SILVER COINAGE ORDERED BY PRES. ROOSEVELT

Action Taken To Expand Monetary Plan And Lift The Price Of Commodities

PRICE BOOST FOR SILVER IS EXPECTED

Silver Produced Domestically From Now Until December 31, 1937 Will be Accepted by the Mint; Half to be Returned to Producers In Dollars and Other Half Held in Reserve By the Government

Washington, D. C., Dec. 22.—(AP)—Silver coinage today was commanded by President Roosevelt in expansion of his monetary plan for lifting commodity prices.

By proclamation he opened the Federal mint to a newly-mined silver program timed to push metal prices around 43 to 64 1-2 cents and ounce, and millions to the nation's mining wealth and spur export to silver using countries.

Silver produced domestically from now until December 31, 1937, will be accepted by the mint, half will be coined and returned in dollars to the producers and a half surrendered to the government to be held in reserve.

Mr. Roosevelt's proclamation formally ratified the London silver agreement by which it was understood that the United States would absorb annually at least 24,241,410 ounces of silver, approximately the 1932 output.

Simultaneously with the proclamation of silver coinage, the administration evidenced anew its intention to continue gold buying. The Reconstruction Corporation increased the fund set aside for such purchases from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000, and disclosed that 507,485 ounces had been acquired for $16,976,000. Thus the weight of both gold and silver will go on the Roosevelt lever under commodity prices.

'Fag' Stub Causes Slight Fire Today

A lighted cigarette stub tossed carelessly on the floor today caused slight damage to a room on the second floor of the Vines House.

A painter tossed the cigarette on the floor as he left the room to go into the basement to mix some paint. In a few minutes smoke was seen issuing from open windows and the fire alarm was sounded.

George Gorham, colored cook, rushed upstairs from the kitchen with a dishpan full of water and extinguished the blaze before the arrival of the firement.

This was the second time that Gorham had used his dishpan to put out a fire in the Vines House. Several years ago he saved the building from probably serious damage by timely use of the kitchen utensil. The loss today was estimated at about $50 which was covered by insurance.

Silver Buying Boosts Foreign Exchange Values

New York, Dec. 22.—(AP)—The first market reaction today to President Roosevelt's silver purchase and coinage plan was a moderate advance in foreign exchange.

Sterling opened 1 5-8 cents higher at $5.78 and the French franc at $6.08 1-4, up .01 1-4 cent.

PROBE DEATH OF PLANTER IN GUILFORD

Coroner Plans Investigation of Burning to Death of Man in His Home

High Point, N. C., Dec. 22.—(AP)—An investigation into the circumstances surrounding the burning to death in his home on the eve of his wedding of Lee Harvel, 65, well-known farmer who lives along on Highway 10, east of this city, will be undertaken today by Dr. W. W. Horvey, Guilford County coroner.

The body was removed from the ashes of the home early today after two truck drivers had made an unsuccessful attempt to rescue the man who they heard screaming in the midst of the flames. One of the drivers who overcame in the effort and was dragged from the burning house by his partner. The house burned to the ground, and it was hours afterwards before ambulance attendants were able to reach the charred remains.

Harvel's automobile had been backed into his garage and was headed toward the highway. In it were his best suit of clothes, bed clothing, five pillows and two pairs of shoes. It was learned he was to have gone to Salisbury early today to be married, but the name of the prospective bride was not known to the friends who furnished information of the wedding plan. Mr. Harvel's first wife died two years ago, and since that time he had lived alone. He is survived by seven daughters and three sons.

APPROVE NEW PUBLIC WORKS IN THIS COUNTY

Three Drainage Projects Costing $32,000 Given Okay by Th C. W. A.

Three new Civil Works Administration projects carrying an appropriation of $32,000 have just been approved for Pitt County. It was announced today from the office of K. T. Futrell, CWA Administrator of this county.

