Would Guarantee Principal Home Mortgage Bonds

Roosevelt Will Seek Legislation in Order To Bring More Speedy Relief to Home Owners

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—(AP)—Government guarantee of four billion dollars in farm and home mortgage bonds is contemplated by the administration. Legislation to this end will be sought from Congress by President Roosevelt to further his efforts to aid the nation's hard-pressed farmers and home owners. At present only the interest on the bonds is guaranteed by the government.

The movement to guarantee the principal as well as the interest was defined as due to the slowness of the sale of the bonds under existing conditions. By additional legislation the administration expects to place the bonds on a parity with other government securities and make them readily salable. Under the proposal the bonds could then be exchanged directly to the farm and home mortgages. Now the bonds are sold and the cash goes to the farmers.

British Women In Training For Reserve Corps

London.—(AP) Women who will be trained in everything from caring for babies to handling a revolver, are flocking to the standard of Britain's new "women's reserve force." Within a few weeks after an announcement by Commandant Mary Allen, pioneer policewoman, that she was organizing the force, more than 500 women in all walks of life had been recruited in London alone.

Force Is Uniformed "Our first aim," says Commandant Allen, whose closely clipped hair and police uniform disguise her femininity, "is to show the world that we have in this country not only women who are prepared to serve in the event of war, but women who are prepared to be efficient workers should we again have to face any civil trouble such as the last general strike."

The force is uniformed, the dress consisting of a long double-breasted blue overcoat, a blue beret and a silk scarf. The color of the scarf denotes the district to which the wearer belongs. London detachments being distinguished by but-tercup yellow.

There is training in first aid, in anti-gas methods and treatment of gas casualties. This much is compulsory. Elective activities include fire drills and classes for shooting.

Aviation Also On List "My own experience," says Commandant Allen, "is that the more women know about the handling of firearms the better for them."

There will also be special classes for those who wish, in preliminary training. One of the first recruits of the movement was a licensed flier who owns her own airplane.

OFFICERS' WIVES LABOR ON MOSCOW'S SUBWAY

Moscow.—(AP)—Wives of 250 Red Army officers attached to the Moscow garrison recently contributed a day's labor each on the Moscow subway, shoveling out dirt along with regular workers.

They labored the customary seven hours, and the construction managers said they over-fulfilled their program. The project has gripped popular imagination until groups ranging from factory workers to school children clamor for permission to devote to the "metro," the "social work" that all good citizens are called upon to contribute above their regular jobs.

Holds Three Jobs.

London.—(AP)—A new priest-doctor-dentist-magistrate has been found for Tristan De Cunha, the "loneliest island in the world." Since January the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel has been seeking a man to fill all these roles as well as those of adviser and friend to the 160 inhabitants of the little British island in the mid-south Atlantic.

The Rev. Harold Wilde, who has had parishes in northern England, Scotland and the Channel Islands since he was ordained in 1920, has been chosen. His new parish is 2,000 miles west of the Cape of Good Hope and 4,000 miles northeast of Cape Horn.

PROPOSE PLAN BRING ABOUT PEACE IN CUBA

Grau Would Surrender Office to Anyone Who Can Command Moral Support

Havana, Cuba, Jan. 6.—(AP)—Benjamin Fernandez, author of a plan for restoring political peace in Cuba, announced today that President Grau San Martin had offered to turn over his office to "anyone who can command more moral support than I." The minister said President Grau so advised Carlos Menéndez, Nationalist party leader, in response to the latter's request to know how Grau stood on the Madina plan. Under the minister's plan called "a formula for peace," Grau would step aside for Menéndez about February 24.

Japan Trade Bait Offered Argentina By Shipping Agent

Buenos Aires.—(AP)—Japan holds out to Argentina an annual market for $17,000,000 worth of wool, wheat, sugar, hides and meat. Ki Yosaka, agent here Japanese shipping interests, told Luis Duhau, Minister of Agriculture.

Visiting the Minister before departing for Tokyo to confer on new steps for building up Japanese-South American trade, Yosaka said commerce with Argentina had been growing rapidly, and pointed out that Argentina wool, needed by Japan's 900 textile factories, is admissible duty-free to Japan.

Samples of Argentine frozen beef shipped to Japan have led to some orders. Preliminary experiments in that field were undertaken with scant expectation, but have been encouraging enough to cause the Ministry to as Argentine consuls to report on the possibilities for larger beef sale in Tokyo, Yokohama and Osaka.

