Eight Persons Die In Accidents In The Carolinas

NEARLY SCORE ALSO INJURED THANKSGIVING

Three Persons Killed In Vicinity of Reidsville, Two in Automobile Wrecks and Third by Electrocuting; Farmer Killed In Argument Near Carthage; Mooresville Man Victim of Car Wreck

(By The Associated Press)

A total of eight persons met violent death yesterday as the Carolinas celebrated Thanksgiving. Nearly a score of persons were injured. A hit and run car crashed into a Charlotte hunting party as they stopped on the highway near Hamlet examining the damage done to their car by another hit and run motorist who had sideswiped it a moment before.

James Smith 65-year-old realtor, was instantly killed and C. Black, Charlotte dairyman, and Alva Alexander, other members of the party were seriously injured and fear was expressed by physicians that they would not recover.

Three persons were killed in the vicinity of Reidsville, N. C. Miss Ruby, formerly of Danville, died instantly when the auto in which she was riding was hit by a freight train. Three other members of the party were injured.

The second accident near Reidsville brought death to Will Brant, employ of the state highway department, as his automobile ran off off the approach to a bridge.

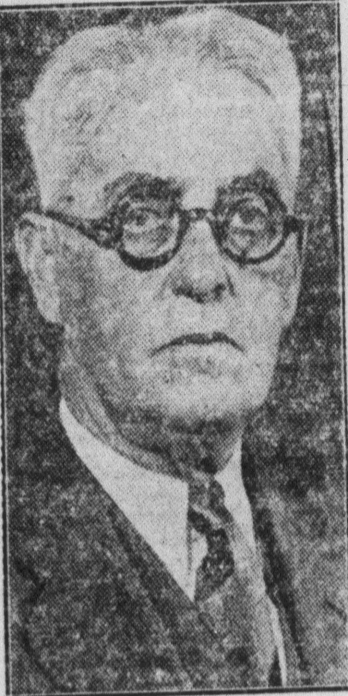

At Madison, a short distance away James Wall, 60 year old dairyman, was electrocuted as he went to investigate a plane crash on his farm.

The occupants of the plane were uninjured but Wall came in contact with a live wire snapped by the plane when it fell.

A farmer by the name of Rinehardt, miles west of Carthage, was shot and killed in an argument after he had ordered a hunting party off his land.

Thomas Benton was struck and fatally injured in an automobile accident at Mooresville.

MANY JOBLESS PUT TO WORK

Civil Works Administration Provides Jobs For 1,250,000 First Week

Washington, Dec. 1.—(AP)—The Civil Works Administration announced today that approximately 1,250,000 were put on the Civil Works payroll during the first week of operation.

Reports to Harry L. Hopkins from 44 states and the District of Columbia were that 1,183,267 were employed as of November 25.

New Mexico, North Dakota, Massachusetts and Minnesota have not reported and Hopkins said their reports would probably bring the total to 1,250,000.

Oklahoma during the first week completed her entire quota under the program designed to give jobs to 4,000,000 persons in the country.

The state put 101,000 on the Civil Works jobs and Hopkins said today there are no more jobs for Oklahoma.

Russia Reported Massing Troops Over Rail Dispute

Harbin, Manchuria, Dec. 1.—(AP)—Reports to Japanese military agencies here assert that the Soviet Union is concentrating 80,000 picked soldiers along the Siberian-Manchurian border as a precaution against any attempt of Manchukuo officials to oust the Russians from joint control of the Chinese Eastern Railway.

The same sources are pessimistic about negotiations for sale of the Soviet interests in the road which have been hanging fire in Tokyo. They point out that Moscow wants $200,000,000 gold for its share of the line while Manchukuo is offering only $25,000,000.

The Soviet forces are said to have been designated "the special far eastern army" and to be under command of General Blucher, who under the name of "General Gaidens" became widely known for his work in assisting Chiang Kai-Shek to establish the present Nanking regime in China.

The reports further assert that the red army is equipped with tanks both large and small, with scout and bombing planes, heavy and light artillery and chemical weapons.

Three principal air bases are listed at Vladivostok, Nikolsk and Spassk. Additional airbases are said to be located along the Amur river.

PRICE OF GOLD GAIN BOOSTED

Treasury Raises Figures For Newly Mined Metal to $34.01 at Washington

Washington, Dec. 1.—(AP)—New vigor in applying the administration's gold buying policy was indicated today by three swift boosts in the R. F. C. price for newly mined metal.

Today's quotations of $34.01 an ounce was 8 cents higher than the previous Thanksgiving figure of $33.83. Since the boost of $33.75 last Monday the government has pushed the price up 25 cents.

The London gold price today was $32.75 on an opening quotation of $32.1-2 to the pound.

Only a small portion of the $50,000,000 account for this purpose has been used. The gold price was made by telephone today. Acting secretary Morgenstern was at his New York estate while Jesse Davis R. F. C. chairman was at the capital. Herbert Mason, assistant to Morgenstern, announced the new price to newsmen.

QUIET CITY YESTERDAY

Genuine Spirit of Thanksgiving in Evidence in Greenville Thursday

Greenville observed Thanksgiving Day yesterday without any violent deaths or injuries, and the officers reported this morning that only a minor number of arrests were made.

Usually the death toll from automobile and hunting accidents is increased for this season of the year, but yesterday passed without fatalities from either cause.

The sheriff's office reported this morning that no arrests of any importance were made yesterday, and the same statement came from the police department.

While costly automobile accidents were recorded in other parts of the state, the division highway commission stated that highways of this community were singularly free from automobile smashups.

