PITT CRIMINAL COURT BEGINS ACTION TODAY

Important Murder Cases Expected to Come up About Middle of Week

Faced by a docket containing important murder and rape cases, the one-week term of Criminal Superior Court began work here this morning with Judge Frank A. Daniels, of Goldsboro, presiding.

The morning session was featured by the selection of a new six months' grand jury and the charge by Judge Daniels.

The jury is composed of L. T. Pierce, foreman; J. R. Godley, M. W. Simons, A. L. Blow, J. S. Fussell, E. L. Brown, H. B. Harris, G. C. 'Ann, A. T. Hatem, R. J. Clark, Jr., Urian Cox, W. B. Harris, D. D. Elks, M. O. Speight, Dan P. Evans, C. E. Spier, J. H. Quinn and Marshal Joyner.

Judge Daniels' charge was brief and to the point. He carefully defined the law for the jurors and told them what would be expected of them during the six months they are chosen to serve. No special recommendations were made to the jury.

Immediately following preliminary court began hearing of the liquor selling charge against Asa Garris, of Ayden, and then recessed until 2:30 o'clock this afternoon when the case was resumed. Garris was arrested sometime ago and charged with handling illicit liquor.

PLAN NOW TO ATTEND

Make your plans now to attend the President's Birthday Ball to be held at the Campus Building at Teachers' College here on Tuesday night, January 30. Not only does this occasion offer you a full evening of entertainment for yourself but by attending you will be aiding a great cause. Every cent of profit from the dance will go to the Warm Springs Endowment for treatment of infantile paralysis. 5,000 such balls are being held throughout the country on the same night and certainly the people of Greenville and Pitt and adjoining counties do not want other sections to make better showing than we make in the amount of our donation to the endowment fund. The Warm Springs Endowment is very near and dear to the heart of President Roosevelt and if you appreciate what he is trying to do for the nation and wish to aid in making his birthday a happy one, attend this dance so as to swell the amount to be sent from this city to the fund.

CROP LOANS WOULD BE GREAT BENEFIT

According to announcement from Washington, Congressman Frank Hancock, too, urges direct government loans to the farmers again this year to enable them to produce their crops. A bill to this effect was introduced by Congressman Lindsay C. Warren, from this district, on the opening day of the present Congress and it is gratifying that the measure is receiving support from other members now. These direct government loans again this year would prove of great benefit to the farmers and certainly in view of the fact that in the past the farmers of this section have repaid these loans almost 100 per cent the government should be willing to again come to their aid.

Historian Finds Soldier's Widow Of 1836 Campaign

Houston, Texas.—(AP)—Texas historians, who thought a few aged sons and daughters the nearest surviving relatives of the heroes who fought in the battle of San Jacinto and won Texas independence from Mexico 98 years ago, have discovered that a widow of one of the soldiers is alive. She is Mrs. Mary M. Price, of Rochester, N. Y. Her daughter, Mrs. Julia P. Henderson, of Rochester, wrote Lou W. Kemp, of Houston, authority on Texas history, that Mrs. Price was hale and hearty and celebrated her ninety-third birthday on Christmas Eve. Mrs. Price is the widow of Hardy W. B. Price, member of a company formed in East Texas by his uncle, Benjamin F. Bryant. On the last day of March, 1836, Captain Bryant offered the services of his company

BLOND GODDESS A New Serial by Herbert Jensen

SYNOPSIS: Frank Graham, the explorer, and his girl Spin Winslow, a stunt flyer, just have received a message from the abductors who were taking her into Mexico. They are convinced that the abductors were led by a man named Ortega, who had been in Hollywood ostensibly to arrange with the producer Myberg for a picture to be taken in Mexico. But Frank can not determine Ortega's motive, and he drops the abductors away from the car in which he found Myberg, he saw again the man with the white profile whom he had seen previously a short while before. Frank is developing more than a casual interest in Myberg.

Chapter 12 THE RETURN

FRANK glanced about him. The driver—the man he had struck with his gun—was gone. The other two men were not in view. The nondescript car looked oddly desolate with its gaping doors.

He frowned, considering. His impulse was to follow one of the men. He realized that the capture of one or all of them would effectively stop the peculiar and mysterious persecution of Janice Kent. That they were serious about their business he did not doubt.