NO HOME WORK—BUT PUPILS CANT PLAY

Rome.—(AP)—"Home work" will no longer burden the young shoulders of fascist school children. Francesco Ercole, minister of education, has admonished teachers that they are expected properly to mould the minds of the little black-shirts, without recourse to outside study.

But the minister also made it clear that idleness or purposeless should not be tolerated. He said every true blackshirt family would send its children to organized in gymnastics of the youth organizations or keep them in quiet absorption of fascist culture in the bosom of the family.

THREE HELD IN ROBBERY

Arnold Cade, Park Cade and Casey Cade, young white men of this city faced trial in city court this morning in connection with the robbing of the residence of Mrs. J. L. Fleming during December and the three were bound over to the next term of Superior Court.

The residence was entered on Sunday night December 17 while Mrs. Fleming was attending church and robbed of between $25 and $27 in cash and some articles of merchandise.

Raleigh authorities were advised by Greenville officials to be on the look-out for young Cade but he was not picked up in that city until Wednesday of this week. He was returned to this city this morning the three brothers were brought before Mayor Flanagan, Arnold charged with committing the robbery and his two brothers charged with receiving stolen property knowing it to be stolen and with aiding him to make his getaway from this city while being sought by officers.

FIND BODY OF SLAIN WOMAN

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 6.—(AP)—Believed to have been slain in an attempt attack and then thrown from an automobile, the body of Mrs. Virginia Gibson, 33, was found today on a highway just west of the city limits. The body had been run over two or three times, Deputy Coroner Foster Knoblock said. Frank Pizkop, passing motorist, who discovered it, said he saw a car ahead of him pass over the body and investigators said the slayer had probably placed the body on the highway that death might be ascribed to an accident. Evidence of a struggle was found in mud beside the road about 75 feet from where the body was found. A number of footprints and a woman's purse and scarf were found.

LEAF MARKET TO RE-OPEN ON MONDAY

Local Market Will Probably Set New Poundage Record This Season

The stage was all set here today for re-opening of the Greenville tobacco market on Monday for the after-Christmas portion of the 1933-34 season, with indications that the season will establish an all-time poundage record this season.

Opinions as to the amount of tobacco yet in the hands of the growers differs, but even the lowest estimates indicate that there is still enough unsold for the market to pass its former poundage record of close to 72,000,000 pounds.

When the market closed for the Christmas holidays over sixty-eight million pounds had been sold for over $11,431,000.00, the average price standing at $16.80 per hundred pounds. The poundage figure was a million pounds ahead of that of any other market in the belt and there was little fear that this lead could be overcome by any of the other markets, leaving Greenville again this year in possession of the title of "World's Largest Bright Leaf Market."

Just how long the market will remain open to dispose of the remainder of the crop has not been definitely decided upon but warehousemen are urging the growers to dispose of the balance of their crop now as speedily as they can handle it, as it is not believed that the market will remain open but a short time.

Soviet Buying To Quiet Claims Of U. S. Firms

Moscow.—(AP)—American industrial firms which suffered confiscation of their Russian properties after the Bolshevik revolution, may be offered as compromise substantial Soviet orders, if they are prepared to furnish long term credits, in the opinion of authoritative private circles here.

Official sources refuse to discuss the subject, but it is understood that, if these private claims reach the negotiation stage, the Soviet government will seek to avoid cash settlements and will favor instead an agreement like the one it reached with the General Electric Company in 1929.

Interest Rate High This agreement provided that if Soviet Russia bought $25,000,000.00 worth of goods or services from the company over a period of six years, General Electric would consider satisfied its approximately $2,000,000 claim against Moscow for property seized in the nationalization process here.

In return, the Soviet government obligated itself to pay a higher than normal interest rate on credits extended by the company. Long term financing was arranged for approximately $4,000,000 yearly for the duration of the agreement.

Up to now, Soviet purchasing organizations have not availed themselves of the agreement entitled them, total purchases with the agreement only a little more than a year to run having amounted roughly to $11,000,000. This leaves some doubt as to whether Moscow will take advantage of the opportunity to wipe out that particular claim.

