GOVERNMENT PUSHES WARFARE ON KIDNAP RACKET

Threat Of Death In Electric Chair Aides To Officers

KIDNAPPER SHOT DOWN YESTERDAY

Member of Underworld Gang Slain by Policeman as Captive Calls For Aid; Federal Officers at Oklahoma City Plan To Put 12 People on Trial in Connection With Abduction

(By The Associated Press) The kidnaping racket seems headed for depression today as bullets, steel bars and threat of the electric chair answered the underworld challenge.

One kidnaper was shot down yesterday by a policeman, in San Francisco, whose victim, William F. Woods, a cousin of former President Taft, appealed to him for help.

Before he was shot he killed a policeman and wounded a woman passerby. Two men accused of conspiracy to kidnap were in jail at Hartford, Conn., where police said their arrest thwarted a plot to kidnap a wealthy Springfield, Mass., business man. Seven others were being sought today.

Federal officers at Oklahoma City planned to put 12 people on trial in the next two weeks in the kidnaping of Charles Urschel, millionaire. The prisoners were flown there yesterday from Texas where they were caught.

BOOSTER DAY HERE MONDAY

Crowds Expected to Honor Greenville Club of Coastal Plain League

"Booster Day" which was rained out last Wednesday will be held here Monday afternoon when Kinston comes here to play a rained out game with Greenville. It was announced today by the booster day committee.

Although the season schedule was completed today, it was necessary for Greenville and Kinston to play Monday to make up for the game which Jube Pluvius took from them in one of the hardest rains to visit the city in many a day.

The object of "Booster Day" is to honor members of the local ball club for their ability to come out at the top in the Coastal Plain circuit. It is also the object of the committee to raise funds to help take some of the red off the club ledger.

With a game and a half separating Greenville and Ayden for the top and with Ayden playing a double bill today, the outcome of the Kinston-Greenville clash is being watched with interest by fans in both towns. While Ayden is glad to have captured second place they are still hopeful of climbing more closely to Greenville in the play of the postponed games.

The largest crowd to attend a game here this season was expected to swarm over Third Street school athletic field Monday as fans attempt to boost the club to victory.

SEVEN GOOD ROADS LEAD TO THIS CITY

Network of Highways Speed up Movement Of Tobacco to This Great Market

Perhaps one of the biggest factors in the changing methods of marketing is the improved highway system of North Carolina. A development that has been perfected within the past few years. The large markets are now accessible from almost every part of their territory, over hard-surfaced roads. It is human nature to follow the good roads, that's where the crowd goes and most farmers are going where the majority of their fellow growers are marketing their crops. Then too, the cities that are forcing ahead, have sensed the psychology of the situation, and warehousemen, tobacco boards of trade, and local merchants are cooperating, and uniting their efforts in one big push to make their bid for every load of tobacco possible. They have come to realize the vast benefit to them not only from the single standpoint of building up a tobacco marketing center, but of building trade of all kinds.

In former days, the warehousemen combed the countryside and made personal calls upon the farmer, some from farm to farm and extending a personal and cordial pressing invitation to come to this or that market to sell. They went single-handed. They do it yet, but that is a small part of the pressure that is being brought to bear upon the farmer in the matter of the selection of a market for the sale of his raw tobacco. Cooperative advertising campaigns are being put on through modern and up-to-date methods, throughout the territory to present the advantages of the individual market.

Thousands of inches of paid advertising argument of the free "town pride" boosting done by the newspapers of their own initiative, and this is supplemented by thousands and thousands of printed circular and form letters to say nothing of the advertising novelties that are bought and distributed. Whistles, buttons, posters, stickers for the automobile windshield, and huge placards and banners were brought into play the past season.

In several of the larger markets in North Carolina, the business men have used these methods to popular (Continued on page three)

LABOR UNREST GRIPS CUBANS

Dictatorial Government Troubled by Signs of Unrest of Workers

Havana, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Labor unrest that precipitated the ousting of Gerardo Machado plagued with renewed force today the dictatorial government of his successor De Cespedes.

Bakers, motion picture operators, stevedores, street car men and others here or in other parts of the island were on sale mostly for shorter hours and more pay.