A number of small wrecks were reported inside the city limits, but beyond damages to cars, no other loss was reported.

The city celebrated the day in real style, with the tobacco market, banks, courthouse, postoffice, and majority of stores closed. A few business houses were open from time to time to take care of their customers, but as a general thing the business district was almost completely deserted throughout the day.

NEGRO MAN SLASHES WIFE

Josh Evans Held by Police on a Charge Of Cutting Wife Before Breakfast

Josh Evans went on a rampage this morning before breakfast, dangerously out his wife with a pocket-knife and went to the police station and surrendered.

The cause of the trouble could not be determined. The woman was reported in a precarious condition with several ugly wounds in various parts of her body, police said. Evans will be held pending a change in her condition.

The only thing police were able to learn when Evans surrendered was that he had had some trouble with his wife and used his knife as a means of settling it.

It was the only disorder reported in the city for the last several days, although a number of minor arrests were made.

John Smith Jailed Here For Robbing W. G. Woolard of $50 Last Monday

John Smith, was held in the city jail today awaiting trial on a charge of robbing a tobacco grower of $50 here last Monday. He was arrested in Kingston Wednesday and returned here Wednesday night. He will be given preliminary hearing sometime tomorrow.

W. G. Woolard, who lives several miles below Washington, brought a load of tobacco here last Monday. While he was unloading his product, he called on a negro standing nearby to help him.

When they had completed placing the tobacco on the warehouse floor, the negro was said to have asked Woolard to give him a drink of whiskey. Woolard, police said, told the negro he didn't have a drink but would buy one for him if he knew where it could be found.

He followed the negro to Allen's Alley, colored section of the city. The drink was found and when Woolard pulled out his pocketbook which he said contained between $45 and $50, the negro grabbed it and fled. He was identified by police as John Smith.

Nothing was heard of Smith until he was arrested at Kingston. An officer was sent for the prisoner and he was returned to the city during the night to await trial.

HOLD SPECIAL THANKSGIVING SERVICES HERE

Rev. W. S. Harden Delivered Sermon at Methodist Church Yesterday Morning

The annual Thanksgiving services were held at Jarvis Memorial Methodist church yesterday morning from 9 to 10 o'clock and proved to be one of the most impressive and inspirational of years.

Attendance was small but the hundred or two persons attending thoroughly enjoyed the message delivered by Rev. W. S. Harden, pastor of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Harden used as his subject "God's Mercy, Our Greatest Reason for Thanksgiving."

The speaker discussed the blessings which have been showered upon the nation the last year, and declared God's mercy was responsible for our safety.

He impressed upon his hearers that they should be thankful for the mercy which God had shown them and should be sufficiently appreciate to return thanks on the day set for the purpose by the pilgrim fathers.

Rev. E. L. Hillman, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist church, had charge of the service, sponsored each year by the Ministerial Association, and members of the various choirs of the city provided the musical program.

Invocation was pronounced by Rev. A. W. Fleischman, pastor of Memorial Baptist church, responsive reading was led by Mr. Hillman and Rev. W. A. Ryan made the closing prayer.

MANY COUPLES MARRY IN PITT

Nineteen Persons Apply For Licenses to Wed Here Thanksgiving-Eve

The pilgrimage to the altar assumed greater scope in Pitt county during the observance of Thanksgiving and records in the office of the register of deeds today showed that nineteen couples applied for licenses to marry on Thanksgiving-Eve.

Ten of the couples applying for licenses to wed were white and the remainder colored. They came from all sections of the county and in some cases from other counties.

With December always the greatest month of the year for marriages, it was expected the total for the year would eclipse all previous years and set a record other sections will find it difficult to overcome.

Those applying for licenses were:

James Starkey to Miss Mildred Tucker Greenville.
Earnest Pursler, Farmville, to Miss Eva Whitchard, Greenville.
Noah Bundy to Miss Ester Ragan, Farmville.

Messrs Sam T. White and C. Heber Forbes were appointed by President Stroud to call on Mr. Martin Swartz, Superintendent of the Water and Light Commission, and ask them to erect the beautiful colored lights at an early date. Through the courtesy of the Water and Light Commission by erecting the Christmas lights Greenville always ranks with other trade centers in decorating our streets for the Yuletide season.

Sheriff Moeller said Sharkey was found dead by a jailer making his rounds at 6 a. m. He said rounds are made hourly and that Sharkey apparently had hanged himself between 5 and 6 a. m. His cell was on the second floor.

Sheriff Moeller said Sharkey had complained of a headache to a guard about 1 a. m. and asked for some aspirin tablets. Ed Davis, jailer, who discovered Sharkey said he found the body suspended from the uppermost bars of the cell. One end of the necktie was fastened to the bars and the other was around his neck.

WAGE DESPERATE FIGHT TO CHECK FOREST FIRES

Sylva, Dec. 1.—(AP)—Volunteer fighters fought desperately last night to check sporadic forest fires in two mountain counties of Western North Carolina which last week was visited by a million dollar forest blaze.

Vast areas of virgin timberland were destroyed in the Alarka and Conners creek section of Swain county, while other blazes devastated a large section of timberlands in Jackson county.

One blaze in the Green's creek section raged unchecked, fanned by a rising wind, but a fire in another section of the county was brought under control after it had burned over several hundred acres of land belonging to the Champion Fibre Company.

HOME OFFICE STUDYING BRITAIN'S GAS DEFENSE

London.—(AP)—Britain is investigating means of defense against poison gas in event of attack from the air.