Heavy Fighting Continues Today Chinese Uprising

Shanghai, Jan. 6.—(AP)—The 56th Division of the National Government Infantry was reported in dispatches from Poochow today to have captured Yenping from Yukien province rebels. Earlier national government forces had announced that Nanking troops had attached rebel forces of Fukien along a wide front. Yenping is considered the gateway to Fochow, capital of the province and center of anti-nationalist government movement in the region.

Nationalist soldiers were said to have taken over Shanhsien, 30 miles southwest of Yenping, and Tsinan, 30 miles northeast of Kutien. Heavy fighting was reported in progress five miles north of Kutien. Nervousness prevailed at Poochow, it was reported, because of fear that the heaviest engagements were yet to be fought.

St. Lawrence Waterway Pact With Canada Also Due to Come up in Senate Next Week

Washington, Jan. 6.—(AP)—The bristly subject of war debts and the St. Lawrence waterway pact arose today as the questions due to shatter shortly the comparative quiet that has marked the young session of congress.

Authorized spokesmen disclosed a fresh scrap over the hoary matter of default or mere token payment on debts owed the United States already brewing in the Senate. Reprecussions were certain to be heard in the House.

Firing was already under way today on the St. Lawrence Seaway question. In the face of word from President Roosevelt that the pact would have the backing of the administration for ratification, senate opponents forecast a heavy majority against it. Unless plans are suddenly shifted the treaty with Canada will reach the Senate floor next week. It appeared that should debate grow too fierce or too prolonged the question might be shelved again. Senator Copeland, of New York, predicted at least 50 votes against ratification. Two-thirds of the Senate's 96 votes will be necessary for approval.

Despite the hull brought about by the week-end recess of both House and Senate the war debt issue was not quiet. Senators regarded the adoption of the Borah resolution Thursday, calling upon the Treasury Department for facts and figures, as merely the opening of a drive to bring the question to the Senate floor.

Congress meanwhile will wind into full stride next week. The Senate Finance Committee will tackle the $470,000,000 liquor tax bill passed by the House. Indications are for quick approval and an early Senate vote. The House is expected to dig deep shortly into the matter of general taxation and revision of the income tax law. Considerable talk is expected also on the silver question.

FLAGSHIP OF ADMIRAL BYRD MOVES SOUTH

Nosing Its Way Out Of Ice Packs Where It Has Been Held Since Monday

En Route Admiral Byrd's Flagship. Bboard to Little America, Jan. 6.—(AP)—(By Mackay Radio)—Fearing further delay in this region might jeopardize the entire progress of the expedition, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd today had his flagship heading out of a break in the ice-pack where it had lain since Monday.

"Further exploration in this region might increase the risk to the ship in the ice-packs," he reported said. South from its position latitude 69.25 south 118.40 west, the ship nosed its way slowly and carefully on the remaining 3,000-mile journey to the expedition's main base.

Up to now, Soviet purchasing organizations have not availed themselves of the agreement entitled them, total purchases with the agreement only a little more than a year to run having amounted roughly to $11,000,000. This leaves some doubt as to whether Moscow will take advantage of the opportunity to wipe out that particular claim.

Simplicity Rules Richest Old Men

Monte Carlo.—(AP)—Sir Basil Zaharoff and John D. Rockefeller, two of the richest men in the world, both far beyond the traditional thriftness and ten, have found simplicity the keynote of old age.

Sir Basil, once glamorous "mystery man of Europe," cannot remember entrusted with half the State secrets of the old world, at 83 could scarcely have competed as an athlete with the American "oil king," at the same age.

For that matter, John D. at 63 could get about in sprier fashion than his eleven-year junior.

To play over Rockefeller's nine-hole private golf course, Zaharoff would need his wheel chair as he has been unable to get around much since his eightieth birthday.

He suffers from gout and, while he can walk a bit if he has support, his wheel chair is always at hand.

And yet both men, financial kings who built up tremendous fortunes from nothing over much the same period of history, are passing their old age in much the same fashion. Both have northern homes which attract them in the summer. Rockefeller at Tarrytown, and Zaharoff at Aronville near Paris. And both go south, as a rule, when winter comes, Rockefeller to Florida and Zaharoff to Monte Carlo.

Zaharoff's sporting activities have been confined in recent years to rowboat excursions in summer on his private lake. Outside of that diversion he spends most of his time reading.