He rolled the rocks from the road, and got in behind the wheel. He succeeded in turning the car on the narrow road, and headed back up the coast. He drove an hour in silence, busied with his thoughts. During that time they passed one lone car going in the opposite direction.

As the headlights flashed upon them, Frank looked back. One of the girl's arms was around the flyer's shoulder; the other was braced against the inevitable lurching of the automobile. Her glance met his briefly; her lips parted in a warm smile.

Frank turned back to the business of driving. A fine girl; one in a million. She was reacting magnificently to the situation. A quick throb of excitement surged in his breast as he thought of how she had clung that instant to him when he had taken her from the car.

He felt his face flush with a sensation of delight strange to him when he remembered that she had pressed her cheek against his coat. There was no doubt that she had done so; to Frank there was no question as to why she had done so. Allowing for a natural impulse of gratitude and of nervous reaction, still she could have thanked him otherwise.

That she had not thanked him but had made that small gesture, led him to one conclusion; the gesture had been one of affection. He loved Janice Kent—that that he was sure; that she returned his regard seemed incredible, but he was sure that she did.

As a swain Frank realized that he had much to learn. Lurking in the background of his mind was a small goblin of thought that there might be something elementally wrong with his reasoning—if the emotions he felt could be called reason—since unconsciously he appreciated that all lovers believe that because of the very intensity of their emotion it must be returned in kind.

The wish is father to the thought. But Janice had pressed her cheek against his coat. He swung the nose of the car into the paved highway and headed for the stone columns that flanked the grounds of Agua Caliente. The tires cracked over the gravelled path. He drew up before the hotel entrance.

"I'll arrange for a cottage for Janice," he said, "and get a saw-bones for you, Spin. I'll phone Myberg inside."

To an attendant he gave quick instructions, and passed into the hotel. The house doctor had come and gone. Spin was resting easily. There was a reek of ether in the air. The doctor had diagnosed a dislocated shoulder, instructing Frank to hold his friend—so, while he pressed in the joint.

Janice insisted that she stay in the room and help. The doctor had demurred, Frank expostulated, and Spin himself had told her in that faintly bitter way of his that actresses made lousy nurses and to get the hell out of there. Janice had given him a verbal wallop in return. She'd said with a placid detachment, "I'll hold the chloroform. The man's just afraid I'll find out about his past when he talks going under. But he's not nearly so bad as he thinks he is. He'll probably sing psalms. I'll stay."

Vaguely Frank remembered that Janice had been splendid while they had worked over the unconscious Spin. Deft, capable, yet unobtrusive, she had been invaluable. The metamorphosis from skilled actress to the subordinate but efficient part of doctor's assistant was amazing because it was absolute.

Frank and Janice walked from the hotel room where lay Spin, to the detached cottage that was to be the girl's for the night. Light from the Casino slashed into the mild sky. Music from the hidden patio followed them as they walked; bursts of distant laughter and of muffled conversation were syncretized by the sound of ivory balls rattling about the spinning wheels in the gaming rooms. The moon was a newly minted silver coin flung high above them.

The world, to Frank, was a very good place to be all in. Janice was safe—it was enough; explanations could come another time. He was in love with her, he realized with sudden conviction Spin Winslow's cynicisms about Janice Kent's ambitions, the vague memory of the non-marriage clause of her contract with Consolidated, her wealth, her beauty, her aura of unattainability had shrunk this night but she remained, walking by his side, clinging a bit tiredly to his arm, the weary, sweet girl with whom he was in love.

AT the doorway of her cottage, she turned her face, a bit white in the moonlight, to Frank. Her voice held the huskiness of fatigue when she said: "Good night, Frank. You've been such a dear—Oh, I don't mean that. How absurdly trivial words are! I mean—"

Frank caught her in his arms. She did not resist but lay there an instant, looking at him. Her eyes were wide—the deep blue of them had darkened to black. They hinted, meltingly, of surrender.

Frank kissed her. Her lips against his were cool and detached—a curious aloofness that caused Frank, in a brief flash, to think of the figurines of the Virgin he'd seen in remote niches of lost churches found in forgotten jungles.

Did he imagine it?—or did for a fleeting instant her lips tremble against his? Abruptly she was out of his arms and her hand on the door-knob. Frank half raised his arms. "Please..." she said. "I'm very tired." Was it fright he saw in her eyes?—no—but it was an odd timidity. "I'm sorry." She seemed to say that to herself. "Frank, forget that. Will you, please." Her breast rose and fell with quick, short breaths, but the alarm had gone from her eyes.

