ASKS GROWERS NOT TO RUSH LEAF TO MART

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 23.—(AP)—Reterating that he is fighting for parity prices for tobacco, cotton, peanuts and other crops and asserting "we have every reason to hope for early accomplishments of our aims," Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus of North Carolina urged Tar Heel tobacco growers not to rush their weed to market when they re-open Monday.

The governor telegraphed the statement from Washington this morning before leaving for Raleigh after attending a conference with representatives of tobacco buyers and the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Durham, Sept. 22.—The Durham County schools won their battle for lights and water today when State officials told Superintendent L. H. Barbour that the ban was lifted on the use of electric lights and water supply was approved by State engineers. Now night school functions and parent teachers meeting and other assemblies can take place at night.

CIVIL COURT MEETS MONDAY

Judge W. C. Harris of Raleigh to Preside Over One Week Term Here

A one week term of civil Superior court will convene in this city Monday morning with Judge W. C. Harris, of Raleigh, presiding. The same calendar prepared for the postponed term of September 11 will be given consideration, and the same jurors summoned at that time have been ordered to appear.

Judge J. Paul Frizzelle, of Snow Hill, resident judge of this district, was scheduled to appear here for this term but he exchanged benches with Judge Harris to preside over the Drake bank case now in progress at Raleigh.

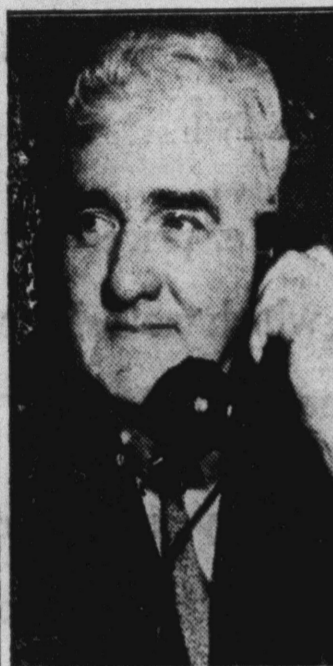

The calendar for this term contains between forty and fifty cases and it was hoped to complete the majority by the end of the week.

The former civil court term was postponed by Judge Frizzelle because of the tobacco holiday declared by gubernatorial proclamation in this State in the face of low prices and to give growers an opportunity to sign up in the government crop reduction campaign which closed the middle of this week.

County court was also a week because of the holiday proclamation but resumed sitting last Tuesday.

COTTON MAKES JUMP OF $3.50 A BALE IN N. Y.

Advance Caused by Government Plan to Lend 10 Cents Pound To Growers

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Cotton futures had made advances of about $3.50 a bale at the opening today in response to the government plan for lending ten cents a pound to producers in return for acreage reduction.

Heavy realizing induced by the initial uprush in prices brought moderate reaction from the top levels soon after the opening. The distant positions were most actively bought by traders in anticipation of further benefits from the Federal program and these had by far the widest gain.

In the January, March, May and July positions the advance erased most of the losses of the past two sessions and restored values to within moderate reach of the week's highs.

Opening advances ranged from $1.45 to 3.45 a bale. The market closed steady, 30 to 37 points higher.

FUND CANVASS HERE MONDAY

Red Cross Postpones Until Monday Drive For Funds to Aid Storm Area

The scheduled canvass here today for funds for the storm sufferers along the North Carolina coast has been postponed until Monday, W. J. Bundy, chairman of the Pitt County Chapter of the American Red Cross, announced this morning.

The canvass was announced by the chairman yesterday in view of the slowness with which the public was responding to appeals for aid of the storm victims.

Mr. Bundy said it was impossible to put a committee on the streets today, but that plans had been completed for this purpose Monday.

With contributions rolling into the office yesterday, the total amount for the storm sufferers was raised to $30 and more was expected to come in today.

Persons desiring to give to the cause are asked to send contributions direct to Mr. Bundy or to the office of the Daily Reflector.

Similar campaigns are being waged in several parts of the state by the Red Cross and it was hoped to raise sufficient money to carry relief to those who had all of their belongings swept away by the terrific hurricane which battered the North Carolina coast last Friday and Saturday.

