Havana Calm Today After Two Days Of Bloody Strife

SCORES DEAD AS RESULT OF MUCH FIGHTING

Havana, Cuba, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Havana stepped off in a march back to order and calm today after two of the bloodiest days in the city's history during which Colonel Fulencio Batista's loyal soldiers put down the revolution that shook the foundations of the present regime.

Among the dead was the picturesque veteran of the hills, Guan Blas Hernandez, who lost his life in the first engagement within the city. And among the wounded was at least one woman who with several others entered the Atares castle with the rebels yesterday, and a few hours before Colonel Batista's loyal troops opened the devastating attack which resulted in the surrender of some 1,500 revolvers and which was regarded as a decisive blow at the revolutionary cause.

Outrageous Fortune

Chapter 42 DANGEROUS STORY

CAROLINE shut her eyes. She felt odd and light, like a soap-bubble that is just going to fly away.

When she opened them again, the inspector was sitting at the writing table. He had a sheet of paper before him and a pen in his hand. Jim was sitting opposite to him, and Major Anderson was standing with his back to the mantelpiece. He was frowning as Caroline opened her eyes. He said:

"Before you make a statement I had better tell you that Mr. Van Berg is expected to recover consciousness any time during the next few hours."

The inspector was full of disapproval. The law had been complied with: Mr. Randal had been warned if he ran his head into a noose, so much the worse for him, and so much the better for the law.

Major Anderson's frown deepened. He had known Jim Randal since he was eight years old. He had dined at Hale Place four times a year for fifteen years. He wasn't going to have Jim Randal bucketed into making a statement without knowing what he was up against.

"One moment, inspector," he said. "Now, Randal—you say you want to make a statement. Before you do so I think you ought to know that I saw Mrs. Van Berg this morning."

"Yes?"

"She says that on the night of the sixth of August she came down between eleven and twelve o'clock to get a book. She heard voices in the study, and she now says that she recognized one of them as yours."

"Yes," said Jim—"I was there. I think you had better let me make my statement. There really isn't any time to lose. Meanwhile let me tell you that the man who shot Elmer Van Berg and lifted the emeralds is Jim or Jimmy Riddell, and I left him twenty minutes ago having an interview with his wife up at St. Leonard's Tower. Here's his description: Five-foot-eight or so—slim—wiry—two teeth missing in front—long nose—long chin—pale—between thirty and thirty-five—"

"Jimmy the Bell!" said the inspector.

"Well, you'd better look quickly or he'll get away. His wife's maiden name was Nesta Williams. She's a cousin of the housekeeper at Packham Hall, and she's living with a father, Tom Williams, at Happicot, Sandringham Drive, Ledlington Road."

The atmosphere in the room had changed.

"Jimmy the Bell!" said the inspector under his breath. Then, "We'd better get hold of him. Excuse me, sir." He lifted the telephone and spoke into it.

Jim struck in.

"His original idea was to get to Glasgow, to lay low there for a bit, and then get abroad. But I think he's more likely to hang around here now—you'll see why presently."

The inspector nodded and went on with his instructions. Presently he hung up the receiver.

"Now, Randal," said Major Anderson.

"Well," said Jim, "I landed at Liverpool on the first of July—but if you've been taking an interest in me, I expect you know that. I was in the wreck of the Alice Arden on August eighth, and until about half an hour ago I hadn't the remotest idea of what had happened between those two dates—" He paused, and added, "with one exception."

A WAVE of excitement swept over Caroline. The color rushed to her cheeks.

"Look here," said Jim, "can I tell this my own way? I'll sign a formal statement afterwards if you want me to, but I'd like to tell it to you first just as it happened. Can I do that?"

"Yes," said Major Anderson. "Carry on."

"Well, then, I understand that I was taken to the Elston cottage hospital, where I kept on repeating the name of Jim, or Jimmy Riddell. They weren't sure at first whether I was saying Riddell or Randal, so they sent out a message with both names. Next day Mrs. Riddell rolled up, identified me as her husband, and carried me off."

