JOHN GURGANUS "TAKEN FOR RIDE" AND SLAIN

Heber Ayers Confesses To The Murder Of Floyd Cox

SAYS SLAYING CAME DURING POKER GAME

Man Sentenced From 25 to 30 Years In Connection With The Murder, Makes a Written Confession to Attorneys Saturday; Prisoner Taken To Raleigh Today to Begin Term

Mystery shrouding the slaying of Floyd Cox, filling station employe, several miles north of Greenville last December, apparently had been cleared up today by a written confession from Heber Ayers that he committed the crime.

Ayers, who was tried for the slaying here about two weeks ago, was convicted of second degree murder and sentenced from 25 to 30 years in state's prison. He filed notice of appeal but abandoned this idea the latter part of last week. Saturday he made the confession in the presence of his attorneys.

Cox's body was found on the Old Stokes road, early one morning with two bullet wounds in the head. He was said to have had over $100 dollars in his pocket at the time but this fact was never clearly established.

Two bullets found in Cox's head were declared by a ballistic expert to have been fired from the gun found under Ayers' bed.

Ayers, in his confession, said he killed Cox after he had been "framed" in a poker game in which Cox, two other men and himself participated.

"I caught them and told Cox about it," the statement said. "Cox called me a dam lie, and I hit him with my fist."

He said the other men, unknown to him, advanced upon him. He made a pass at one with his fist and the other advanced with a soft drink bottle. Backing out of the station, he said the three men followed him. When all three men made for him, he said he pulled his gun and fired twice at Cox. Ayers was to be taken to Raleigh today to begin serving his sentence.

The confession was reported about town Saturday afternoon, and when approached by a representative of this paper, Sheriff Whitehurst said, "The complete confession would not be made known until today and asked that it be kept out of the papers until that time."

His confession follows: To Whom It May Concern:

On the 7th of December 1933 I, Heber Ayers, spent most of the night around Cox's Filling Station engaged part of the time in a poker game. Around twelve o'clock Floyd Cox was fixing to close up the station when a car drove up with two men unknown to me. They stopped, got out and came into the station. Floyd Cox, those two men and myself started a poker game, and while engaged in the game, they framed me. I caught them and told Floyd about it. Floyd said to Ayers that if he said he framed him he told a dam lie. When Floyd said that I raised up and hit Cox with my fist.

Then the other two unknown men raised up and made on me and I made a pass at one of them with my fist and the other grabbed a coca cola bottle and made a pass at me. I backed out of the station, Floyd and the two unknown men came after me. Floyd closing the door behind them and Floyd picked up a piece of iron pipe and Floyd and the other two was making for me, and this instance I pulled my gun and shot Floyd the first shot did not seem to stop Floyd so I shot him the second time in the head and he fell, and this time the other two men jumped in the car and left. I was left there with a dead man on my hands. I did not know what to do so there was a couple of bags in the back of the station I took them, wrapped Floyd's head, put him in Herbert Cox's car, started the car, left the station went up as far as S. V. Clark's station, turned around the corner, went by my brother's, got a match and cigarettes, left, got in the car and went down the highway to the Stokes road, then turned into the old Stokes

WALTER BROWN TESTIFIES IN MAIL PROBE

Former Postmaster General Says no Collusion in Awarding Air Contracts

Washington, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Walter F. Brown, postmaster general in the Hoover Administration, told senate investigators today that in awarding domestic air mail contracts every requirement of the law was observed and that no evidence of collusion between the bidders or the holders of any other air mail contracts appeared or was ever suggested by anyone.

Appearing before the senate air mail investigating committee after charges that collusion and conspiracy had entered into the awarding of contracts, Brown testified that only three out of thirty-four domestic contracts were let during his term of office.

Just prior to his appearance, the former postmaster general issued a statement denying wrongdoing in awarding the contracts and saying it was inconceivable that President Roosevelt with all the facts before him would sanction "such a colossal injustice as the cancellation of all contracts."

Several hundred persons thronged the huge committee room to hear Brown relate his side of the controversy which has stirred Washington for weeks.

Brown said in another statement read to the committee that there was nothing clandestine about the two meetings of air mail operators and postoffice officials here May 19 and June 4, 1930, at which Black has charged the air mail was divided up and contracts let without competitive bidding.