Turned in since last report: Cash, $5,000; cash, $2,000.

DRYS PLAN TO ORGANIZE HERE

Wets Also Reported Active in Preparation for November Election

Drys were watching wets and wets were watching drys as factions of both camps plumed their feathers today in preparation for the battle of ballots in November to determine the fate of the national prohibition law.

United Dry Forces of Pitt county announced yesterday that a meeting would be held at Jarvis Memorial Methodist church Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock for the purpose of setting up an organization and preparing for war on the wet element.

As the call was issued wets were casting about for supporters of their cause and indications pointed to one of the most spectacular battles since the dawn of prohibition and the attempted renaissance of the legal sale of whiskey.

Mr. Burnett, head of the United Dry Forces in North Carolina, will speak at the meeting of drys here tomorrow, outlining the campaign to be inaugurated in every township of the state and the need of loyal organizations.

After the address an organization will be set up to sponsor the cause of prohibition and from then on until the November election on the repeal question Pitt county people will hear more about the evils of strong drink and the advantages of legalized sale of whiskey than they have heard in many a day.

Leaders of both forces were non-committal today as to their plans, but they gave assurance they anticipated plenty of activity and would be well represented when the time comes to test their strength at the polls.

Men employed through this source will be used in road construction started by the government as a means of improving the employment situation throughout the nation.

Itself Burns Leaf Pack Houses

Loss to Martin County Growers Estimated at $6,000; Bloodhounds Busy

Williamston, N. C., Sept. 23.—Three packhouses on as many farms and large quantities of tobacco were destroyed by fire in Hamilton Township Thursday night, the total loss being estimated at about $6,000. The fires are believed to have been of incendiary origin, but at noon today no arrests had been effected, as far as it could be learned here. County officers are making a thorough investigation of the fires, but they had disclosed no findings at noon today.

The first of the three fires was discovered by L. H. Rouse at his home on Highway No. 125, near Butler's bridge. The packhouse, a two-story wooden structure 16x32 feet with a shed attached, and fifteen acres of tobacco, with the exception of a small quantity sold on opening week, were destroyed. No insurance was carried on the tobacco, and Mr. Rouse was not sure whether there was any coverage on the building, which was valued at around $700.

Mr. Rouse, an exceptionally successful tobacco farmer, valued his tobacco at about $2,000, basing his estimate on prices paid on the opening of the market.

About three-quarters of an hour later fire was discovered in the packhouse belonging to W. A. White, about one-half mile from the Rouse home. The building, valued at about $400, and six acres of tobacco with the exception of the first curing, were burned, resulting in a loss estimated by Mr. White at about $1,000. Only $100 insurance was carried on the building and none on the tobacco.

At 3 o'clock this morning the packhouse of William Purvis, about two miles from the White home, was burned along with a cotton house, two and a half acres of tobacco and about twenty sticks of graded tobacco had been sold, leaving Purvis with a loss estimated at about $2,000. It is understood that the tobacco was insured.

County officers and others hurried to the site first thing this morning, and it was first thought that a band of night-riders was responsible. (Continued on Page Two)

NEGRO SLAYER SENT TO JAIL WITHOUT BAIL

Riggs Moore Remanded to Jail Following Hearing in Police Court

Riggs Moore, colored alleged slayer of Woodrow Station, also colored, in an altercation here Sunday night three weeks ago, was remanded to jail today without bond following hearing before Mayor R. C. Flanagan in police court this morning.

His trial was set for the October term of criminal Superior court. Moore was taken into custody at Norfolk, Va., the middle of the week following a tip furnished Norfolk authorities by police here.

He had visited several towns following the alleged slaying, winding up at the home of a brother in the Virginia city. It was at that place officers arrested him and held him for return to this city for preliminary hearing.

The slaying was alleged to have taken place when Moore and Station engaged in an argument over a "skin game." Officers alleged Moore stabbed Station so severely that he died a short time later. Moore escaped and nothing was heard from him until the tip advised officers the negro was expected to show up in Norfolk.

