Governor Speaks At Farmville Jubilee

J. C. LANIER TELLS OF THE LEAF PACT

Thousands Hear Governor Praise Tobacco Growers, Schools And Sales Tax; Lanier Tells of Government Plan to Boost Prices of Tobacco And Outlines Contract.

Lauding the school system, the sales tax and the support which tobacco farmers gave the tobacco reduction campaign in this state, Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus delivered the principal address at the Golden Weed Jubilee in Farmville last night.

The address, along with another by J. C. Lanier of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration at Washington, were heard by a crowd that taxed the high school auditorium to overflowing and crowds were unable to gain entrance to the building on account of lack of seating accommodations.

The celebration was concluded with a pageant giving the history of tobacco from the beginning of the industry until the present time, and a dance was given in one of the large warehouses of the town.

The governor made an inspection tour of various warehouses of this part of the state before going to Farmville and gained considerable first-hand information of the industry for which he has put up such a stout defense in their effort to obtain higher prices.

The celebration was ushered in with an address by John B. Lewis, mayor of Farmville, the response being made by William Anderson of Wilson.

Greetings were extended by J. W. Holmes of Farmville, representing the business men; John T. Thorne, representing the tobacco growers, and Mrs. W. B. Murphy of Snow Hill, lieutenant-general of the N. R. A., in North Carolina.

Elohes of the tobacco conference held in Washington were presented by Dr. J. Y. Joyner of LaGrange, and Graham Borden of New Bern. Mrs. J. Knott Proctor of Greenville, scored heavily with a solo number.

Governor Ehringhaus was introduced by B. B. Suez, of Greenville who praised the chief executive for his splendid work in behalf of the thousands of tobacco growers to obtain higher prices for their products.

Reviewing the series of conferences held in Washington with government officials relative to higher prices for tobacco, the governor declared much good had been accomplished and praised growers for the way they responded to the acreage reduction campaign.

Touching on the school system in this state, he said it was better than any other state in the union and was paying its way as it goes. Referring to the controversial bus situation, he declared that, only one other state in the union hauled children for a shorter distance than did North Carolina.

Mentioning briefly the sales tax he declared this form of taxation was essential and that it had already reduced the taxes of the public to an appreciable extent. In Pitt county alone, he asserted, tax payers will reap a saving of $75,000. He urged consumers to place the merchant who fails to support the sales tax in the same class of the man who does not stick to the National Recovery Administration in its effort to improve the economic situation throughout the nation.

WARREN NOT ABLE TO BE AT JUBILEE

Fractured Ankle Prevents Congressman From Attending Celebration

Because of a fractured ankle, Congressman Lindsay C. Warren was unable to attend the Golden Weed Jubilee in Farmville last night, a letter sent to Mrs. T. C. Turnage, chairman of the celebration, revealed last night.

Mr. Warren was to have read a letter he received from President Roosevelt commending the people of this section for the splendid way they rallied to the tobacco signup and also promising his support of their cause to obtain higher prices, but the message, however, was conveyed to the Farmville gathering.

Because of the fracture, Mr. Warren wrote, "the doctor tells me I will be unable to walk in several days," and hence his inability to attend the gathering.

His letter to Mrs. Turnage follows: Washington, North Carolina November 19th 1933

Mrs. T. C. Turnage Chairman Golden Weed Celebration Farmville, North Carolina, My dear Mrs. Turnage:

It is with the greatest regret that I will be unable to be at Farmville today. Last week I had a fall and fractured my ankle and the doctor tells me I cannot walk in several weeks. My disappointment is very keen for I had looked forward with much pleasure in being with you and participating in the program, for no invitation that I had received has been more appreciated.

The people of eastern Carolina have genuine cause and reason for joy and celebration, yet at the same time, we should temper it with a spirit of thanksgiving.

