NEW MONETARY PROGRAM WILL AID FARMERS

Farmer Stands to Profit if Government Theories Materialize

By RADER WINGET
New York, Oct. 31.—(AP)—The American farmer, harvesting his crop at the close of a disappointing year, turns east, eager to find rays of hope from the new "Roosevelt dollar."

Restoration of the balance in the price structure is the hope held out by the new monetary program of the government.

President Roosevelt told the nation, "The government policy... has been gradually to restore a balance in the price structures so that farmers may exchange their products for the products of industry on a fairer exchange basis."

The government gold purchase plans was announced as a policy to accompany a rise in the American commodity price level.

The farmer in the field stands to profit most by this price increase if it materializes.

In the new government monetary policy are provisions for raising commodity prices. Quotations at which gold will be purchased domestically are to be made from time to time through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and as the domestic gold price in terms of dollars increases the theory is that prices on other commodities will increase in about the same ratio.

Some economists hold that rising prices in any given range will tend toward the equalization of which the President spoke.

It is contended that prices which have not declined or which already have attained parity will not rise, but that prices, which are too low will be equalized.

Should the new plan operate effectively, the spread between the prices paid to the farmer and the prices at which commodities are sold to the consumer should be reduced.

This is based on an economic theory which contends that in the price paid by the consumer are certain fixed charges, such as for distribution which would not rise so rapidly. Thus, the theory holds, the price to the farmer would increase two or three times while the fixed charges represented in the consumer price would increase only slightly.

A move toward equalization of farm prices has been sought in part through acreage retirement and processing taxes on several commodities, and the Agriculture Adjustment Administration has extended numerous aids to the distressed farmer.

But even on the eve of the experimental period of the new monetary program some farm organizations and federal officials in agricultural districts demanded strong inflationary policies.

Already this year farm prices have been increased both through operation of NRA and AAA, but the equalization tendency theory in the new monetary policy is looked to by proponents of money management to effect both adjustment and stabilization of commodity prices.

FRIZZELLE IS CLUB SPEAKER

Presiding Judge Addressed Rotary Club Meeting Here Last Night

Speaking before the Rotary Club at its regular weekly meeting here last night, Judge J. Paul Frizzelle declared that our school system is to be kept up to the highest standards if the coming generations are to become good citizens and he urged every Rotarian to see to it that such men are sent to the next Legislature who will give support to an adequate school system. In his impromptu talk Judge Frizzelle stressed the prospective conduct of the coming generations especially with respect to the young man and said that the ideals of Rotary and the example set by Rotarians was one of the best safeguards for the future.

Schleifer M. Clark, another guest of the club last night, was called upon and spoke briefly on Rotary and what it means to any community and to the individual members of a club. Mr. Clark was one of the charter members of the Greenville club.

The club last night welcomed its two new members, M. D. Walker and Avery Wynne. The regular induction ceremonies will take place next Monday night at which time the address of induction will be delivered by Rotarian Herbert ReBarker.

WARNS THE VOTERS OF THEIR RESPONSIBILITY

Bethel, N. C., Oct. 31.—Sunday Rev. J. M. Page, of Raleigh, spoke to a big congregation at the Methodist Church here at the 11 o'clock service in the interest of prohibition. He said that if the people of North Carolina voted for liquor on November 7, they were setting up a saloon or saloons, themselves, they were masters of the saloon, and responsible for all the damage it did, or might do, and the saloon-keeper was simply their agent. "If you are going to come to terms with bootleggers and justify their business you might as well call up the thieves, the kidnapers and other criminals and give them licenses, the principle is the same," he said.

MURPHY TO END HIS CAMPAIGN IN ROWAN

Salisbury, N. C., Oct. 31.—(AP)—Walter Murphy, director of the State repeal campaign, will close the campaign for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment here the night of November 6.

Murphy spent the week-end here at his home and consented to close his speaking tour in Rowan County.