This was revealed by the chief of the imperial general staff, General Sir A. Montgomery-Massinbar, at a meeting here on military defense.

A questioner remarked that France had constructed subterranean anti-gas chambers, and asked if Britain had anything of that kind.

The general, replying that it was the duty of neither the war office nor the air ministry to take such steps said: "The home office has taken the matter up, and has appointed an able army officer to go into the whole question."

Shopping Days to Christmas

Attention Given To Inflationists At Washington

By BRON PRICE (Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington) There are certain practical reasons why the Roosevelt administration is giving more attention to those who think there already is too much...

State Department Quiet The administrator's foreign affairs slate is about clean again. Russian recognition is accomplished. Cuba shows signs of settling down...

Old-timers in Washington smiled when they heard of Acting Secretary Morgenthau's blue-pencil order. Many painful incidents have grown out of similar abortive efforts to keep officials from expressing their views to newspapermen or in speeches without higher-up approval in advance...

Anti-Inflationists Busy On the inflation front, the "antis" appear to be laying down the heavier preparatory barrage. Hearing, perhaps, how many publicity men are on the government payroll, those against inflation are leading the mall of Washington correspondents with speeches and pamphlets...

To the brain trust, the irony of it is that so many of these anti-inflationary pronouncements come from college professors. The fact that nothing is being printed about it now does not mean that the case of William E. Humphrey, who is ordering President Roosevelt's order removing from one of the Federal Trade Commission, is closed...

To some, the Morgenthau don't-talk order came as a real god-send. It provided a fine protection for those who had been shadow-boxing on the gold situation because they didn't understand it or have much of an idea where it was leading. Now they simply can say they are forbidden to discuss it.

Big Change In Yuletide Cards

New York. (AP)—Christmas card designers haven't overlooked Tiny Tim "God bless us all" in their 1933 greetings. But they've dipped pens and greedily the administration's liquor brushes into such familiar—and more virulent—sentiment as they abruptly "Here How" or have created little cherubs tooting irreverent horns.

The gives an idea of the range. And it takes only a thumbing of the cards to sense the newer trends. Shorter and Crisper For instance—one of the 1933 cards offer "Hello, Old Friend," perhaps to supplant—"We extend on this joyous occasion our sincere and heartiest greeting for the Merry Christmas season."

All these little twists and turns in raised gold with lace patterns are not so evident. A blue card with long silver letters and a tiny and plain decorations is one of the new ones. Many cards have modernistic lettering. Those long legged letters with ornate capitals. You are likely to receive a card through the mail with Indians or a foot cap or most anything with not a word of what it is all about. It will be easy to guess, though.

Although there is little of the Valentine treatment in the cut of the paper stock of Christmas cards, a new set of odd folds and queer flaps has crept in this year. The religious treatment of Christmas sentiment of Christmas sentiment is less evident. Perk-earred little doves last year have been passed in, but there are denizens and other animals that have no particular Christmas connection.

NRA's There Too Some shops have the NRA and other animated movie stars as the central idea of cards. But there are still all of the old-fashioned cards in thousands of

Plenty To Eat

By MARY GRAMM BONNER Why Willy Nilly sat at one end of the table for the Thanksgiving Day feast. Rip, the Dog, sat up in a chair at the other end. There was a bench along one side for the Chickens and one on the other side for the Ducks, while Jelly and Honey Bear stood on their hind legs on either side of Willy Nilly.

"We're going to forget about everything today," Willy Nilly said, "except our Thanksgiving dinner." It was wonderful the way he asked them to have more all the time. "Oh, you haven't had enough jelly," Willy Nilly told Jelly Bear. "Do have just a taste more."

Jelly Bear was already covered with jelly, but he liked that. When the feast was over he could go outside and have a lovely time licking his paws. "I have another honey-comb for you," Willy Nilly said to Honey Bear. She took it over to the corner and sat down to eat it. "Won't you have a second helping of grain?" Willy Nilly asked Top Notch, which was very polite of him considering that Top Notch had already had three.

Queer Sounds

By MARY GRAMM BONNER Now, of course, it was up to Willy Nilly to get the money back from Grandpa Grouchy Galump. They argued and argued, and at last Willy Nilly proved that the woods were on his ground, so that the bank belonged to him. The Grandpa gave back the money. "Before I do anything else," Willy Nilly said when he returned home with the money which he hid away at once, "I must fill the pantries and the cellar store room with plenty of food for the winter." So Willy Nilly worked and worked and Rip, the Dog, helped, carrying ever so many apples and vegetable in his mouth down to the cellar. After they had finished Willy Nilly said: "Now, Rip, I'm going to lock all those doors and hide the keys. I'll put a bolt on the cellar door; otherwise it would be so easy to get right down into the cellar, when one happened to be around, and have a quiet meal."

"Bow-wow," agreed Rip, "that's a good idea." So they locked the pantry doors and the keys, and bolted the cellar store room. "There will come a time in the winter when we'll be grateful for all this food," smiled Willy Nilly, who felt that he had really finished a great deal of work.