The largest of the projects calls for the draining of a canal in the Clay Root section at a cost of $18,000. The canal will be recleaned, its bank cleared of rubbish and undergrowth and the entire stream put in excellent condition with a view to reducing mosquito emergence.

The second project provides for an expenditure of $11,000 in the drainage of Grindie Creek. This calls for cleaning the canal and removal of undergrowth along its banks.

The third project calls for the draining of Moyer's mill run several miles north of Greenville in an effort to improve health conditions and provide better drainage for farms of the community.

Mr. Futrell said additional men were being put to work every day now, and that the total quota of slightly over a thousand would be exhausted by the first of the year. He stated that 900 men would receive checks tomorrow afternoon. The total pay-roll was expected to be approximately $11,000.

A total of sixty-one projects have been approved for the entire county and work is already under way on the majority of them. There are enough projects already approved to absorb the entire quota of workmen. Mr. Futrell said, and this is being done as rapidly as possible.

ROBBER BAND JAILED HERE

Nine Negroes, Charged With Robbing Farmville Stores, Await Court Action

A band of store robbers rounded up in Farmville two days ago was being held in the county jail here today awaiting action of the courts.

Nine negroes, eight of them ranging from time to eleven years of age, are awaiting disposition by juvenile court, and the other, Herbert Midgett, described by officers at the ring-leader, was awaiting Superior Court action.

Those to receive attention of juvenile court authorities are: John Pitt, John Jones, Robert Joyner, Bruce Newton, Herbert Ward, Lyman Progen, Oscar Joyner, and James Dupree. The band is charged with robbing five or six stores of a considerable amount of merchandise. They had a unique way of gaining entrance to the building, officers said.

Midgett, it was stated, would let the youths down through skylights with a rope and then draw them back up with their loot in the same manner.

The band caused an epidemic of robberies which gave Farmville police no little trouble until they got on the right track, and all nine members were rounded up in short order.

It is the largest arrest of thieves made in this immediate section in some time, and will cause Farmville merchants to sleep easier with the robbery epidemic removed. Judge Frank Harrington of Juvenile Court said he was making arrangements to send the youths to places of correction, and expected to have them all placed by the end of the week.

The city tax on real estate in Amarillo, Texas, was reduced 22 per cent this year.

Bandits Rob Bank. Baltimore, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Four middle aged men, each carrying heavy revolvers, this morning held up the West Baltimore branch of the Calvert Bank and got away with what police described all the money in sight—about $14,100.

One shot was fired at the ceiling as the men entered the bank. "Stick 'em up, I am not kidding," the shooter announced. "Stand back against the wall. Nobody is going to get hurt," said another of the bandits to Charles Fowler, the lone customer in the bank, and a boy. They obliged.

The bank manager and two clerks were ordered to raise their hands (Continued on Page Four)

CUPID RUSHES WORK IN PITT

Were Cupid a broker instead of a love pirate he would be called the "baby plunger," because he has certainly done some reckless plunging in Pitt county the last two months, and especially at this time with the spirit of Christmas adding impetus to ordinary life.

Records in the office of the register of deeds this morning showed that interest in marriage is just as strong in Pitt county now as it was in October when 134 persons, setting an all time record, applied for licenses to marry.

Already this month 102 couples have obtained licenses to wed at the local office, and indications were that the number would be swelled to the greatest figure in the history of the county, if the past may be considered as an index to the future. Today and tomorrow were expected to see two score more persons added to the list of marriages, and should this be true an all time record for December will be established.

Ten persons, nine of them white, received licenses to marry yesterday, and an even dozen the day before. Usually colored people predominate the applicants, but not so the last few days for white people are falling before Cupid's love darts in a way that presages great things for the future, in the opinion of Register of Deeds J. C. Gaskins.