ROAD TERMS FEATURE OF COURT HERE

Nine Out of Ten Defendants Receive Prison Sentences Yesterday

Nine defendants received road or prison sentences in criminal court here yesterday presided over by Judge Frizzelle. The one week's criminal term got under way yesterday with some over a hundred cases on the docket, but the speed which the court moved yesterday indicates that the docket will be well cleared by the end of the term.

The longest sentence meted out yesterday was one of not less than twenty nor more than twenty-two years in prison for Jack Brown, negro, for the murder of another negro, Henry Daniels. The killing occurred here a short time ago when the two fell out over a crap game and Brown leaving the game went home for his gun and came back and killed Daniels.

Other sentences yesterday were as follows:

Jesse Cannon (white), trespass, had sentence suspended upon payment of costs.

Clifton Williams (colored) charged with breaking and entering, received two years on the roads.

Earl Parker (white) drew a sentence of two years for stealing an automobile.

Robert Lee Davis (colored) charged with breaking and entering, was given eighteen months on the roads.

Gus Saunders (colored), breaking and entering, likewise received eighteen months on the roads.

Kelly Smith (colored), for breaking and entering, was given two years on the roads. A similar sentence on a similar charge, was meted out to John Henry Wilson (colored).

Jimmie Lee (colored) drew a sentence of twelve months for the possession of liquor.

M. Spence (white) received six months for violation of the prohibition laws.

GOLD PRICES STILL HIGHER

Treasury Department Announces Today's Price at $32.12 Per Ounce

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—(AP)—The world price of gold slumped today in spite of President Roosevelt's announcement of intention to buy the metal on foreign markets, but nevertheless domestically what the R. F. C. will buy advanced to another new high.

While awaiting assurance from London that Mr. Roosevelt's operations will not arouse reaction and participate a monetary war, the administration set the price for today at $32.12 for the yellow metal fresh from the mines, by contrast with yesterday's $31.96 against a world price of $31.05. Today's world price conveyed in dollars at 4.75 12 pound sterling, opening exchange rate was $1.07, less than the domestic quotation. The dollar was stronger today as against both the pound and the franc.

Gold prices announced daily from the Treasury Department have crept constantly upward since the first price of $31.36 last week.

ocrat, of Georgia, said yesterday the President was favorably disposed toward construction of the canal.

Backers of the project estimate the channel 160 miles long, 200 feet wide and 38 feet deep, will cut from 500 to 600 miles of the water distance between the seaboard and the Gulf.

Michigan Millionaire Located on Farm After Strange Disappearance
Marshall, Mich., Oct. 31.—(AP)—The sheriff's office reported this morning that Louis E. Brooks, millionaire, Marshall, manufacturer, reported kidnapped this morning by two men and a woman, had been found at his farm near here. Brooks, officers reported, declined to discuss his disappearance until he talked to his attorney, James W. Mackey, who was reported en route to the farm.

The manufacturer who left his home last night to go to Battle Creek on business, was not seen again until early today when the watchman at Brooks factory said two men and a woman, with Brooks accompanying them, forced their way into the plant and ordered Brooks to open the safe, taking everything that was of any value. Then, the watchman reported, the three left in Brooks' automobile, taking the manufacturer with them. The watchman, left behind bound and gagged, was later released by a janitor.

Four Puzzling Problems To Appear In Litvinoff's Talks At White House
By CARL C. CRANMER
Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—(AP)—Four questions are expected to predominate when Maxim Litvinoff, Russian commissar for foreign affairs, and President Roosevelt get down to brass tacks in their conversations at the White House.

Three relate to barriers which in the past have prevented recognition. They are alleged Russian subversive propaganda, repudiated debts and confiscated property of American investors.

Claims In High Figures
The other questions has to do with future trade relations, principally long-term credits to allow Russia to purchase the products of American farms and factories which she needs.

American claims, governmental and private, against the Russian government total about $625,000,000.

