Better Grades of Bright Leaf Sold as High as 60 Cents a Pound as Greenville Established New Season Record on Both Poundage and Price; Farmers Elated Over Upswing of Prices Beyond The 17 Cent Parity Level

Prices continued buoyant on the Greenville tobacco market yesterday and the highest price average of the season was established on the largest sale of the year. It was indicated this morning by official figures of K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales.

The report showed the market handled a total of 1,576,670 pounds of tobacco at an average of $18.33 per hundred pounds, over two cents a pound higher than the previous high season average recorded last Friday. Farmers were paid a total of $293,807.95 incidentally the largest amount of money paid out on the local market since the beginning of the season.

The sale, described by the supervisor as the heaviest of the season, brought the season's total poundage to 31,238,336 pounds and strengthened the market's lead as the largest bright leaf market in the world.

The supervisor said prices on the better grades displayed renewed life and that much of it sold as high as 60 cents a pound. In fact the general situation showed a decided improvement over last Friday when an average of $16.58 on over a million pounds of leaf set a record for the season up to that date.

The sale not only established a seasonal price and poundage record here but it passed the 17 cents season-parity level as has been agreed upon by buyers and government representatives at the conference held in Washington while the tobacco holiday was in progress.

REGISTRATION FOR REPEAL TO BE ON OCT. 28

Voters Who Did Not Vote in Last Election Will be Required to Register

Registration books will open Saturday, October 28, for the registration of voters in the repeal referendum to be conducted in this state November 7, it was announced today by F. C. Harding, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Elections.

The law provides that the books be opened in every precinct of the county from 12 a. m. (noon) to 12 p. m. (midnight) and all persons who did not register in the last election will be required to put their names on the dotted line if they expect to vote on whether the state is to remain dry or the prohibition amendment is to be scrapped and tossed on the junk heap.

Registration books will be at the courthouse here and at regular polling places in other precincts of the county. While the books will not be at the court house only during Saturday afternoon persons who do not register at that time will be able to do so by contacting Mr. Harding, it was stated.

With the date of balloting only a short time off now, both wets and dries were turning their attention to the important business of lining their forces for the battle at the polls. Both elements have been active here for several weeks after setting up permanent organizations to boost their cause in all townships of the county.

The dry candidates to be voted on in this county are Dr. M. T. Frizzelle of Ayden, and Mrs. E. W. Harvey of Greenville. The wets are represented by Judge Albion Dunn and R. L. Little.

Persons who did not register in the last election and who wish to vote on the repeal question were urged to register Saturday and be in position to express their sentiment.

LEGION HERE GIVEN TROPHY AT NEW BERN

Local Post Awarded Cup For Obtaining Largest Re-enrollment of Members

Last night in New Bern the Department of North Carolina of the American Legion, convened for the installation of Tom Daniels, new state commander, and for the transaction of other business.

Pitt County Post No. 39 of the American Legion, was signally recognized and honored, in the award of trophy for having procured the highest percentage of 1933 membership re-enrollment for 1934 in Class "B." Not only did the local post lead in its class, but led in all classes. The award was made by Commander Bryce P. Beard and received on behalf of the local post by J. H. Rose, post commander. The membership drive being staged by the Pitt county post had raised the 1934 membership of 114 to 150 members for 1934, or approximately 140 per cent.

Several members of the local post and women's auxiliary attended the installation ceremony, oyster roast and dance, parade and other features of the occasion.

The local military unit of North Carolina National Guard also attended full strength and participated in the parade and review held in connection with the installation ceremonies. Companies from Washington, Kinston and New Bern also took part in the parade.

J. H. Rose, commander of the Pitt County Post, brought the membership trophy back to Greenville, as happy over her first doll. The cup was placed on display in the window of the Daily Reflector today.

SHORT CUT TO CONTROL OF DOLLAR SEEN

Foreign Exchange Experts Comment On Roosevelt's Move To Buy Gold

New York, Oct. 24.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's plan of having the Reconstruction Corporation buy newly mined gold at such prices as deemed desirable was described by foreign exchange experts as a short cut to control of the dollar.

While the amount of gold newly mined in this country is almost negligible in its movement on the fund, the Reconstruction Corporation's fixing of the price at which it will buy this metal, experts said, would give a clear indication of what it thought the dollar was worth in terms of gold.