LEAF STARTS ROLLING INTO MARKET HERE

Resumption of Tobacco Sales Monday Causes Activity Among Growers

Tobacco was rolling into Greenville today in preparation for resumption of sales Monday morning. The pilgrimage of the planters to the "largest bright leaf market in the world" started two days ago in anticipation of the lifting of the holiday declared by gubernatorial proclamation over two weeks ago in the face of unsatisfactory prices and to permit the government to put over an acreage reduction campaign in return for which they promised growers higher prices.

B. B. Sugg and W. Z. Marton, Greenville warehousemen, who attended the conference between buyers and government representatives concluded in Washington yesterday, returned to Greenville last night, high in their praise of the efforts of Governor Ehringhaus of North Carolina to bring higher prices to tobacco growers of the nation.

They asserted the governor had conducted the fight for the growers in a highly commendable way, and made convincing representations at the hearing at Washington.

The government announced that the price-raising agreement was being rushed forward as rapidly as possible and would probably be ready by the re-opening of markets Monday. It is expected to be based on a parity price of 17 cents a pound as proposed yesterday by S. Clay Williams, representing domestic buying concerns.

Farmers who suspended grading when the sales holiday was declared were back at the job today, and indications were that sales would be fairly heavy when the market swings open.

Governor Ehringhaus, in announcing the opening Monday, urged farmers not to rush their crop to market in the face of improved price conditions, but to market it in an orderly way and not cause unnecessary congestion.

PRICE LIFTING PLAN WEIGHED BY OFFICIALS

Members of Farm Administration Expect To Reach Quick Action on Agreement Governor Ehringhaus Says Markets Will Reopen Monday; Wires Governor Blackwood of His Decision

Washington, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The possibility that a compromise marketing agreement for the cured tobacco will be announced today or tomorrow was seen today in a statement by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration that it hoped to have the agreement ready in time for the re-opening of the markets in the Carolinas Monday.

Washington, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Farm Administration officials today sought to complete the trade agreement covering tobacco while at the same time weighing price-lifting proposals presented by domestic manufacturers.

Officials said they expected quick action on the agreement once it is finished but did not know whether it would be ready for the re-opening of the markets set for Monday.

Governor Ehringhaus of North Carolina, where the markets have been closed by executive proclamation, said the markets would reopen Monday in accordance with his previous announcement. He wired Governor Blackwood of South Carolina, where the markets are also closed of his decision.

NEGRO ROBBER ALLOWED BOND

Clifton Williams Given Preliminary Hearing in Police Court Today

Charged with the robbery of Baker-Davis Hardware Store here night before last, Clifton Williams, colored, was bound over to court in a preliminary hearing in police court here this morning under bond of $500.

The negro was taken into custody by officers for questioning in connection with the attempted robbery of another store here this week, and while he was being held it was discovered that a gold watch found in his possession was taken from the Baker-Davis store the night before. About 50 cents in money was also missed by the firm.

Williams, officers said, recently completed a sentence on the roads for robbery, and had been out only a few days when he returned to the old game of trying to get something for nothing.

Police said they recognized his handiwork in the attempted robbery of McClellan's store several nights ago, and were pursuing their investigation upon the strength of this clue when they were apprised of the theft of the watch which they allegedly found on the Williams' person.

HOLD YOUR COTTON

In the face of the proposed government plan to advance the growers 10 cents per pound on cotton with any increase over that price to go to the grower when the cotton is sold, the growers would do well not to sell their cotton at the present prices. If the grower sells his cotton now it is gone so far as he is concerned and he can receive no further benefit from it regardless of high low prices go, but if he takes the government advance on it, he still will get the benefit of any increase in prices later on. On the other hand, if the price drops below the amount of the government advance the government takes the loss and not the grower. It looks like a good proposition to us and we urge the growers not to let their cotton go until the government plan has been perfected.

UP TO GOVERNMENT NOW

With the tobacco markets scheduled to re-open Monday there is still much doubt by the farmers as just what to expect when they place their crop on the floors for sale. According to a government statement this morning, some definite plan will be announced by the government late today or tomorrow prior to the re-opening. Prior to the beginning of the acreage reduction campaign government spokesmen declared that if the farmers would come through by signing the acreage contracts the government would use all its resources to get parity prices for the tobacco crop. The growers came through in grand style and are now looking to the government to deliver according to its promises. We are still hopeful that before the markets open Monday the government will have made good this promise.