The governmental claim is a loan of $187,000,000, plus interest. It was made to the Kerensky regime just before the Bolshevik revolution when America and the Allies were striving to keep Russia in the war and prevent the freeing of German troops from the Eastern front.

This debt, along with all debts of the Czarist regime, was repudiated by the Soviets early in 1918.

Private claims are in two parts, $86,000,000 in bond issues floated among private investors in New York in 1916 by the Czarist regime, and approximately $350,000,000 of American investments in Russia that were confiscated.

These latter are kept in a confidential file at the State Department but they are known to include many large items by Americans doing business in Russia at the time of the revolution.

A favorite American method in the past of handling such claims has been to set up a commission to work out solutions with foreign representatives. But it is not known whether Litvinoff is coming prepared to offer any such solution.

In dealing with other nations Russia in some cases has agreed to pay bonuses or high interest on new

Greece Refuses to Honor American Request For Return of Utilities Magnate

Athens, Greece, Oct. 31.—(AP)—The Appeals Court today refused the second request of the United States for extradition of Samuel Insull.

Rebuffed in its first attempt the United States authorities renewed their efforts last August for the return of Insull to Chicago to face charges arising out of the collapse of the utilities interest which he operated with his brother, Martin Insull.

Samuel Insull, monarch of the utilities kingdom that failed, was living in Paris when a Cook County, Illinois, grand jury on September 4, 1932 indicted him for larceny, embezzlement and larceny by bailment. The United States Government immediately took a hand in the proceedings and a month later, October 8, the American Embassy in Paris handed French foreign officials a request for a provisional arrest. The action came too late. Insull had already quietly left Paris. He went to Italy and remained there only a short time and then moved on to Greece.

Chemistry Teacher Counsels Students
Wake Forest, N. C., Oct. 31.—Dr. C. S. Black, chemistry professor at Wake Forest College, told seniors and professional school students at the assembly period this morning to be expert in their fields and tolerant toward opinions of those in other fields.

Discouraging efforts of students to amass a great storehouse of book knowledge, Dr. Black advised the young men to get a good practical knowledge of their fields.

"Books do not make science," he stated, "rather science makes books."

URGES FILING TAX RETURNS
Hollingsworth Tells Merchants to Send In Sales Tax Returns At Once

T. T. Hollingsworth, senior revenue collector of this city, today called the attention of merchants to the necessity of filing quarterly sales tax reports as of October 15 at once and offered his services to aid in making up the returns in such cases as was impossible for the merchant to make the returns without assistance.

Mr. Hollingsworth's statement follows:

"Many merchants in this territory apparently have failed to file sales tax returns for the quarter ending October 1. These reports were due to be filed by October 15. All merchants have been advised of this by letter from the Department of Revenue, in which they were instructed they should not wait to see me before making their returns unless they found it impossible to make it otherwise. A list of delinquents in this territory will be furnished from the Department of Revenue within a few days, and we are anxious that none of the merchants in this territory shall be found delinquent and penalized for default in payment of this tax, which they have collected from their customers. I am urging the merchants who have failed to file their returns to immediately do so, and if necessary, to get in touch with me about it. This is extremely important from their standpoint, as well as the standpoint of the Department of Revenue, which at all times is ready to assist and cooperate if possible."

At night at the Clarkton Methodist church, Rev. N. P. Edens, pastor, spoke on Jesus and the Liquor Question. "If Jesus was living in this community now, what would He do about the liquor question?" the minister asked. "If we can settle that, then we can solve the problem. Jesus would obey the law, both in letter and spirit. He was strict to obey it in his day. He did not try to prove that it took away his liberty either."

The governor granted the hearing today at the request of Ban Lee Hood, of Los Angeles, and C. T. Graydon, of Columbia, representing Cooper. Highest Prices Of Season Paid Here Yesterday

SALES TO DATE 37,332,630 LBS

$5,420,090.35 Paid Out by Local Market to Growers so Far This Season

The highest prices of this season were paid on the Greenville tobacco market yesterday with the day's entire sales averaging approximately 21 cents per pound. Nearly one and one-half millions pounds of tobacco were disposed of, bringing the season's total sales to over 37 millions pounds. Many of the better grades sold up to 75 cents, and growers as a whole were well pleased with the trend of the market.