RUSSIA SEEKS DIVORCES IN CREDIT IN U. S. COURT HERE

London, Oct. 24.—(AP)—Observers in close touch with the Russian situation expressed amazement today at the report from New York that $500,000,000 credit was being sought on behalf of the Soviet government in connection with President Roosevelt's overtures looking for possible recognition—with $450,000,000 wanted for machinery and steel rails and $50,000,000 for cotton.

Observers said rails formed one of the direst of Russian needs but pointed out that most urgent of the needs is foodstuffs and live stock.

Amazement Expressed That Nation Wants Money For Rails Instead of Food

Independent agricultural economists there say Russia could absorb the whole world's agricultural surplus on long credit terms.

CABINET OF DALLADIER QUILTS TODAY

French Government Leader Forced to Resign Under Fire Of Opposition

Paris, Oct. 24.—(AP)—The cabinet of Edouard Dalladier fell early today battling for a balanced budget and insisting to the last that sound finance alone could avert immediate inflation and the fall of the franc.

Within an hour after the defeat 329 to 241 on a vote of confidence the entire cabinet hurried to Elysee palace and presented their resignations to President Lebrun.

The President immediately outlined a series of consultations with senators and chamber deputies, committee heads and party leaders before offering the premiership.

Albert Sarraut, senator, was mentioned as the most likely to succeed Dalladier. Owing to the bitterness which developed in the chamber it was not considered likely a deputy would be considered.

As M. Dalladier fell he burned his bridges behind him in an open break with the Socialists, reproaching their millionaire leader, Leon Blum, for negotiating a compromise and then refusing to support it.

Usually calm and deliberate, the premier raised his arm to violent gestures as he denounced Blum who appeared to take tragically the supposed end of his power seen in the Socialist split on the question.

His spare form, contrasting sharply with that of the thick-set and burly premier and his voice choking, he asserted that the government plans would have paved the way for a future defeat.

"You are going to again reduce the purchasing power of the consumers," Blum cried. "No one is more opposed to inflation than we but we also want stable relations between wages and prices."

The ministry's overthrow was unusually dramatic and Dalladier's denunciation of Blum came to climax a day filled with tenseness both inside the jammed chamber and in the streets where thousands were gathered.

Two hundred persons were arrested as result of demonstrations on the outside.

FARM LEADER ALSO AGREES TO CUT CROP

County Agent Arnold Urges All Growers Not in Position to Hold Their Cotton To Take Advantage Of The Government Offer; Blanks May Be Obtained From Farm Office Here

J. E. Winslow, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Agriculture, has faith in the Government's effort to raise the price of cotton. He has shown his faith by taking advantage of the government's offer to lend 10c per pound on cotton on 75 bales of cotton. In doing so Mr. Winslow has agreed to cooperate with the government in its acreage control program for 1934 to the extent of cutting his acreage 40 per cent if necessary.

Mr. Winslow according to county agent Arnold is the first farmer in the county to take advantage of this offer in cooperating with the government in holding cotton off the market in an effort to raise the price.

Mr. Winslow signed his agreement with C. C. Hilton, Field Representative of Cotton Growers Cooperative Association. The cotton Co-ops are cooperating with the government through County Agent Arnold's office 100 per cent.

Farmers who desire loans on cotton at the rate of 10 cents as promised can secure notes and forms from the county agent or any of the lending agencies of the county, namely: Cotton Co-ops, Banks, Cotton Brokers and Cotton Warehouses.

According to Mr. Winslow one of his main reasons for placing his loan with the cotton co-ops was that he could sell any day he wanted, while with other lending agencies there would necessarily be a few days delay in which time cotton (Continued on Page Three)

TIME FOR UNITED ACTION

There is no American so high in influence or esteem who does not owe allegiance to the National Recovery Act. Most of them have been at pains to proclaim that fact. Nor is there an American so low in the social scale that he cannot comply literally with the President's plea to do his part.