INDIANS REJECTS CHARITY ASKS WORK, NOT RELIEF

Durant, Okla.—(AP)—The Indian can't grasp all of the white man's way of doing things, especially when it comes to poor relief.

An aged Indian living on a farm complained to the county attorney that he couldn't get help for his family. Taken to county relief headquarters, he registered and inquired: "Do I work?" "No," replied the supervisor. "As soon as your circumstances are investigated and your case approved you will be furnished with clothing and food."

"No, no want um, me want work," said the Indian and walked away.

Late News Flashes From Over World

Approve Newspaper Code. Washington, Feb. 19.—(AP)—In approving the newspaper publishers' code today, President Roosevelt made a request that papers with more than 75,000 circulation in cities of more than 750,000, place their news staff on a five-day forty-hour week basis. The President's executive order required that a study be made in 60 days to determine a permanent policy on the employment of children as delivery boys and paper salesmen and further study to establish hour provisions for the editorial staff of all papers. In accepting the code, the President said he was dissatisfied with its child labor provision which provides that boys under 16 may sell papers out of school hours between 7 a. m. and 7 p. m., in winter, and 7 a. m. and 8 p. m., in summer. The report on both questions will be made by Administrator Hugh S. Johnson rather than independently by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, proponent of the code. KING ALBERT OF BELGIUM DIES IN FALL

Hero-Monarch Falls To His Death While Attempting to Climb Mountain

Brussels, Feb. 19.—(AP)—King Albert I, the beloved hero-king of the Belgians, is dead—a victim of the sport of mountain climbing which he loved so well.

His tiny nation has been plunged into the deep sorrow it knew when King Albert was leading his soldiers against overwhelming odds in the World War.

A piece of frost-bitten rock, crumbling in the strong fingers of the royal hand, cost Belgium her ruler, and the world an enlightened monarch in an accident which climaxed what the king had planned as a simple Saturday afternoon of sport.

Death came to the king some time in the late hours of Saturday, but, by a curious quirk of fate, his subjects had no knowledge of his death until early Sunday morning.

For more than 12 hours, while the majority of Belgium slept in the peaceful early Sabbath quiet of this beautiful city, their King Albert lay dead, his skull fractured, in a deep ravine near the village of Namur, 32 miles south of the Belgian capital.

Alone, he had tried to climb a 200-foot cliff, the Rocher de Marches-Dames. The projecting knob of a stone broke off in his hand and he plunged 35 feet to death.

Not until 7:30 a. m., when the church bells at Laeken, the site of the royal palace, tolled out the sad news and the word spread like wildfire through the capital, did the people know their monarch was dead.

NRA CREATES NEW FORMULA FOR PRICES

Measure Expected to Lead to Eventual Abandonment Of Price Fixing

Washington, Feb. 19.—(AP)—The NRA has created a new price formula expected to lead to eventual abandonment of absolute price fixing.

It is designed to prevent sales below reasonable cost. Officials of the recovery agency feel that if the plan proves successful it will make more arbitrary price fixing unnecessary.

The new proposal as set forth in an official memorandum not yet released to the public proposes a stand and price revision for codes. It would permit industry to determine responsible cost in an emergency where destructive price fixing might endanger the maintenance of code.

It would in the future permit price regulation only in emergencies, officials said, and indicates a general backing away from price tampering except in a few instances.

The new provision is recommended in all new codes and may be adopted for old codes if the industry desires.

The new price formula was described as based on the side of selecting the cost of plants of average efficiency and a standard reasonable cost for industry.

POLICE SEEK HIS STEPSON IN SLAYING

Matthew Harrington, Reported Seen With Step-Father, Leaves For New York Early Sunday; Officers Order Harrington Arrested In New York; Three Bullets Fired Into Gurganus' Head

John W. Gurganus, 47-year-old Greenville man, was "taken for a ride" in real gangster style Saturday night, his head riddled with bullets and his body tossed from an automobile down a ten foot embankment on the north side of Tar River.

Officers today were reported to be searching for Matthew Harrington, the dead man's stepson, in connection with the slaying. Harrington was said to have left for New York early Sunday morning.

Gurganus' body was discovered about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon by several negro youths who were walking along the dam supporting the Greenville-Bethel highway. The form was in a sitting position with the back resting against the dam. A pint of whiskey was also said to have been found near the body.