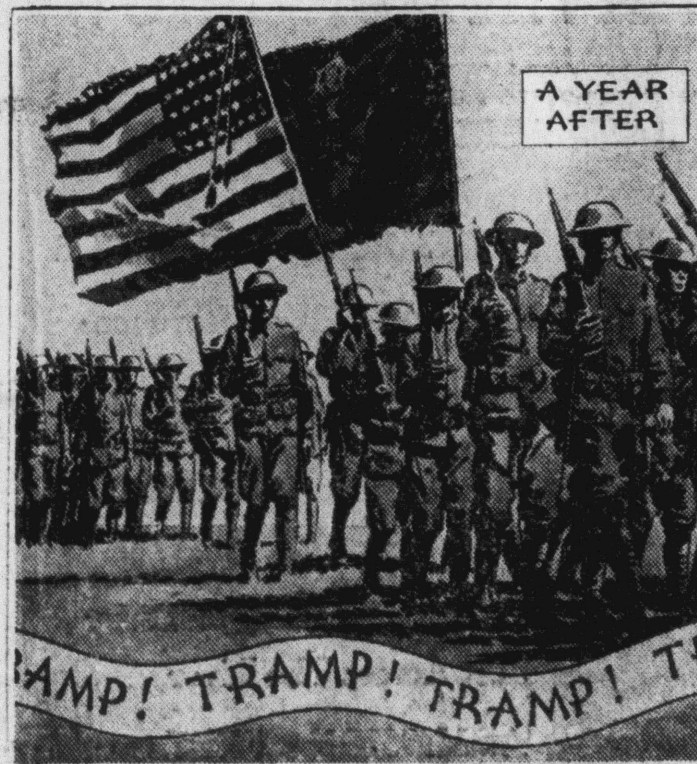

When the tobacco markets opened in the east this year, we were immediately confronted with a situation that meant disaster. In every great crisis a leader appears and fortunate indeed it was that this leader was the Governor of North Carolina, the Hon. J. C. B. Ehringhaus. His superb courage and boldness and his broad understanding and sympathetic knowledge of the situation gave us a rallying point. Once the decision was made that a fair price must be given to the tobacco growers of North Carolina, there followed the most outstanding display of cooperation and mutual helpfulness that I have ever seen displayed anywhere in the State. Banded together for a united purpose, we could not fail.

It was my privilege to be present at every stage in this memorable fight. I know, such as few do, the heartbreaking disappointments and the numerous difficulties that had to be overcome. I sat there during the period when it looked as if all were lost and then I saw victory achieved.

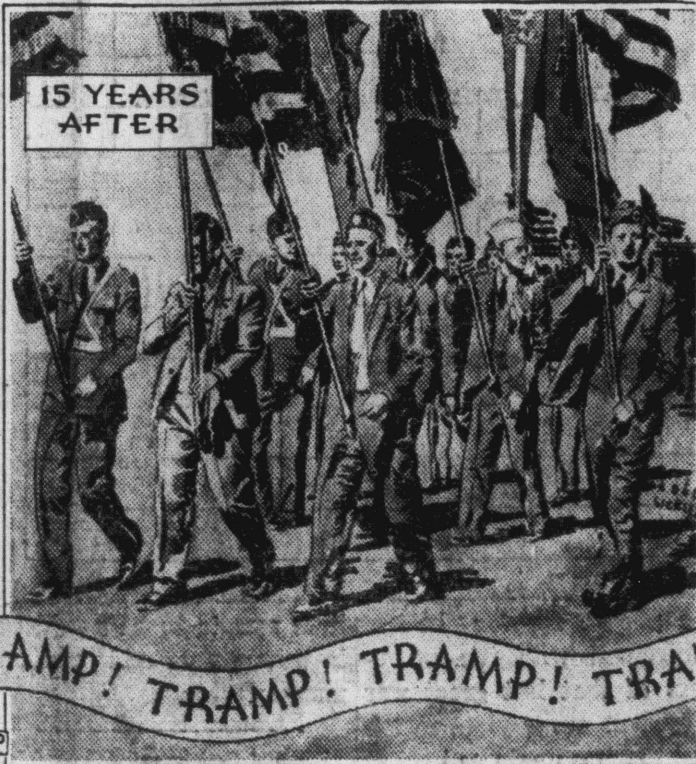

In addition to the constructive statesmanship of the Governor, I wish to commend and pay public acclaim to the splendid cooperation and fine stand of the war-horsemen of North Carolina; without whose help there would have been no agreement; to the committee representing the tobacco farmers who constantly inspired all of us, and to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Let the people of eastern North Carolina never forget the names of Chester C. Davis, of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, and J. B. Huston and J. C. Lanier, of the Tobacco Section of the Board.

Their sole interest was in the deplorable plight of the tobacco farmer and never once did they waver (Continued on Page Four)

WILL CONTROL RUM MAKING

Government Declares It Will Not Surrender Control of Whiskey Manufacture

Washington, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Although the national prohibition law will be wiped off the books by formal action December 5, officials made it clear today that the federal government does not intend to surrender control of the distilling industry.