Of the lessons to be learned from the depression, the primary one is that both alike, and the vast army of Americans in between, must cooperate to equalize production and consumption. After, for some years, all had been said and very little had been done except to confer, the picture suddenly became plain to us with the awakening of hope. We realized that American capacity to produce simply outstripped American capacity to buy. By the simple system of planning ahead and knowing what production costs will be, as the industrial codes will provide, there can hardly ever again be such a one-sided situation in this country. Meanwhile, it does actually exist at this time. The Government cannot itself do more than provide the means for preventing recurrence. And that it has done through the medium of NRA. As always has been the case, the people themselves must restore the balance if national recovery is to be attained.

To produce consumers whilst there is this overproduction and during the period of readjustment of our industries, that is our work. It is not a problem, because we ourselves are the consumers. The patriotic motive always is inspiring, to no people on earth more than to Americans, nor as much. But there is another side which affects our immediate welfare and comfort. Apart from injecting life into the stagnant blood stream of our commerce by buying now what our factories and our farms already have produced with the cheapest labor costs in our generation, we will be practicing an economy that admits of no argument. The things we now need are infinitely cheaper than will be the goods of whatsoever kind now in course of production. When it is our unique privilege to encourage a deserving public policy by satisfying our material needs, can there be an question as to the duty involved?

Outrageous Fortune by Patricia Wentworth

SYNOPSIS: Caroline Leigh returns to Hale Place, where Jim Rodgers, her cousin, is hiding, only to discover in the next breath by an intruder—and Jim giving chase. Jim returns, unharmed, and Caroline tells him she has found nothing definite with which to disprove Ned's Riddell's preposterous statement that Jim is really Jimmy Riddell, her husband and the thief who took the Van Berg emeralds. Jim can remember only a few things from the past six weeks and can help very little. Caroline continues the story of her investigation.

Chapter 32 IT IS LOVE

I DON'T believe Mrs. Rodgers would have told me anything if she hadn't turned out to be Nanna's sister," Caroline continued. "I didn't recognize her, because she used to be thin like Nanna, and now she's exactly like a feather-bed. But she knew me at once—she said I hadn't changed a bit."

"No—you haven't," said Jim. And that was the last moment that he could have said it, because, in the very middle of saying it, Caroline stopped being the dearly familiar child, half playmate and half sister, whom he had teased, petted and adored from the time she had first clutched at his hair with her baby fingers.

Something happened, and she was a new Caroline—a Caroline whom he knew, and did not know, whose hand on his arm sent a tremor all over him. It was horribly disconcerting and embarrassing. He lost the thread of what she was saying, because there was a pounding noise in his ears.

He looked at her, and then looked quickly away. She was a new, enchanted Caroline, who took his breath with her warmth and beauty—enchanted, and enchanting.

Jim took hold of himself. "I didn't hear what you said." He looked no higher than the dust-sheet which covered the bed, but he knew that she was looking at him. He hadn't the faintest idea what she had said, or what she was going to say. It came like a bomb-shell.

"They think you were in love with Mrs. Van Berg." He looked up then with a sharply interrogative jerk of the head.

"With Susie?" "Yes. Her eyes were very bright. "Were you? You needn't say if you don't want to."

"Well, I wasn't. What put it into anyone's head that I was?" "That's what I was telling you," said Caroline earnestly. "You see, Mrs. Van Berg's maid is going about saying that Mr. Van Berg was shot because he found out something he wasn't meant to—that's to say, she doesn't say it right out, she just drops hints. Mrs. Rodgers calls her an 'jutting' ussy. And she says—she says perhaps the emeralds weren't stolen at all, only hidden to make it look as if there had been a burglary."

"What damned nonsense!" "Jim, you didn't think I believed her! It was only—I thought—you might have—cared for her—and there might have been—a quarrel."

"Well, I didn't!" He got up and began to walk about the room. It was more than he could do to sit within a yard of Caroline and hear her ask him whether he was in love with another woman.

SHE sat where she was, bareheaded, her old brown coat open over a cream shirt and shabby tweed skirt. Her eyes followed him. "There wasn't any quarrel?" "How do I know?"

It was damnable, but he didn't know. "Jim—you don't mind my telling you? The ussy says Mrs. Van Berg used to have a photograph of you. She says it was always out until that night. She says it has never been out since."