YOUR HELP NEEDED

Response to the call for funds to aid the sufferers in the storm area has been very small so far and again we urge our people to give as liberally as possible to this cause. Our immediate section is most fortunate to have escaped the destruction that visited the lower section of the state and we should be grateful enough to want to do our part to help the sufferers in their time of distress.

CHAPTER SIX THE AWAKENING

TIDES rising and falling—waves rocking—and a long dream that rocked with them—rocking—rocking. He was swinging like a pendulum between the dream and some vague waking state—swing—swing—out and back again—out and back again.

When he swung out, there was a sense of light and women's voices; but when he swung back, there was the rise and fall of water, and black fog, and only one voice, that never stopped.

There was sunlight in the room, slanting across the bed in which he lay. As he moved, someone else moved too. There was a soft hurry of footsteps. A blind came down with a click and the sun was shut out. His arm dropped.

He rose on his elbow, and saw a girl turning back from the window, a very pretty girl with silver flaxen hair and big pale blue eyes. She wore a blue smock, and she was looking at him rather as a small child looks at a tiger in a cage.

She said "Oh!" in a soft, breathless way and edged towards the door. He sat up, closed his eyes for a moment, and then opened them again. The girl had almost reached the door.

"I say—don't go," he said in an alarmed voice. The girl stood where she was. "I'll tell Nests," she said. He repeated the name.

"Who's Nests?" SHE looked really terrified when he said that. "Oh please—" she began. "I say, don't look so frightened—I only want to know where I am."

"This was apparently something that could be answered. A little modest pride displaced her timidity. "You're at our place—Tom's and mine. I'm Min."

"Oh—" He was expected to know who Tom was. . . Tom and Min. He certainly didn't, but it was obvious that he ought to.

The girl said again, "I'll tell Nests," and got as far as turning the handle of the door, when he stopped her.

"No—do wait a moment. Can't you tell me what's happened? I don't know—I—" His voice stopped dead. He didn't know. What didn't he know?

He shut his eyes and tried to pierce the fog that filled his mind. He had had a dream about fog, and a dream about a voice. He had left the voice behind in the dream, but the voice had come with him. It filled his brain. He groped in it and found nothing.

At the sound of the closing door he opened his eyes again. Min was gone, and where she had been standing there was now someone bothering my head about things at present. The pillow was comfortable. He relaxed against it, conscious of a swimming head. Then Min came in with a tray, and he found that he was faint with hunger.

Nests watched him eat and drink. When he had finished, she took away the tray and came back to her seat on the bed.

"Well?" she said, "feeling better?" "Yes, thank you."

"Want to talk?" "Yes."

"All right—go ahead—" That was easier said than done. Where were you to begin when you had no landmarks? He went back to the question he had asked before.

"Do you mind telling me where I am?" "You're at Tom's place—in Ledlington. He opened his eyes upon her very directly.

"And who is Tom?" "My brother," said Nests Riddell. Then she laughed a little. "Come, Jimmy—you're not going to say you've forgotten Tom?"

He put his hand up to his head. "I can't remember. Have I had a crack on the head?" She nodded, watching him.

"Do you mind telling me how I got here?" "You really don't remember? Well, I'll go back to a week ago. You know what had happened. You said you'd got to get off the map for a bit. I was to come here, and you were going to work up the coast to Glasgow. I don't know what name you want under, but you were on the 'Alice Arden' when she got driven ashore on the Elston sands. There was a gale first, and then a small fog, and she broke up against the cliffs. Very few people were saved. They took you into the Elston cottage hospital, and Tom and I fetched you away yesterday. Can't you really remember anything about it?"

His hand went up to his eyes and pressed on them. He said, "Tom—" His voice choked on the word. Then, in a dull whisper, "I remember—the fog."

Outrageous Fortune

SYNOPSIS: The identity of the man found on the shore after the wreck of the Alice Arden is still more of a problem. Nests Riddell has gone to the hospital, heard him babbling of omens and omens, and takes him home as her husband, Jimmy Riddell. Caroline Leigh thinks he may be Jim Riddell, her distant cousin, until she hears of Nests. Then she learns a scrap of a letter was found in the man's pocket, signed Caroline, and suddenly her hopes rise again. She cannot understand why Nests Riddell would claim the wrong husband, but dashes off in pursuit nevertheless. The nurse of the hospital where the man had been gives Caroline a paper to hand Nests, one Nests had dropped in leaving.