President Roosevelt was said to be convinced that the government was in authority under the recovery act and farm measure to license the liquor industry and in all probability it will be done.

MEXICAN CITIZENS UNDER NEW LAWS

Mexico, D. F.—(AP)—The progress of aviation is reflected in Mexico's new citizenship laws which provide that a child born aboard a Mexican aircraft will be a Mexican citizen.

Other articles of the laws, which are being enacted as constitutional reforms, state that any one born in Mexico, regardless of his parents' nationality, is a Mexican. Likewise a child born abroad of one or both Mexican parents will be considered Mexican.

A foreign woman marrying a Mexican and coming here to live automatically becomes naturalized. Mexican nationality will be lost by voluntary acceptance of a foreign nationality for resident in the case of a naturalized citizen—five years outside of Mexico or for using a foreign passport.

Citizenship will be forfeited by those accepting or using noble titles, for rendering official service to a foreign government or accepting a foreign decoration without the consent of congress and for aiding any foreigner or foreign nation in a dispute involving Mexico.

Nazis Foil Fate Says Hitler Aide

Munich.—(AP)—One of the great deeds wrought by the Nazi regime is the abolition of fate.

The announcement was made by Alfred Rosenberg, chancellor Hitler's foreign affairs expert, at the formal opening of the new German Art Palace here. Said Rosenberg: "Today man doesn't look upon fate as inescapable. Free will has become predominant. From this fact, coupled with race consciousness, national socialism derives its intrinsic strength. Ours is a grand heroic conception of life."

GOVERNMENT DECIDES ON LEAF RENTAL

Farmers to be Paid $17.50 an Acre For Reduction of the Tobacco Crop

Washington, D. C., Nov. 10.—(AP)—The Farm Administration has decided to pay $17.50 an acre rental plus 12 1-2 per cent of the net amount received by the grower from his reduced crop in an effort to cut next year's flue-cured tobacco acreage 30 per cent.

Formal announcement of the plan will be made within the next two days.

The administration hopes to cut production of flue-cured about 500,000,000 pounds. This year's crop is more than 700,000,000 pounds. The rental of $17.50 an acre in all probability will be paid by February 15.

Production of tobacco in the United States in 1933 was estimated by the Crop Reporting Board today at 1,408,361,000 pounds compared with 1,015,512,000 pounds in 1932.

North Carolina's 1933 yield was placed at 525,804,000 compared with 297,750,000 in 1932.

ROSE DEFENDS LEGION WORK

Commander Takes Crack at Big Business in Speech Before Kiwanians

Defending the American Legion against attacks of "Big Business," J. H. Rose, commander of Pitt County Post of the American Legion, spoke at the regular meeting of the Kiwanis Club at the Woman's Club last night.

The speaker, commenting on the assertion of "Big Business" that the men who served in the World War are merely "treasury raiders," pointed to the staggering profits which "Big Business" wrung from the war, and declared such a charge should not be brought against the Legion by forces responsible for all of the crimes it placed at the door of the former service men.

"The Legion believes in taking the profit out of war by universal draft upon all of the resources of the country," Mr. Rose said. He asserted this should affect all man-power, all wealth, especially a conscription of wealth as well as man-power, and "let those who declare war suffer as much as the man who has to fight."

"We Legionnaires are ready to defend our country tonight," the commander declared, "but we do not want any wars of aggression."

The speaker was presented by H. H. Duncan, who with Dr. S. M. Crisp, was in charge of the program. Rev. E. L. Hillman presided.

At the suggestion of W. A. Darden, the club agreed to sponsor the annual Red Cross call which opens Thanksgiving. A committee composed of W. A. Darden, Dink James and Dr. R. S. McGeachy was named to look after the campaign.

A report of the district convention of Kiwanis held recently in Elizabeth City was presented by D. C. Moore, Jr. Dr. R. S. McGeachy and President Hillman, who stated that occasion was one of the best of the kind in years.

A meeting of both old and new directors was called for at the home of Dr. R. S. McGeachy next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock; and all directors were urged to attend.

BIG DINNER TO BE SERVED THE VETERANS

Football Game at Third Street School Grounds to Climax Day's Activities; Business Houses Asked to Close From 10 to 12:30; Banks And City Offices to Close For Day; Big Crowd Expected to Be Present

Plans were completed last night for the annual observance of Armistice Day here today, and indications pointed to one of the outstanding events of the kind since the ending of the World War fifteen years ago and millions of men who had been in mortal combat marched back to their homes to resume normal occupation.