At Monte Carlo, the regime is much the same. He reads world politics with keen interest, gets all the sunshine that he can and pays not the slightest attention to business.

Although his hotel is a stone's throw from the Casino, which he is reputed to own, he never has entered its doors.

HONOR THE PRESIDENT!

Five thousand American cities and towns are expected to stage birthday balls on January 30th, the birthday of President Roosevelt. The proceeds of these affairs will be given the President as a birthday gift to establish an endowment for the Warm Springs Foundation for the treatment of infantile paralysis sufferers.

A national committee has been formed to put over the proposal and it is confidently expected that the result will be a large fund for the treatment of those who are attacked by this disease. The interest of President Roosevelt in the Warm Springs institution grows out of his own experience. Stricken down by the dread affliction our President successfully fought it to regain his health, although many of those attacked are unable to bring to the fight the same determination and unflinching courage that Mr. Roosevelt possesses.

One of these balls is to be held in Greenville and plans are now under way to make it one of the most successful events ever staged in this city. We are sure that the citizens of this county are in sympathy with the great cause for which all money derived from the ball will be used. There is no better way to honor our President than to aid in the work of an institution that is so near and dear to him, and we suggest that if you cannot attend the ball but would like to have a part in this great work you forward $1.00 to be added to the fund to be sent in following the ball here.

Asking for such donations is not a part of the national plan under which these balls are being staged but we are aware that there are hundreds of our people in this county to whom the ball will not especially appeal but who at the same time would like to aid the fund, hence we take the liberty of making the suggestion as to the $1.00 donations. No part of these donations will be used in connection with the staging of the ball here, but they will be added to the proceeds of the ball and forwarded to the national committee on the endowment.

If you feel that you would like to make such a donation, same may be forwarded to R. C. Stokes, general chairman, this city, or direct to this paper and all such donations will be acknowledged through the columns of this paper.

FORBIDDEN VALLEY by William Byron Mowery

Chapter 47 HOT FIGHT. A LONG yell arose. It was taken up and echoed by those below. The Klosohees at the lean-to's seized their weapons and sprang to cover in a rocky ravine three rods to their left.

LeNoir started to follow them. Paul's bullet caught him and sent him rolling. He staggered to his feet again. As Paul drew another bead on him, two of the Klosohees leaped out and gabbled his arms and helped him toward the gully. It was so courageous an act that Paul refused to shoot again for fear of killing those two.

Down the shore Siam-Klale had evered his canon in toward the bank when the yell went up. Paul swung on him and emptied his rifle, but the range was far too long even for Paul. Splashing through the shallows, Siam-Klale dived out of sight into a juniper clump.

At the cabin Karakhan appeared in the doorway to see what the commotion was about. Curt whipped up his rifle and shot. His bullet splintered the door frame, and sent the Cossack jumping back inside.

After that first pandemonium a silence fell. Curt saw nothing, heard nothing. The advantage of surprise was gone, they were thrown on the defensive; and now they were up against overwhelming odds. In a timber fight where the Klosohees were deadly.

Tenn-Og pointed down at the ravine. Siam-Klale and the breed had got their men in hand and were bringing them up the deep brushy gully.

"We'd better get back to the cave," Paul warned. Curt shook his head. If they did, the Klosohees would keep them penned up in there for hours. Karakhan would escape. Sonya would be taken away. He hung on grimly, waiting for a break.

Without warning, an arrow burned into the tangle and pinned his jacket sleeve to the log he was lying against. It came not from level range but from above. He turned, looked up at the cliff, in a clump of buckbrush on top of the rock a bush swayed, a man's head and shoulders appeared for an instant.

It dawned on him that the Klosohees had out-manuevered and cornered them. While part of the band was coming slowly up the ravine, the others had circled out the slope and up on top of the cliff.

He jerked up his rifle and shot at the buckbrush clump. A man leaped up, staggering blindly, took a step or two, plunged over the lip of the rock, struck once against the face of the cliff as he fell, and hit with a heavy thud on the boulders beneath.

Almost at that same instant a third arrow came hurtling down at Curt and hit the bolt of his rifle. Deflected downward, it struck his right hand that gripped the trigger guard, and sheared off his ring finger like a razor-edged chisel. He lifted his hand and stared blankly at the wound, unable to realize that his finger had been cut off, till the blood started spurting and darts of pain shot up his arm.

