The Great Plan

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I thought," said Willy Nilly, "that instead of writing letters to Santa Claus this year we would go to see him."

"Cock-a-doodle-do," crowed Top Notch, the Rooster. "I wouldn't think he would let us in."

Santa will want to give me fine presents when he sees what a handsome letter I am."

"Don't be vain, Top Notch," quacked Mrs. Quacko Duck. "But no one else noticed Top Notch's remark, and Mrs. Quacko soon forgot it, for all they could think of was that they might be going to see Santa Claus."

"Caw, caw," said Christopher Columbus Crow, "that will be the greatest treat in the world!"

"Bow-wow-wow," barked Rip the Dog. "I'll be perfectly happy if only Santa strokes me, and tells me I'm a good dog."

"Peep, peep, cheep, cheep," said the little Chickens, "we're going to see Santa Claus, chick, chick, hee-hee!"

"Quack, quack," quacked all the Ducks, "we're going to see Santa Claus, quack, quack, hooray!"

And all the animals crowded and quacked and barked with delight.

"How are we going?" Top Notch asked.

"I have this plan," said Willy Nilly, "and you must all go to bed very early this evening so I can work it out." The little man was always planning for his animal friends.

"You don't think there's really any doubt that we'll go, do you?" asked Christopher.

It was certainly hard to go to bed without knowing for certain.

Christina, the Christmas Doll

"Woof!" said the little white wool dog.

CONFESSION: While Santa is away on Christmas Eve, Mrs. Santa has a rag doll which she names Christina. The Queen of Fairies decrees that the doll will be loved by everyone.

Chapter 2

CHRISTINA'S PLAYMATE

Santa was so surprised that year when he came home to Toyland after putting all our gifts where we stored them.

He bustled in, pulling off his red mitts and his big red coat. There was his favorite breakfast, the one he always has when he returns from his long Christmas trip.

There was a whole plate of steaming apple pancakes. And Santa loves those. There was a big china pot of hot chocolate. And Santa loves that. But right next to the pot was the funniest little doll. You and I know who she was.

"Why, Mrs. Santa, where did you get this doll?" Santa asked, so amazed, "I never saw one like her."

"Of course not," chuckled Mrs. Santa. "She's all made of rags and I made her."

"H-m-m-m," said Santa, taking the doll in his hands. Then he laughed and hugged the doll.

"Look, I have something for her," he said. He reached deep down in his pocket and pulled out the saddest little white wool dog you ever saw. He was so dirty. One black bead eye was broken. Only one golden bell was left on his collar and the wool was coming out of one leg.

"Woof," said the dog weakly, but he couldn't wag his tail because that was torn.

"I never!" said Mrs. Santa.

"Here's a new collar of golden bells for the dog," she said. "When ever he needs me he can just shake his head. I'll hear the bells and come." That was a happy day in Toyland.

De-Greasing Dishes

If dishwashing is hard because of greasy dishes, a few drops of ammonia in the water will lighten labor, save time and make the plates gleam. But use rubber gloves for this kind of dish-washing, as ammonia is hard on the skin—drying it relentlessly.

THESE TIPS ON CARVING MAY SAVE TABLE TEMPER

Slice meat against the grain when carving a roast. When cutting a steak cut across the entire slice and then divide into portions. Cut fish in crosswise fashion and then divide into pieces as with the steak. Carve lamb between the ribs. For chicken or turkey carve both legs, then the wings, then slice the breast, and then divide the legs at the joints.

Cutting Out Cookies

If cookies are to be cut out they can be handled more easily if the dough is chilled several hours before it is rolled out. As little flour as possible should be paced on the board, since extra flour and much handling produces tough cookies. Roll out and cut a few cookies at a time.

To Make Windows Glisten

To give windows a good polish after washing, rinse chamois in a small amount of rubbing alcohol—either full strength or two parts of the alcohol to one of water. This makes them gleam and the outside world seems brighter.

Fried Oranges—Try Them

Peel oranges an separate into small pieces and remove seed. Dip into fritter batter and fry in plenty of fat. Remove and sprinkle with powdered sugar. Serve very hot with an orange sauce. This makes a nice dish for the supper party.

Variety For The Omelet

To give a little change to omelets sprinkle 1-2 cup of grated cheese, crisp crumbled bacon or 1-3 cup of chopped cooked meat over the omelet before it is "folded" over. Four tablespoons of jelly spread on the omelet either before or after it has been "folded" also gives a good flavor.

FEAR CWA WILL HURT FARMING OPERATIONS

Kinston, N. C., Dec. 12.—The danger of tenants leaving farms in this section to seek CWA employment in the towns is confronting re-employment committees. The Lenoir County committee has appealed to landowners to assist it in keeping tenants with a regular living on the farms. The danger is two-fold, Ernest V.