"Now I come to what I do remember. I woke up next day in a perfectly strange room. A perfectly strange young woman came in and assured me that my name was Jimmy Riddell, and that she was my wife. I couldn't contradict her, because as far as having any memory was concerned I might have been a new-born baby.

"The only thing I remembered—and I didn't know whether I was remembering it or not—was someone holding up a string of square green stones under a bright light.

"And there was a fog, and a voice talking in the fog—talking about the emeralds and Jimmy Riddell. It worried me to death, because I couldn't make out whether it was my own voice or not." He paused.

Major Anderson said, "This is a most extraordinary story, Randal. Jim went on again.

"I'll cut it as short as I can, but you've got to understand the sort of state I was in. Nesta Riddell said we'd been married on the 25th of July at the Grove Registry office in London, and she told me that I had shot Elmer Van Berg and stolen eight very valuable emeralds on the night of the 6th of August. She wanted to know what I had done with the emeralds. She said I was on my way to Glasgow. She said I had hidden the emeralds before I went, and she wanted to know where they were."

MAJOR ANDERSON took a step forward.

"Really, Randal, I don't know whether you hadn't better see a doctor. This is the most extraordinary story!"

Jim Randal laughed.

"I know it sounds extraordinary, but I'm perfectly sane. I'd like to go on if I may."

He went on.

"Bits of my memory were coming back. It was like seeing pictures—I could see myself drinking with Elmer Van Berg. I knew that I called him Elmer, and that his wife's name was Nesta. And when I remembered all that, I got the wind up, because it seemed as if I must have done it—and there were my finger-prints on the glass I'd used."

"My one idea was to get out of Ledlington. Well, I started out across country without any idea of where I was going. The most damnable thing was that Nesta Riddell really did think I'd got the emeralds—there was no mistake about that."

"To cut a long story short, I went to Hale Place, and when I got there I remembered my name and who I was. In fact I remembered everything except the time between the first of July and the 15th of August—which was when I waked up at Happicot."

The inspector made a note of the dates.

"I got into the house and I stayed there. You can understand that I wanted time. I made up my mind to wait for a week and see what happened. I know I was exposing myself to suspicion, but I decided to wait."

Jim went on speaking.

"During the time I was at Hale Place the house was twice entered. There's a room there called the Blue Room. The burglar came straight to this room on both occasions. The first time he charged me and got away. The second time he got what he had come for—the emeralds."

"What?" said Major Anderson.

"They were hidden in the Blue Room. He got away with them, and caught the last train into Ledlington, and I just missed it. I came on in the morning and watched for Mrs. Riddell."

"I watched the road all day. In the evening Miss Leigh met me. She had her car, and thanks to her I was able to follow Mrs. Riddell when she came out. She had taken her brother's motorcycle. We followed her to St. Leonard's Tower. Miss Leigh remained in the field, and I went on to the ruins."

"I overheard an interview between Mrs. Riddell and the man. They quarrelled. She had parked the money she had brought him somewhere, and absolutely refused to hand it over unless he showed her the emeralds. In the end he gave way. They were on one side of the Tower, and I was on the other, with one of those narrow slits between us. He struck a match, and there were the emeralds dangling about a yard away from me." He paused.

"Well," said Major Anderson. "I grabbed them."

He dived into a pocket and flung a glittering heap of green and pearl upon the inspector's footscap.

"There they are!" he said.

In the next chapter the police remain unconvicted by Jim's tale.

U. N. C. WILL SETTLE GRUDGE WITH 'DEACS'

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 9.—The Carolina football team has an old grudge to settle with Wake Forest when the old rivals clash in their all-important Big Five game here Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The Deacons robbed Carolina of a tie with Duke for the Big Five title in last year's scoreless tie. And the fact that Carolina made twelve first downs to Wake Forest's 6 and Captain Bill Croom had a 50-yard touchdown run called back makes the Tar Heels twice as anxious to win this time.

Wake Forest led the battling in a scoreless tie with the Wolfpack, and it expected to give the Tar Heels one of the feature games of the Big Five season.