Official figures for the day's operations made public this morning showed sales of 1,487,914 pounds for $312,160.16, averaging $20.98 per hundred pounds. Yesterday's sales brought the season's total sales to 37,332,630 pounds, for which the growers received $5,420,090.35.

Sales were heavy again today with prices reported to be holding up well.

Last week's reports showed the local market having averaged $18.25 for the season, and yesterday's high average will of course have its effect upon the season's average. With the crop estimated to have been one-half sold, a continuation of such averages as were made yesterday will bring the season's final total average well up to the parity price.

The child was rushed to the Goldsboro Hospital.

W. W. Andrews, former member of the State Legislature, who was passing in his car at the time, was one of those who witnessed the accident. He took Atkinson, who was thrown off of the bicycle by the impact, to the police station. Atkinson is now in the city jail. Police are investigating the accident. The child is the daughter of the late Captain Wise.

The rat killing campaign scheduled for this county for November 17th, should have the co-operation of every farmer in the county and of the townspeople as well. The destruction caused by rats every year runs into a tremendous figure and it is almost useless for one person to try to get rid of the pests unless his neighbor does likewise.

The market average of almost 21 cents a pound for tobacco here yesterday gives added hope that the growers will get the parity price this season. With the season's average price up to this date above 14 cents, and with the crop half sold, there must be a continuation of the averages like those of yesterday to bring the season's total to the required 17 cents average.

CARRYING ECONOMY TOO FAR

Important as it is to economize, it must not be done at the expense of the children in schools. For they must not be denied the opportunity of preparing themselves to cope with the problems of a complex age.

Yet that is the grave danger that faces North Carolina and the nation today. There has come about a general feeling that our school system may be sacrificed upon the altar of economy.

One of the glories of North Carolina has been that during the days of our greatest economic stress its people did not give up hope for their children. It was necessary for parents to economize even to the point of living on the simplest foods and sacrificing every comfort.

As Secretary Ickes said, some economies can be made, but we have gone too far in that direction. We need another baptism of the spirit that made Charles B. Aycock one of the outstanding leaders in this nation.

Outrageous Fortune by Patricia Wentworth

SYNOPSIS: Caroline Leigh learns from Staid Van Berg that the latter believes Jim Randall shot her husband, Elmer Van Berg, at the time the Van Berg emeralds were stolen. Then Caroline overhears a "secret" in the house-keeper's room in which Caroline Russell, Mrs. Van Berg's house-keeper, describes the Blue Room at Hale Place in connection with the emeralds. Caroline goes to Hale Place, where Jim is hiding, trying to regain memory of the events of the last few weeks. The secret hiding place in the Blue Room is standing open—but empty. And Jim is not there.

Chapter 38 JIM'S BATTLE

JIM RANDAL had told Caroline that she was not to come again to Hale Place, but he did not really expect that she would obey him. When, therefore, he returned from a walk across his own dark fields at a little after ten o'clock, he did not lock the back door behind him, but left it just ajar.

He lighted one of the candles which Caroline had brought. He blew out the match and stepped back, and then there a voice spoke aloud in his mind: "Eight green stones—five windows like slits—no one knows where they are but me." Then the voice stopped.

They couldn't be here. Jim took the candle and went upstairs to the Blue Room. He went up to the four-post bed and threw the candlelight upon the headpiece with its carving of the Tree of Knowledge.

Without stirring his position, he put out a hand, took hold of the gold chain, and pulled it out of the cupboard. It swung as he had seen it swing from Elmer Van Berg's hand—eight square green stones with pearls between them—"like a kid's green beads."