Agitators continued to taunt the administration as having no right to displace congress, set the date for a new election and declared the acts of Machado unconstitutional. But it was said on high authority that President De Cespedes was ready to act with organized labor in a direct manner and not to molest agitators if there is no further outbreak of violence.

Havana which had been free from labor strife since the harbor workers' walkout was still affected by telegraph operators, drug store messengers who were considering quitting.

FORMER PITT MAN BOSSES BIG CITY COPS

Willis R. Jones, Formerly of Bethel, is Deputy Attorney General of Md.

The story and picture of a Pitt county man who went into another state and made a name for himself were carried in a recent issue of the Baltimore Sun, one of the leading papers of the State of Maryland.

The subject of the story is Willis R. Jones, son of S. M. Jones, one of the best known citizens of the Bethel community, who is serving as Deputy Attorney General of Maryland, and consequently tells the cops of that state what to do and what not to do.

Mr. Jones is one of the aggressive type of young Pitt county men who left home years ago to seek their fortunes in other parts of the country and have realized the ambition. His rapid rise to a position of importance in public life reads like all stories of successful men, who knowing what they want out of life, dig in and get it.

The former Bethel man was reared on a farm near that place and attributes much of his success to the habit of "early rising" acquired while living close to the soil.

The story in the Baltimore Sun follows: If you want to be Deputy Attorney General of Maryland, Mr. Jones (Continued on page four)

FAIR WEATHER AFTER STORM

Seaboard Working to Day to Dig Out From Debris Caused by Hurricane

(By The Associated Press) A week of death and destruction caused by a fierce tropical hurricane and a driving northeaster, was over today and the sun shone again on the Atlantic seaboard littered with debris and rain soaked buildings.

The death toll stood at 50 and it was estimated that property damage would run as high as $15,000,000. Only one craft was still reported missing—a 20-foot sloop bound from Mansquan, N. J., to Nantucket, Mass., with three persons aboard—did not been heard from since it left port last Tuesday.

The task of rebuilding went along rapidly at resorts from New York to North Carolina but flooded areas handicapped the searchers.

DIXIE INN IS BROKEN INTO

"Picnic" Robbers Obtain Eats and Drinks At Sandwich Shop Near City

Robbers evidently with a picnic spirit broke into the Dixie Inn sandwich shop on the Greenville, Bethel highway about a mile from the city last night and obtained a liberal supply of beer, two frying pans and materials for making sand wiches.

The robbery, which took place sometime last night, was discovered by employees who opened the place for business this morning. Police were immediately notified but no information as to the identity of the robbers had been obtained up to the noon hour.

Entrance to the building was made by cutting out a panel of the door.

The sandwich shop is located a few feet from the highway in plain view of hundreds of motorists who pass along the road at all hours of the day and night, and officers considered the robber one of the bold-est in some time.

OLDEST LEAF HOUSE OF CITY READY TO OPEN

The Star, With Greater Facilities Than Ever, Offers Many Advantages

Of the seventy-five or more tobacco warehouses located on the various markets of Eastern North Carolina, there is none better equipped or more modernly constructed for the convenience of farmers than the New Star Warehouse, owned and operated by Guy V. Smith and Bruce B. Sugg, oldest warehouse firm in Greenville.

Forming a partnership in 1913 Smith and Sugg have conducted one of the most popular warehouses of the local market and there is no firm of the tobacco industry that enjoys a larger acquaintance or business among the growers than they. The history of their activities show they have been most successful in the conduct of their business and in their efforts to please the thousands of farmer patrons who sell tobacco with them. Having been engaged in the warehouse business here for twenty years gives Smith and Sugg the distinction of being the oldest firm connected with the local market.

During the early part of 1931 when their warehouse was destroyed by fire, the ashes were hardly cold when they began the construction of a new building to replace the one burned. Determination to provide every convenience and improved service for their customers Messrs. Smith and Sugg erected not only one of the largest sales tobacco warehouses of the state, but they added numerous modern improvements, the like of which will be found in only few such structures of any market.

Much of the progress made by the Greenville market during the past several years when its growth has exceeded that of any other market of the state is due to the efforts of Smith and Sugg individually and collectively. And when the local market a few years ago was given its fifth set of buyers the members of this firm worked hard to this end and what they accomplished is in a large measure due to their determination to provide Greenville with facilities equal to that of any bright leaf market of the world.