Those applying for licenses to wed yesterday were:

- W. W. Fornes to Miss Mary Nelson, Greenville.
- Frank Dall to Miss Nancy Walton, both of Greene county.
- Horace Corbett to Miss Susie May Harris, both of Falkland.
- Lester Clark to Miss Lucy Moore, Bevoir.
- Lester Barrow of Vanceboro to Miss Ada Worthington, Avden.
- David Minton to Miss Marguerite Gray, both of Carolina township.
- Walker Cannon, Wirtsville, to Miss Bessie Clark Ayden.
- W. S. Suckel to Miss Donnie Hurl, Greenville.
- Forest Sawyer to Miss Annie Wilson, both of Swift Creek.
- Colored
- Henry Phillips to Mattie Moore, both of Greenville.

GAS STATION OWNER SHOT AND ROBBED

Officers Seek Three Negroes For Staging Holdup in Sampson County

Dunn, N. C., Dec. 22.—(AP)—Officers throughout this portion of the State were keeping a lookout today for three negroes who late last night shot and probably fatally wounded Howard Jernigan after robbing his filling station.

The negroes drove up to the station across the Sampson County line and had their car filled with gas. One of the negroes then whipped out his gun and shot Jernigan, two negro attendants at the station said.

Jernigan's body was thrown into a ditch back of the station and then the bandits rifled the cash register of an undetermined sum.

Officers said they were trying to determine if the bandits were three of the four prisoners who escaped from the county jail at Wilson yesterday after overpowering the jailer and taking his gun.

LEAF SIGNUP NEARS CLOSE

Two Thousand Contracts Expected to be In Farm Office by Nightfall Today

A hundred per cent sign-up of tobacco growers in this county was predicted today by E. F. Arnold, director of the county farm department, on the basis of the contracts now in his office.

He said 1,800 contracts had been filed up to this morning with indications that the total by nightfall would be around 2,000.

It is estimated there are around 2,500 contracts to be signed in all. Mr. Arnold said the remaining 500 yet to report consisted of non-resident landowners.

A final drive for contracts will be made after the Christmas holidays, Mr. Arnold said, and growers who have not signed were urged to get busy and do so at once.

Committeemen who have been assisting growers in each township were expected to cease activities for the holidays this afternoon, but they will be back on the job after Christmas ready for the final round-up.

The farm office today was mailing out application blanks for price-equalizing payments for flue-cured tobacco. Growers were asked to carry the blanks to committeemen, obtain certified copies of sales bills from warehouses and then carry the contracts to the farm office for final approval.

The instructions sent out to growers today follow:

- "Enclosed is application blank for price-equalizing payment for flue-cured tobacco:
- (1) You are to fill in blank on back of this application, designating name and address of trustee who is to receive check.
- (2) Have each tenant who grew tobacco on your farm sign on blank spaces for this purpose on back of application either in ink or indelible pencil. In case there are not enough blank spaces for all of your tenants, you can secure an additional blank from your committeemen for this purpose.
- (3) Have only one disinterested party sign as witness for all tenants.
- (4) When this is completed, take your blank to the committeemen who filled out your contract and have them sign the blank for you.
- (5) These committeemen will give your instructions as to having your bills of sale certified.
- "Please follow instructions and do not fill in any blanks other than those mentioned above. This must be done properly if you are to receive the benefits to be paid farmers on tobacco sold prior to October 7."

ROOSEVELT PROPOSALS DISCARDED

Fourteen Members of Committee Override Presidential Proposal For $2.60 Tax on Whiskey; Federal Government Would Collect Tax and Hold For Own Use Under New Plan; Import Question Abandoned For Time Being

Washington, D. C., Dec. 22.—(AP)—Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee sign-manned into session today to approve a tax bill secretly agreed upon by them and which discards the Roosevelt administration recommendations and levies $2 on each gallon of newly legalized hard liquor.

It was made clear that the reason the fourteen members override recommendations of the Presidential inter-departmental committee for $2.60 liquor tax with 20 per cent of that going back to the States was primarily the difficulty of putting it on a workable basis.

Treasury estimates were that the 20 per cent tax would bring in $94,000,000 in 1934 if business activity were high and $202,000,000 if it were low.