He had got as far as that, when the first sound reached him. As he half stood, half knelt at the bedside with the candle end burnt to its last inch on the white coverlet, he was in full view, not only of the door, but of the whole length of the passage between the door and the main corridor.

AT Jim's first movement the man charged him, snatching at the hand which held the chain. They came down together across the bed. The darkness came down too.

As he fell, Jim struck the jutting shield with his head. The chain was wrenched out of his grasp. He had the man by the shoulder with an awkward left-hand grip—a hard, wiry fellow with a twist on him like an eel. He was twisting all the time.

He was a little dazed with the suddenness and the blow to his head. With a violent effort he heaved over, and as he did so, the man wrenched aside and got his teeth into his left wrist. He bit deep, jerked backwards, and with a rip of cloth he was free. He must have been as quick on his feet as a cat, for in the same moment he was across the room and through the door.

Jim stumbled up, heard the sound of running feet in the passage, and gave chase. He had cut his forehead and the blood ran down into his eyes and bothered him. The man had the start of him, and this time

Jim was not sufficiently sure of himself to slide the banisters. As he came to the foot of the stairs, he heard the dull thud of the balize door which led to the kitchen wing. When he reached it, the wind was blowing to meet him down the long stone passage.

He dashed his hand across his eyes and ran at top speed down the passage and out of the open door.

The headlong instinct of pursuit carried him across the yard and out of the gate. There his mind checked him. He stood still and listened. It was no use just blundering on in the dark. He'd got to listen, and he'd got to think. If the thief was a local man, he would take some side path or cut across the garden. If he was a stranger, he would probably stick to the drive.

Jim caught the sound of crushed gravel and began to run again. The fellow was sticking to the drive. That looked like a stranger. He wondered how he had got here. If he had a car or a motor-bike, he was as good as gone already. Remembering the wiggle-and-twist brand of fight the thief had put up, Jim didn't think he had to do with a novice.

There are three ways out of Hazelbury West—the main north road, the Ledlington road, and the path across the fields to Hinton which was the nearest railway station. If you walked to the station, you took the field path, and the distance was four miles. If you drove, you followed the Ledlington road, and it was six.

The path along which Jim was running came out upon the field path to Hinton, cutting the corner. If the thief was making for Hinton with the idea of catching the last train there, Jim had a reasonable chance of intercepting him. He hadn't gone north; Jim had heard those running footsteps go off to the left before he himself turned back.

As he ran, Jim wondered whether they had altered all the trains. Seven years is a long time to be away. There used to be a crawling local train that stopped at Hinton—the twelve-twenty-five—and arrived at Ledlington about one. It didn't go any farther.

Jim kept a steady pace across the fields. The farther he went, the more of a wild goose chase did the whole thing appear. He had had a hunch, and he had followed it. Sometimes hunches turned out all right; sometimes they let you down. He began to feel gloomily certain that he was going to be let down flat.

He crossed a stile, and came in sight of the lights of Hinton station. As he did so, the church clock of Hinton St. Margaret chimed out the hour of twelve. If the train had not been altered, he had a quarter of an hour in hand, and a couple of hundred yards between him and the main road.

The field path ended in a gap with posts across it. Jim emerged, crossed the road, and began to walk down the incline which led to the station. It is a long incline.

The clock had only just struck twelve, but the train was coming in. It might now be anything from the eleven-fifty-five to the twelve-five, but it couldn't any longer be the twelve-fifteen.

He started to run, and as he did so, something black began to bob up and down ahead of him. It was another man, also running, and presumably with the same object. Jim put on all the pace he could, gained a little, and then saw the black figure draw away.

They would hold him at the wicket. If they held him, he'd likely miss the train. Would they hold him? No, he was through, with a hand thrust out as if he were showing a ticket.

He was across the platform and into one of the rear cars as the train began to move. Jim flung himself against the wicket, and saw the red tail-light slide off into the dark.

He had shot his bolt. Jim finds, tomorrow, a curious clue.