The negro youths immediately went to a nearby filling station and told of their discovery, and officers headed by Sheriff Sam Whitehurst and Coroner A. A. Elwanger, started an investigation.

Harrington was reported to have been seen with Gurganus Saturday afternoon. Harrington, it was stated, borrowed a car from J. Knott Proctor here Saturday morning, and went to Washington where he sent a telegram to someone in New York.

He was later reported to have returned to Greenville and Sunday morning about 1 o'clock attempted to buy whiskey from a filling station on the north side of Tar river while at the gas station, he was said to have been asked to bring some persons back to Greenville, but stated he didn't have time, he was bound for New York. The car was not returned to the owner and it is presumed Harrington left for New York in the machine.

Officers are said to have obtained a court order for seizure of the telegram at Washington, and also to have notified New York to be on the lookout for Harrington.

Gurganus married Harrington's mother, and it was reported that they had not been living together for sometime.

Gurganus, a native of Beaufort county, moved to Greenville about 15 years ago and since that time had been connected in the live stock business. He had been unemployed recently.

Funeral services were conducted from Williams Funeral Home this afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. G. R. Combs, pastor of the Methodist church and burial was made in the Worsley cemetery near Grimesland.

Surviving are his wife and four daughters, Verna, Vadora, Vandalia and Mary Elizabeth; his mother Mrs. O. W. Gurganus, three brothers, R. P. Gurganus, Dave Gurganus, and Josh Gurganus, the latter of Miami, Fla., three sisters Mrs. J. J. Harrell, Rocky Mount, Mrs. W. M. Elks, Greenville, Mrs. Seth Hodges, Grimesland.

BLOND GODDESS A New Serial by Herbert Jensen

SYNOPSIS: Frank Graham, the explorer, and Janice Kent, whose ship was wrecked on the banks of the Amazon in the Yucatan jungle by the natives of the island, were rescued by a publicity agent and a Mexican boy named Juan. They make a dash for freedom in an airplane. Frank seems that the woman reflected on him by the natives will not make him unconscious before the plane reaches the coast.

Chapter 36 JUNGLE AGAIN

ONLY he could retain consciousness a little longer! Vaguely he knew that an airplane flying at normal speed could travel in a minute almost the distance one could travel in a day's beating through heat-laden jungle. Just a half hour more he wanted. His sight grew dimmer. Just a few minutes longer, he prayed. He must get the ship to the coast. The beach, he knew, was one long landing field.

Through bleared eyes he observed that the jungle thickness below was spotted with many savannahs. Again he tried for attitude, but his muscles refused to supply strength sufficient to haul back the stick.

Then ahead of him, abruptly, he saw tree tops. A cloak of darkness obscured his sight for an instant. When his vision cleared he felt the upper branches slap against the landing gear.

Savagely he fought the controls. The effort sent blinding pains through his brain. He was conscious of a great crashing noise.

Cons later, it seemed, he dreamed that he was struggling through in calculable jungles. It was very real to him. The smells of rotting vegetation were bitter in his nostrils. Trees and brush waved like unreal phantoms before his eyes.

From time to time a variety of tastes spread over his palate, as if he had eaten of jungle fruits; twice his brain dwelt in dull wonder that water could taste so sweet even in a dream.

His body felt as though it were encased within hot metal. When that nightmare became too painful to endure, all his senses became blank again. After a period of time the dreams would recur.

When finally he awakened, it seemed that he had been sleeping forever. The air about him was cool and gracious. He opened his eyes.

He was lying in a palm clump. He saw the crooping fronds above, outlined against a sky brilliant with stars. Memory swooped upon his consciousness like a great and evil bird. He struggled to a sitting position. A small fire burned nearby.

"Janice!" he cried. "Janice!" "What is it Frank?"

She stood before him. The firelight illumined her. He stared in amazement. Her trim costume was stained and torn, her laced boots were cut to tatters.

He observed that her face seemed thinner of contour, and the skin was pink and peeling as if it had been blistered. At first he thought she was wearing gloves but a closer glance showed him that her hands were bound with white strips of cloth.

"Where's the plane?" he asked. "What happened? We crashed, I know."

She looked at him with an expression of puzzlement. "Of course," she answered. "This morning." Her face lighted with dawning understanding. "You were delirious. The ship went down in a savannah. It rolled awhile over the open until the ground became swampy. It struck something and went over on its nose, and then righted itself. It sank to the lower wings. It started to burn just a little at first, then very fiercely.