The Carolina squad, strengthened by the return to shape of Jim McCachren and Alan McDonald, two leading backs who were benched last week, is making every effort to develop a stronger running attack, and is approaching the Deacon game with respect and wariness.

The "giant-killers" of the Big Five as they came to be known last year, have a veteran club with another powerful defensive line and a potentially powerful backfield.

And it is a known fact that the Deacons, victory hungry as a result of their loss to Clemson, are pointing to this game with everything they have and would like nothing better than to knock the Tar Heels off.

On the other hand, Carolina which appears to be the only Big Five team with a chance to stop the undefeated Duke Devil, has to look ahead to this Blue Devil contest the following week and must take both games in stride.

Some of the most brilliant line play of the season is expected Saturday. Centering interest will be the meeting across the scrimmage line of George Barclay, Carolina's brilliant guard, and Mutt DeAngellis, All-State guard, and Pat Swann, 225-pound Deacon tackle.

Another feature will be the punting duel between Swann and Charlie Woolen, Jr., Carolina quarterback, whose kicks averaged 35 yards in both the Tech and State games.

Among the other Carolina backfield stars are Captain Bill Croom, George Moore, Charlie Saffer, Herman Snyder, and Don Jackson, all of whom featured against State and are in fine shape again this week.

The big guns in the Wake Forest backfield include the veteran, Dunc Wilson, Whitley Russell, Ed Lawhorn, and Roy Myers, and the brilliant rookie, Bill Martin.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

The deep South, our scouts report, has more gridiron rabbits this year than ever and that section has long been noted for its production of nimble backs, who could fade from the arms of rugged tacklers.

Georgia's unbeaten Bulldogs have several light, speedy and versatile halfbacks who have been showing consistently brilliant as October slipper. Homer Key is having a great year. This little halfback, now a senior, is as fast and elusive as ever. Cy Grant is another Georgia halfback, weighing around 167, who can outrace the fastest ends if they give him an opening.

Tulane's Backs
The Green Wave has nine triple threat backs of first string caliber. Johnny McDaniel, 193-pound quarterback, can run, pass, block and tackle. Bucky Bryan, left halfback, is rated the finest sophomore prospect at Tulane since Don Zimmerman. He weighs only 162.

Barney Mintz, another sophomore, Little Preacher Roberts, versatile Tulane captain, and Little Monk Simpson, a great kicking halfback, help round out the most deceptive offensive line-up in years at the New Orleans institution. Tulane has scored in 49 of its past 52 games.

Auburn's Plainsmen have a fine little running back in Casey Kimbrell. They also have one of the finest ends of the year in Gump Ariall and a strong tackle in Bat McCollum.

Georgia Tech has a well balanced line, one of the strongest in the South, although it would be hard to single out the best player from the group.

Hupke of Alabama is an outstanding guard.

Louisiana State has a wealth of material. Abe Mickal, a sophomore fullback, is a great kicker, fine passer and dangerous ball carrier.

Lone Survivor
For the first time in years, only one team in the deep South came to November unbeaten and untied, Georgia being the lone survivor. At that, the Bulldogs had a close run against Mercer, winning by a slim 13 to -2.

The familiar leaders of the past few years in that section—Tennessee, Auburn, Alabama, Tulane, Vanderbilt, Georgia Tech—all have been beaten. Captain Bill Jones' Louisiana State Tigers have been twice tied.

Football crowds in the South have been holding up well compared with previous years. Tulane and Auburn

DEVILS LEAVE FOR BIG TILT

Curham, N. C., Nov. 9.—Completing their preparations for the contest this afternoon, the undefeated Blue Devils of Duke will leave here tonight for their game with Maryland at College Park, Maryland, Saturday afternoon.

It will be Duke's re-entry into the Southern Conference race after having met State and Southeastern Conference teams since their opening game with V. M. I. The Blue Devils will be seeking their seventh straight victory of the season.

Captain Carl Schock and Corky Cornelius have returned to the lineup this week and the Blue Devils will be in better condition for the Old Liners than they were last week when they faced Auburn. Cornelius has been the main cog in the running attack, the side-wheeling halfback having run up an average yardage of eight yards a try. Schock is a veteran guard god defensively and offensively.