Now, if the Democrats succeed in pushing through their liquor tax plan which some of the Republicans may support, the measure to be presented to the House on the opening day, January 3, will call for the Federal government to collect and keep for its own use $2 for each gallon of liquor sold irrespective of State levies. For the time being, the Democrats on the committee intend to pass over the proposal for double tariff on liquor imports under which countries that made trade agreements with the United States would be allowed low duties.

HOMES FOR RECOVERY

There is a growing feeling that, in the course of governmental efforts to stimulate employment and increase purchasing power, greater stress should be laid upon small home building.

In this country at present there is a definite shortage of homes due to population changes to obsolescence and destruction, and to the almost complete lack of building of this character during the past few years.

"Doubling up" of families has become a commonplace. Thousands of structures, which are little more than unhealthy and unsightly fire-traps, are in use and should be eliminated.

A federally sponsored, aggressive home building drive would thus serve a double purpose. It would provide tremendous amounts of employment, both in building home themselves and in industries supplying materials.

Build now—and recovery will come sooner. Statistics demonstrate the truth of that.

FORBIDDEN VALLEY by William Byron Mowery

SYNOPSIS: Curt Tennyson rescues the friendly Indians of Soap, whom he has befriended in the Canadian wilderness because he knows that the girl is planning to desert his party and to join Igor Korbahn, the millionaire crook whom Curt is tracking again. Curt and his partner Paul find that as usual his night travels with LeNor, Korbahn's contact man, LeNor would prefer to see the Klobosche Indians to destroy them.

Chapter 35 DEPARTURE

CURT stood up and gave Sonya his hand to rise. As his glance met hers he saw tears in her eyes, saw her lips trembling. "All right, Curt," she said quietly, with a humility that shamed him.

He thrust the clips into his pocket and walked up to the little stone fort which he and Paul had rolled together. Paul was carefully inspecting it and plugging chinks so that no arrows could slip through. They did not count on having to use the defense, but their situation was delicate, and LeNor was a crafty fellow, and it was wise to guard against the unforeseen.

At the upper tip of the island, Ralph was sitting at the water edge occasionally drawing in a fish on the hand-line he was holding. He looked lonely and disconsolate. Curt wondered whether Sonya had really told him the truth about her trip. Ralph was an unselfish soul, but to bring the girl he loved into that country and help her join another man seemed a bit too self-acting even for him.

As he brought Paul an extra rock he was startled by the low quavering call of an owl six hundred yards out upon the lake. He dropped the rock, stood listening. LeNor? It couldn't be; the red star was nearly two hours high. But then the owl came again, no nearer but louder; and he distinctly caught the falsetto quality of it.

"Hell! It is LeNor, Paul! He's come early for her."

Paul nodded. "Yes, it's the Slam Klaid and he must want to get the whole business over with tonight!" They crept down behind the rocks and waited. Curt's eyes were upon the tent, where Sonya would come out. He had not imagined that her going would be an ordeal, he had even thought he would take a savage pleasure in being free of her for good; but now when she actually was leaving, it seemed impossible to let her go.

When she stepped outside the tent and looked around cautiously to see where he lay, he rose up, overwhelmed by the impulse to go down there and keep her from leaving. Paul checked him, took a part of the burden of decision upon himself.

"Don't, partner! You'd be sorry. Let her leave. She'll be in no danger. Remember, we are following her and can see that she gets safely out."

Sonya hurried on down the island. In the owl dusk her slender form grew fainter and fainter till Curt no longer saw her. A canoe grated on the pebbles as she tugged at the craft to get it afloat. A dark blur moved away from shore. Curt covered his face with his hands to shut out the sight of it. When he looked up again, the blur was gone.

PAUL touched his arm, moments afterward. "We'd better be somewhere else in an hour from now. This island is going to have visitors."

Curt pulled himself together. "Yes, we'd better go," he said jerkily. "We'll take what we need of our outfit and get away to one of those other islands, and then split up."