He stood in the middle of the room frowning intently. "I gave her a photograph—they'd been awfully good to me. She may have had half a dozen reasons for putting it away." He said it without conviction. Why should she have put his photograph away like that? You'd think a woman whose husband had just been shot would have something better to do. You wouldn't expect her to be fiddling with photographs.

He began to wonder whether Susie Van Berg knew that he had been with Elmer that night. "I was there," he said. Elmer and I had drinks together. I wonder if Susie knew that. In her statement she said that she came down to get a book and heard voices in the study. She may have heard more than she said—she may have recognized my voice."

"Wouldn't she have said?" "I don't know—we were pretty good friends—she'd know I wouldn't." He broke off sharp.

Suppose by any horrible chance he and Elmer had had a row. Suppose Susie had heard them quarrelling. And then Elmer Van Berg had been found shot. Would Susie have kept his photograph out after that? Or would she have pushed it out of sight with nervous, shaking hands?

He lost a bit of what Caroline was saying—something about fingerprints. Then he got it. She was talking about Elmer's finger-print book. "There was a page torn out," said Caroline.

He felt the shock of that as she had felt it. "When?" "Oh afterwards—when the police found it. You see, you were right about the drinks. There was a tray and glasses, and the police took the finger-prints. And then the butler told them about Mr. Van Berg's book. He told them it was on the table, but when they looked for it, it wasn't there. They found it stuffed down behind the book-case. And there was a page torn out."

"A page torn out!" Then, sharply, "How did they know?" "The cook says she remembers the page. She hasn't told the police yet. Mrs. Rodgers says she won't unless she is asked, but they might ask her any minute. She says she remembers because there wasn't any name on that page, only initials. I suppose she takes an interest in finger-prints because of her husband being a policeman. I suppose—"

"What were the initials?" Caroline looked at him piteously. It hurt too much. Her carnation color was all gone. Her voice was a whisper as she said, "J.R."

JIM laughed. His laughter had a hard edge to it. "We're putting the rope round my neck all right," he said. "Jim!"

"They were my finger-prints—I remember making them and putting my initials there. But I'll swear—" He stopped short.

"What?" said Caroline quickly. He laughed again. "I was going to say I could swear I hadn't torn the page out, but I can't—I can't swear to anything. Go on. Are there any more damning bits of evidence?"

Caroline clenched her hands. "The cook's nephew saw you in the drive. He used to caddy for you—a boy called Willie Bowman." "Willie? He knew me?"

"Yes, he did. He told his aunt—he said it was about midnight." "That's a bit of bad luck, but it can't be helped. I don't seem to have covered my tracks very well—do I?"

He saw Caroline looking at him with loving, anxious eyes. The candle light was bright on her ruffled hair. He looked away from her and spoke from where he stood with his back to the hearth.

"I've got to make up my mind what I'm going to do." "Yes." He squared his shoulders.

"What I should like to do is to open up the house, get in servants, and go about my affairs as I've a perfect right to do."

"Yes," said Caroline. Her eyes brightened. Jim at Hale Place—Jim quite near! It was like the most lovely dream. But she knew quite well that it was a dream.

"That's what I'd like to do. What I expect I ought to do is to go up to town and see Robert Arbuthnot—" He paused. The pause lasted a long time. . . .

"What I'm going to do is what will look most horribly damning if things go wrong and it comes to a trial. I'm going to mark time." He began to pace the room again with a certain restless energy. "You see, if I come out into the open, everyone will ask me questions, and every time it's a question I can't answer, I'll be making things worse. Where have I been—and what have I been doing. Sometimes I'm on the edge of remembering, too I want to give myself a chance—stay here and keep quiet—"

The Rough-Toughs

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Puddle Muddle's football players all put on their shin pads and helmets and began to practice. They were going to play in the field back of Willy Nilly's house and between practicing Willy Nilly put up the two goal posts while Rip made the yard measurements.

"We haven't much more time," said Rip. "The animals from the next village are due here any moment now." No sooner had he spoken than they could be seen walking up the hill.

Their regular team was about the same as Puddle Muddle's, but they had practiced more and their expressions showed they had come to win. They called themselves the Rough-Toughs.

Now the game was starting. The teams lined up on either side of the 50-yard line and Willy Nilly flipped a button in the air to see which team would get the ball. It went to the Rough-Toughs.