SOME swift flashing object, whizzing down from the cliff-top like a tiny cartwheel, caromed off a boulder, glanced sideways, and smashed Paul across the forehead. His rifle dropped from his hands, he went limp and sank over against a log.

As Curt whirled to see how badly Paul had been hurt by the whizzing bolt-ax, he caught a glimpse of Karakhan making a dash from his cabin to the hangar. Flipping the blood from his stinging hand, he rose up, pointed his rifle and took a careful aim at the scurrying figure.

Before his finger squeezed the trigger, a sudden agonizing pain struck him in the right hip and nearly bowled him over. Giddy and faint from the shock, he looked down and saw an arrow buried head-deep in his thigh.

He seized hold of the shaft shut his eyes, gave a hard jerk, and the arrow came. Curt grabbed Paul's shoulder and shook him. "Paul! We've got to make a break. They've got us here. Put yourself together. If we can get to the cave we might save ourselves."

He helped Paul to his feet, steadied him; and they started for the game trail. Tenn-Og led the way, tearing a path through the tangled brush. Behind them the Klosohees in the ravine poured out of their cover and came yelling up the slope, to overhaul and spear them.

But they reached the foot of the cliff, hit into the trail and dashed out along it to the cave mouth. "Get on back!" Curt cried to Tenn-Og, who had halted in the entrance. "We can't hold 'em off. All hell can't stop 'em!"

They hurried Paul back to the bridge, and between them they got him across the logs to the cave. Curt whirled to pull the logs down and stop the Klosohees. In half a minute they would be pouring inside to finish off their wounded enemies. Neither he nor Paul could put up any fight.

But as he stooped down and grasped the log ends, he thought of the consequences—the three of them cooped up in there for hours. Karakhan escaping, Sonya being snatched away and hidden. It was this last thought that stopped him. He could not sacrifice her in order to save himself.

He straightened up. "Tenn-Og! Take the lead. Get us out to that ledge opening." The Indian seized his hand and started away into the inky blackness.

The next few minutes were a blind and aimless groping. Then on hands and knees they squeezed through a slit in the rock and came out on the ledge near the fissure.

Curt grasped a bush, leaned out and glanced back along the face of the cliff to the cave mouth. The ferns and dwarf birches hanging against the rock obscured his view, but he saw enough to know that most of the Klosohees had swept on inside. Only three or four men remained at the entrance.

He drew back. "They're in the cave, looking for us. Paul, stay here. You're too wabby. Tenn-Og and I'll try to trap 'em."

THEY scrambled into the fissure and down to the game trail, and headed back to the cave mouth. With automatic drawn Curt rounded a jut and ran headlong into LeNoir, Siam-Klale and a third man.

The breed saw him first, and grabbed with his felt hand for his belt-gun; but Curt's automatic cut him down and he toppled over, shot cleanly through the heart.

With a hoarse cry Tenn-Og sprang past Curt and hung himself bodily at the other two. The third man stabbed at him with a spear and tore the flesh in his arm. Tenn-Og grabbed the weapon, wrenched it away, and whirled on Siam-Klale.

Tenn-Og's arm went back, his body tautened like a steel spring, he lunged forward and drove the spear home with all the force of his long-cherished hate. The point struck Siam-Klale square in the breast. He tried to grapple with Tenn-Og, but his arms went limp, he staggered and fell backwards, and went rolling down the slope till he fetched up against a tree.

The third man dived like a scared marmot into the cave. Curt smashed him with the butt of his automatic, and reached the log. Bracing his foot to keep himself from toppling, he lifted the logs, swung, and let go.

When he got back outside he saw Tenn-Og standing down the slope, staring at Siam-Klale's body as though the end of his vengeance had left him dazed. Paul was stumbling along the game trail toward them, his face so covered with blood that he was hardly recognizable.

"You—you knocked the logs out?" "Listen!" From the cave came yells of fear and terror as the Klosohees groped for the bridge and found it gone. "Does that sound as though I did?"

A caribou spear came hurtling out through the cave entrance. Paul a J Curt hastily jumped aside. Down on the lake a motor started up with a spluttering roar. Curt's wounds, the quick desperate work of the last minute, and the smashing success of his trap, had made him forget about Karakhan, but the roar brought him alive.

He turned, threw down his gun. "Stay here, Paul, you and Tenn-Og! I'll stop him!" "But how... You can't stop him!" "I've got to! I will!"