The Blue Devils have worked hard in preparation for the Old Liners, realizing that the game Saturday will be just another battle like they have had all season. All games are battles to an undefeated team, it has been said.

Duke is anxious to get by this seventh hurdle in their path to an undefeated season in order that they can go into their game with their old rival, North Carolina, with a clean slate. The Duke-Carolina game, one of the greatest drawing cards in the South, will be played in Duke stadium this year a week from Saturday.

Maryland has a sophomore team that has been coming along rapidly this season, and have prepared to give the Devils a battle. Earl Widmyer, speed merchant halfback, will give the Blue Devils a busy afternoon. Cy Grant is another Georgia halfback, weighing around 167, who can outrace the fastest ends if they give him an opening.

Duke will speed tomorrow night in Washington, D. C., going on to the scene of the battle Saturday morning.

Expert Routs Mosquitoes; Picnic Is Peaceful
Portland, Ore. —(AP)—Chasing mosquitoes away from a picnic ground is the latest unusual job performed successfully by an expert of the Department of Agriculture.

When the Oregon Democratic general committee organized a picnic near here it was not discovered until almost the eve of the date set that the selected site was swarming with hard-hitting mosquitoes.

In response to an "S. O. S." call the local office of the department's bureau of entomology rushed an expert to the spot. Routing mosquitoes from a canyon half a mile long and a quarter mile wide even for one day seemed an insurmountable task, but the government man was equal to the occasion.