There are numerous things connected with the operation of the New Star Warehouse that is responsible for the firm retaining its place among the leaders of the new bright belt. The personal attention of the owners to every pile of tobacco sold on their floor and most efficient floor and office force has been large factors in the success the business has attained.

As a further testimony of the popularity of this concern they led the Greenville Tobacco Market last season in numbers of pounds sold.

NRA Starts Campaign to Hold Down Prices as Much as Possible

Washington, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Action to keep prices reasonable all the way from factory to the buyer emerged today as a necessary and major job for the recovery administration.

CIVIL COURT ENDS SITTING

One Week Term of Criminal Superior Court to Open Monday Morning

R. A. Fields was awarded judgment for $500 in the civil term of Superior court here yesterday against the Farmville Oil and Fertilizer Company. Both the plaintiff and the defendants are of the Farmville community.

The defendants were holding a piece of Field's property upon the grounds that he had not paid them all he owed on account. Fields contended he had paid and the jury upheld his contention for half of the amount he was suing for.

A jury also returned a verdict awarding judgment of $135 to A. B. Moore and Paul Jones against W. A. Dildy, of Farmville.

The suit was centered around a claim of delivery for an automobile for which the plaintiff said Dildy had not paid.

Decision in the two cases completed the one week session of civil court which opened here last Monday morning with Judge J. Paul Frizzelle of Snow Hill presiding.

Monday morning the second week of the term will begin. This will be confined to the hearing of criminal actions. Only three or four of the criminal cases are of importance and the docket of a about a hundred or more cases was expected to be disposed of.

MARKET TO SWING OPEN ON TUESDAY

With Five Sets of Buyers on The Job, Market is Capable of Handling Nearly Two Millions Pounds Of Leaf Daily; Growers Optimistic Concerning Outlook For Price Improvement

With tobacco rolling into the eight large warehouses here, Greenville today was making feverish preparations for the opening of its bright leaf tobacco market—the largest in the world—next Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

The first load brought to market was received two days ago and since that time tobacco has been trickling in at practically all hours.

The annual pilgrimage to the city will not actually get under way until Sunday night. From then on until the voices of five auctioneers set a similar number of sales in motion every road leading in and out of Greenville will be filled with every conceivable kind of vehicle bringing this year's crop of the golden weed to the auction market.

People in all walks of life who depend either directly or indirectly on the tobacco industry for a living were viewing this year's opening with greater optimism than in many past years. This is caused mainly by the tremendous effort of the government to raise prices for all farm products and the evidence of improvement in other fields of endeavor.

Although it is impossible to say what the opening prices will be, the public generally was heartened (Continued on page three)

STREET DANCE SET FOR CITY

Affair to Celebrate Opening of Tobacco Market and Honor Ball Players

A square dance celebrating the opening of the tobacco market and honoring the victorious Greenville baseball club of the Coastal Plain League will be given on one of the streets at Five Points next Wednesday night. It was announced by the committee in charge.

Several attractions in addition to the dance will be presented during the evening, and members of the committee said today it would be one of the most unique and colorful affairs staged in Greenville in many a day.

The Scotland Neck String Band, one of the crack musical aggregations of this part of the state, will provide music for the occasion and hundreds were expected to be in attendance.

Although the street on which the dance will be held had not been determined today, it was said one of the intersecting thoroughfares at Five Point would be used and that it would be gaily decorated in keeping with the significance of the occasion.

TWO KILLED, 13 HURT IN WRECK NEAR WASHINGTON

A crack passenger train bound from New York to New Orleans went through a bridge near Washington killing two engineers and injuring at least 13 other persons. WILL THE FARMERS GET A SQUARE DEAL?

The stage is all set for the opening of the tobacco market here Tuesday and already the golden weed is finding its way to the warehouse floors for the opening sale. After such a depression as we have gone through no doubt our people are looking forward to this year's market opening with greater optimism than ever before and certainly we hope that their hopes will be realized.