The observance here today was sponsored by the Pitt County Post of the American Legion. J. H. Rose, commander of the organization, announced last night that preparations had been completed and everything was in readiness for opening exercises at 10 o'clock when a colorful parade in scheduled to get under way at the A. C. L. station and move through the principal business streets to the college where the main exercises will be held.

Judge J. Paul Frizzelle, judge of the Fifth Judicial District, will deliver the address to the several hundred persons expected to be on hand to help the Legion celebrate the cessation of one of the bloodiest conflicts in the history of the world.

Immediately following the exercises, the former veterans and members of the Auxiliary will be guests at a barbecue dinner in the basement of the campus building.

At 2:30 o'clock East Carolina Teachers College and Campbell College will bring the celebration to a climax with a game at Third Street School grounds. Gates will be opened at 1:30 o'clock to take care of the advance throngs expected to attend.

Participating in the colorful parade will be the local unit of North Carolina National Guards, Boy Scouts, High School band, and former veterans. Rumbling artillery of the military unit will give a warlike atmosphere to the pageant, and the minds of the former soldiers and citizens alike will turn back to that day fifteen years ago when news of the signing of the Armistice was flashed over the world, bringing the mighty conflict to an end.

The Legion commander yesterday called on all business houses of the city to close between 10 and 12:30 to give everybody an opportunity to take part in the celebration. Firms employing former service men were asked to let them off all day if possible so that they might more fully take part in the event.

All banks of the city, city officials and other public buildings will be closed during the day to give employees a chance to celebrate the end of the war. Flags will be displayed in the front of business houses in the principal business district, and these also will be reminders of the (Continued on Page Four)

THE TERRIBLE TOLL OF WAR

The awful scourge of war will be brought forcefully to the attention of the world today as the people of various nations go about the celebration of Armistice Day.

It has been fifteen years since the ending of that terrible conflict which took a toll of millions of lives from nearly every nation of the world, and the memory of it has not grown dim in the minds of those who sacrificed and suffered so keenly because of it.

Armistice Day, if for no other reason, brings the people face to face with the stark reality of war, its awfulness, its terrific expense, and last but not least the millions of lives that must necessarily be offered upon its altar. Some say rightly that the next conflict, if there should be one, will be more devastating than the World war because of the development of poisonous gases to be hurled from airplanes shooting through the skies at bewildering rate of speed. They tell us that whole cities will be wiped out in a single attack, that nations will perish like fields of straw in the path of a great conflagration.

That being the case, and it most certainly is, fortunate indeed it is that we have annual Armistice Day to bring our attention back to that great annihilator of humanity—war.

Revival of the memories of that great conflict with Germany most certainly will cause us to do more than we ever did to avert future conflicts, although slight progress has been made in that direction. But with nations groping around for some means of peace, it is hoped by leaders of public thought that the future may bring forth some solution—some pact whereby war may be abolished forever, and nations may be able to deal amicably with one another, eliminating petty misunderstandings and jealousies which have been the cause of most warfare of the past.

The American Legion under whose auspices Armistice Day is being held, is rendering the nation a tremendous service by keeping afresh in the minds of our people the staggering truths of that last great war. May the Legion continue to render this type of service in the years to come and may

GRID SPOTLIGHT CENTERS ON A PROFESSIONAL CLASH AT NEW BERN

By J. Gaskill McDaniel
New Bern, N. C., Nov. 11.—With a brisk chilliness permeating the air, and the weather-man predicting ideal football weather for the affair, interest among Eastern Carolina fans is centering on the professional clash Sunday between New Bern and Winston-Salem at the Craven capital. Led by the diminutive "Wings" Shipp, a veteran of many college and pro grid battle during the past decade, the New Bernian are rated on equal terms with the Camel City boys. The two teams fought to a bitter deadlock at Winston-Salem in a previous meeting, and they are out to bring home the proverbial bacon. Aside from Shipp, who once played under the guidance of the great Jim Thorpe, the New Bern roster carries June Underwood, former University of North Carolina star; Swede Ohlson, All-State center for Furman, and little Smokey Perebee, who played quarter for Carolina a couple of seasons back—Edward Brisson, All-Northeastern fullback—for two consecutive years and a star yearling at State last season, is among the backs.