He plunged down the slope, passed the cabin without checking himself or even looking at it, swerved west along the lake shore, and headed for the cove at a dead run. The wound in his thigh pained till it sickened him; he breathed in gulps, and every stride jolted a gasp from his lips; but he shut his eyes against the pain and ran on.

The Flashlight By MARY GRAHAM BONNER "I discovered your flashlight!" sawed Christopher Columbus Crow. "I felt it on the shelf where you keep it." And he held the flashlight while the others worked. At last they got rid of enough snow around the doorway so that Willy Nilly could put the door back on its hinges. "It's fixed!" Willy Nilly exclaimed jubilantly. Now the door was closed on the storm and the wind and the blizzard could play out-of-doors where they belonged.

Everything was in the wildest disorder. Not only was the fire out, but the wood was so wet from the snow that it was useless to build another. "I think," suggested Willy Nilly, "that we'd better all walk very carefully so we don't cut our feet while Christopher holds the flash and then go right upstairs. We have another lamp there. And we can keep it burning and feel a little cheerful. There was no use in bringing it downstairs while the door was off and letting a second lamp be smashed."

So they all trooped upstairs, Christopher leading the way with the flashlight. Willy Nilly thought he would never be able to set his place to rights, but he made up his mind not to do any more thinking of this sort. They had all worked together to protect each other. No one had thought of himself. And they were safe. That was everything. They had beaten the storm and driven it out-of-doors. Now they all rolled up in a big quilt, but suddenly they heard a moaning and a strange howling. It was different from the sound of the wind.

One of the most delightful club meetings of the year was held on Tuesday afternoon, January 2, at the home of Mrs. J. L. Little on Fifth street. The home was lovely with yellow flowers, and a crackling fire gave a perfect setting for this informal meeting.

The president, Mrs. J. B. Spilman presided, calling the club to order and dispensing with the various items of business.

Since the program leader, Mrs. Hortense Moyer, was sick, each member of the club gave a current event as a donation to the program. These proved most interesting.

At the conclusion of the program Mrs. Little, assisted by Mrs. Spilman, served a delicious salad course.

Mrs. C. A. Bowen was a welcomed visitor. The next meeting of the club will be held with Mrs. L. R. Meadows.—Reported.

COLLEGE ENROLLMENT LARGER THAN LAST YEAR

The enrollment of East Carolina Teachers College at the close of the first week of the winter term is 869, which is four more than that of the same quarter last year. There is still one week before registration closes. A number of students whose returns were delayed for various reasons are expected to attend classes next week.

"THE LIFE OF CHRIST" THEME FOR CHAPEL HOUR

President Wright began the first week of the new term at the chapel hour, a series of talks based on the International Sunday School lesson. The life of Christ is the theme for the quarter and the lessons are taken from the Book of Matthew. The Scripture lessons for the first two talks given during this week are from the second and third chapters of Matthew.

He called attention to the fact that we really live in the year 1934, and cited authority from the history of the period proving that a mistake had been made in calculating the date. He said we often fail to connect religious studies with current governmental activities.

In his introductory talk, he explained the position of Matthew and gave his purpose and method of writing his book. His second talk was on John, the Baptist.

He urged the students to study their Sunday school lessons carefully and his talks will doubtless be of great value in understanding the lessons and the book of Matthew.

On arrival, the guests were welcomed by the hostess and honor guest and invited into the dining room. The luncheon table was covered with an imported lace cloth, centered with a reflector on which was placed a silver candelabra holding white candles, surrounded with narcissus and ferns. Seated at either end of the table, Mrs. J. S. Ficklen and Mrs. W. I. Wooten served a tempting luncheon. Mrs. Curtis Perkins and Miss Mary Lou White assisted in serving.

Following luncheon, bridge was played. Mrs. D. M. Clark, making high score, was awarded dusting powder, and Miss Sue Barrett, scoring low, was given bridge cards. Miss Wright was presented china in her selected pattern, showered with wedding bells and slippers.