"I love you, Janice," said Frank. The words were husky in his throat. Janice put up her arm in a gesture of half protest. Suddenly she laughed, a little trill that ran through half an octave. The sound of it seemed to throw a cloak of restraint between them. Frank's arms dropped to his side. The girl's slender figure took on a new poise. She said hurriedly: "We mustn't be silly. You must go now. You—Oh, how mournful you look!" Her little laugh broke on a half note.

Swiftly she drifted against Frank. She shook his arms in a small gesture of good-humored protest. She stood on tip-toe. Lightly her lips brushed his—a fleeting feather of fragrance, then she was gone.

But she was not gone from Frank's mind. He stood, staring at the door and rapidly running back through the strange trail of events that had brought them to this spot. There were so many chances that they might never have met. Suppose, for one, that he had not madly decided to follow her car that day in Hollywood. Or suppose that he had not telephoned her house this very evening—

He half raised his hand to touch his lips, then turned and walked back to the hotel. He was in a glow of anticipation, bemused and yet clear upon one point. His regard for Janice.

Late News Flashes

(Continued from Page One) Defense attorneys already had made a motion for withdrawal of a juror, basing it on reports of trials that continuance of the trial might result in death to the defendant.

Bill To Prohibit Lobbying. Washington, Jan. 22.—(AP)—A bill to prohibit members of Congress from lobbying in foreign departments was introduced by Senator Byrnes (D. S. C.) today.

Advisors of the President said he is in accord with the proposal by Byrnes who is one of the administration leaders. Because of the favorable attitude of the White House there is every expectation that Congress will enact far-reaching legislation regarding the law lobbying activity here.

To Protect Small Businesses. Washington, Jan. 22.—(AP)—President Roosevelt conferred with General Hugh S. Johnson, industrial administrator, today on the issue of protecting small enterprises under the NRA and Johnson said later he hoped additional legislation would be unnecessary.

"I would like to see this law given a real test," Johnson at the White House, "and where some amendments may be necessary I would prefer to meet the problem of helping small business without legislation."

"Some of these codes have been in operation only three months. Let's give it a real test." Asked what he thought of the Roosevelt order naming the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice to act on complaints of the NRA, Johnson replied: "Well I wrote it."

Ready To Recognize Cuba. Washington, Jan. 22.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today notified the diplomats of Central and South America that he was ready to recognize the new Cuban government. An early statement statement is in prospect.

The President met briefly with the Latin-American diplomatic corps reporting what has occurred in Cuba and outlined his own attitude for recognition of the Mencheta regime.

The diplomats left the White House to communicate with their own governments and general recognition of the new Cuban regime appeared to be in prospect. "The President stated to the representatives of the American governments," said Secretary Hull, "that there is a disposition of the United States government to recognize the Cuban government in view of the belief that it has the substantial support of the Cuban people and is entirely capable of maintaining law and order."

Whale Skeleton Found 75 Miles From Coastline

Rich Square, N. C.—(AP)—The skeleton of a whale, which geologists believe is a million years old or more, was found along the banks of the Chowan River near here recently.

Robert Copeland, Jr., a student at the University of North Carolina, came upon the bones exposed by erosion of the earth. He cut short his holiday hike to report the discovery to geology professors at the University and an expedition was sent out.

Dr. W. F. Proudy, head geologist, and his associates, Dr. Gerald McCathy, C. E. Pike and Chilton Brouty, calculated the age of the bones and estimated the whale was about forty or fifty feet long. Portions of the fossil were decomposed, but that remaining intact was removed to the University's geology museum.

The geologists said the fact the skeleton was 75 miles inland from the seacoast confirmed the belief that all of the North Carolina coastal plain was the ocean's bed ages ago.

Use For Cotton Surplus College Station, Texas.—(AP)—A plan for taking 300,000 bales of surplus cotton off the market is advanced by Lulu M. Dilworth, home demonstration agent, who proposes that every Southern rural family make two cotton mattresses, each requiring fifty pounds of cotton.

Sensitivity Takes Only One Columbus, O.—(AP)—Centenarians in Ohio don't die of old age. State records show. Of the 32 persons over one hundred years old who died in this State last year, only one succumbed to senility.