As we have said many times before, we say again. This year's crop should bring a good price to the growers and if it does not there will be plenty of kicking and howling and it will be justified. Based on the June 1 prices of what the farmer has to buy the government figured that this year's parity price for fine cured tobacco should be $15.35 per hundred pounds. Since those figures were compiled living prices have gone up which should automatically raise the parity price and too, in this immediate section the excellent quality of the crop should add at least another 20 per cent to the price. Taking all these things into consideration this year's crop in this section should average around 18 cents or better and unless this figure is reached the farmers will not be getting a square deal out of the "New Deal."

The instructions in life saving to be given next week at the swimming pool offer a wonderful opportunity to both the children and grown ups of our community and it is to be hoped that many will take advantage of it. Knowing how to swim and what to do in an emergency are most essential and something every person should know.

MANY JAPS DRAWN TO BRAZIL FOR COLONIZATION

Rio De Janeiro, Aug. 25.—(AP)—Almost every Japanese ship this year brings several hundred Nipponese, all of them with a rudimentary knowledge of Portuguese and Brazilian customs.

The Japanese colonization society which holds a contract to bring a total of 25,000 Japanese settlers this year, gives the immigrants a fortnight's schooling before they sail for Brazil. During the ocean trip, classes are held aboard ship.

As many as 1,200 come at a time, most of the immigrants disembarking in Santos, for settlement in the interior of Sao Paulo. The Japanese engage successfully in coffee growing, cotton and rice raising and tea planting. The tea industry is now, but several plantations are about to enter the production stage.

The HIDDEN DOOR

By FRANK L. PACKARD

Chapter 30
CONTACT

Spinelli's enjoyed a reputation. There was no night club in New York that afforded better entertainment or a wider opportunity to spend money. It was expensive, but admittedly cosmopolitan.

Dinner jackets and "tails" mingled in utmost freedom with tweeds and what-nots; the ladies were equally without restriction in the choice their ensembles, and a street costume was as welcome as an evening gown. Salvatore Spinelli demanded only two requisites from his patrons: an "introduction" by way of entrée—and the price.

Collin, as Clarke Lunn, possessed both.

It had been a matter of only six or seven blocks from his room, and encountering no taxi, he had walked; and now, still in one of the lower Fifties, he rang the bell of the three-story brownstone front with its shaded windows that harbored Spinelli's admittedly colorful contribution to the night life of New York.

He had been there many times before. The doorman therefore admitted him without question. He crossed the wide reception hall to the desk just outside the iron grille that barred further progress, but which was so disarmingly artistic and ornamental that its existence was robbed of any suggestion of premeditated offense. Here he laid down his five-dollar "subscription"—and the door of the iron grille opened for him. A page took his hat.

Collin thrust his hands in his pockets and for a moment stared around him. It was already after midnight. Spinelli's was in full swing. "Guests" were swarming in—he had not been the only one admitted at the same time.

Straight ahead of him was the dance floor, the entrance blocked by a bevy of men and women gathered around the doorway. From within, a saxophone was playing; and someone, a boy with glistening teeth and slicked hair undoubtedly, was crooning a song. Collin shrugged his shoulders. Oh, well, some people liked that sort of thing—and Spinelli's catered to everybody's taste.

On his right was a richly carpeted, spacious stairway. He turned in that direction. The bar was on the second floor. His feet sank noiselessly into the deep pile as he mounted the stairs. Dollaire! A month of futility, and now, least expected of all—Dollaire!

An uplift was upon him that he had not known for weeks. Whether merely contemptuous or not, or whether he knew it or not, Dollaire was playing against stacked cards. If Butch Connal and his mob had discovered that Dollaire was there, it was as good as a certainty that the Mask had discovered it too—and the Mask had a very large account to settle with Dollaire!

Contact at last! If luck broke for him tonight he would be able to identify, not the Mask, he could hardly hope for that—but one, or more perhaps of the Mask's tools. That would be enough! He would not ask for more than that—just to pick up the trail.

He gained the landing and entered the barroom. It was a large room—its appointments lavish. The mahogany bar that ran its entire length glistened even in the soft, rose-shaded lighting. People were coming and going pairs and groups were standing about here and there glass in hand; and yet the room was not crowded, for the bar, though it kept four or five white-coated the change, "he'll talk the leg off you if you give him a chance—and he ain't got any bottom to his tank."