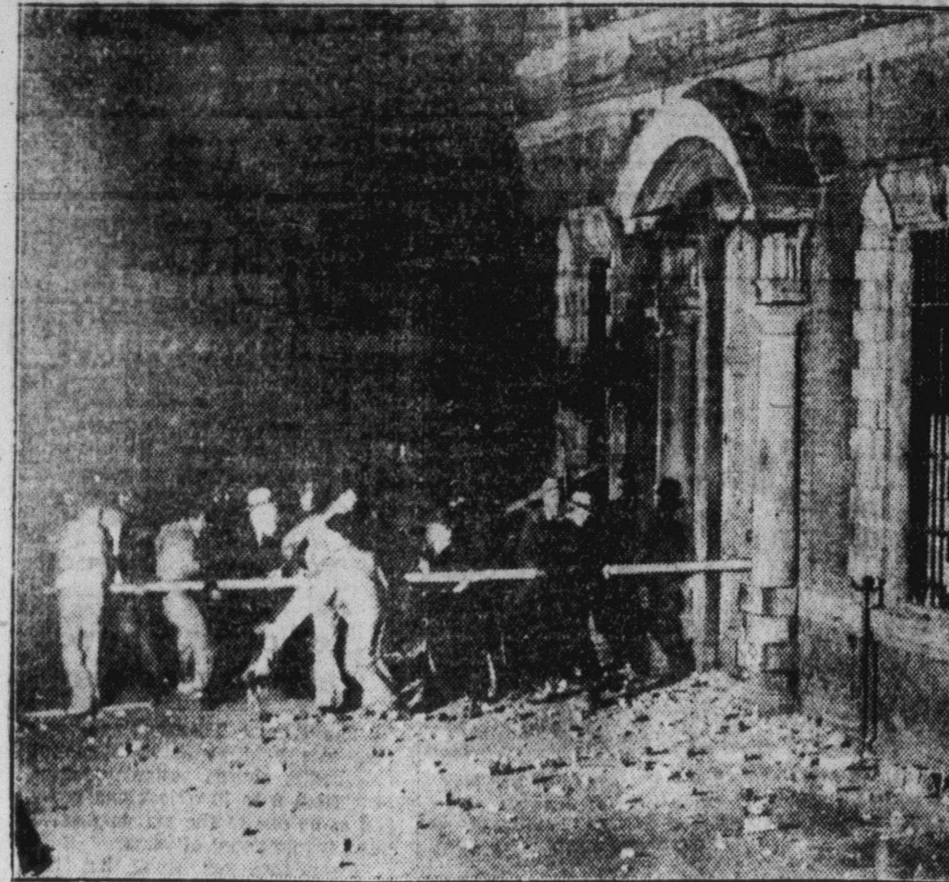

From time to time during the night Willy Nilly heard queer sounds coming from the cellar, but then decided he was only imagining them. When he awoke in the morning he was sure he heard low growls and then cries. What could they mean? styles and with thousands of sentiments. A blessing and a wish is contained in the greeting. "A Christmas greeting to you and a wish for your happiness during the year to come." An informal benediction is in the verse: "May good luck attend you now and always."

FIND WATERMELON AT BEACH COTTAGE Wilmington, Dec. 1.—A Thanksgiving watermelon, freshly picked from their back yard, is the unusual good fortune of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Schultz of Buffalo, who are spending the winter at a cottage on the northern extension of Carolina Beach. Mr. Schultz is a retired high school teacher of Buffalo, and Mrs. Schultz is a sister of Robert C. Raab, former postmaster here. They moved into the beach cottage recently for the winter, and last Saturday while exploring some weeds in the yard Mr. Schultz found the melon, weighing twenty-five pounds and in perfect condition. Several frosts have fallen since the normal end of the melon season.

Home Nearly Destroyed. Goldsboro, Dec. 1.—The home of J. D. McLaurin on East Elm street was almost destroyed by a fire which was discovered at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon. Firemen fought the blaze for an hour and a half before they brought it under control.

SPORT SLANTS By ALAN GOULD

There may be better all-around forward passers over the broad expanse of gridiron warfare in the U. S. A., but we would be satisfied to have any one of these three young men doing the heaving for us:

Douglas Nott of the University of Detroit, Jack Beynon of the University of Illinois and Jack Buckler of West Point. For punters, taking into account accuracy as well as distance, our mythical team would be pretty well fixed with Ralph Kercheval of Kentucky. Ed Danowski of Fordham or Bob Hogan of Pittsburgh. For the job of backing up the line, as defensive fulback or any other miscellaneous mopping up, the situation would be well under control with Mike Mikulok of Oregon, Pug Lund of Minnesota or George Henry Sauer of Nebraska doing the chores.

For defensive diagnostician, a new name for it so far as most of the boys are concerned, let's have Chuck Bernard of Michigan. Assize Oom Paul Johnson, Army quarterback, to the task of calling the offensive strategy, fill in the remaining positions with sturdy youths and let the whistle blow. Of course we can't have all these fellows in the game at the same time, without making some special arrangements, but they can take turns and enjoy themselves.

In The Slot. Ecnony and Nott have remarkable records this season in heaving the pigskin for accuracy and touch. Benyon completed 12 out of 17 downs respectively. Benyon passes against Army at Cleveland in the second half but Illinois failed to score. That's like having a beautiful piece of statuary that you can sell. It looks good but there's no payoff.

Not on the other hand, has passed a number of Detroit's opponents dizzy with scoring heaves. His passes were directly responsible, says one of our scouts, for five of the six victories registered by the Titans up to the middle of November. Against Washington & Jefferson Nott hurled a 35-yard pass over W. & J. players had chased him all over the field. It was caught by Reisterer, a fine end, who ran 35 yards more to score in the last few moments of the first half.

According to a West Virginia observer, Roy Marshall, Emory and Henry halfback, is the best passer the south has had since Bobby Dodd of Tennessee. It seems that Marshall "completes passes in every game for touchdowns and accurately tosses the ball thirty or forty yards and often completes longer passes."

