thrill. While as a rule those in command of the ship receive their well deserved congratulations, there are other unsung heroes of every successful fight against the mighty waves of the ocean. We refer to those men in the boiler rooms who are never seen by those who visit or travel on the ship, but without whom no fight against the ocean would be successful.

When the Old Dominion liner Madison limped into harbor at Norfolk yesterday after a successful battle of two days and a night against the story Atlantic, it was most gratifying that the commanding officer paid just tribute to those brave men who fed the boilers of the great ship enabling it to keep its head against the storm. When the fight was at its height, the commander said, a call went to the engine room from the pilot house to ascertain how the

The HIDDEN DOOR

Synopsis: Colin Hewitt's trip into the wild north of the St. Lawrence river, where he had hoped to secure Joe Lazzare's aid against the Mask New York killer, has failed. He found Lazzare in a crook's club the night it was sacked and burned by hi-jackers—under Captain Dollaire. Colin dragged Lazzare, badly wounded, from the burning "club" but was forced to leave him behind. But he met and fell in love with Germaine Tremblay—whom he also has had to leave in Canada. A Boston costumer has made Colin a new face, but Colin has not found a clue to the whereabouts of the Mask, although he has searched New York for a month. He reviews his course.

Chapter 29 IN THE DARK

And so it had been decided that Colin would have full support and help of Butch Connal's gang—but that they would work apart. Therefore it was Papa Goyette who had supplied Clarke Lunn with a "reputation"—not as that of a crook of high degree, but as one of those in whose past the police would take an abiding interest if certain intimate details were but known.

It was also Papa Goyette who had secured his entree into this rooming house which was a hangout of well dressed gentry outside the law.

Butch Connal and his mob had worked, unceasingly—and Butch, when he communicated by telephone was known as Martel. And he, Colin had not spared himself. Days and nights of it! His knowledge of the dens and dives that, not so long ago he had frequented in search of other material had stood him in good stead so far as gaining admission thereto was concerned. He had haunted them; he had also haunted virtually every night club in New York.

A stray word, a whisper, a confidence exchanged behind the unhallored portals of the underworld where daylight never entered—that was what he had sought and hoped for. But he had been unrewarded. The Wine Press was as much of a mystery as ever. Never had he heard so much as a mention of the Mask.

Reddy's letter was still, figuratively speaking, in his pocket. He did not even know whether Lazzare had lived or died. Butch Connal had uncovered nothing. There had been no trace of Lazzare or any of Lazzare's companions since the night of Dollaire's attack upon the club at the Cascade River.

Well, there was probably a very good reason for that. They were keeping under cover. Before he had left Boston the newspapers had had the story. The caption of one in particular, set in lurid type and blazoned across the front page, floated again before his mind's eye:

INTERNATIONAL COUNTERFEITING PLANT UNCOVERED

It was the first inkling he had had of the actual nature of the Mask's "interests" on the north shore. He could not say that he had been startled. What had interested him far more was the "stories" that the papers had run day by day. They had supplied some details, of course, that he had not heretofore known; but they had not furnished him with anything concrete in the way of a clue and certainly had not blazed any trail for him to follow. Perhaps though, he might have overlooked something. He pieced the stories together again in his mind.

A few days after he had left on the Bonaventure, a fisherman from Cap a l'Orage, passing the mouth of the Cascade River had noticed that the club had been burned down. The fisherman had landed, discovered the wreckage of the power plant and the bodies of two murdered men—one of whom he knew to be Kenniston. He had returned post-haste to Cap a l'Orage and had made his report. A crossing was at once made to Gaspé coast and the wires had begun to hum.

In the twinkling of an eye Cap a l'Orage had emerged from obscurity into the fierce glare of newspaper publicity! Well, as had been so often said, it was an ill wind that blew nobody good. Madame Frenier's Hotel du Canada must have done a thriving business! By planes, by boats from the Gaspé shore, police and reporters had flocked to the scene—and Cap a l'Orage had automatically become their headquarters.