"Thanks," said Collin. "I'm on! But don't worry. I'm no Santa Claus."

The "drunk" had still apparently heard nothing but as the barkeeper moved away to serve another customer, he turned and leaned heavily with his back against the bar. He spoke then over the rim of his glass as he lifted it shakily to his lips:

"Clarke Lunn?"

"Yes."

"Ever hear of anyone by the name of Connal?"

"Butch sent me."

"Okay. Sorry to sting you for those four bucks—but it lets us both out. Got to keep up appearances, you know, or I wouldn't be worth a nickel to Butch. I don't travel around with the gang—not known as one of them. You're all right there. I'm undercover—see? There's a lot of things—worth cash—to get next to in these joints and around town."

"Anyone who's in with Butch is right with me," Collin answered.

The man swayed, upset a goodly portion of his highball, and then with a valiant effort carried the glass again to his lips.

"That goes both ways," he said. "I know what you want. Dollaire brought his schooner up from St. Pierre with a full load of high-priced goods. It's somewhere out there just beyond the twelve-mile limit. Dollaire's been ashore all day angling for the best offer. It looks like Heimle Schwarz, the big booze baron, was coming across with the biggest wad. Anyway, the two of them are making love to each other now in the dance hall downstairs."

"I don't know either of them," said Collin.

"Well, you can't miss Heimle. He's a straw-haired Dutchy in a red tie and light suit like he always wears. He's sitting in one of those little stalls near the door, and the fellow that is with him is Dollaire. Anyway, they were both of them there a few minutes before you came in, and I guess they're there still, for they were just starting on a fresh bottle of fizz."

"Right!" said Collin. "I'll push on, then."

"Wait a second. Leave the break-away to me. It'll screen better—and there's no telling who's looking. And—listen! I don't know what your game is, but watch your step! There's something queer going on around here tonight! I don't know yet what it is, but—the drunk was suddenly patting Collin's arm. His voice rose:

"Scuse me for a minute. Just saw an old friend of mine—hic—very intimate friend over there. I'll get him—hic—and we'll have another."

attendants busy, was not the sole Mecca of the thirsty at Spinelli's—one came here mostly for the hard stuff.

Collin glanced up and down the room. Butch Connal's "drunk at the bar" was not hard to identify—or, at least there was but one man present who was outstanding in that particular. Collin watched the man for a moment—a middle-aged man in a dinner jacket, his tie sadly awry, his gait none too steady as he moved here and there, chatteringly attempting to insinuate himself into everybody else's conversation. The typical inebriated pest of the garulous variety!

Who was the man—if it was the man? He had never seen the other before. The man had certainly not been one of those from Butch Connal's gang who had visited Collin when he was in the hospital. Of course not! Butch didn't work that way. None better than Butch knew what was at stake and the danger that would be invited if Clarke Lunn were in any way linked up with Reddy Turner's old mob—but Butch, when it came to details, made few mistakes.

The man, carrying his glass rather uncertainly, and having been summarily ejected from a group near by, was moving slightly in Collin's direction. Collin, starting toward the bar, purposely allowed their paths to cross. They bumped into each other, and the contents of the other's glass was spilled on the floor.

"Shay," said the man thickly, "sorry! Most awfully damn sorry! I—hic—apologize. Buy you another."

"I'm afraid it was your glass, not mine, that was spilled," smiled Collin.

Someone in the immediate vicinity laughed.

"S' no matter!" declared the inebriated one. "Buy you another all the same. Come on."

"All right," agreed Collin good-naturedly. "Just as you say."

There was an empty space at the far end of the bar. The "drunk" lurched in that direction. Collin followed.

"Make it—hic—two highballs," commanded Collin's new-found companion.

They were served with the drinks. "Four dollars," said the barkeeper amiably—Spinelli's was not cheap.

The "drunk" was apparently hard of hearing; and besides, he was clinging a little precariously to the bar.

Collin pushed a bill across the bar.

The barkeeper grinned.

"And besides that," he said in a friendly undertone as he returned

the change, "he'll talk the leg off you if you give him a chance—and he ain't got any bottom to his tank."