Top Notch's Ghost

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I am sorry to have been delayed," said Top Notch, "but you see I got here on time. Unfortunately the delay also made it impossible for me to bring a birthday present, but I certainly wish you many happy returns of the day, Willy Nilly!"

Now it was high time for all of the Puddle Muddlers to cut out the pumpkins and make Jack o'Lanterns, and have the apples ready for bobbing and the queer costumes ready to wear.

"How did you ever fix such a pair of stockings?" asked Christopher who had only just noticed Top Notch's "new feet."

"You'll be a fine one to walk up on door-steps and ring bells as no one will hear your footsteps."

Top Notch was a bit nervous and rather excited, too, when they suggested that he put a Jack o'Lantern on the steps of the Galumps and from behind a post shout out something that would frighten them.

Shouting as though they were goblins, they hurried through Puddle Muddle until they came to the little pink house where Grandma and Grandpa Grouchy Galump lived. Then they all kept very quiet. Top Notch took the Jack o'Lantern, put it in front of the door, lifted the knocker with a wing and waited for the door to open. It was Grandma who looked out.

"The ghost of the Rooster you thought you had captured has come to haunt you, Grandma!" cried Top Notch.

She shrieked and closed the door. Tomorrow—"How He Escaped"

GREENVILLE TOBACCO MARKET REPORT

GREENVILLE CONTINUES TO LEAD ALL MARKETS IN THE BRIGHT LEAF BELT IN BOTH POUNDS AND PRICES.

Market Sold Yesterday 1,487,914 Pounds for $312,160.16

AVERAGE $20.98

Now is the time to market your good and fancy tobaccos.

Prices Now Highest Of Season

The official report published yesterday (and tobacco growers should consider only official reports) show that Greenville market is leading all bright leaf markets in number of pounds sold and in prices paid for tobacco.

A larger number of growers from distant counties are now patronizing the Greenville market than any time since the market was established, and they know it is paying them to sell here, some of them traveling over 100 miles.

The reason for the phenomenal record Greenville market has made and is at present making, is the fine spirit being manifested by the Greenville Tobacco Byers who are determined that no market shall excel Greenville in prices paid for every grade of tobacco.

The Board of Trade does not permit under penalty of $50.00 fine, any warehouseman to reserve floor space for anyone. The principle of first come first served under the By-Law must be carried out.

Tune in on Greenville's Radio Station WEED every day (except Sunday) at 9:45 A. M., 12:45 P. M. and 4:45 P. M. for latest tobacco market reports. Will find it on your dial around 142 or 1420.

COLONEL McALLISTER CHAPTER D. A. R. MEET

The Col. Alexander McAllister Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution was delightfully entertained Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. B. W. Moseley on Fifth Street.

The meeting was presided over by the Regent, Mrs. W. B. Murphy of Snow Hill and after a short business session, Mrs. Murphy introduced Mrs. J. B. Spilman, who gave a most interesting talk on the school situation throughout the United States, dealing with the status of the schools in the different states and the changes that had been made in the different schools systems.

She told of the salaries of the teachers in most of the states and the elimination of some subjects that heretofore have been a part of the curriculum of almost every school. This talk was most entertaining and enlightening and was thoroughly enjoyed by all those present.

At the close of Mrs. Spilman's talk, Dr. A. D. Frank of the college faculty was introduced and gave a most interesting paper on Thomas Paine, dwelling on many phases of his life that are scarcely ever emphasized. He mentioned only casually his reputation as an atheist but brought to the attention of his hearers many admirable qualities that he possessed. He spoke of his writings and his great ability in this line. But stated in spite of his ability and his many admirable qualities, he died in poverty, without friends and without money.

At the conclusion of this delightful program, the guests were invited into the dining room, where a buffet luncheon was served. The table was beautiful with a lace cloth, having as a centerpiece a lovely bowl of yellow and white chrysanthemums. Yellow and white candles in silver candlesticks cast a soft glow over the beautifully appointed table. Mrs. W. S. Harden sat at the end, serving coffee and Mrs. R. H. Wright, served the salad course from another table. Mrs. Moseley was assisted by her daughter Miss Frances Moseley.