Below the ground level of the wrecked power house had been found the presses—and the numerous plates that proclaimed the uses to which the presses had been put. The work had been done on a vast scale—the paper currency of many nations, where there was worthwhile value behind such nations' genuine notes, had been masterfully reproduced in various denominations. A salmon club! Closed tight each year during the winter. Who would think of digging up the cement flooring of the power house, or dream that, underneath, a modern and up to date printing plant had been installed that was capable of turning out a year's supply of spurious notes in a few months or so—and without working overtime at that!

Kenniston's life had been laid bare from the day of his birth, but who were the men he had gathered around him? No one knew. Gregg, later identified by Dr. Tremblay as a patient he had once visited at the club, was simply Gregg. The trail ended there.

Who had blown up the power house? Very few of the spurious notes had been found—had Kenniston's men turned against him, put him on the spot and made off with the notes? Or what? Who were the two men who, giving their names as Laroque and Bolduce, had arrived in Cap a l'Orage, announcing that they were going up the coast to visit friends at Seven Islands; but instead of boarding the Bonaventure in due course, had mysteriously disappeared?

There had been no mention of one Dollaire. No; there had been nothing in the published news that had afforded him any help. Lazzare and his companions might as well never have existed so far as their identities and present whereabouts were concerned.

No mention of one Antalo Bouchard, either! Therefore Bouchard was still at Cap a l'Orage—and was probably engaged in drinking himself into a state of coma; for otherwise, Bouchard's sudden disappearance must inevitably, have attracted attention too.

Cap a l'Orage! He would have liked to know more of what was going on at Cap a l'Orage day by day. No; that was not all what he meant! He jumped to his feet and began to pace the room again.

It was Germaine he was thinking of now. It was news of Germaine he wanted. It was an impossible situation for them both, yet one where a false move or the slightest slip would spell disaster.

She had unhesitatingly agreed that his connection with the north shore should be entirely severed for the time being even though by some roundabout way it was possible that a means of communication might be established between them. Not a happy solution for either of them—but, with their world at stake, the only safe one.

He halted abruptly in his stride. A voice was calling from the hall: "Heh, Clarkie! You're wanted on the phone. Not a dame—you're out of luck!"

Colin opened the door and stepped out.

"Thanks!" he said to an empty hall.

There was a telephone booth here on the ground floor—its sound-proof quality unquestionably guaranteed by virtue of its environment.

Colin entered the booth.

"Hello," he said.

Butch Connal's voice came over the wire:

"That you, Clarkie?"

"Okay—Martel," Colin answered "Shoot"

"I just got tipped off by one of the boys. That run-runner guy you was telling me about is in town—usual business. You know who I mean?"

Colin caught his breath. There was only one "run-runner" guy he had ever talked about to Butch Connal. Dollaire! And, from what Bolduce had said, Dollaire at times sold his wares in New York.

"Sure!" he said.

"Well," said Butch Connal, "he's over at Spinelli's hobnobbing with a booze baron. It looks like they was going to make a night of it, but you never can tell. They may blow. So if you want to see him, hop to it. I know you ain't never learned to map and don't know him, but you'll find the dope waiting for you. I'm drunk in the bar. Get me? So long!"

Colin hung up the receiver. The blood was tingling in his veins. Dollaire—here in New York again! Had Dollaire underrated the Mask—or was he merely contemptuous? A break at last! If Dollaire was over there at Spinelli's, it was a hundred to one bet that the Mask, or some of his minions, hot on Dollaire's trail would be there too.

Colin raced back to his room for his hat, and a minute later, left the house.

Opening Day Prices--

Prices on the Border and South Carolina Markets opening day this season ranged between 10 1-2c and 12 c. Let us bear in mind that opening day this season we will sell, as usual first curings, generally the most inferior tobacco in the crop, of course the general season's average will be much higher than opening day average.

No Market Will Excel Greenville--

We positively assert, the buyers joining in with us, that during the coming season, we are determined no market will excel Greenville in prices paid for every grade of Tobacco. This is the real secret of the Phenomenal Growth of Greenville's Tobacco Market.