Mrs. Quacko Duck was in front of the grand-stand of boards Willy Nilly had placed at one side of the field and she was quack-quacking: "Puddle Muddle, rah, rah, rah. Puddle Muddle, rah, rah, rah. The others all cheered, while on the other side of the field an old black cat was shrieking: "Rough-Toughs, meow, me-ow me-ow. Rough-Toughs, win right now!"

Oh, there was such excitement The Rough-Toughs had their four chances or "downs" but did not gain the 10 yards.

And now the Puddle Muddle team had the ball!

GREENVILLE TOBACCO MARKET REPORT

EVERYBODY PULLING TOGETHER IN BEHALF OF THE TOBACCO GROWERS SELLING ON OUR MARKET HAS MADE GREENVILLE THE OUTSTANDING MARKET OF THE ENTIRE BRIGHT TOBACCO BELT.

The Market Sold Yesterday 1,576,670 Pounds for $293,807.95

AVERAGE $18.63

Market Continues Strong---Better Grades Now Highest of the Season.

More growers from distant counties are now patronizing the Greenville market than any time since the market was established, and they know it is paying them to sell here, some of them traveling over 100 miles.

The reason for the phenomenal record Greenville market has made and is at present making, is the fine spirit being manifested by the Greenville Tobacco Byers who are determined that no market shall excel Greenville in prices paid for every grade of tobacco.

GRADE MORE CAREFULLY Hundreds of thousands of dollars annually are lost on account of marketing tobacco in too soft condition and by careless grading.

Let us suggest that every one preserve warehouse bills of sales and see that they are dated.

The Board of Trade does not permit under penalty of $50.00 fine, any warehouseman to reserve floor space for anyone. The principle of first come first served under the By-Law must be carried out.

Tune in on Greenville's Radio Station WEED every day (except Sunday) at 9:45 A. M., 12:45 P. M. and 4:45 P. M. for latest tobacco market reports. Will find it on your dial around 142 or 1420.

GOES ON RAMPAGE AND EARNS TWO SENTENCES

Charlotte, Oct. 24.—(AP)—It was a wild night at Luther Johnson's home in Huntersville, and resulted in a 60-day plus six months road sentence for Luther. Evidence in recorder's court here was that Johnson struck his wife with a stick through a boarder and barricaded himself behind an icebox, loosed shotgun slugs at officers before they arrested him. The recorder said 60 days, and six months was the domestic relations court verdict for the wife-striking. The latter sentence was appealed.

VIENNA BUSINESS PROTESTS JAPAN'S SALES IN AUSTRIA

Vienna.—(AP)—Japanese invasion of the Austrian market, beginning with electric bulbs, has been extended to artificial silk, cotton goods and dyes. Austrian manufacturers, calling these facts to the government's attention demand protective measures. They say that in spite of heavy duties the Japanese goods are offered at prices far below Austrian production cost. Japanese sales of dye products break into a hitherto unchallenged Austro-German domain.

CHARGES CORONER WITH DRUNKENNESS

Asheville, Oct. 24.—Solicitor Zeb V. Nettles is planning to request the resignation of Dr. John Carroll, Buncombe county coroner, for trying to hold an inquest while intoxicated. It was indicated yesterday by the solicitor's office. Last Thursday afternoon Dr. Carroll started an inquest into the death of Bryant Pressley, Asheville man found mangled beside the tracks of the Southern Railway in the local yards. O. C. Pressley, a brother of the dead man, attended the inquest and after the first witness had been heard, went down to the office of Sheriff Laurence Brown and swore out a warrant for Dr. Carroll, charging him with public drunkenness. When facts of the incident came to light Dr. Carroll declared he was not drunk and that Pressley was intoxicated and became offended because the coroner did not move with greater dispatch in hearing witnesses.

Tips on CONTRACT

BE SURE OF CLAIMS (By Tom O'Neil)

If there is any doubt about the rest of the tricks, play the hand out. Sometimes the memor of the best slips and ladown contracts fail or there are overtricks. When the declarer shows his hand and says he has everything, the rules do not permit him to finesse unless the finesse has been proved.