"Well, Jimmy—so you're awake?" she said.

He felt an immediate prickle of irritation. Her eyes were too close together. Who was she? And what was she doing calling him Jimmy? He loathed being called Jimmy.

"Well?" said Nests Riddell in her hard bright voice. "You look pounds better. You've slept round the clock, you know. Are you hungry? You ought to be. Min's getting you something."

He said, speaking slowly and with a sort of frowning intensity. "Why did you call me Jimmy?"

Nests Riddell stared. "Isn't it your name?"

THE frown became a steepled strain of effort to find an answer to that. And it beat him. He didn't know—he didn't know what his name was. He knew that he hated being called Jimmy. That struck out like a corner in his mind, but he couldn't get round it.

Friday evening, from nine to ten-thirty, Mrs. James L. Fleming delightfully entertained at her home, honoring her daughter, Mrs. John L. Winstead, formerly Miss Margaret Fleming, and Dr. Winstead, whose recent marriage was an outstanding social event.

The house was artistically decorated for the occasion, with a profusion of fall flowers and burning tapers. Dahlias and roses predominated in the hall and living rooms; ferns, lilies and roses being used in the parlor and dining room.

The arriving guests were welcomed by Dr. and Mrs. W. I. Wooten and Dr. and Mrs. M. S. Crisp, and were presented by Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Wright to the receiving line which stood in the parlor before a beautiful arrangement of palms, ferns, Easter lilies and tall standards of Cathedral candles.

In this line were Mrs. J. L. Fleming, James Fleming, Jr., Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Winstead, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. White, Mrs. G. M. Mathis of Durham, Mrs. J. B. White, Mrs. L. E. Jones, secretary-treasurer. The regular meetings will be held the fourth Wednesday at each month at three o'clock.

TO SEE COMMISSION ON SCHOOL BUS LAW

Lexington, N. C., Sept. 23.—(AP)—The Davidson County Boards of Education and commissioners today instructed officials of the county to go to Raleigh to present conditions of dissatisfaction at the new State ruling providing a two-mile walking limit for school pupils.

Should negotiations with the State School Commission fail to remedy the situation, the county attorney is authorized to initiate legal steps to seek "court adjudication."

The officials plan to go to Raleigh next Monday.

Dissatisfaction has been widespread in the county, and it was reported to the boards that an effort was made yesterday to close forcibly one of the larger schools, under the ruling pupils living within two miles of schools may not ride school buses.

well planned. He is fond of his subject, but not adulatory, and his style is smooth with out being pseudo-brilliant.

A Little Unusual

Two somewhat unusual books are to be found on the stands this week. One is about houses, particularly stone houses, and it is by Frazier Forman Peters, who is an architect and should know whereof he writes.

Mr. Peters has done what he can to strip the house-planning business of a large number of foibles. He calls his books "Houses of Stone," which leads the reader to believe he admires that style, and he does. But he is not dogmatic even there, and in his chatty and informal way he removes many of the pitfalls besetting the path of him who would build.

The other is a strangely interesting little book for children, and by children. The very young authors are Bobby and Teddy Maier, the son of whose ages is fifteen years. They are the sons of Guy Maier, the pianist, and they not only have drawn some highly imaginative pictures, but also have written a text to go with them, and "illustrated" the book by little bits of music they have composed.

Their book (the second they have done) is called "The Roundabout Book."

Some Novels

The light novel market gains at least two points this week. Kathleen Norris does her bit with "Angel in the House," one of her nicest efforts, this time dealing with the question of whether age makes a difference in love, and what to do with a daughter who is about half genius and half brat.

Martin Hare's contribution is "Describe a Circle," which may be the shop-girl-in-love-with-her-employer novel to end all shop-girl-in-love-with-her-employer novels. Fanny decides to become an upright and wholesome person, but is doing it she goes far, far from the trail of her many predecessors. And comes back to her starting point. "Describe a Circle" is biting, keen, and highly amusing.