"Thanks," said Collin. "I'm on! But don't worry. I'm no Santa Claus."

GREENVILLE MARKET REPORT

Average Opening Day Last Year $8.95

Greenville Tobacco Market sold on Opening Day last year 659,750 pounds averaging $8.95 per 100 pounds.

We believe the coming Tobacco Season which opens here next Tuesday will be fairly profitable for everybody. Let us not be misled by the usual wild reports sent out by the publicity bureaus of the various markets this season of the year. Greenville market has been, and will in our opinion continue leading Eastern Carolina in prices paid for tobacco. We sold, however, last year more inferior tobacco than any year in our history owing to the drought which prevailed over our particular section.

Prices on the Border and South Carolina Markets opening day this season ranged between 10 1-2 and 12c. Let us bear in mind that opening day this season we will sell, as usual, first curings, generally the most inferior tobacco in the crop. Of course the general season's average will be much higher than opening day average.

No Market Will Excel Greenville--

We positively assert, the buyers joining in with us, that during the coming season, we are determined no market will excel Greenville in prices paid for every grade of Tobacco. This is the real secret of the phenomenal growth of Greenville's Tobacco Market.

Poor Grading Costs Millions--

Let us call especial attention to the fact that millions of dollars are lost annually on account of Tobacco being poorly graded and marketed in soft condition. Examine your pack barns for leaks before any of your tobacco is ruined.

If your tobacco is wet or in high order dry it out before bringing it to market.

Keep strings out of your tobacco as some of the Companies have positive instructions not to buy or bid on any pile of tobacco which contains strings.

No Floor Space Reservations--

Reserving floor space in advance is now prohibited by the Board of Trade. First come first served will be the rule. $50.00 fine will be imposed against any warehouseman violating this by-law.

GREENVILLE AND AYDEN TO PLAY SERIES

The championship series of the Coastal Plain League will be played between Greenville and Ayden.

This fact was definitely settled to the satisfaction of all concerned yesterday when the second place Ayden club won both games of a double header from Snow Hill and clinched the honor of taking part in the series.

At the same time Greenville defeated Kinston and strengthened her hold on the top of the standing of clubs. With Ayden winning two games and the locals one, the two teams stood only a game and a half apart when they met at Ayden this afternoon for the final game of the season.

Kinston really had a mathematical possibility of nosing Ayden out of second place but when the Pitt county lads made it two straight over the Greene county team and Kinston lost to the leaders, the chance was lost completely.

The hard-pitching, hard-hitting Lefty Dean was largely responsible for Greenville's 6-4 victory over Kinston yesterday. In addition to holding the Lenoir county boys hitless at crucial stages of the game, the former Mount Airy high school boy started at bat with two doubles and a single. He has led the league in the stick race all along and the final games were expected to give him even a greater lead in the averages. Stockton and Mann pitched for Kinston. It had not been determined today when the championship series would begin but this was to be decided today following the final games of the schedule.

YANKS OFFER TO SIGN DEAN

Lefty Dean, crack pitcher of the Greenville club of the Coastal Plain League, today was offered a contract with the New York Yankees of the American League.

Dean today received a telegram from Johnny Nee, scout of the Yankees, reading as follows:

"Would you be interested in contract now or is it your intention to wait until you have finished at Duke before joining. Wire answer please Reade House here." The telegram was filed at Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dean, former Mount Airy high school player, passed his 18th birthday last Thursday and was tendered a birthday party here.

He is considered one of the best pitchers in this league as well as a hard hitter.

He is leading the club with the stick and has a record of striking out one man an inning in all games in which he has participated. He didn't come here until the league season was well advanced, but he immediately forged into the limelight and has remained there ever since.

It is rumored that Dean turned down a contract with St. Louis some time ago. He is desirous of obtaining a college education and plans to enter Duke University after spending a year at Oak Ridge.

NEW HARBOR IS MAJOR AID TO PALESTINE DEVELOPMENT

Haifa, Palestine, Aug. 26—(AP)—With the opening of a new harbor here is one of the most important steps in the development of Palestine as a commercial and industrial center has been taken.