The guests for the afternoon included members from Snow Hill, Kingston, Hookerton and Farmville. Besides the members, the following guests were present: Mrs. A. M. Moseley, Mrs. C. M. Warren, Mrs. Guy V. Smith, Mrs. Katherine Thomas and Mrs. J. B. Spilman.—Reported.

HOME COMING DAY ATLANTIC CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

Wilson, Oct. 31.—The Alumni Association of Atlantic Christian College will hold a business session in conjunction with Homecoming Day on November 8, the most important business matter at the time being the presentation of the completed plans for local alumni chapter organizations.

For the first time the alumni of the college have been set off into local units, the basis of organization being along county and town chapters. This matter has received much attention at the hands of committees during the past month, and rather completed plans will begin shape to be presented at the alumni meeting. Plans are also being made to provide for the maintenance of a half-time secretary. At present a member of the faculty, Prof. Dallas Mallison, is giving part of his time to alumni work along with his regular classroom work. The officers of the alumni association are: Zeb. E. Brinson, President; Miss Neva Banks, Secretary; and Miss Agnes Peete, Treasurer.

For the first time this year, also, the alumni will have an official organ, a page in each issue of the college paper being set aside for their use.

In conjunction with the meeting of the Alumni Association, will also be held class meetings beginning in early afternoon and continuing until late afternoon.

Program
The program of the day is as follows:
11:00—11:45 Musical Chapel program for all guests.
11:45—12:45 Meeting of Alumni Association.

MAGICIANS MONKEY CAUSES UPROAR

Barney, a large monkey owned and used by Lippincott, the magician, who appears here next Monday night at the High School Auditorium to raise money for the school athletic fund was recently parked in the basement of a Winston-Salem hotel when some over-curious person unsnapped the door of his cage and started a row unequalled in the history of the hotel.

Seeing a chance for freedom, Barney started on a tour of inspection which ended in the hotel coffee shop much to the amazement of guest, waitresses, cooks and bellboys, who started for the nearest exits, amid shouts, screams and crashing of broken dishes.

A hasty SOS was sent out for the strange intruder's owner, who returned to find Barney seated on the cigar counter eating a large piece of raisin pie. The hotel manager took the affair good naturedly. Lippincott paid for the pie and a good time was had by all.

Lippincott appears here today in a matinee performance for the students body at the high school. He appears tomorrow at the Teachers College Auditorium, starting at 2:20 p. m. and appears at the same hour Thursday at the Third Street School Auditorium.

Farm Notes

Home Storage of Hardy Vegetables
Successful winter storage of vegetables depends upon a proper regulation of temperature, moisture and air supply. Most of the hardier vegetables such as turnips, rutabagas, carrots, beets, Irish potatoes and cabbage keep best at temperatures slightly above freezing. The amount of moisture required varies somewhat with the different crops, but a moderate amount is desirable for cabbage and most root crops except onions. Onions keep best in a relative dry atmosphere and at temperatures slightly above freezing. The temperature, air supply, and moisture may be regulated by ventilation.

Storage in Hills or Banks
Hill storage is fairly satisfactory, but it has many disadvantages. Temperatures and moisture cannot be controlled because of difficulties in labor, and it is hard to get vegetables out when needed. If this type of storage is used, several small hills are more convenient than one large hill.

The average hill is constructed by placing a layer of straw on the ground, piling the vegetables on the straw, and then covering with straw and soil. For hardy vegetables, a six-inch layer of straw with a four-inch layer of soil on the outside is sufficient at the time of storing. As colder weather comes on the layer of soil should be increased enough to prevent freezing. Ventilation should be provided by a twist of straw through the top of the mound or by constructing a box-like ventilator extending from the bottom of the pile through the top of the hill.