"YOU sat there holding to the control as if you were made of wood. Your eyes were wide open. I thought for a horrible instant that..."

"I know," said Frank softly "Go on."

"There was one of those big knives the natives use, in a leather case, strapped beside the fire extinguisher. I cut the belt that strapped you in. The buckle was twisted and I couldn't loosen it. The flames reached you. You began to move then, I tell you." She smiled wanly.

"I had to leave the rifle; it was too heavy. I knew we had to get away from there. I thought the smoke from the burning plane might bring those natives after us."

She shuddered a little. Her eyes filled with tears, and she dropped to her knees beside him. "Poor Horatio Greene, and that little Mexican boy!" She wept quite openly now, and Frank threw his arm over the slim shoulders in a clumsy attempt to soothe her. His own throat was tight.

She pressed her bandaged hands against her eyes.

"At the time I couldn't understand you. You staggered through the jungle in a daze, striking at the creepers. Sometimes you would fall, and lay as if you would never get up. But you did."

"Once you fell in a pool of water. I got you out. Your face was covered with slimy things that wiggled. I brushed them all off and fished in the pool for the knife you lost."

Frank glanced at her hands. "No," she said, anticipating his question. "They were blistered from the knife. After a while you didn't creep at the vines any more, but would just crash at them with your body. So I walked ahead and chopped."

"You did that?" Graham's voice was incredulous. "The girl nodded and hurried on. 'It wasn't so bad. This afternoon, when I thought I couldn't fight the creepers another minute, we stumbled on an old road that seemed to lead in the direction we wanted to go. It was like a concrete road at home, only the stone blocks were smaller.'

"I've heard of them," said Frank. "The old Mayas built them. Usually, though, they've been swallowed by the jungle."

"This one was a godsend. We followed it until dark. Then it stopped. Just like that." She made a downward gesture with her arm.

"I WAS like walking off an open bridge. I stepped out and my foot touched nothing. I fell—I don't know how far I fell—into some brush and rolled out of it down a hole. I think I screamed, but you didn't hear me."

"I was shaken, but not much hurt. I think I called to you but you didn't answer. I thought I was in some kind of a well, and you had walked on, missing it."

"I was really terrified then." She smiled a little apologetically. "I think I was too frightened to call to you. I sat there—I don't know for how long. Then the moon came up..."

"You were lying just a little way from me. Your face was terribly scratched..."

"There were matches in your coat. I made this fire. There were clouds of mosquitoes." A tear glistened on her cheek and fell. "I don't know where we are. We're lost, Frank! Do you think there's any chance..."

She wept tiredly. Frank tightened the rim across her shoulders with awkward reassurance. She rested her cheek against his shoulder. It seemed that she fell asleep in that instant. He held her thus for an hour, staring somberly at the fire's glow.

Curiously he thought of Spin Winslow's remark made weeks—or was it years?—before. Janice Kent, he had said with his characteristic cynicism, was whalebone and gristle under her soft exterior.

But he hadn't meant that she could stand this hardship. The routine of the studios, however exacting, had at the day's end warm baths, massage and proper food. Here—no one knew better than Frank Graham—the privations of the jungle would be brutally swift and murderous.

The rifle was gone. He discovered in a glance that his pistol was not in the holster. There was a sagging weight in his coat pocket—ammunition—but worthless without the gun.

They had the machete, but that was little use as a food-getter. It would serve to hack a trail through the jungle; that was all.

How far they were from the coast he had no idea whatsoever. Distances in the jungle are not computed in miles but in days of travel. They had no food—no means to provide themselves with food. Water, even, might prove to be a problem.

They must depend upon the afternoon rain, or else drink the brackish and germ-thickened water from the swamps they might pass. Furthermore a casual wound, the small mishap or a thorn scratch might become infected and prove more deadly than snake bite.

As he watched the fire dwindled. Mosquitoes sang closer. A slight sound in the surrounding darkness made him realize that jaguars were ferocious cats and might be lurking about.

Gently he allowed the limp form of his companion to rest upon the ground. He took off his coat and covered with it the upper part of her body. He threw fresh fuel upon the fire, taking care that some of it was green.