RED OAK NEWS

One of the happiest Christmases in several years was enjoyed by the folks in Red Oak community. Several things happened to make this so. First of all, there was a lovely Christmas tree at the church which was enjoyed by young and old, since Old Santa himself, with his chum, Mr. Claude Gaskins, paid us a flying visit and I am sure he never got so many hugs and kisses in all his life. Then the most impressive song service ever rendered in our church was on Friday night before Christmas, when our beloved Miss Eugenia Thomas and a chorus of twelve excellent singers rendered special Christmas music. We have heard the old Christmas poem,

Accused Of Libel

"Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the house, not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse," well, not a creature stirred from the singing of the first song until the last sweet words of "Silent Night, Holy Night" died softly away. It was so lovely that words can not express the happiness that it brought to the hearts of those present. Mrs. Proctor's solo, Mrs. James, "Christmas Lullaby," and the violin solo by Sam Quinby were beautiful.

It was the first visit that some of these folks have made to our little church, but we do sincerely hope that they will come back and sing for us again soon.

We wish to thank the following for coming: Miss Eugenia Thomas, Mrs. Gaylord, Mrs. Proctor, Mrs. James, Miss Spain, Mrs. Settle, Miss Louise Jones, Prof. June Rose, Ed Williams.

We were especially glad to have several visitors from Greenville in the audience.

There were several family reunions in the neighborhood during the holidays. Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Tyson were host and hostess at a family reunion of the Edwards family. Mr. and Mrs. Leon Tyson entertained the Jenkins family in their homes. Mr. and Mrs. Jim Tucker and Mr. and Mrs. Percine Tyson entertained the Tyson families.

Mrs. Billy May and son spent the holidays in Swan Quarter.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Kessinger of Philadelphia, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Allen Tuesday.

Mrs. C. W. Bright and children are visiting relatives in South Carolina.

Miss Irma Pollard had as her guest during the holidays, Miss Mary Selma Pittman of Macesfield.

Miss Pollard and Miss Pittman were guests of Mrs. Leon Tyson last Wednesday night.

There will be an election of officers at Red Oak Sunday school Sunday morning, Jan. 7. Please be present.

Friends of Miss Louise Allen, who is still confined in the hospital from injuries received in an automobile wreck about two months ago, will be glad to know that she is getting along nicely. We hope that she will soon be able to go home.

Mr. James F. Manning and Miss Lillie Dean Phillips of Red Oak community, were quietly married in Farmville Wednesday afternoon. James is the eldest son of Frank Manning and has resided in this neighborhood all his life, with the exception of a year or two in Chicago and the Hawaiian Islands. He is a prosperous young farmer. Lillie Dean is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Phillips and while she has only made her home in this neighborhood for the past two years, she has made a host of friends. They will make their home near Wilson. We wish for them a long and happy married life.

Seventeen club women met at the home of Mrs. Billy May yesterday. They discussed the subject, "Why Be Tired?" It was a very enjoyable meeting.

More than a million Mexicans have responded to the national repatriation movement and returned to their own soil from throughout the United States since 1929, Southern California relief agencies estimate.

Brilliant Array Of Pictures Coming to State This Year

The new year 1934 will find the State Theatre of Greenville offering the greatest variety and scores of entertainment in its history. Reviewing the coming releases, one cannot help but feel that the motion picture industry is enthusiastically doing a good job in providing improved screen fare for every taste.

Pictures with jingling, jousous music continues around the top of the popularity column, with down to earth comedies of the Will Rogers-Marie Dressler type being in big demand. The trend is away from sophistication and definitely toward the more practical and idealistic pictures such as "Little Women." Their is also renewed interest in mystery stories, of which the "Invisible Man" is the current outstanding example.

The gangster seems to occupy an insignificant position. If seen at all, in the 1934. And screen novelties like "Mickey Mouse" and the "Little Pigs" will no doubt have the biggest year in their history.

Geographically, the new films take you to many parts of the world. "Eskimo" with a native cast was made in the frozen rims of the arctic while "Tarzan and His Mate" featuring Johnny Weissmuller takes you to the depths of the African void, you can go to the dives of New York with Wallace Berry in "The Bowery" to the epitome of social perfection in "Din of Eight," from aristocratic England with H. B. Warner in "Sorel and Son" to the gay; Paris in "Moulin Rouge" featuring Constantine Bennett and Franchot Tone; the luxurious pomp which was Russia with Marlene Dietrich in "Catherine the Great"; "Carolina" made from Paul Green's celebrated "House of Connelly" starring Janet Gaynor and Lionel Barrymore.