Sam Bule, Duke's great passer, will be in the midst of things. Brock, the Davidson end who once ran a hundred and two yards against Duke without scoring on the play, is scheduled for action, as is Skinny Pearce, another Davidson end. Zaengle, former Pitt back-and-utility lineman, is also playing for the Twins.

"IDEAL" INDIANS PROVE IT SCORE PERFECT IN PROJECTS.

There are 138 young redmen in the camp.

Holdenville, Texas.—(AP)—Once Texas' chief claim to fame in this section was the Longhorn steer. Now it's the longhorn cucumber. Introduced into Hughes County a few years ago, the new variety has become increasingly popular. A native of Texas, it is described as possessing unusually good flavor as well as great size. One 23 inches long was displayed in Holdenville when the 1933 crop was marketed.

Greenville market continues to lead the entire Bright Belt both in number of pounds sold and prices paid for tobacco.

We urge you to grade more closely, making sure to keep green, reddish and dark leaves out of your bright tobaccos.

Thousands of dollars are lost every year through improper grading.

Let us suggest that you give preference to marketing your good and fancy tobacco. More tobacco is bringing from 40c to 75c than in years, and if you have good tobacco, it looks unwise to hold it back.

The Pilot

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

When Jelly Bear and Honey Bear recognized the voice that had come from the plane there was happiness and great relief for the voice was that of Christopher Columbus Crow.

"Caw, caw, caw, where are you?" he called. "Here I am!" shouted the Bears together as they came out from behind the rocks. Christopher was wearing driving goggles and an aviator's helmet.

"There has been great excitement in Puddle Muddle!" Christopher said. "First Grandma made a fuss about Top Notch's escape and her broken window until Willy Nilly told her that the window was so loose it just fell out with a flap or so of Top Notch's wing, and then we heard that Grandma had gone after both of you with his gun because you had taken some of his nuts and apples."

"We knew you could lead him a long chase, but I had a better idea than that. I remembered that in flying about the country I had seen a small plane in a field that took people up for short flights. It didn't seem to be in much use; so I thought I would go and look it over. I had often watched the pilot so I knew how to start the engine by turning the propeller over with my strong right wing and I had noticed how he used the controls."

"Well, I've been flying around in it for ever so long and only just a few minutes ago saw both of you. Now if you both get in the plane I'll fly you back to Puddle Muddle." The Bears were nervous at the thought of flying, but it seemed the only thing to do.

Chapter 45
A NEW CLUE

MAJOR ANDERSON came forward and leaned on the table. Caroline came and stood by him, and as she put her hand on his shoulder, the inspector said:

"Well, sir, I think that settles it." Caroline began to shake. Why had Jim told them all those things? They weren't going to understand. Jim's hand came up and covered hers. It was strong, and warm, and heavy. He said:

"Go and sit down, Caroline." And then, to the inspector, "You'd better let me finish. I've only got half way."

"Let him go on," said Major Anderson in a hard, tired voice. It was a good thing old James Randal was dead. Nice woman Mrs. Randal. A good thing she'd gone—a thing like this would have killed her. The fellow must be mad of course. A damned bad business.

He watched the inspector pick up the shining heap, it straightened into a double pearl-string chain linking the eight square emeralds so lightly that they seemed to hang in the air. The inspector let them fall upon a piece of blotting paper.

Major Anderson went back to the fireplace and said curtly, "Go on, Randal."

Jim moved his chair back a little. He wanted to be able to address the Chief Constable without appearing to ignore the inspector.

"Now we're really going to get down to it. I snatched the emeralds and made off just about as hard as I could go, and all in a flash my memory came back. You know the way a blind goes with a click. It was like that. I want to tell you what I've remembered."

"To start with, I wasn't Jim Riddell, and I hadn't married Nestle Williams. My business over here was to try and interest various important people in a new steel process I had invented. Elmer Van Berg was one of them.

"He'd been nibbling at it in New York, where I'd known him pretty well. Well, he'd cooled off. On the 6th of August I had a telephone conversation with him. When he heard that certain other people were interested in my process, he warmed up a bit.

"The upshot of the talk was that he wanted me to go down and see him. Well, I was leaving for Scotland next day, and I didn't want to get off early, so I went down by train to Hinton and walked over to Packham."

"What train did you take," said the inspector.

"The eight-twenty. It got into Hinton at ten-fifteen. I walked over to Packham, and it took me about an hour and a half. I went round to the library and knocked on the window, and Elmer let me in as we had arranged. We talked, and we had drinks, but we didn't come to any agreement."