The adversaries run a still greater risk if they expose and claim. The declarer can make them play any card he desires provided suit is followed when possible. Ely Cubertson once exposed and claimed prematurely on the defense and Sidney Lenz forthwith called an ace, king and a queen. The experts in today's hand were not of that caliber, but were of above average ability. A doubled vulnerable three no trump contract could have been made on the nose if the cards had been played out. Taking advantage of the rules about exposed cards, the declarer made three overtricks, winning all the tricks but one, and with them a nice point tally.

From Albany, N. Y., comes this hand played by Mrs. Agnes Fitzgerald:

Turkey Turns To Farm And Factory

By PRISCILLA RING

Amkara.—(AP)—To carry to Turkey's millions of peasants the decade of reforms adopted for 2,500,000 urban dwellers and to map a "five year plan" for the nation's industrial development, are the two huge tasks now before Mustapha Kemal's government.

As the Kemalists regime approaches its tenth anniversary on October 29, urban Turkey, already modernized, is beginning to think its country cousins.

Schools Still Scarce. When the reforms started, Turkey had a population of 13,500,000; now she has 17,000,000. Through the government has opened 2,650 new schools in ten years, 37,000 of Turkey's 40,000 villages are still without a single school or post-office states the semi-official newspaper "Vakit."

With the new Latin alphabet and the obligatory ABC school illiteracy has decreased from 90 to 75 per cent, but the latter is still a big ratio for the government to tackle. By suppression of the tithe and shortening military service, the republic softened two of the heaviest burdens which the sultans had laid on the peasantry. Warfare against bandits by the Kemalists gendarmerie has brought a measure of security to Anatolians unknown for centuries.

Women Toll; Witches Spin. But the government has not yet been able to give them the promised new day of enlightenment and prosperity. Several million peasant women still labor in the fields with no inkling of the freedom enjoyed by women in towns and cities. Despite the federal law against sorcery, witch doctors still scatter disease and death in regions where government health inspectors have not penetrated.

The government is sending 17 school-teachers to the United States this fall, to bring back eastern models of America's "little red school houses."

The building of agricultural institutes is another step toward peasant advancement.

Rural Teachers Drafted. Still another is the completion of 1,500 miles of new railroads, destined to carry civilization to hidden primitive corners of Anatolia. The government is requiring hundreds of young graduates of the state medical school at Istanbul to take jobs as government doctors for three or four years in dictatorial districts of Anatolia.

To the distant provinces, also, it is sending graduates of the government's new language school at Istanbul. Those who have received certificates as teachers of English, French or German and refuse appointments to Anatolian towns are fined $300 and barred from teaching elsewhere.

In fact those who held their tobacco off the market while waiting for price development felt they had been amply rewarded for doing so and turned their attention to filling up some of the financial holes which have been accumulating in past years because of low prices for their products.

Although the market enjoyed one of the heaviest offerings of the season yesterday, a considerable portion of the tobacco was cleared from the floors and opened way for continued influx of the growers and their product today. With the advance in price sales were expected to be heavy from now until the beginning of the holiday season.

Salisbury, Oct. 24.—(AP)—A special election on the legalization of horse racing with pari-mutuel betting for November 21 by the board of county commissioners in a special meeting yesterday. The election was ordered after a petition bearing 2,570 signatures had been presented to the commissioners by a delegation headed by W. F. McClesley, a member of the Salisbury city council.

It was said that a race course owned and operated by McClesley and described as the best between Washington and Florida, was proposed as a site for the races.

IMPROVED NEW TAR HEEL LINE TO FACE TECH

Chapel Hill, Oct. 24—The marked improvement shown by the Carolina line defensively has given supporters much encouragement with regard to the big homecoming game to be played here Saturday afternoon with Georgia Tech.

Although Tech defeated Auburn, last year's champion of the Conference, 16 to 6, its 7-6 loss to Kentucky and its 7-0 defeat by Tulane last week proved that the Tornado can be stopped by a strong determined line.

Tar Heel fans are counting on the big veteran line which held Florida to five first downs and one touchdown to turn the trick.

Comparative scores would seem to support their argument. Florida ran up a 31-0 score on Sewanee. Sewanee held Kentucky to 7-0. And everybody knows what Kentucky did to Tech with a strong line and a great punter.