In conjunction with other important developments, like the laying of the Iraq oil pipe line to Haifa, which is in progress, and the building of the Haifa-Baghdad Railway, which is believed to be imminent, the Haifa bay area will be able to meet the needs of the growing gateway of the east.

The incumbent of the office, thinks you are handicapped unless you were born on a farm—if it's a North Carolina farm, where the working day begins at sunup and ends at sundown, so much the better.

"Is it any wonder we kids raised on the farms in and around Bethel—that's Pitt county, you know—looked upon school as a vacation?" asks Mr. Jones. "Yes, sir, it was just

SPORTS SLANTS

When Bob Jones made his grand farewell tour of the links in 1930 he made it stick, unlike a number of other stars of sport and the foot-lights.

Others have been talking about a come-back, about visits to Japan, to the Antipodes and to South America, but not Mr. Jones. He would not find any inducement for wandering away from home in this except from the New Zealand "Referee".

"To say that a visit by Jones to this part of the world would create a sensation is to put it mildly. The American, quite apart from his amazing ability, is an intriguing personality. His charm of manner would capture Australians. Jones perhaps would find the hero-worshipping a little wearing inasmuch as he would require a bodyguard every time he ventured forth in public.

Rating The Amateurs

This may not mean a thing, once the golfing battle is underway at Cincinnati in September, but here's how I would rate the chances of the principal contenders for the National Amateur Championship.

1. Johnny Goodman, of Omaha, the Open Champion.
2. Ross Somerville of Canada, the defending champion.
3. Gus Moreland, Trans-Mississippi titleholder.
4. Johnny Fischer of Cincinnati, former college champion.
5. Charles Seaver of Los Angeles
6. Maurice McCarthy of Cleveland.
7. George T. Dunlap, Jr., of New York.
8. Frank Dolp of Portland, Ore.
9. Jack Westland of Chicago.
10. A flock of "dark horses", including Willie Turnesa of New York, Charles Yates of Atlanta, Eddie Diggs of New York, George Dawson of Chicago, Rodney Bliss of Omaha, Lawson Little of San Francisco, Charles Kocis of Detroit and Walter Emery of Oklahoma City.

Setup For Goodman

Unless he goes into a quick slump the amateur tournament may prove a "push-over" for Johnny Goodman. His scoring habits are lower and his confidence higher than last year. With Francis Outmet out of the picture, the only first-class veteran Goodman has to fear is Somerville, the silent Scott from Canada.

"Sanday" might repeat but he doesn't figure to do so, especially with so many tough young obstacles to overcome. Lads such as Moreland, Seaver, McCarthy and Fisher thrive on plenty of competition. They all have the resilience and flair of youth plus enough experience now to be able to pull themselves out of tight spots along the route.

There is also the deliberate San Franciscan, William Lawson Little, who may be recalled as the man who beat the man who beat Bob Jones in 1929. That was the year Goodman upset the great Georgian, only to be licked the same afternoon by Little, credited subsequently with the suggestion it was just as well, after all, for Jones that he didn't service the first round.

THE REVERSE OF A BOY'S USUAL VIEW

down there. We were sorry to leave school and glad to get back."

Which accounts, perhaps, for Mr. Jones' scholarly learning. After he had finished high school in Bethel he came to Baltimore and studied accounting. Eventually he got a job and studied law at night, graduating from the law school of the University of Maryland in 1914.

Law and politics mix well, and in Mr. Jones' case the fusion showed early results. He was elected to the House of Delegates in 1919 and likes to recall he was chairman of the Temperance Committee. It defeated a bill to get the State back of the bone-dry movement.

Mr. Jones likes his job—it's even his hobby, he insists. His regard for it, he says was proved three years ago when he gave up golf as a player and baseball as a spectator. There just wasn't time for sports and when he didn't miss them during that first period of high-pressure work he decided he wouldn't take them up again.

Would you enjoy advising the Police Commissioner as to what he can do and what he can't? Would you like to decide who can vote and who can't? Would you like to tell the State Board of Motion-Picture Censors just how far they can censor? Well, these things are a few of Mr. Jones' day-in and day-out duties. He is blond, curly headed and he hasn't lost his North Carolina accent yet. His home is in 11 Englewood road.