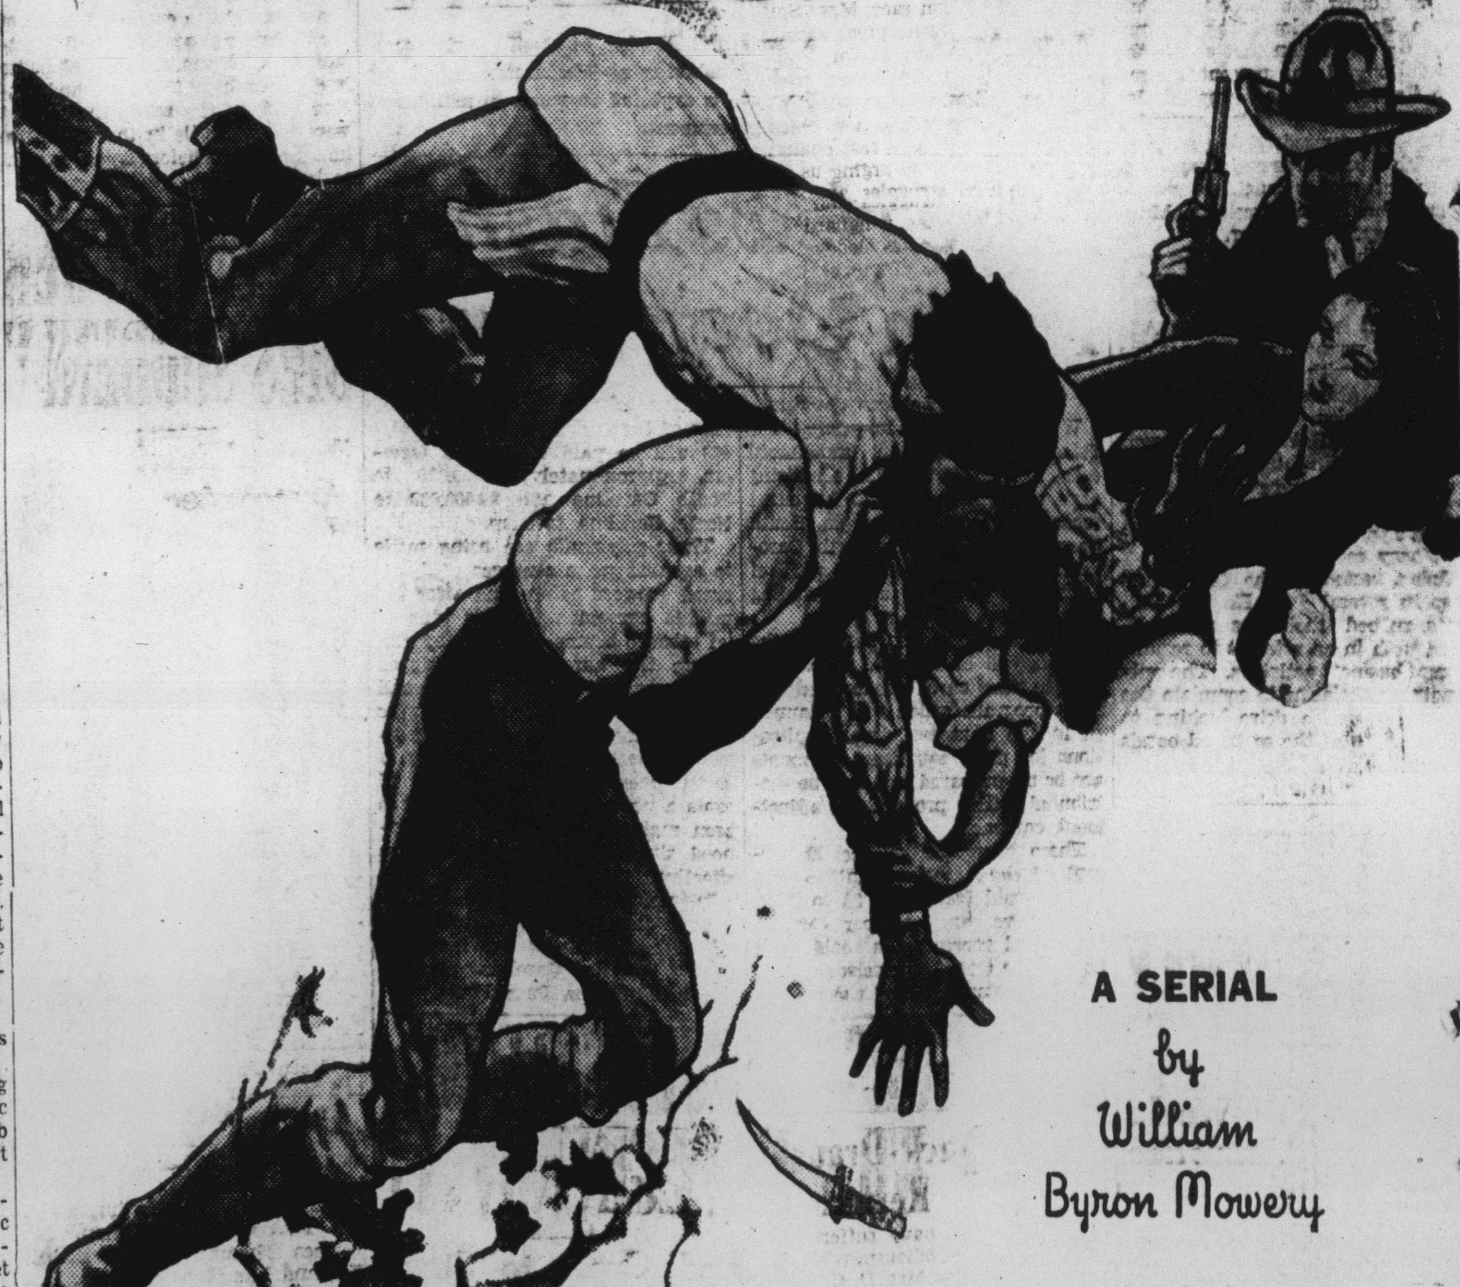

Hasty arrangements were made for a large-scale fumigation of the area, which was carried out during the entire night and early morning preceding the picnic. It worked. The picnickers did no slapping, took home no bites. The government mosquito-fighter received a special note of thanks.

Trucks from thirteen States visited the Hamburg section of Jackson County, North Carolina, for shipments of cabbage last season.

Arizona has a prehistoric sun-hole calendar in the walls of the Casa Grande Ruin, by which Indians reckoned time and probably carried out their planting and harvesting.