Lastly, Aldous Huxley fans will welcome lustily a Huxley omnibus called "Retrospect," full of Huxley tidbits including "Brave New World,"—but not "Point Counterpoint."

Weather, Navigation Wireless Prolem Await Admiral Byrd

(Associated Press Science Writer)

Washington, D. C.—(AP)—Improved wireless communication, sea and airplane navigation and weather forecasting are some practical benefits in prospect from Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's new Antarctic expedition.

His projected flight over the South Magnetic Pole may help solve some mysteries about the unseen but ever-active magnetic force that constantly crackles and wavers around the earth, as around a horseshoe magnet. The South Magnetic Pole, about 1,200 miles from the geographic South Pole, is the one of the two focal points of this force, the other being the North Magnetic Pole.

Effects On Compass Sought

The magnetic force around the earth is what makes possible the use of the mariner's compass, for it points the needle toward the poles, but because the force is constantly varying for some reason not fully explained the compass needle never points with absolute accuracy. Allowances therefore have to be made for variations in the magnetic force, and the better these are understood the more accurately pilots can steer their ships on sea or in air.

This magnetic force also affects wireless, telegraph and telephone communication, which are disturbed by "magnetic storms" that result from disturbances of the force. More knowledge is needed of how wireless messages are affected when they pass near the North and South Magnetic Poles on their way around the earth.

Weather Data Important

Weather knowledge gained in the Antarctic is highly important because the great unknown continent is a "weather breeder" for much of the southern half of the world. Weather of most of the earth is chiefly controlled by air currents that are cooled over the polar regions, flow near the surface toward the equator, are warmed, rise and return to the poles at higher levels. Scientists liken the Antarctic region to a great "heart" whose pulsations keep this process going in the southern hemisphere.

The circulating air governs rain and dry weather in Australia, South Africa and Argentina, where there are great areas of "marginal lands" on which crops and herds, can be well-taken care of. If the dry years could be predicted on the basis of basis of new knowledge of Antarctic weather, great losses in these regions could be prevented.

Shape of the earth, which isn't as round as it looks, is another problem that may be partially solved by exploration in the polar regions. The earth is flattened slightly at both poles, so that it is of exactly round. This makes the pull of gravity stronger near the poles.

Possibility that the Antarctic continent is not a continent after all, but really two huge islands with the water between them, concealed by the great ice cap is another unsolved problem of the "bottom of the world."

Some scientists think Antarctica once was larger than now and served as a "land bridge" by which similar animals and plants reach the now wide-separated areas of Australia, South America and South Africa.

FAMOUS SCREEN STAR COMING

Coming with the cobined World Bros. circus and the Buffalo Ranch Wild West next Saturday September 30, is the well known and popular western screen star, Bud Hone, who has been featured in serials and feature pictures for both Universal and Pathe and has appeared in support of the famous Ken Maynard for several years. West was secured and comes direct from Hollywood.

He heads the wild west contingent with the circus and aside from making personal appearances during the show also presents scenes from several of his latest releases, including one from his very recent success "Across the Rio Grande." Bud Hone comes from Thermopolis, Wyoming and was employed on the late Buffalo Bill Ranch when a company of picture folks came there to make a serial on the life of the famous scout. West was engaged to double for some of the daring stunts of the actor who was paying the price of Buffalo Bill and his work was so pleasing that he was induced to return to Hollywood with the company and he has been making pictures ever since. Bud is not one of those cow boys stars who are contented with riding in a circus ring and doffing his hat. He likes to ride and rope and take part with the cowboys in many of the wild west contests. He will be in the menagerie and glad to meet any of his admirers previous to either performance. Bud is twenty eight and fancy free as yet. A word to the wise is sufficient, you know.

HEELS PLAN PASS DEFENSE FOR WILDCATS

Chapel Hill, Sept. 23.—The Carolina coaches are taxing their faculties to devise and perfect their plan for a pass defense that will work against Davidson in the opening game here September 30.

Captain Bill Croom, Alan McDonald, Don Jackson, Jim McCachren, and some of the other backs have been showing more drive and ability as broken-field runners this week.