Webb, chairman of the committee, stated today. Not only will unemployed persons be deprived of work if too many tenants shift to CWA employment, but farmers will be deprived of needed labor when 1934 cropping operations are started.

Letter To Santa

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Willy Nilly had just finished his letter to Santa Claus, and had placed it down near the fireplace. This was what he had written:

"Dear Santa Claus: I am Willy Nilly, the little gnome-like man who lives with a number of animal friends in Puddle Muddle.

"I thought perhaps you might need some help and that my animals and I could come to visit you. I do hope we wouldn't be in the way.

"Maybe you could make some animals to look like mine and they'd help you by sitting for you so you'd see exactly how they look.

"I have an automobile Two-Ways but I am afraid if I drove it very far north the snow would be too deep. I could go some distance in it, though, and meet you.

"I know you are very, very busy, but on your way home from gathering the children's letters could you stop and pick us up at the end of that town that is exactly 30 miles north of Puddle Muddle?

"I know you have a big sleigh because you carry so many presents in it on Christmas Eve.

"Will you answer this and leave your letter by the fireplace so I may have it soon?

"I do hope, Santa Claus, I am not asking too much, but we'll try to help you all we can.

"Your affectionate friend,

"Willy Nilly."

Willy Nilly could hardly sleep, so excited was he at the thought of visiting Santa Claus. Oh, he did hope Santa's answer would be "Yes."

HAULER OF WHISKEY IS DECLARED THE KEY MAN

Winston-Salem, N. C., Dec. 12.—(AP)—Judge T. W. Watson today sentenced Early Creed to a year and day on the county farm on conviction of transporting liquor, saying North Carolinians had voted dry and that he believed the hauler of liquor is the key man to strike in stamping out the liquor traffic.

Creed appealed to the Superior Court and his bond was set at $500. It was the third time up for transporting and the court took this into consideration, it was said, in imposing his sentence.

ABSOLVED OF GUILT IN BROTHER'S DEATH

Goldboro, N. C., Dec. 12.—George Witherington, Goldboro filling station operator, was found not guilty in connection with the death of his brother, Earl, by a jury in Wayne Superior Court at 8 o'clock Saturday night. The jury had deliberated since 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Witherington said he shot his brother in self-defense when the latter was advancing upon him with a knife at George's filling station last January. The State had asked for a verdict of second degree murder or manslaughter. Attorney N. W. Outlaw was counsel for the defense.

MAKE YOUR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING EASIER

The best way to take the drudgery out of your Christmas shopping is to read the ads in this paper from day to day and choose your gifts
from the many being offered by the local merchants.
Make the list of articles you desire and the name of the store from which it can be secured. Then at your first opportunity visit the stores
and purchase these articles
while stocks are complete.
In doing your Christmas shopping in this manner you will find it a great pleasure less all the anxiety and disappointment of waiting until the last minute and then hunting through pulled over stock to find something appropriate to give. Around the family fireside with your local newspaper in your hand is the most satisfactory

way to decide upon and plan
your Christmas shopping.

Others are finding this
the easiest and most satisfactory way. If you are not already using this method
we recommend it to you.

NO GRACE FOR MOTORISTS

There will be no days of grace for motorists who have not purchased their 1934 automobile tags after January 1, according to information from Raleigh,
which means that motorists must get busy now or be without the use of their cars
after January 1. While already a number of new tags
have been sold the present rate of daily sales will find a small percentage of car owners with new licenses by the first of the year unless they show considerably
more action from now on.
Don't put this matter off until the last minute.

POLITICS

By BYRON PRICE

Although the money question and NRA stand at the center of current controversy about the Roosevelt recovery policies, no thorough understanding of the case is possible without going deeply under the surface of the whole administration program.

The interesting question is exactly when and how the germ of the present difficulties developed;
when that deviation began which has turned an era of almost unanimous administration support into a season of bitter dispute.

It is inescapable that a search for the cause of the controversy began with a reminder of Mr. Roosevelt's original conception of the process of recovery. Repeatedly he indicated in the beginning that he saw agriculture as the basic industry, and the farm as the place where prosperity must begin its rehabilitation.
He said at Topeka, during the campaign:

"If we would get to the root of the difficulty, we will find it in the present lack of equality for agriculture. Farming has not had an even break in our economic system."

What has happened—and what has not happened—to restore agriculture prosperity since these words were uttered, is very much in the mind of Washington.

Prosperity—On Paper

What Mr. Roosevelt said about
"the root of the difficulty" greatly impressed many people having no direct interest in agriculture.