"Did you quarrel?" said the inspector.

"It depends on what you'd call a quarrel. We didn't agree. If you don't agree with Elmer, he tries to shout you down. There's nothing in it, but it's ugly while it lasts."

"You parted on bad terms?" said the inspector.

"Oh so; we didn't—no blow himself out and calmed down. We had another drink. He told me about all the shows they were going to, and about the emeralds. He said his wife was going to wear them at the Rackingtons' in a day or two—tableaux for some charity—so he'd got them in the house.

"He asked me if I'd like to see them, and I said yes. He took them out of his safe and showed them to me. That was the bit I remembered—his hand under the light, and those eight thumping big stones."

"Then I said good-night and went out the same way I'd come in. I let myself out. He was over by the table swinging the chair on his finger and worshipping it. He's crazy about stones."

THE inspector spoke again.

"You left him like that?"

"Left him like that. No, I haven't finished—not by a long chalk. I'd missed the last train handsomely, so I walked into Ledlington."

The inspector's eyebrows twitched.

"You walked into Ledlington?"

"Tidd."

"Twenty miles?"

"Why not? I told you I was short of exercise."

"Mr. Van Berg didn't ask you to stay the night?"

"Yes, he asked me."

"Why didn't you stay?"

"I didn't want to. I wanted to get back to London—I'd my boat to catch."

"So you walked to Ledlington?"

"Yes, I took the first train on up to town and went on board the Alice Arden. You know about the wreck, so I can skip all that. I was washed overboard and flung up on a piece of rock. It didn't take me long to find out that the tide was coming in. I didn't think much of my chances, because I didn't think my rock was above high water mark."

"I shouted as loud as I could. Presently something bobbed up and hit me. It was a man. A wave fairly slung him at me, and I grabbed him. At first I thought he was dead, but he wasn't. He began to cough and choke, and curse and cry. He was out of his head with terror. I held on to him, or he'd have been off the rock a dozen times.

"The fog was so thick that I couldn't see him, and he couldn't see me, and he was out of his wits with fright. I couldn't make out whether he thought he was dead, or whether he was just afraid he was going to die. Anyway he was talking—crazy, I don't think he ever stopped, and it was all, 'Jimmy Riddell, and, 'Eight green stones—like a kid's green beads. He must have said that hundreds of times. It was like having a talking machine record going round and round in your head.

"I couldn't stop him—he just went right on: 'Jimmy Riddell, and, 'A kid's green beads, and, 'No one knows where they are except me. And then a piece about, 'Five windows—like ellis—' and, 'The finest emeralds in the world.' Jim paused and looked from one to the other.

"All those things he kept on saying stuck in my mind, and when I'd lost my memory and didn't know who I was, there they were, and I didn't know what to make of them. I said them in my sleep, and they made Nestle Riddell think I knew all about the emeralds."

He pushed back his chair and got up. "I can't tell you anything more. That's the last I remember—being on the rock, and the tide coming up. They say they found me on a ledge, but I don't know how I got there. And I suppose Jimmy Riddell must have been picked up by the life-boat. He wouldn't have given his real name."

THE inspector's eyebrows twitched again.

"You say the emeralds were hidden at Hale Place. How do you account for that?"

"I can't account for it. The five windows like ellis are in the Blue Room at Hale Place. The emeralds were hidden there."

"How?"

"Jim hesitated for the first time. . . . Oh well, it was bound to come out. He said,

"There's a secret hiding-place in the room. The emeralds were there."

"Can you explain how Jimmy Riddell knew of the secret hiding-place?"

"No, I can't."

Caroline got up and came to the table, her eyes very bright, her cheeks flaming.

"His real name—" she said — "Jimmy Riddell's real name—do you know it?"

The inspector shifted his light, impassive stare. It rested upon Caroline and took in her color, the excitement in her eyes, and the slight tremor of her hands. She was bare-headed, with bright tossed curls. Her hands were bare too.

The inspector spoke.

"His real name—well, it isn't Riddell. He's had a lot of aliases—Rudge—and Ray—he generally sticks to an R. As far as I know, his real name is Rudd."

"Oh!" said Caroline.

Jim turned to her with a puzzled look.

"What's all this?"

"Emily," said Caroline breathlessly—"Emily Rudd! Oh, Jim, don't you remember?"