"François and Jocku haven't come back."

Curt turned toward the caribou island, barely visible in the deep dusk. It just then occurred to him that he had not heard the guides shoot. Their silence was strange; they had been gone long enough to make two such trips.

He hurried to the lower end, launched the remaining canoe and started down lake. A few rods off shore he called in a guarded voice: "Jocku! You and François get out of there. Come alive! We haven't any time to waste."

No answer came back. His voice saw the little band of caribou tearing through the swamp birch to the other side of the island, but neither François nor Jocku answered. The explanation dawned on him with a crash. He remembered, too late, that the guides had sat off by themselves all day, talking in low tones; and that Jocku had acted queerly when he came to make his request. Now he saw through the whole ruse. Their trips after a caribou had been a scheme to secure a canoe and get away. Those two had deserted!

He whirled the canoe around and started back to camp, swearing at the evil luck that dogged every step he took. The treachery of those natives was little short of filial. He had counted heavily on them to take Ralph back south; and now they had sneaked away, the pair of cowards, and Nichols was left on his hands.

If he and Paul were encumbered with Ralph on their swift shadowy trip, they would not stand a ghost of a chance.

Before he had gone very far he heard a rifle shot down stream. He stopped short, listened. A mile south, down where the river narrowed to a bottle neck, a flurry of shots sounded. The dull thud of the guns was unmistakable—the heavy bear Winchester of Jocku and François. Those two guides were in trouble; they'd run into an ambush!

One of the Winchester's suddenly stopped. The other shot four times more. Then, faintly in the tent silence, a long drawn yell, wailed up river, more a scream than any articulate word—piercing, vibrant with terror. It sent shivers through Curt. It was a man's death cry.

His anger changed to heart-felt pity. "Poor devil!" he said softly. "They got it." The Klobosche had a party at that narrow, to cut us off if we tried to break away."

HE whipped on ashore, goaded by the memory of that cry. Paul had heard it too, and knew what it meant. Working swiftly, they made ready to leave. They left the tents standing, abandoned most of the supplies and all the heavier things; took nothing but guns, blankets and food for a few days.

"Carry this stuff to the canoe," Curt directed. "I'll go get Ralph."

As he hurried up the island, he tried to figure how he might salvage something out of the wreckage of his plans. Perhaps they could take Ralph several miles up some tributary river where the Klobosches were not likely to come, and secrete him in some cave, with food and camp necessities, to be picked up later when they had finished with Karakhan. It was possible.

"Ralph! Come along with me. We're pitching away from this place on the jump."

Ralph got up quickly. "Why, what's the matter?" "I'll tell you later. Let's get into the canoe and put distance between us."

"Where's Sonya?" Ralph queried, winding up his fish line.

"Don't ask questions now, man, for Levi's sake! And let that line go. Come on, we're leaving here—"

He bit the sentence off. Out upon the lake to the west a "merganser" called. From north and south came answers. Curt stared in the direction of that first call. For a moment he saw nothing. Then his eye picked up five blurred motes, out at the limit of vision. He peered sharply at them. Canoes! Five Klobosche canoes!

He spun around with Ralph and ran down toward Paul. If only they could get out upon the lake, they might make a running battle of it and lose themselves in a maze of reedy islets half a mile east.

At the lower tip of the island his partner's gun ripped the night silence with a sharp crack. When he reached Paul, the latter was kneeling down and clipping a fresh magazine into his smoking rifle.

"Look! Paul grabbed his arm. "Six of them! Coming in at us!"

Curt looked where he pointed. Three hundred yards offshore half a dozen sinister shadows were looming out of the dusk. Paul's volley had checked their headlong dash, they had scattered to make the target harder; but they were coming straight on, aiming for that lower tip.

"Lord—they've got us!" Curt gasped. Before they could possibly get their canoe launched and out of the shallows, those dancing shadows would be upon them. By a margin of minutes, the precious minutes lost in hunting for Jocku and François, they had failed to get away.