The Tar Heel line looks much stronger for the shifting of Babe Daniel to offensive center and George Barclay to defensive center and of Bill Moore to left end, but the home team will still have a tough job cut out for it Saturday.

The Tornado is rich, much of an irresistible thing when the full power is turned on, and as Coach Collins points out, it can be counted on to rear and rage all the harder on account of the loss to Tulane on the fluke of a 100-yard run-back of a kickoff.

The coaches and players are striving in practice this week to polish the passing game and bring the running attack to the point of efficiency achieved by the defense last week.

The backs are on the spot. Veterans and rookies look alike to Coach Collins as he searches for the four outstanding men who can tear into a strong line with abandon and who can rise above ordinary levels in the phobias.

The squad faces the week's hard work in good shape. Elmer Barrett who played a good game at tackle was injured in the Florida game. But Henry Burnett, one of the leading ball carriers, will be back and possibly Julian Frankel, regular end who has been out for two weeks.

SPORT SLANTS

What a sap I was to think I had to have a manager, go through a lot of phoney motions for the sake of publicity and figure I could just sit back and wait for the profits to fall in my lap, a world-famous golf professional told me the other day.

Just because I won a few championships and fell for some soft, persuasive talk, I woke up and found myself—yes, right behind the old eight ball.

"Well, there's nothing like learning by your mistakes in these times. I didn't have to wait long to find out how wrong I was—just about 100 per cent wrong, like the fellows who try to pick the football inners, hey?"

"So what? I got out and hustled for myself. I made direct connections, hooked up with the right guy for an exhibition tour, and have been doing my own business transactions right down the line. I like it and take it from me, there's no substituting for hustling for yourself, with no 'cutting' the other guys in just for exercise."

Reli Their Own.
It's a sign of the time that our principal athletes, not alone the professional stars, but the amateur ones, too, have found they now have to be good business men if they hope to stick around the top and make the most of their calling.

Golf stars like Hagen, Sarazen, Farrell, Kirkwood, Mac Smith and Tommy Armour have established substantial business connections, apart from club affiliations or exhibition play.

The crack tennis professionals, Tilden, Richards, Kozeluh and others, manage their own engagements and have found they do better for themselves than can managers who have a variety of interests.

Babe A Shrewd One.
Babe Ruth's climb up into the biggest money baseball has ever known may have been aided by the advice and assistance of his business mentor, but there is no shrewd star among the financial byways now than the celebrated Bambino.

The Ruthian nest is feathered financially against any contingency, now and indefinitely.

"Ruth cannot boast, as Luis Angel Firpo once did, that he still had the first dollar he earned in American rings, but he is a bigger and better business man now than he was when he was a younger and greater ball player."

Dakota Farmers Fighting Lo wPrices With Embargo

By E. E. MAKIESKY

Bismarck, N. D. —(AP)—Here in North Dakota, where a wheat embargo has been declared in a drastic move to boost prices, the average farmer has to scratch his head and recollect when the word "prosperity" is mentioned.

It has been so long since Dakota farmers experienced a "good year" that they can scarcely remember it. Many consider 1918 the last such season.

Finched By Debt, Low Prices
So from the fields where grain is raised and shipped to all parts of the world—fields that produce about one-eighth and sometimes more of the nation's wheat crop—come vigorous protests, sometimes tinged with bitterness.

Today North Dakota wheat farmers are submerged in a new crisis which years of low prices, crop failures, mortgages, drought and blistering heat have combined to create.

This year the cry of the farmer has rung louder than ever through the state's legislative assemblies. Secession from the union was proposed some months ago—not contemplated seriously, but presented as another attempt to make the country "sit up and take notice" of the farmer's plight.

Embargo Move Authorized
Then Gov. William Langer was empowered to declare an embargo on farm commodities if prices remained below costs of production.

The desperate cry has been heard in resolutions bristling with such phrases as:
"Whereas the farmer is in a virtual state of slavery . . ."
"We the farmers of North Dakota are faced with distress, cold and starvation . . ."
"Action must be taken to save our farmers from ruin . . ."