The wedding of this popular couple will be solemnized during the Christmas holidays.

Two Entertainments For College.

The two entertainments offered by East Carolina Teachers College, "De Glory Road," December 7, and the Slaviansky Russian Chorus, December 11, will bring to Greenville two very interesting attractions, and both at popular prices.

There has been a great deal of local interest in "De Glory Road" not only because it is a sympathetic, true interpretation of negro life in Eastern North Carolina, and was composed and put on by a North Carolinian, Pat Alderman, but also because there are 70 people in the cast and it is a great show.

The Russian Chorus that will appear here is a mixed chorus of about fifteen voices conducted by a woman. It is very different from the "Don Cossack Chorus" which appeared here two years ago, which was a male chorus. While they sang only Russian songs, the Slaviansky Chorus will sing some songs of other nations, including America, as well as those from Russia.

Big Chicago Stock Show Ready

Chicago, Ill. —(AP)—Chicago's World Fair has closed up shop for the year, but agriculture's "world series" will soon move onto the scene to keep the farm world exhibition-minded for another big week.

Into the union stock yards, "America's butcher shop," will amble thousands of head of the continent's choicest beef, pork and veal on the hoof, to compete in the thirty-fourth annual International Live Stock Exposition, starting December 1.

B. H. Heide, secretary-manager of the exposition, reports that several hundred more entries have been received than last year, which was a record-breaker.

Hay and Grain Show Too

For eight days there will be coronations of champion and grand champions in beef and dairy cattle, swine, horses and sheep; wheat and corn kings—for the international Hay and Grain Show is held in conjunction—and various champions among 4-H Club boys and girls for their project.

Coming each year the week following Thanksgiving, the Chicago Exposition is the grand finale of the agricultural show season in North America.

It is the main event, through which hundreds of county and State fair champions move en route to the holiday-season tables of the county-holiday-season tables of the country's finest hotels, railroad diners, and other high-class eating places.

Many Lands Represented

Increasing representation of Canadian grain and livestock exhibitors will make this year's show more truly international than ever, says Heide.

Farmers from seven Canadian provinces will exhibit in the corps department, draft horses will come from as far away as Saskatchewan, and Ontario sheep breeders have entered some of the largest flocks of purebred sheep to appear in the competitions.

More than thirty States of this country will be represented in the crops and livestock divisions. Fourteen States have entered sheep, draft horses will come from eleven States; shorthorn cattle from nineteen States and Ontario, and Aberdeen-Angus from twelve States and Canada.

Western Farm Unrest Serious

By BRYON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

No one who has had first-hand contact with the Western farm unrest doubts its potential seriousness.

There is real concern in Washington about the possibility that the administration will lose so much prestige in the farm belt that the whole recovery program will suffer greatly.

The failure of the five Western governors to get their price-control plan approved does not mean that President Roosevelt's underestimates the change which has taken place in Western sentiment. His veto of the plan was based largely on apprehension that it would cause more trouble elsewhere.

The speaking trips of General Johnson and other administration stalwarts into the West show the importance Washington attaches to the defections there.

Rural Skepticism

There is evidence in local communities that many farmers who probably never would join a strike nevertheless are growing skeptical of the success of the Roosevelt relief plan, which depends for results on a large measure of farmer support.

The owner of the largest ranch in one Western State recently told government officials he was 30 per cent worse off than he was a year ago and that the administration must expect plenty of political reaction in that section.

That hurts. Loss of confidence in the farm plan might lead to a general loss of confidence in the recovery scheme, generally as well as an undermining of the Western Democratic-Insurgent coalition formed in the last campaign.

Some farm communities are showing signs of the beginning of that prohibition reaction which everyone realized would develop, in greater or less degree, in the wake of repeal.

One Indiana agricultural county, so dry in past years that it never had a saloon, has discovered a night club operating in the small county seat.

It goes on operating, too, in spite of the indignation of many of the farm neighbors.

The "honeymoon" Over

Altogether it is apparent—and leading Democrats would be the last to deny it—that for the first time the Roosevelt administration is hearing concerted criticism from widespread sources.

The Democrats speak of it as the inevitable swing-back which follows every Presidential "honeymoon." They expect to have Democratic national headquarters in full operation again shortly.

They hope to keep the opposition as scattered and unorganized as possible, and they look to four things to stimulate business and quiet unrest in the near future:

Actual results from public works spending, distribution of the long-delayed wheat and corn-hog payments, increased employment in liquor manufacture and distribution and the natural impetus from the Christmas trade.

The Tangle Persists

Who is likely to capitalize the unrest and opposition remains as much in dispute as ever.

While the Republican National Committee was getting out a pamphlet saying President Roosevelt already had violated his "sound money" pledge, Senator Borah was criticizing the administration for not dealing more further than it has in dealing with the currency.

It is, all in all, about as tangled a political scene as this generation has witnessed.

The eyebrow line should complement the contour of the face. Thin eyebrows aren't suitable to every kind of beauty. They go very well with an oriental type, but shouldn't be overdone if one's face is that of the typical American beauty.

BUY CHRISTMAS SEALS

The sale of Christmas Tuberculosis seals gets under way in this city today, and it is to be hoped that all our people will buy and use these seals from now through the Christmas holidays. The use of these little seals on your letters, packages, etc., not only adds attractiveness to the package but declares to the world that you are aiding in the great work of endeavoring to stamp out tuberculosis.