In the presence of this writer, one of the outstanding industrial leaders of the country—an eastern banker—
sat down and figured out on paper that if the purchasing power of the farmer could be restored, the depression would be over.

When the special session of congress convened, the President sent in his farm bill immediately behind the purely emergency bank and government economy bills. A farm plan many distrusted—but almost everyone was willing to try—was enacted speedily.

That plan did some good in some sections, but the White House, itself, is authority for the statement that it did not lift farm income at a satisfactory pace.

Stern Alarms

It was from the farm sections that the first alarms against success of the NRA reached Washington. Farmers protested the codes had raised the price of what they had to buy, while the price of what they sold did not increase commensurately. Open NRA opposition
there broke the ice of open opposition elsewhere.

It was in the farm belt that the demand for currency adjustment reached a stage, in late fall, which caused concern in the capital. Few doubt that gold-buying was inaugurated as a reply to western unrest.
And gold buying, in turn, has stirred by far the most outspoken protest yet heard against Mr. Roosevelt and his policies.

A Job—Admittedly

In all fairness, everyone recognizes that Secretary Wallace and his colleagues have been beset by many obstacles, including a widespread lack of cooperation among the farmers, themselves. Many believe Washington was attempting the impossible.

The certain thing is that congress
again will hear much next session
about "the root of the difficulty," and may, conceivably try to go back to the beginning, and start the process of recovery over again.

Greenville Tobacco Market Report

A Merry Christmas To Our Patrons and Friends

This joint market report has been sent you during the past few months through the courtesy of all the tobacco warehousemen of Greenville.

We desire to express our gratitude for the patronage given us by everyone this season, enabling us, not only to maintain our leadership as the largest tobacco market in the flue cured belt, but through the strength of our buying forces, our market has excelled in prices paid for tobacco.

Let us be hopeful for another year, but not over optimistic. We will never be able to produce a crop as cheaply as in 1933. Foreign exchange, now favorable, may be and no doubt will be, less favorable when 1934 crop is marketed. Let us urge prompt signing of the government contract for acreage control. If the crop next year is reduced 30 per cent, it will bring much more money than a 100 per cent crop.

We wish all of our patrons and friends a Merry Christmas. Eastern Carolina today is the brightest spot on the map of the United States. But we must not forget our section during the past few years has been heavily burdened. Our women and children have been carrying a large part of this burden, and they should be made happy this Christmas. Then, too, there are those friends and neighbors less fortunate who are still carrying a heavy load, and they should be remembered. We wish everyone a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Market closes after sales Friday December 15---reopens Tuesday January 2, 1934. It will pay you to sell the remainder of your crop with us.

Sell Tobacco In Greenville—Best Market In the State

FORBIDDEN VALLEY

By William Byron Mowery

SYNOPSIS: Curt Tennyson and Paul St. Clair, in Northwestern Canada on the trail of Igor Karakhan, international crook, join forces with Ralph and Sonya Nichols. They are attacked by the dangerous Klondike Indians, rescue an Indian left behind by his retreating band, and learn that there will not be a return attack for some days. Curt suddenly decides to fly to Vancouver to see what he can learn about Sonya's mysterious situation. Exhausted, he sleeps while Smash, Desplantes pilots the plane south.

Chapter 26

TANGLED THREADS

IN the pier office Curt called the Marlin home, talked briefly with A-K, promised him a report later that evening, and sent Smash out there.

At Mounted headquarters he found Holden and Inspector Baldwin in the latter's private office, polishing their plans for a narcotic raid that night. When he knocked and went in, Baldwin looked around and saw him.

"Hello, Curt, old man!" He got up, shook hands warmly. "Holden and I have been wondering how you were making out. But I say, where's our friend Karakhan? We fancied that when you showed up you'd have him in tow." He made Curt take his swivel chair and shoved him the cigarettes.

Curt was surprised at his friendliness, so different from his resentment two weeks ago. Something had brought about a complete change of heart.

He took a cigarette and lit it from Baldwin's match. "Oh, I'm letting Karakhan run loose a little longer while I follow up a side lead, Arn. If you're not too busy I'd appreciate some help."

"Which you'll get, Holden, take over this top lead."

Holden nodded and went out to the squad room. Across the desk Curt sketched his work at Tellacet, at Russian Lake, and his trip up the Lilluar.

"Why I came down here to Vancouver, Arn," he explained, "I've got to get complete data on Ralph Nichols and Sonya, and I'd like for you to help me. We won't have much trouble with Nichols. He's from Vancouver; I saw the labels on his clothes and outfit. Here's a roll of films; you'll find two snaps of him on it—the man with the cap. When we place Nichols, we'll go after his acquaintances and get everything we can."