But except for Croom most of these boys are youngsters without any seasoning under fire, and their defensive strength is an uncertain quality.

Head Coach Chuck Collins is apprehensive about the Davidson aerial attack.

Johnny Mackorell rates as one of the best passers in the Big Five, and the Wildcats have a number of fine receivers, coached to well-nigh perfection by the former All-American back, Gene McEver.

Croom, McDonald, Jackson, and Burnett alternated in the passing role yesterday, with three separate backfields taking turns on defense. Croom and McCachren, alert and on their toes, drew the most praise from the coaches, battling down almost every heavy nter their territory and intercepting several of them.

The showing of the other backs left room for improvement, but some of the centers looked very good and especially Gardner and Moore.

The pivot candidates, however, are youngsters. If they do not come up to expectations, Coach Collins possibly may try George Barclay, a veteran and the team's fastest guard, as defensive center.

Since its poor showing against the veteran first line in scrimmaging the coaches are also concentrating on the defensive play of their second-string sophomore line.

The opening of classes brought an end to the morning practice today. With only a short week left before the Davidson game, the Tar Heels still have much work to do. Much remains to be accomplished in grooming backfield combinations and in strengthening the reserve line.

New York Cotton

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened strong 29 to 65 higher on very active general buying and reports that the government would advance 10 cents a pound to farmers who would agree to cut next year's acreage.

The first rush of buying orders reached the market from all directions and sent December up to 10.40 and March 10.83 making advances of 49 to 73 on the active months.

Heavy realizing and considerable selling was encountered at higher prices and while buying continued active prices showed reaction of from 15 to 20 points from the best. Futures closed steady 30 to 37 higher, spots quiet middling 10.15.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Security markets hedged up quietly today in the wake of firming staples. Although there was none of the feverish trading rush that had characterized recent sessions, prices in most categories managed to hold gains of around one to two points.

Trading was listless at times, and last minute profit-taking had extreme advances in many instances. Transfers were 1,200,000 shares.

The share market was thin most of the time. The treasury raised the price of gold for exports to $31.86, but aside from U. S. Smelting, which moved up about four points, metal issues were no buoyant.

Gainers in modest amount included Case, American Smelting, Union Pacific, Allied Chemicals, American Telephone, and National Distillers. The utilities were about steady. Steel stocks were inclined to lag.

Migrant Workers Get League Boost As Aids To Peace

Geneva.—(AP)—Borrowing an idea from the international exchange of college professors, a conference convoked by the labor bureau of the League of Nations has gone on record as advocating a similar plan for young workers.

It was argued that this system would lead to more good-will among nations because it would reach the masses.

The discussion emphasized the importance of bilateral agreements, of which much has been said in Latin America, in regard to the recruiting and placing of migrant workers.

It asked the labor bureau to prepare periodically a survey of the regulations in various countries governing the admission of foreign workers to the benefits of labor legislation and particularly of social insurance.

Representatives of thirty-one countries took part in the deliberations. William H. Stead, an American, executive secretary of the Tri-City Employment Stabilization Committee, was one of the vice-presidents.

OSSIE BLUEGE

This is the sixth of a series of sketches on individual stars of the New York Giants and Washington Senators, world series rivals.

Washington.—(AP)—Ossie Bluege has been described by those who should know as the greatest fielding third baseman alive.

Bluege is what is known as a baseball player's player—that is, while the average fan may not appreciate his worth, opposing athletes regard him as the last word in third-sackers.

Strange too. When Ossie was a boy, the doctors told him he must avoid strenuous exercise. His reply was that life was not worth living if he couldn't play baseball and that he would play if it killed him.

This is his 15th season as a professional, in addition to a few years as a Lutheran Institute and semi-pro player, and he is still going strong.

Bluege signed with Peoria in 1920 as a shortstop. Two years later Washington bought him. He was sent to Minneapolis for seasoning and when he returned was assigned to third, because Roger Peckinpach was starting at short. This will be his third world series. death.

He is the only member of the present Washington squad, except Goose Goslin and Sam Rice, who took part in the world series of 1924 and 1925.

Bluege was born in Chicago and is 33 years old. He weighs 160 pounds, stands five feet, 10 inches, bats and throws right-handed.