Seventy-five percent of the proceeds from the sale of the seals here is used in this county to wage educational campaigns to prevent tuberculosis and to aid tubercular patients to receive the proper treatment of the disease. The more seals sold in this county the more money will be available for this work, with the result that the drive to protect our people from tuberculosis will be more far-reaching. Every citizen can and should buy some of these seals.

JUST 19 MORE DAYS

With Thanksgiving now past, attention should be given to your Christmas shopping if you wish the pick of the stocks and want to avoid a last minute rush and disappointment. There are just 19 more shopping days before Christmas, so after all there is but little time and these days will pass quickly. Don't put this matter of your Christmas buying off too long. Now is a good time to read the advertisements from day to day, make your shopping list from the merchants' advertisements and then lose no time in purchasing the desired articles before they are sold out.

Wanted: A 'Slum Exterminator' Plan

New York. (AP)—Down with slums! . . . Away with unsightly hodge-podges that call themselves residential communities! . . . "Yes"—echoes a chorus in scores of teeming cities—"but how?" The Regional Plan Association of New York City thinks that it has the key in a theoretical project on Long Island—a sort of "master formula" adaptable, it believes, to any of the 191 cities over 50,000, and providing complete community centers for 5,000 to 6,000 persons at rentals from $6 or less to $25 a month per room.

A Two-Year Problem The formula submitted to the Public Works Administration in Washington has been worked out over a period of two years, and construction is plotted as a work-in-progress for private or governmental interests. A section of land in a "blighted area" in the Borough of Queens, New York, was selected by the association for application of the theory. Similar sections in other cities could be used. The plan for the low-cost design for 6,000 persons covers more than 41 acres and includes all community facilities such as a church, school, playgrounds, stores, swimming pool, tennis courts, athletic association social club, and a moving picture theater. Arrangement is Triangular The series of apartment buildings are three and six stories with elevator facilities for higher floors. All are designed to give maximum sunlight and air. The keystone of the plan is a tower buildings as a gateway, and the apartments are arranged in triangular form with large spaces in the center and between the buildings. A higher-priced design has better appointments but otherwise is planned along the same lines. The essence of the formula is eradication of slums and potential sum areas through providing scientifically modern living quarters for the majority of people at a minimum rental. Plan Proposed For Aall "Virtually every large city is suffering from an economic and social loss from blighted areas and at the same time is struggling with the problem arising from the increasing demand for adequate housing at moderate rentals," said Lawrence M. Orton, general secretary of the association. "What we have tried to do through actual demonstration is show that waste lands may be converted into profitable areas and that comforts and conveniences that make suburban residence so attractive may be enjoyed in the urban centers." The association in its detailed plans gives a step-by-step procedure which can be followed by cities wishing to carry out the formula.

WALE A PIPER HED' LIKE TO BE

Edinburgh, Scotland (AP)—The Prince of Wales has a new diversion—learning to play the bagpipe. When the Earl of Elgin revealed here that the prince had bought a chanter the finger-pipe on which the melody is played, the prince admitted he had been learning "a few tunes." While the prince said he would never give a solo, he said he would be "very pleased" if ever he was able to play in a pipe band in Edinburgh.

BELGIANS FORTIFY EASTERN BORDERS DEPITE EXPENSE

Brussels (AP)—Despite economic difficulties, the Belgian government is seeking legislative approval for spending nearly $20,000,000 for fortification of the eastern frontier.

Already voted by the council of ministers, headed by the king, the money is sought for a formidable defense of the entire 80-mile border. Plans have been made to use the credit of speeding up completion of modern concrete fortifications along the whole line, for powerful artillery, and for anti-aircraft defense. The new defense line, stretching closely along the German frontier north of Liege, has been planned so that the whole Belgian army may be opposed to any aggressor from the east.

Meanwhile, work is proceeding on a new fort at Eben-Emael. It will defend the Lower Maas and the approaches to the new strategic waterway, the Albert canal.

G. O. P. Undecided About What To Do About N R A

By BRYON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

The biggest question now agitating Republican party leaders is whether definitely to cross the Rubicon and speak out plainly against the N R A. Some party chieftains have taken that step, and are breaking their long silence to say that N R A won't work, is unconstitutional and un-American, has done much harm, and should be abandoned.

Others are unwilling to take the step. A letter received by this writer from a former Republican Congressman (who hopes to come back) showed him in favor of "keeping still."

Then, he said, "if N R A fails we cannot be blamed, and the entire responsibility rests with the Democrats."

The Republican National Committee, in its broadside against Mr. Roosevelt, makes no frontal attack on N R A but does refer to "a desperate (administration) effort to prevent collapse of the N R A program."

The party's national managers may or may not make a decision before the Congressional campaigns open next year. There being no national convention in 1934, no national platform need be adopted, and each individual candidate may be left to choose his own course.

Looking to Montevideo

At the moment the greatest visible danger to success of the Pan-American Conference at Montevideo is that public opinion will be led to expect too much.

Secretary Hull, himself, heads the United States delegation. His presence will give the proceedings a prestige and a degree of publicity which would not have been likely had he remained at home.

Yet expectations do not point to dramatic, immediately tangible accomplishments.

The hope in Washington is that intangible gains will be made; that Mr. Hull's affable personality, against the background of President Roosevelt's policy of restraint toward Cuba, will further dissipate the traditional Latin-America distrust of the United States.

The results of that hardly will be apparent overnight. The secretary's pliancy has the long future in view.

A Fighting Roosevelt

That President Roosevelt is definitely taking the offensive in regard to his domestic and foreign policies in quite plain from recent developments.