Poor Grading Costs Millions--

Let us call especial attention to the fact that millions of dollars are lost annually on account of Tobacco being poorly graded and marketed in soft condition. Examine your pack barns for leaks before any of your tobacco is ruined.

No Floor Space Reservations--

Reserving floor space in advance is now prohibited by the Board of Trade. First come first served will be the rule. $50.00 fine will be imposed against any warehouseman violating this by-law.

Russians Plan Stratospheric Attempt Soon

Leningrad, Aug. 25.—(AP)—Soviet aviation's first venture into the stratosphere is scheduled to be made within the next few weeks in a specially constructed balloon designed for an ascent of from 6 to 13 miles.

Three—possibly four—of the country's leading aerologists intend to set out on a voyage into the upper reaches of the atmosphere before the summer ends on what is contemplated as the first of a series of such flights for scientific observation.

The primary purpose is to study the cosmic rays, electro-magnetic phenomena and the physiological influence of great heights on human beings. But they also hope to better the record of Prof. Auguste Piccard, who on his second ascension reached a height of more than 49,000 feet.

The first test flight of the balloon, constructed in the Air Institute's factories here along the general lines of Piccard's craft, was pronounced satisfactory by the constructor, M. Vaseko and B. Fedosenko, the chief pilot, although it was allowed to climb only 3,100 meters during its almost 14 hours in the air. It was brought down safely some 30 miles from Leningrad, its starting point.

Both Vaseko and Fedosenko set probably will make the first flight. Prof. D. Molchanov, director of the institute and organizer of the ascension, likely will be in command. Whether the flight will be started from Leningrad or from Moscow will depend on weather conditions.

The balloon designed by Engineer I. Chertovsky, was more than a year in construction and only Soviet materials and equipment were used. The envelope is made of a special rubberized fabric to which a paint compound has been applied to make it impervious to the sun's heat. It has a capacity of 20,000 cubic meters of hydrogen gas.

The cabin is constructed of non-magnetic, rustless steel and can accommodate four men for a minimum of 12 hours. It is slung in what resembles a basket, the bottom of which is fitted with a shock absorbing device to soften the impact of landing. Portholes fitted with non-sweating and non-freezing glass—four around the sides, one in the top and one in the floor—provide the means of observation and photography.

The crew will receive necessary air from a liquid oxygen apparatus with in a sealed cabin, which also will have a powerful short-wave radio transmission and receiving set.

AMERICANS IN VIENNA JOLTED AS DOLLAR DWINDLES IN VALUE

Vienna, Aug. 25.—(AP)—The falling dollar has hit Americans in Austria right in the middle of their budgets.

Travelers from the United States who arrived early in July cut short their stay because of the dwindling purchasing power of their national currency.

Americans maintaining households here, including those in the diplomatic and consular services, took deep breaths and began figuring out a new approach to the problem of "living cheaply abroad."

Those who had been paying $100 a month rent in Austria schillings found their housing cost boosted to $140, with no chances of getting out of the leases on that score. Coffee now costs about $1.40 a pound and tea of good average grade $4. But those beverages are listed as luxuries by the Austrian government, and other articles are not so costly. For example: Beefsteak 55c; Pork 40c; Veal 54c; Mutton 60c; Ham 70c; Sugar 11c.

Fruit is sold by the pound, apples costing 22 cents and bananas 31 cents. Bread is 10 cents a loaf, milk a dime a quart, eggs 30 to 40 cents a dozen and butter 40 cents a pound.

One result is that eggs poached in milk and served on toast has become a popular dish with American housewives.