TEXAS RANGERS CUT THEIR DEBTS AFTER PRICE BOOM

Barnhart, Texas. —(AP)—Chuck wagons rolling into this West Texas sheep shipping center are rolling along to "We're in the money" and other lively tunes these days.

A sudden upward turn in the market for sheep, goats, wool and mohair has enabled many ranchmen to pay off 50 per cent of their indebtedness in a single year, they report.

Wool prices are up 300 per cent. Mohair has risen from six to forty-five cents a pound, and there are 3,000,000 goats in Texas. Lambs have risen from three to four and one-half and five cents a pound.

Leading ranchers estimated the fall wool clip is bringing more money this year than any season since 1928. This fall's lamb harvest, most of which is being moved to rail points by truck, is estimated at 2,750,000 animals, bringing Texas owners about $6,000,000.

She said that "the religion of the future will appeal less to the emotions and more to the intellect. It will have a spiritual renaissance whose keynote will be service to man. The means by which we live will be subjected to the ends, for which we live. The forces of religion will be united in the future, instead of being separated as they now are."

FITTING OF GLASSES

MISS MARTHA GIBSON TO BE GUEST SPEAKER AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH SUNDAY

The Eighth Street Christian Church will have a guest speaker at the evening service on Sunday whose message will be of marked interest to the members of that congregation and to the community at large. Miss Martha Gibson, now here on furlough, is in charge of the women's work at Fukushima, Japan, a city of 40,000 people, where she is the only worker of that kind.

Miss Gibson is a graduate of William Woods College, the University of Washington, and the College of Missions. Not only has she been well trained, academically, for her work, but as a traveler in many countries of the world, she has added to her intellectual training a wide experience which has given her a world-wide outlook and a cosmopolitan attitude of mind which make her admirably fitted to work in a world of constantly changing racial and national ambitions. Miss Gibson has a twin sister, Mrs. Harriet Gibson Vissinger, of India. These sisters had planned to spend their lives together as workers in Japan, but circumstances sent one to Japan and the other to India. While on furlough Miss Gibson is traveling all over the United States, speaking at conventions and from the pulpits of churches in all sections of the country. A charming personality and an unaffected speaking manner make her visit and her message of peculiar interest and appeal. A special invitation is extended to members of rural churches in the vicinity of Greenville to attend her service, and of course, a most cordial invitation to the general public. There will be no special offering. We simply have an informed and informing guest speaker and we want you to share with us the pleasure of meeting her and listening to her message about some of the work that goes on on the other side of the world. The service begins promptly at 7:30. There will be special music by the vested choir of the Eighth Street Church.

WRITER VISITING HERE

Pictured above is J. Gaskill McDaniel, well known sports and feature writer, who is visiting friends in the city. McDaniel, a veteran sports commentator, although only twenty-three years old, gained prestige in another line recently when he covered the hurricane on the Carolina coast. His accurate dispatches from isolated coastal areas during the storm were the first to record the correct death toll.

In Greenville he is best known perhaps for his lengthy series of features relative to popular songs that have been appearing in Sunday issues of the Raleigh News and Observer, as well as for two hundred poems that have appeared nationally. Although a native New Bernian, McDaniel has always had a distinct hankering for Greenville, and he has many friends here.

Golden Weed Ball In Farmville Tonight

By EVA HORTON SHACKLEFORD
Farmville, Nov. 10.—The fourteen tobacco towns of this section of the State, including New Bern, Goldsboro, Kinston, Washington, Robertsonville, Williamston, Tarboro, Smithfield, Wendell, Greenville, Wilson, Farmville, Rocky Mount and Ahoskie, comprising the Bright Leaf Belt, their warehouse-men and the growers throughout Eastern Carolina, are looking forward with much eagerness to the magnificent celebration planned for this evening to do honor to Governor Ehringhaus, and the committee, which so valiantly assisted him in the struggle to obtain parity prices for the 1933 crops of tobacco. And Farmville, the little host city, is contemplating the happiest occasion of years and is literally standing "at attention," awaiting the coming of His Honor, the Governor, and other notable visitors, who are anxious to avail themselves of the opportunity to cheer their arbiter and his faithful hand of co-workers.