There was a long period when he let the whole administration program carry itself along pretty much by its own momentum. That changed around November 1.

The dispatch of General Johnson Secretary Wallace into the restlessness, where they attacked the opposition directly, is only one evidence that a more aggressive attitude has taken hold of the administration.

The strong inclination even is apparent in the twelve-week conferences the President has with newspaper correspondents. Sometimes he launches into the attack before anyone has had an opportunity to ask a question.

Mr. Roosevelt shows no signs that he himself is losing confidence. He does show signs that he senses a fight—in spite of General Johnson's report that the opposition doesn't amount to much—and is eager to carry the battle to the enemy.

No Rift Seen in Leave Of Sec. Woodin

By BRYON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Those who look for hidden meanings behind every important Washington development found plenty to muse re-organization, but little of a tangible nature to indicate that significant changes of policy were involved.

Secretary Woodin not only is manifestly ill, but he has been absent from the Treasury so much that he has had little to say about departmentally business. His departure on leave can make little real difference.

Under-Secretary Acheson had been handling only some features of Treasury administration, including the now-concluded war debt discussions. The gold buying policy has been largely in the hands of others, including, prominently, Henry Morgenthau, Jr., who succeeds Acheson as Under-Secretary.

It would not appear from this that the change of names on the Treasury roster would be likely to do much except to further confirm the administration policy of a managed currency, already firmly established before the change was made.

No Hesitancy Here

The quick response to the White House invitation for a conference of governors and mayors gives a clue to the troubles local executives are having.

FORBIDDEN VALLEY

By William Byron Mowery

SYNOPSIS: By clever means, Curt Teaspoon and Paul St. Clair have discovered the "contact man" of the Russian spy, Igor Karakhan, who they are trailing into the Canadian Northwest. Curt has met at Russian Lake some Nickola, who with her brother Ralph plans to enter the territory of the Kioshees Indians. Curt also has rescued Sonya from a drunken half-breed, and now Old John, a trapper, declares her expedition is highly dangerous. John tells Curt of the Kioshees.

Chapter 16

'TEESTE LENOIR

THE Kioshees, John went on, were hunters, living entirely by the chase. They had split into two bands, a northern one, under the leadership of Siam-Kiale or the Black Grizzly, and a southern band that lived around the forks of the Lilluar. Sometimes in summer they made little rafts of pine boughs, but most of the time they were cave-dwellers; the warm dry caves of that region were much better abodes than any tepee.

There used to be about two hundred of them, he said, but five years ago a wandering trapper from Fort Nelson had brought influenza, and it had riddled both bands, and now they numbered only a hundred.

They had found the man wandering along a river, starved and desperate; they had taken him in, cared for him till he recovered, and the sickness had spread like a blight among them. They had set fire to a whole mountain range to drive the white disease-devils out of their territory.

As he handed back the weapon of those mountain nomads, he made up his mind that he was going to do something about Ralph and Sonya's trip. They didn't know how to take care of themselves in the wilderness, especially in so appalling a country, and they knew nothing at all about handling Indians. They had to be shielded somehow, and the job was up to him.

Outside, the rain was falling off; the first gray light was reaching up into the eastern sky.

"How about running your net, John?" Curt suggested. "I'll go along."

Old Paxton pulled on his shoes and jacket. They went outside, launched a canoe, and paddled off to the islands.

Locating the anchored chunk that marked the net, they skinned over, lifted one end of the seine, and began working down along it, extricating the fish as they went and dropping the net back into the water.

"SONYA mentioned to me 'bout you 'avin' that run-in with the 'breed last evenin'," old John remarked, tossing a flopping trout into the canoe. "I know you c'n take care of yourself, but just the same you be leery of that feller while you're here at Russian Lake."

"Why so?"

"He's a bad 'un. 'Teeste is?"

"Curt started a little. 'Teeste—' 'Teeste who?'"

"His name's Teeste LeNoir."

Out of long experience with crashing surprises, Curt never batted an eye. But inwardly he was dumfounded. Heaven above, he'd whipped Karakhan's contact man! He'd made a bitter enemy of the one person at Russian Lake with whom he wanted to be friends!

"Yes, he's a bad 'un," Paxton repeated, all unaware of the bomb he had exploded with Curt. "He ain't above stickin' a knife into a man."

The government picture is changing so rapidly that department estimates of next year's expenditures are next to impossible to draft.

The delay in these estimates has put the House appropriations chiefs behind schedule in preliminary work on the big supply bills. The deficit uncertainty likewise has delayed tax program, because officials didn't know how much revenue they would need.

Postmaster-General Farley's vacation aboard postpones by several weeks more any showdown on the patronage which many Democratic Congressmen think is long in arrears.

pecially when he's been henthin' this bush whisky."

Curt seized his chance to get a line on LeNoir. "Who is he, John? Just a general loafer?"

"No, he's a trapper. Guides some, too, when any big-game hunter happens to git in this fer. He comes from the God's Lake country in Manitoba 'bout eight year ago. I heard rumor that he done somethin' over there—slipped a man some pizen, I heard—an' had to put his foot in front of his nose an' git."

Curt wondered how Igor Karakhan, the metropolitan criminal, had ever got in touch with this fugitive of the Strong-Woods. Probably the Cossack had once flunged in this country, and LeNoir had been his guide. The "breed could be watched, shad-owed; and through him they could nail Karakhan.

"Where does LeNoir trap, John? 'round here close, I suppose."

"No, way up the Lilluar. Up high as the forks."

"In Kioshees territory? How does happen they allow him in there?"