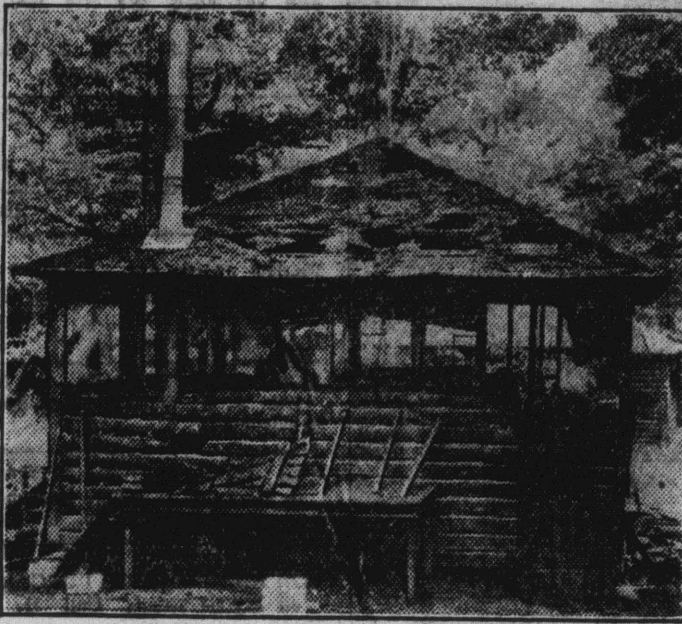

CUBANS IN NEW YORK CELEBRATE

Members of a secret Cuban revolutionary society raided the Cuban consulate in New York, assaulted the acting consul general and carried off a bust of Gerardo Machado. The bust was made a target for mud and soft fruit. The Cubans also had framed portraits of the former Cuban president which were torn to bits. Above picture shows the end of a Machado portrait. HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS
HOLLYWOOD—A little girl who can speak for herself is taking over this space today, even though she doesn't know it yet.

We hope Rosemary Sprague, in Cleveland Heights, Ohio, won't mind, but her letter was such a bright spot in the day of studio ladies and gentlemen who are reading thousands of letters on the same subject that they thought many more people would be interested in hearing about it.

"Gentlemen (writes Rosemary): 'I happened to see in one of the papers that you were still looking for someone to play 'Alice.' I would like to play the part because I've loved 'Alice in Wonderland' and everything in it ever since I was about 5—especially Alice.

"When I asked mother if she thought I stood a chance of getting the part she said she didn't know, that stranger things had happened....

Ambition Looks Ahead

"I am 13 years old and I will be going into the ninth grade in September. I have long hair, as the proofs enclosed will show you, and I am quite tall. I am not very pretty. I'd like to send better proofs, but mother only gave me these to do what I pleased with. They are pretty badly faded and I think one is very dumb.

"I have had no experience except on the school stage and in the back yard where last week we gave Scott's 'Marmion.' I was Lady Constance, Lady Claire, Lord Heron, King James, Queen Margaret, the abbess, the steward and the crowd. The time before I was the crew in 'Treasure Island.' We also gave 'Rasputin.'

"I haven't been to many movies. My favorite actor is Mr. Arliss and my favorite actresses are Miss Harding and Miss Wynyard. I asked mother if she thought they might play Alice and she says they had too much sense....

And Versatile Too

"I play the piano and dance pretty well and I can work very hard if I like what I'm working at. I don't think mother will mind if I send this letter. She hasn't objected to my sending for things advertised in magazines. I like to get things through the mail.

"Besides, she said something ought to be done right away to save Alice enthusiasts from total disappointment, so I'm sending this by air mail and special delivery. I've always wanted to use the stamps anyway.

"Sincerely yours,
"ROSEMARY SPRAGUE."

PEACE TIME FARMS IN GRAN CHACO IN PARAGUAY

(Continued from page one) ings near the 75,000 acre colony where 10,000 Mennonites have been settled since 1927. To bring 100,000 new colonists into the Chaco would take ten years, it is estimated, but it would triple the white population Paraguay already obtains from the Chaco about half of the government revenues.

Geologists have reported there is no more reason to expect petroleum or minerals under the rich red loam of the Chaco than beneath the soil of southernmost Brazil, of which geologically it is a combination.

Disaffection among some Chaco Mennonites, which came to a head seven months ago in a threat to migrate to Uruguay or southern Brazil, has died down. Those who favored removal, because of the war and the inadaptability of the land to wheat and cotton, were reminded that the average colonist had done well. The wealthiest of those who came in 1927 is reputed to have banked $30,000.