A half memory flicked through his mind. It was like a leaf blowing. He couldn't catch it. It blew away and was gone.

"Emily Rudd?"

Jim turned to her with a puzzled look.

"What's all this?"

"Emily," said Caroline breathlessly—"Emily Rudd! Oh, Jim, don't you remember?"

A half memory flicked through his mind. It was like a leaf blowing. He couldn't catch it. It blew away and was gone.

"Emily Rudd?"

Jim turned to her with a puzzled look.

Monday, Elmer Van Berg wakes and has his say.

public. He has written me a letter which I am enclosing and which I ask you to read to our people. I am confident that we again desire to follow his leadership and that we will again fulfill our part of the agreement by a hundred per cent sign-up of the official contract."

CAMPBELL TO PLAY ETC HERE TODAY

One of the highlights of today's Armistice Day celebration is the game between East Carolina Teachers College and Campbell College at Third Street school athletic field at 2:30 o'clock.

For the convenience of those who want to be in plenty of time to see preliminary activities the gates will be thrown open at 1:30 o'clock. Dave Moore, chairman of the Legion athletic committee, said late yesterday afternoon.

The Teachers were described as in prime condition for the game and one of the best clashes seen on the local gridiron this season was in the offing.

The Teachers usually play on their home grounds at the college, but in view of greater accommodations at the Third Street field they agreed that the game be played there.

The contest is being played under the auspices of the Pitt County Post of the American Legion as a part of the Armistice Day program and hundreds of people were expected to flock to the field to witness the contest.

He said farmers who co-operate in the reduction movement will receive $17.50 an acre for the amount of tobacco retired, and that next fall growers would receive a 12-1-2 cents bonus on sales. If the crop fails to yield the poundage quota the government will pay two cents for every pound short, he said.

All farmers who sign the reduction contracts, he stated, will receive a 20 per cent increase on all tobacco sold from the opening of the market this year to Sept. 25, and from that date to October 7 they will get ten per cent.

The benefits, he said, will be divided between the landlord and the tenant.

E. V. Webb of Kinston, read a letter from Congressman Lindsay C. Warren expressing his inability to attend the celebration because of a fractured ankle that would prevent him standing on his feet for some time to come. He also read a letter which President Roosevelt wrote Mr. Warren praising tobacco farmers for their support of the administration plan and promising his influence to do everything in his power to aid them.

The letter which Mr. Warren received from the president follows: The White House Washington November 8, 1933

My dear Mr. Warren:

It is heartening to hear the good reports from North Carolina that the efforts of the Administration to help the flue-cured tobacco growers are meeting with success.

Without the intelligent cooperation of the producers, we could not have hoped to obtain improved prices which you are now receiving for your tobacco and have received since the reopening of the markets.

You are familiar, of course, with the steps that were taken when ruinous prices forced the closing of warehouses. Had it not been for the fact that the producers of flue-cured tobacco met this emergency with a definite and immediate promise to adjust production in the next season our task in obtaining fairer prices this year would have been more difficult if not impossible.

May I call your attention to the fact that soon this group of farmers will be called upon to execute a definite contract to reduce production next year. I am convinced that the spirit that was demonstrated in the emergency sign-up campaign will be carried forward and a sound program of production adjustment will result.

Very sincerely yours,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

We should be proud of the fact that an able and brilliant son of Pitt County J. C. Lanier, holding one of the most important positions in the Government today, sat around the council table and played a conspicuous part in all of the negotiations. We should not forget that the President of the United States also espoused our cause, and battled for us. He expressed the greatest personal interest that the agreement must be binding and effective and also personally approved same before it was made

WHITTALL RUGS

If It Is a Color Scheme—WHITTALL Has the Answer!

The design of every Whittall rug includes one or more of the many famous and beautiful Oriental rug motifs, formerly confined to imported rugs of great value. These Oriental motifs, as expressed by Whittall, lend themselves to gorgeous color effects which thousands of home owners have selected and learned to cherish because they are found only in Whittall rugs.

To be sure that each design and the colors used with it are thoroughly harmonious, with other decorative furnishings, Whittall went to, and continue to go to, scores of stores the country over, to their drapery, furniture and lamp departments to learn which fabrics, which colors, which designs are the most popular. Then plan their rugs to decoratively fit these other furnishings. If an interest suddenly arises in a new type of design or preference is indicated for certain new colors, you will find a Whittall rug to go with them. You are assured that a Whittall rug will exactly fit a particular decorative scheme.