From farm leaders throughout the state come similar statements. E. E. Greene, secretary of the North Dakota Farmers union, sums up the farmer's situation in these words:
"He had a fighting chance and some hope a year ago, although virtually bankrupt."
"But this year's poor crop, together with increased debts, more delinquent taxes, further depreciated equipment and, above all, apparent acquiescence of the government to the ever-increasing disparity between agriculture and industry, has been a body blow."

Farmer's Morale Shaken
The North Dakota farmer, Greensays, is losing his morale, ambition and spirit.
"Some have developed hatred, resentment and bitterness," he declares. Others are dangerously desperate. A large percentage are ready to quit."

Hops ran high early this year as Dakota farmers visualized good crops and improved prices, but blistering heat, grass hoppers and drought came to dispel that hope.

In some counties practically nothing remained of the crop. Prices went up, but dropped quickly.

Thousands of farmers once substantial citizens, are dependent on government relief. Foreclosures have reached an acute burden. The federal government came forth with refinancing plans.

But the need for better prices remains stressed everywhere.

"Juggling of farmer's debts from one loan to another will not solve the problem" said one farm leader.

"This Can't Go On"
The NRA program brought some measure of hope, but today voices rise from farmer's ranks that the project will bring further ruin unless better prices for farm commodities follow immediately.

Oen farmer summed up his plight this way:
"Fifty-cent wheat, chickens at 4 to 5 cents, ducks at 3 cents, butter fat at 20 cents and 3-cent hogs—this can't go on."
He pointed to patched clothing,

Williams Breaks Jail.
Raleigh, Oct. 24—(AP)—Dewey Williams, facing a three-year term in the federal penitentiary in Atlanta for larceny and car-breaking and also under indictment in Durham, staged a daring escape from the Wake county jail here sometime early today.

Sheriff Numa Turner said Williams sawed the bars to the window of his cell on the fourth floor of the Wake county court house, knotted bed clothes into a rope and slid to the ground.

The section of the building down which Williams slid is in a deep shadow at night but is on Fayetteville street in the rear of the Raleigh business section.

Sheriff Turner said it was believed the escape occurred about 1 o'clock this morning as a taxicab was stolen by an unidentified man believed to be Williams, about 1:30.

The thief who took the car worked a ruse on the driver, Turner said. He entered the cab and asked the driver to change a $5 bill. When the driver said he would get it, the passenger gave him the bill but took the taxi as the driver entered a nearby store.

Clue To Lindbergh Kidnaping.
Boston, Oct. 24—(AP)—Lieutenant James Finn of the New York

police department, said today that information came from John Gorch which provided a clue to the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby.

After a conference which followed questioning Gorch and which was participated in by Boston police and Colonel William Honer of the New Jersey police, Finn said:
"Gorch provided us with names and addresses in New York. These will have to be checked up. What they will prove to be I can't say now."

Hitler Talks.
Berlin, Oct. 24—(AP)—The only nation which can continue to live in the long run, Chancellor Hitler said in a campaign speech tonight, "are those which are willing to sacrifice lives or honor."

The chancellor again emphasizing Germany's demand for equality, was making his first Reich campaign speech in the capital in preparation for the November 12th election.
"Germany entered the world war against her will, and entered the fight relying on the promises of President Woodrow Wilson."

New York, Oct. 24—(AP)—Cotton opened steady 11 to 14 higher in response to steeper Liverpool cables and higher foreign exchange.

Offerings were light at the start and the advance extended to 9.46 for December and 9.83 for May, making gains of 18 to 25 points on the more active positions.

Price eased nine or 10 from the best at the end of the first half hour.

The market was quiet later in the morning but held steady and after selling off from 9.46 to 9.35 December worked up to 9.40 with the general list routing about 12 to 14 higher at midday.

STOCKS:

New York, Oct. 24—(AP)—Modified financial markets ran around in circles today as conflicting interpretation of the administration new gold policy left most traders in a highly indecisive frame of mind.

Neither the inflationists nor anti inflationists were too sure of their argument and leading stocks after an initial upward flurry settled down to dull routine.

The exception was the metal group which continued the advance of yesterday. European currencies again moved up against the dollar and grains and cotton dipped and rallied.

Bons were irregular. The entire list strengthened in the late dealings and demand for mining issues carried leaders to more than 7 higher. Transfers 1,690,000 shares