Cookies—Plus Imagination Imagination helps in making your cookies. Thus, by using bits of raisins, dates, nuts, colored sugars, and citrons, many different designs can be made on your cookies for holiday guests. For instance, holly is simulated by thinly cut citron and fed cinnamon candy drops.

Novel Place Cards Cut out from magazines little illustrations which show certain hobbies of your party guests. They can be used to make novel and amusing place cards.

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened fairly steady, five to eight points decline in response to low Liverpool cables and under liquidation and foreign selling. Initial offerings were absorbed by covering combined with some trade and local buying and prices held fairly steady after the call.

The opening action of the stock market was encouraging and there was some Wall Street buying with active months showing rallies of 3 or 4 points at the end of the first half hour.

Offerings tapered off after the initial selling had run its course and the market was steadied in the late forenoon.

March contracts sold up to 11.24 and July 11.43, or about one to three points above Saturday's closing. The market at midday was quiet and steady within a point of two of these figures.

N. Y. Stock Market

STOCKS New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—Stocks a nd staples generally sailed in narrow channels today, although there was little change apparent in the trade weather. Equities were turned over in large volume during the early hours and the ticker tape lagged a bit. Inaugural gains of fractions to point or more failed to hold in the majority of instances. There was considerable profit-taking, but trade turned dull on moderate reactions.

Strength of the oils was a feature. Grains, cotton and other commodities were little more than steady. The dollars was about even. Bonds were fairly firm. Wall Street was intensely interested in the forthcoming report and recommendations of Secretary of Commerce Roper on the regulations in stock exchanges which advices from Washington said would be presented to President Roosevelt tomorrow.

Oils retained part of the gains acquired in a broad buying flurry around noon, but most of the dividend eased. Transfers were 2,600,000 shares.

average life span can be prolonged ten years in the near future by choice of diet. No nation yet has ventured to apply the known laws of heredity that result in longer life. But the Japanese study suggests this type of heredity is somehow mingled with moderation; that those who inherit their longevity come from families neither very small nor extra large.

Cities Shorten Life This study was made by Dr. Nakayama, a school hygienist. To him the 10,000 reported on climate, circumstances and manner of living, hygiene, tastes and family records. Living in cities, a tabulation of the 10,000 reports shows, decreases the life span. Aged women are more numerous than aged men. Seaside villages were the most numerous among the habitats of these long-lived Japanese. All villages exceeded all towns for long-lived inhabitants and the towns were ahead of the cities.

The majority of those who reported were agricultural workers. Most were of medium build, but some were corpulent and a few slender. They now go to bed early and rise late. They generally have led quiet lives.

They are no particular about what they eat or drink. Half of them are drinkers, but the women are all non-drinkers.

Middle Class Leads

The majority of these aged Japanese had long-lived grandparents, parents, brothers and sisters. They all had from three to five brothers and sisters. They were found mostly in the middle classes.

In this group it appeared that unmarried persons seldom live to great age. Tall men lived longer than short ones. The majority were eldest sons and daughters and were born of parents still in their twenties.

MAKE TUMBLERS SPARKLE WITH PINCH OF BORAX

A few pinches of borax in very hot water will give your drinking tumblers a sparkling sheen—and you will hardly have to dry them. In fact, if you turn them upside down to drain for a few minutes you will find your glass-washing a completed chore.

New "Knee-Action" Chevrolet Gives Passengers Ride Like a Glide

In the design and development of the new 1934 Chevrolet, particular attention has been given to driver and passenger comfort, all annoying sensations of disconcerting sound and vibration having been eliminated. The upper photo shows the new Chevrolet coach with its long, sleek lines. Wind rush has been eliminated by the Fisher No Draft Ventilators and the new streamlined bodies.

The driver and passengers in the new 1934 Chevrolet get a ride like the glide of an airplane. One of the main factors in improving the riding qualities of the new car to such a great extent is the "Knee-Action"—or independently sprung front wheels, to use the technical term.

So much has been written about independent springing that the public has doubtless concluded that it is something too technical to understand. As a matter of fact, there is nothing complicated about either the principle involved or the construction of the system. Chevrolet's "Knee-Action" enjoys the advantage of being enclosed in a welded weather-tight housing in which the entire spring mechanism and shock absorbers ride up and down in a bath of oil.