For Governor Ehringhaus is widely recognized as a genuine leader and is occupying a position of merited confidence and trust in the hearts of the tobacco growers of the nation today. Holding firmly to his ideas of remedying the ruinous conditions and instilling into his followers the glow of a dream of a better and happier state for his people than that which has prevailed for four years, he persistently petitioned for relief adequate to stem the constantly rising tide of prices for essentials, proving himself a man of vision and courage who is in no danger of becoming a mere rubber stamp.

The result of that contestation was instantaneous, and the tobacco growers, deeply conscious of the disastrous conditions which have been averted, are glad of the opportunity for rendering acknowledgments of gratitude for the unshackling of the fetters binding this magnificent industry of tobacco, which has evolved from a crude, insignificant pigmy into a mighty giant of perfected development and financial power that has poured out its wealth almost as a golden flood over the land. Looking at it from the background of generations which have produced the weed, it unfolds, from the time the Indians planted their "tobago" and John Rolph, husband of Pocahontas, the first white tobacco grower, exported the weed from Virginia to the rest of the country, as a dramatic epic of Homer's, of panoramic grandeur and colossal achievement. What the great Argosies were to Greece, the tobacco industry is to America.

Something of the marvel of this change and development in the Eastern section of the State, will be portrayed in the historical scenes to be presented in Monk's warehouse directly following the program of oratory at the school building beginning at 7:30, when the Governor, Congressman Lindsay C. Warren, J. Con Lanier of the A. A. A. and others will speak.

The prologue will depict first trafficking in the golden weed when all of the territory was known as the Albemarle; the three episodes tracing history through the controversy relating to oppressive taxes imposed by England on tobacco; the first blue curing tobacco barn and the opening of the first warehouse in the Bright Leaf Belt, which will revive memories of a wedding, which took place at this time, and of the couple who has lived happily ever since in Pitt County. The third scene will give a delineation of the toil exacted in handling the weed, and the epilogue will present a beautiful and stately closing with agriculture, industry and education uniting to provide a happy existence for mankind. Mrs. L. P. Thomas, Miss Vivian Case, Miss Mamie Proctor, Miss Russell Ward and others will have charge of the masque.

Coming as the brilliant culmination of the program of events will be the Golden Weed Ball, honoring the Governor and Mrs. Ehringhaus, who have been invited to lead the figure—which will be directed by Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Fenner of Rocky Mount, assisted by Mayor John B. Lewis and Mrs. J. Loyd Horton. Miss Catherine Eagles, of Wilson and Washington, D. C., and Lieut. T. C. Turnage, Jr., Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Bert James, Mr. and Mrs. Haywood Dal, Greenville; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. Joyner, Miss Pennie Keel Long, A. C. Monk, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. W. WELCOME TO PITT COUNTY

Greenville and Pitt County generally join Farmville today in extending a welcome to Governor Ehringhaus and the others who took part in the fight in behalf of the tobacco farmers of this state. While the battle to assure permanent living prices for the tobacco farmer has not been fully won the gains so far bespeak final success if our farmers will continue to display the spirit of co-operation with which they so readily signed the preliminary acreage reduction agreements.

Realizing the great part Governor Ehringhaus and his associates played in this fight for the farmers, it is indeed a pleasure to welcome him into our midst for the "Golden Weed Jubilee."

Capes Returning To Favor Show Varied Lengths

By ADELAIDE KERR

Paris. — (AP)—Capes are back again.

Little waist-length capes appear with day-time and dinner gowns. Hip-length capes of fur or wool are worn with street costumes. Long cloaks are swept about the most regal evening gowns.

Hip-lengths capes are the newest fashion not. They appear in fur, wool and silk treated to new tricks. Bronze Seal and Gaylak Heim uses rich bronze seal and gaylak tinted a new gold beige called "home" to make striking hip-length capes for day-time wear. Sometimes they are worn with a analogue to match, again they appear with wool accessories matching the frock.