Baldwin scratched notes on a pad. Curt went on:

"We've got some trouble with Sonya. I don't know her last name or where she's from; but I've got four snaps of her in that roll, and I think that when we place Nichols it'll be easy to get a lead on her. They're close friends and should have mutual acquaintances."

"Right," Baldwin agreed. He pressed a button and a Mounted constable came in. "Oils, take this roll of films and have prints in half an hour, then fuzzle this." He turned to Curt. "While I'm working on Nichols, you can be reporting to A-K. My car's outside. Take it."

"Thanks, Arn. I'll go now."

Baldwin walked out to the curb with him. "Old man," as he gave Curt the keys, "I read that letter you wrote A-K from Tellacet."

"He showed it to you?"

"Yes, I say, it was damned generous of you to tell him that I helped pick up Karakhan's trail. I didn't have a blighted thing to do with it, except to sit back and feel cocksure you'd fail. I acted small then, and I've been wanting to say so."

CURT was glad he had put that sentence into his report. A few generous words, costing nothing, had wiped out hard feelings and made Baldwin his old friend again.

"By the way," Baldwin remarked offhand, "Helen Mathleson has mentioned you several times. If you get a chance, call her up and say hello, won't you? You never told me—uh, what you thought of her."

"She took me a real surprise, Arn. I thought she was as likable and sweet a girl as I'd met in a long time."

"I'm glad to hear you say that. Just because she—uh, associated with Karakhan, most people think she's of a sort with him. I don't understand what the women like in the fellow but he's certainly got a way with them. She's pulling out of it."

"I'm glad she's forgetting. You've seen her since I was here?"

"We—uh, take an evening drive now and then. Yes, she's forgetting; but what I'd like, Curt, is for her to have the whole truth about him. She knows about his swindle game here in Vancouver; and excuses it, in a way; but she's never heard a whisper about Buenos Aires and those other incidents. She wouldn't excuse those chapters."

"You know as much as I do; why don't you tell her?"

"I'll try to do that, Arn. I'll try to do that, Arn."

Natural Rivalry

The remarkable drawing power of the Cadets and the Fighting Irish, even in an off-year for Notre Dame, is one of the reasons why this inter-sectional classic will be on the schedule for some time to come.

Army-Notre Dame games for 1934 and 1935 already have been about continuation of the series for an indefinite period, inasmuch as the officials of both schools regard the contest as a natural rivalry.

If there have been any differences of opinion, the have never been serious enough to warrant more than a friendly argument.

Football's Forgotten

While the all-star debate is still on, here's our suggestion for an eleven picked more or less from the "forgotten men" of the college football fields—those lads who toil industriously on the small or off-the-beaten-track college and get scant recognition for it:

Ends—Markel, Carthage (Mo.) and Dittmore, Tennessee Wesleyan; tackles, Meyers, North Dakota State; and Swan, Wake Forest (N. C.); guards, Pike, Davis and Elkins and Volok, Tulsa (Okla.); center, Sullivan, Loyola (La.); backs, Stansberry, Montana; Knapper, Ottawa (Kan.); Kent, Murray (Ky.); and Young, Bluefield (W. Va.).

These names may not mean so much now, while all the hullabaloo for the big-time A-I-Americas is on,

but it is just possible a few of these lads will be tossing better advertised opponents for losses on the professional gridirons a year or two hence.

BLUE RIDGE RAMBLERS ADDED

FEATURE AT STATE THURSDAY

A distinct novelty in the way of a naded attraction is promised the patrons of the State Theatre Thursday. This is the appearance of the famous Blue Ridge Ramblers on the stage, matinee and night.

Dramatizing the lives and customs of the primitive mountain folk of the Blue Ridge has long been a favorite subject of American novelists, but rarely is the public given an opportunity to see them in person and observe their unique customs at close range.

The Blue Ridge Ramblers consist of young men and girls, who have won wide recognition by reason of their programs broadcasted from important stations of all parts of the country, especially in the rendition of old mountaineer melodies which have never been written in manuscript, but handed down from generation to generation. This part of their program should be of special interest to these appreciating new and unusual entertainment.

Ex-Dentist Clinches Ball To Keep His Grip

Dayton, O.—(AP)—A once bright rubber ball now provides Postmaster L. C. Weimer with the exercise he used to get yanking teeth.

A dentist for nineteen years before he was named postmaster, Weimer developed a forceful grip. Official harrasnings in his government job didn't provide enough exercise.

Hence the ball, made of sponge rubber. Weimer squeezes it in his clenched hands throughout the day. That is has allowed him to retain a strong grip was evidenced recently.

A local dentist had a patient with a tooth that wouldn't come out. He sent a rush call for the postmaster, and the tooth gave up the fight.