A few stray arrows, already swishing into the sand around them, emphasized the point.

"Let's get back to our rocks," he ordered. "Nothing to do now but shoot it out."

They turned and ran for the shelter. (Copyright, 1933, William B. Mowery) and the Queen of Fairies down such a cute little winding staircase down and down until they reached quite a large room underground.

There stood a tiny table and a little blacksmith's forge.

"Now just a minute," said Mister Mole. "I recognize that bracelet. It makes you invisible to others. I should never have made it, but a queen paid me well for it. I was afraid it would cause trouble. Have you come far?"

"All the way from Toyland," said the woolly dog.

"Toyland!" said Mister Mole.

"That's where Santa Claus lives. If you are going back I want to send him a gift. I hear he makes all the little children in the world happy on Christmas Day."

All the time he talked he was heating a tiny poker. Then he turned to Christina, placed the poker on her little bracelet—very carefully—and in a minute the poker had melted it. He did it so quickly that he didn't even sense Christina's little arm. And there she stood before them just like a flash.

"Woof, woof," barked the dog. He was so happy he jumped all around Christina. The Queen of Fairies smiled and smiled, and the mole rubbed his paws together, as though he were very pleased.

"Now what do you suppose Santa would like?" Mister Mole asked.

"Oh, Santa never wants anything for himself," said Christina. "But I'm sure he would like a little gold chain to give some little girl this Christmas."

"Fine, fine," said Mister Mole. "I

TWO ARE BOUND OVER IN AUTOMOBILE KILLING

Morganton, N. C., Dec. 22.—Probable cause early tonight in actions against W. O. Riddick, prominent Asheville lumber dealer, and F. E. Patton, of Swannanoa, student at Wake Forest, following preliminary investigation by Magistrate W. E. Gilliam into the fatal automobile accident Saturday night which snuffed out the life of Columbus J. Beach, of Morganton. Both men were bound over to Superior Court for trial.

Patton was driver of the machine which struck Beach, inflicting such serious injuries that he died in a local hospital the next day. He testified he chose the alternative of crashing into a group of pedestrians or into Riddick's automobile, disabled by a previous wreck. The accident occurred in a heavy fog about a mile west of Morganton. Bond in the amount of $500 was posted by each defendant for appearance in Superior Court in February.

COUPLE BELIEVED SERIOUSLY INJURED

Gastonia, N. C., Dec. 22.—(AP)—Major and Mrs. W. F. Robertson, of Greenville, S. C., were probably seriously injured near here today when their car wrecked in a crash with an unidentified driver who fled into the highway just in front of the Robertson car, which was headed toward Charlotte.

The couple was brought to a hospital here where attendants said both probably were seriously hurt, with Mrs. Robertson's injuries the major of the two.

The Parade

By MARY GRAHAM-BONNER "Every year," explained Santa Claus, "Great Boy and I have a parade just before we wrap up the packages and fill the sleigh. It is a parade of all the mechanical toys and walking dolls and animals."

It was the most wonderful sight the Puddle Muddlers had ever seen. Santa wound up everything that moved and then he led the parade, beating a drum. Great Boy was at the other end to see that the toys kept in line.

Around and around the workshop they marched, with Willy Nilly and the others joining in, too. It was simply magnificent, and overhead the toy planes flew. Such a glorious noise as there was with the squeaks from the toy animals, the beats and the growls and the grunts.

The walking dolls looked so lovely as they marched around saying "Ma-ma" over and over again, and the trains dashed around on their tracks whistling every time they approached signal lights.

After the parade was over they all set to work wrapping up the presents and packing them into Santa's sleigh. "You've certainly all been a great help to me," Santa said, "and now you'll have to go back and hang up those stockings Willy Nilly made for you last year."

"They're all carefully saved," Willy Nilly said. "Good! Now I'm going to send you back in another way," Santa continued. "I have something in mind that will be a treat, I'm sure."

Tomorrow—"The Reindeer Ride."