Chanel designs hip and three-quarter length wool capes for sports and travel wear. Deep green-ribbed wool frocks and suits appear with loose capes of the same fabric, swinging from the shoulders.

Schlaparelli adds the hip-length cape to the evening style picture, with a striking model of bright Peeping red taffeta having a quilted effect, worn with a slender gown of silver gray satin.

Some of Ostrich

Short capes of fluttering ostrich, shimmering velvet of soft coque feathers are a favorite accessory for winter evening frocks, and luxurious waist-length capes made of silver or grey foxes are among the richest evening wraps.

The long cloak, a favorite of the tall chic woman, is shown by several of the leading designers. It is generally made of velvet in such rich tones as midnight blue, navy blue or dark green.

Campus Thieves Return

Boulder, Colo.—(AP)—Last year burglars looted every one of the 12 fraternity houses on the Colorado University campus, taking chiefly clothing and money. School had only been open a couple of weeks this fall when four chapter halls were visited again. This time they lost furniture.

Ring said the shooting was accidental.

PART-TIME FARMERS ALSO CAN GET LOANS

New Bern, N. C., Nov. 10.—Part-time farmers are also eligible for loans from the Federal Land Bank Commissioner's fund of 200,000,000, according to word which has just reached the office of County Agent H. A. Patten. Ordinarily they could not qualify for regular Federal Land Bank loans because their farms are not of sufficient area to produce an income that will maintain the family of the applicant and pay the installments on the loans.

The decision to make such loans on small farm properties was arrived at in an effort to fill in the gap between loans which can be made by Federal home loan agencies and those of the Federal Land Banks, says the word from Washington. The gap appears generally in suburban territory, where farms are occupied largely by people who operate the property for part of their income and work in the cities for the balance.

BABY IS ABANDONED ON WILSON DOORSTEP

Wilson, N. C., Nov. 10.—For the second time within a year a baby was found abandoned on a doorstep in Wilson.

Last night about 11:30 o'clock Tom Jordan, who resides on South Tarboro Street, discovered a two or three-day-old baby boy on his back porch. Police which was later turned over to County Welfare Officer Jim Barnes who placed it in a local hospital for treatment and care pending investigation as to its identity.

Mr. Barnes said this morning the baby weighed about four pounds and was only a few days old. He said whoever left the child at the Jordan home left no note or clues to its identity of its parents.

The baby was dressed in cheap looking clothing and was wrapped in a solid cotton blanket, the welfare officer stated.

Several months ago a baby girl was abandoned on the front porch of the home of Mrs. J. W. Shealey, on Pine Street.

Greenville market continues to lead the entire Bright Belt both in number of pounds sold and prices paid for tobacco.

We urge you to grade more closely, making sure to keep green, reddish and dark leaves out of your bright tobaccos.

Thousands of dollars are lost every year through improper grading.

Let us suggest that you give preference to marketing your good and fancy tobacco. More tobacco is bringing from 40c to 75c than in years, and if you have good tobacco, it looks unwise to hold it back.

Tune in on Greenville's Radio Station WEED every day (except Sunday) at 9:45 A. M., 12:45 P. M. and 4:45 P. M. for latest tobacco market reports. Will find it on your dial around 142 or 1420.

Held Wife in Husband's Death Goldsboro, N. C., Nov. 10.—(AP)—Ruby Sasser Grice today was charged with planning the ambush slaying of her husband, Herbert Grice, here recently. Officers lodged Mrs. Grice in the Johnson County jail at Smithfield in an effort, they said, to insure against her communicating with Rufus Satterfield, who is charged with the actual slaying.

The warrant against Mrs. Grice charged she counseled and procured the slaying of her 32-year-old husband. The warrant was issued by Sheriff Paul Garrison and was served at the home of Mrs. Grice's brother, Ronald Sasser. Grice was killed on the night of October 22, when he went into his yard to probe the cause of his dog's bark. Officers found clues which led them to announce the slaying had been from across the street with a shotgun. Satterfield, a World War veteran, was arrested almost immediately. Officers did not make public the evidence on which they based charges against Mrs. Grice.