"They ain't so touchy aginst 'breeds as aginst whites. 'Sides, he's got some stand-in with Siam-Kiale, the sub-chief. I never heard jist what."

Curt grimaced. More bad news. Karakhan must be living up north in those forbidden mountains, tolerated there because of the 'breed's influence over the Kioshees. Not so good.

HE and Paxton paddled across to the post with their catch. The three-o'clock sun, just inching above the northeast ranges, glistened against the many windows of the mission, and its life-giving warmth felt good after the chilly night. After they tossed fish to the dogs, Curt selected half a dozen of the smaller trout, cleaned them at the water edge, and set about getting breakfast.

"Did you ever do any prospecting up the Lilluar, John?" he asked, as he put the trout into the sizzling pan.

"Not to speak of. You ain't figurin' on prospecting up that way?"

"Well, up as far as the pass. You say there's no danger that far. Could you make me a map of the territory? There aren't any government charts."

"I might mebbe, I ain't no hand at pencil work, but I know the country from A to Z."

While Curt finished breakfast, Paxton went to work with a paper sack and pencil stub and produced a chart. It was a rough thing but accurate and dependable.

"Here's the pass," he explained to Curt. "Here's the Lilluar Forks an' above. This mountain lake over here, that's where I trap."

"Where does LeNoir live?"

"On this main fork, 'bout a mile up from the prong."

Curt folded the paper and buttoned it carefully in his shirt pocket. Good work, for half an hour's talk!

That one little dot, showing him LeNoir's cabin, would save weeks of searching. He would make copies of that chart; one for himself and Paul; one for Smash, who was standing by at Tellect with the plane, and one to send to A-K, to let Marlin know what had happened to them if they never came out of the Lilluars.

It appears now that the demand for more and bigger appointment will come to its climax after Congress convenes early in January. If that climax lives up to the advance notices, it will be a major capitol hill attraction.

The politicians were only guessing when they read all sorts of meanings into Al Smith's visit to the White House.

Many people forget that public characters are human being after all, and are expected to observe the ordinary courtesies. Smith came to Washington on other business, and it would have been contrary to custom had he failed to drop in at the executive offices,

SYNOPSIS: At Russian Lake in the Canadian Northwest where he is searching for Igor Karakhan international crook Curt Teaspoon meets and saves from a drunken half-breed a Russian girl known as Sonya. She is determined to press on into the heart of the dangerous Kioshees Indians against Curt's advice. Curt is charged to find that his own energy, the half-breed in the night is Karakhan's contact man. He obtains a map of the Lilluar territory from an old trapper, however, and determines to protect Sonya as best he can.

Chapter 17

OUT OF THE FOG

TWO mornings later, at her camp forty miles up river Sonya awoke at daybreak, parted the tent flap and looked out. Ralph and the two guides were still rolled up in their sleeping bags.

Through the gray smoke mist rising from the old waters of the Lilluar, pairs of nesting teal and ducks zipped overhead, their swift wings whistling long after the birds were swallowed up in the mist. Overhead in the tall pines little vireos and flame-colored robbers, billing through the branches and darting out into the air, were already busy with the fledgling problem.

Stepping down to the water edge, she propped her armor against a stone, bathed her face and hands, and braided her hair. Back at the campfire, she raked some coals out of the ashes, got a fire going, and cooled bacon, trout, scones and coffee. Ralph and the two guides still showed no signs of waking, so she took a small bucket and started up a mountain torrent to a thicket of red raspberries.

Not long after she reached the patch, she happened to glance back at camp and was startled to see a canoe nosing out of the river fog, a canoe with two men in it. They gilded ashore, beached the craft and waded up to her fire, with their rifles in the crook of their arms. And then she recognized them as Curt Kalston and his young partner.

They were a welcome surprise, out of the fog. For several reasons she was never gladder to see people than those two. But what were they doing up the Lilluar? They hadn't mentioned that they intended to come north from Russian Lake.

Through a screen of boughs she watched them a minute. They did not wake Ralph or the guides. Curt pointed at her breakfast keeping warm in the ashes, and looked around for her, evidently knowing she was up.

She stepped out to the timber edge, Curt saw her there and came up along the torrent.

"You're awake early," he greeted with his friendly smile.

He was casual enough, as though just meeting some chance acquaintance, but Sonya saw the man's tribute to her in his eyes and noticed how his glance clung to her face and hair. She felt sure he had not come upon her camp by accident but with some definite purpose.

"I couldn't sleep with a morning like this just outside the tent," she answered.

"Your breakfast looked so good that Paul and I almost grabbed it and broke for the woods."

"You will stay and have breakfast with us, won't you?"

"If you'll let me give you a hand with that berry-picking."

"All right."

He took up her bucket, and they went back along the torrent to the patch.

"I didn't know Paul and you were intending to come up this way," she remarked, bending down a tall briar.

He answered her unspoken question. "We're prospecting up the Lilluar."

SONYA did not know whether to believe him or not. Ever since meeting him she had been trying to figure him out. He certainly didn't appear to be a prospector. He was miles above the type.

Except for her father, she had never met a man whose quiet efficient power impressed her as much as his. She hated to think that he was just a drifter, leading a carefree existence. That was all right for the men at Russian Lake, but he had better stuff to him.

"Paul and I are going up as far as the pass," he volunteered presently. And then he came out with the purpose of his visit. "If there's no objection on the east side of the fence, our parties could sort of be neighbors. In this country people usually throw in together that way."

Karakhan, tomorrow, senses a serious danger.