An automobile gives a perfect ride when both the front and rear springs have the same "frequency," or tension. Actually this has been impossible to carry out in the past because the front springs had to be over twice as "stiff" as the rear springs in order to hold the front axle, wheels and brakes in place. In independent springing, the wheels and spring mechanism are rigidly attached directly to the frame and there is no front axle. By relieving the front springs of the task of carrying wheels and axle, therefore, it became possible to make the front springs as "soft" as the rear springs. When the new Chevrolet strikes an irregularity in the road, both front and rear move up and down with the same frequency—there is no inclination on the part of the rear end of the car to leap into the air and throw the passengers forward and upward.

Chevrolet's "Knee-Action" has additional advantages all contributing to a comfort in riding never before thought possible in a motor car. There is a decided improvement in handling, steering, safety at high speeds, and tire economy.

In design, the front spring is a neat, compact and efficient unit, as Mr. Holler points out in the above picture. The entire spring mechanism is attached rigidly to the frame. From this enclosed unit the wheels spring vertically at the ends of strong, steel horizontal arms.

PRESIDENT'S BIRTHDAY BALL TO BE GALA AFFAIR

Greenville society has joined the movement to honor President Franklin D. Roosevelt on his birthday, January 30th, to raise funds for an endowment for Warm Springs Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Five thousand balls will be held on this date to honor the President. The ball in Greenville will be held in the Campus building of East Carolina Teachers College. This is the first time that this building has been used for any affair except those given by the college. It is an ideal place for the ball and is large enough to accommodate the large crowd expected. Music will be furnished by Eddie Pool and his orchestra.

President Roosevelt will speak to the nation during the dance, which will be an outstanding feature. R. C. Stokes, Jr., is general chairman of the ball in Greenville and is ably assisted by various committees. Tickets are now on sale at the office of H. A. White & Sons, at the office of the Daily Reflector and from members of the committee.

Sundown Stories

Snowballs
By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"It was lucky we had milk to drink, anyway, while the cow was here," said Willy Nilly, the little gnome-like man who lived with his animal friends in Puddle Middle. "But now I must repair the frozen pipes and get the place in shape. I have so much to do I don't know where to begin."

"Just as soon as I have a little romp in the fresh snow," said Rip the Dog, "I'll be all ready to help you."

"The air is much milder," crowed Top Notch, "and I have been indoors a long time. Yes, cackle-cackle, I do need a breath of fresh air."

"Caw, caw," said Christopher Columbus Crow, "I always did like the winter time. It makes me feel so strong and well. I will be able to do twice the amount of work and will really be of great help to you, Willy Nilly. If I have a little of this good air, too."

"Quack, quack," said Mrs. Quacko Duck, "Mrs. Quacker said if today was nice she was going to have an afternoon tea. She put up all sorts of weeds and delicious things to eat before the cold weather set in. Certainly it is lovely today; so she will expect me."

One by one they all left, and Willy Nilly set to work. He repaired the frozen pipes first of all, then he set the downstairs room to rights. He could see the others outdoors making snowballs and throwing them at each other.

"With a start like this I should get somewhere," Willy Nilly said to himself, but at that moment there came a loud cry.

My Beauty Hint

"dry shampoo" twice a week is an effective aid to hair beauty. Massage dry corn meal thoroughly into the scalp, then brush it out. The treatment will invigorate the scalp, give the hair a natural gloss and keep it fluffy.

DIES FROM INJURIES SUFFERED IN CRASH

Winston-Salem, N. C., Jan. 20.—(AP)—Ralph Charles, 37, died today of a fractured skull suffered when his automobile and one driven by H. R. Williams, of High Point, collided near here last night.

Williams was accompanied by J. Allen Austin, High Point attorney and a former member of the Legislature. Both were slightly injured, but were able to continue their journey to High Point.

CHEVROLET
FOR 1934

*So radically different in the way it runs, rides and responds
 we say*

Drive it only 5 miles
 and you'll never be satisfied with any other low-priced car

 It's here now, for the first time: the car that all America has been standing by to see and drive—Chevrolet for 1934! And if you aren't among the first to attend the gala introductory showing, you're going to miss one of the biggest, most exciting events of the whole motor car year. There never has been a new Chevrolet model with so many basic and sweeping advances as this one. It's different—totally unlike anything you've seen or anything you will see in motor cars for 1934!