Cellar and Cellar Substitutes
The average house cellar provides satisfactory storage requirements, but it is not practicable for most parts of Eastern North Carolina because of the difficulty in providing drainage. A good substitute may be provided by building a structure with earth walls and roof. The framework may be made of rough lumber, but should be strong enough to support a 12-inch thickness of soil for both walls and roof. Such a structure may be of any desired size, but need be only large enough to hold the winter supply of vegetables. An earthen floor, with a slatted floor six inches higher, will help to provide good storage conditions. A door should be built in one end and a window placed in the other end for ventilation. In the absence of a window, place a ventilator in the roof. One large ventilator is more satisfactory than several smaller ones.

Successful operation of a storage house depends upon careful regulation of temperatures and moisture. During warm spells in winter and temperature may be lowered by opening the ventilators at night and keeping them closed during the day. Moisture may be regulated reasonably well by opening the ventilators if the humidity is high or by sprinkling the floor if it is too low. When free water collects on the vegetables or drips from the roof, the moisture is too high. If dust can be scraped up from the earthen floor with the foot, the air is too dry.

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 31—(AP)—Cotton futures opened barely steady two higher to six lower on steady Liverpool cable offset by southern selling.

In addition to southern selling there was considerable scattered liquidation coupled with western, Wall Street and local selling.

Active months showed net losses of five to eight at the end of the first half hour except July which was off 12 points.

After selling off to 9.44 of December and 9.79 for May during the morning trading became very quiet with prices fairly steady at mid-day. Offerings were light with little covering and trade buying railroads moving it up a few points from the lowest. The market showed net declines of one to 11 points at mid-day.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Oct. 31—(AP)—The stock market was able to dig back to day and check the slide which developed in yesterday's late trading.

The list, watered absolutely, however, and showed little inclination to recover although a sprinkling of issues managed to push up fractionally to more than a point.

The tone of the market was off a cent and the slight sagging in cotton served to keep the share market hesitant. Wall Street was clearly adopting an attitude of watchful waiting on the outcome of the government gold buying policy.

Washington continued to steadily pack up the gold price lifting it 16 cents further to $32.12.

The dollar still failed to decline correspondingly in the foreign exchange and financial quarters were awaiting the inauguration of foreign gold buying with keen interest in as much as this is expected to bring the exchange value into line.

Final compromise between the steel companies and Railroad Co-ordinator Eastman on rail prices was the encouraging overnight news.

After quickly backing and selling in a narrow confine the market settled irregularly lower in the late dealings.

Transfers approximated 1,300,000.

Marine Corps from Virginia, North and South Carolina, Florida and Eastern Georgia will be held at the Marine Corps Headquarters, Postoffice Building, Savannah, Ga., during the month of November. It was announced by Lieut.-Col. A. B. Drum.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT TURNS DOWN TWINE BIDS

Washington, Oct. 31—(AP)—The Postoffice Department today delayed decision on the time worn argument between the lute and cotton interests by rejecting the only two bids received for the recent proposal to buy 600,000 pounds of twine. A. H. Klein, department purchasing agent said new bids would be asked in a few weeks.

Granite Falls Manufacturing Company, of Hickory, bid 21.5 cents and 21.75 cents on two grades of cotton twine and the Ludlow Corporation of Massachusetts bid 10 and 10.25 cents on similar grades of jute.

ago, and that retail trade appeared to be better than a year ago.

The report covered the month of September.

The two leading cash crops, cotton and tobacco turned out well in both quantity and quality and the prices paid, while not as high as had been expected, are better than a year ago, the report said.

Retail trade as reflected in department store sales was better than in September last year, and wholesale trade in five leading lines, groceries, drugs, shoes, hardware and dry goods, also compared favorably with September 1932 figures.

The reserve bank's report emphasized that although September trade witnessed the usual seasonal gain the net increase was somewhat less than occurs in most years.

The report said conditions in employment did not change materially in the month, but that on October 21 they were better than they were during the first half of this year. It said the largest group of unemployment was in the building trades field.