Historically, the new pictures range from Cecil B. DeMille's lavish "Cleopatra" through the modern upper social stratum of today, the picture of N. I. Coward's "Design for Living" with Fredric March, Miriam Hopkins and Gary Cooper, and then reaching through the years to present a futuristic look at the world with its customs, habits and appearances in 1963, with Paramount's "Fifty Years From Now."

Drama ranges from the sweet innocence of "Little Women" to Mae West's sophisticated "I Ain't No Sin" from the mystery of William Powell in "The Dragon Murder Case", to the pretty plots of Laurel and Hardy in their coming comedy "Sons of the Desert."

The settings sweep from the Iowa prairie with Randy Scott in "The Last Roundup" to the lavish, glittering, double-speed pace of "Hollywood Party," Metro's all star musical. And the differences in characterization is as broad as from the roaring antics of Mickey Mouse to the stately dignity and precision of George Arliss in his new production "The House of Rothschild."

roll-call with "New Year's Resolutions." The club is preparing a three-act play to be presented in the near future. Mrs. B. L. Tyson gave a report of a leader's school which attended in Beaufort County. Mrs. Tyson gave a "Recreational Program" at the Beaufort meeting. The subject for the afternoon was "Why Be Tired?" to the picture of Jones, like the old warrior, sensing the thrill of golfing battle again. He had all of it he wanted in some fifteen years of national tournament competition from 1916 to 1930. He put over the celebrated grand slam in his final and cried "enough!" He meant it.

This'll Be Good

Not since the great Paava Nurmi came across in 1925 to knock a few dozen indoor foot racing records loose on American boards has any track season held forth the prospect of more sensations than the one just about to break loose.

Black-haired, dapper Luigi Becelli of Italy, the Olympic 1,500 meter champion and world record-holder, conqueror of the famous Jack Lovelock, seems likely to be the central attraction. He will find a number of extraordinary young American miler eager to match strides with him indoors, among them Glenn Cunningham, Gene Zevnikke and it is to be hoped, Princeton's brilliant Bill Bonthron.

Nazi Mayor Cooks For Town

Schwedt, Germany.—(AP)—Gustav Wagemann, mayor of this town of 9,850, recently prepared split peas and bacon for the entire population. The "one pot" feast was arranged as part of the national campaign in which each family eats a one-course dinner the first Sunday of each month and contributes the savings to poor relief.

My Beauty Hint

By ELIZA AGUILAR (Screen Artist)
When I rise in the morning—winter or summer—I massage my face vigorously for several minutes with a lump of ice, thus closing the pores, which have been open during my sleep. At the same time the sudden change in temperature causes a blood flow which helps to prevent the sluggish look of the skin. If no ice is available, I have found a wash cloth, soaked in very cold water, a good substitute.

Italy Hunts For Oil Wells

Rome.—(AP)—A five-year oil search costing about $6,500,000 has been approved by the Ministry of Finance. The money will be used in efforts to locate new oil fields in Italy and to develop known petroleum sources.

Egypt's Heir Gets New Title

Cairo.—(AP)—A royal decree announces that Prince Farouk, heir to the Egyptian throne, henceforth will be known as the Emir of Said, meaning "Prince of Upper Egypt."

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 6.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady, eight to twelve points higher in response to higher Liverpool cables and domestic and foreign trade buying. The opening advance which carried March to 10.58 encouraged liquidation and realizing and prices reacted March selling off to 10.52 and active months generally within a point of two of yesterday's close at the end of the first half hour.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Jan. 6.—(AP)—Stocks generally dallied in shadows of conflicting opinion today and prices as a whole were rather narrow and trading dull. While there were a few firm stocks discernible the trend was indecisive. The close was steady with transfers 461,920 shares.

Some of the metal stocks regained a part of their yesterday's losses and alcohol improved a bit. A few of the tobacco and motor points pointed downward. The dollar did but little in foreign exchange dealings as the gold prices remained steady. Cotton again stepped up a notch or two but grains and other commodities held within restricted limits.

Listed bonds were firm although U. S. government securities eased a bit. On the outside markets home and federal bank bonds were strong following news of guarantee proposals.

Steagall For Silver

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—(AP)—Chairman Cleggall, of the House Banking Committee, today said he thought silver should be given more prominence in the monetary affairs and added that he was considering introducing a bill for that purpose.