If there is any redeeming feature to the sales tax it is the fact that it is collected in smaller amounts and is not felt so keenly by the taxpayer, but even this one feature is not sufficient to warrant this extra bonus the people in Pitt County are having to pay for this privilege of paying a portion of their taxes a penny at the time instead of in a lump sum once a year.

Washington To Play Here On Tuesday

Greenville High School will play Washington Tuesday night February 20. This will be Greenville's last game before entering the Basketball tournament which will be at the high school Friday.

I went about half way from the house to the hard surface and stopped the car and put Floyd out of the car, taken the key and put around his finger and took a cigarette out and a box of matches out of his pocket, also the small change to leave the impression he had been robbed. I then returned to Stokes Highway and walked on until I came to the Greenville Highway and at the intersection of the Greenville and Stokes highway I got on the A. C. GETS 12 MONTHS FOR BREAKING AND ENTERING Smithfield, Feb. 19—Harvey Pendergraph, a young white man who lives in Selma, was tried in Superior Court Friday and convicted of breaking into the grocery store of H. T. Bailey, in Selma, on December 16th last, and for this crime was sentenced to serve twelve months upon the roads.

The evidence tended to show he had only recently gotten off the roads and the temptation to continue in his career of crime was too great. He took a supply of candy, tobacco and groceries.

The Senior Class of East Carolina Teachers College are presenting this year as their class play, "The Family Upstairs." It is a comedy of American life in a typical average American home. It is a play that will tug at your heartstrings and make you laugh when you least expect it. In order to accommodate the people of Greenville, the class will present the play on two evenings—Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week at eight o'clock in the auditorium of the Austin building.

COMMUNITY SING AT COLLEGE SUNDAY, MARCH 25 OUTSTANDING EVENT

A big musical feast will be spread out into an excellent program of singing and entertainment in the Campus building of East Carolina Teachers College, in Greenville next Sunday afternoon at 3:30, and it will be free. It will be a combination of community singing and concert music.

Several unusual features will be included in the specials presented on this unique program. Among them will be the Goldsboro Male Chorus, recently heard in Greenville in the production of "De Glory Road," the Campbell College Glee Club, a mixed organization of some thirty singers. These talented young warblers are winning popularity everywhere they are heard. In addition there will be a male quartet, solos, and duets. A variety that will have something for all present.

The special feature on the program will be the presentation of "Rhythm In Color and Melody." Joe Johnson will paint in colors the scene of the first movement of Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata." Miss Estelle Stephenson of Dunn, will play the composition at the piano. The presentation has provided a thrilling experience for every audience that has witnessed it in previous sings.

This is the fourth sing in the Eastern Carolina series and they grew better and better. The Greenville program is being sponsored by the Greenville Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, the Woman's Club, the Junior Woman's Club, the Daily Reflector and East Carolina Teachers College.

The whole program will be blended with the harmonies and melodies of the old favorites. Song sheets will be provided with the words of some of the good old hymns, folk songs of yesterday, still dear to the hearts of everybody, and some of the ballads of a few years back, as well as some of the newer ones. The program will be under the direction of Pat Alderman.

BESHEL TALKS HERE SUNDAY

Catholic Priest Speaks On "Social Justice" At Local Catholic Church.

Yesterday in the Catholic Church Father Beshel of the N. C. Apostolate, spoke on the principles of Social Justice. "The church," he said "is vitally interested in social justice because she has at heart the interest of every human being, for to her was given, by her divine Founder, the obligation to teach all nations all things necessary for their eternal salvation. The church has an answer for all questions that pertain to faith and morals."

The speaker condemned "the choseler" and those who used the code for their advantage to the very people the code was intended to help. "No man may make money at the price of the life-blood of his employees and their children. If a man in business cannot pay his employees a living wage, then that man has no right to be in business. In effecting reform, charity, which is the bond of perfection, must play a leading part."

"One reason why there is such an unequal distribution of wealth is the fact that the stockholders have been taking all the profits and did nothing; the workers produced the profits and received none. The stockholders should be paid a just rate of interest, about six per cent, for the use of their money, but the workers should share in the profits." Quoting Pope Pius XI, the speaker said, "Wealth which is constantly being augmented by social and economic progress, must be so distributed among the various classes of society that the common good of all will be promoted. One class is forbidden to exclude the other from a share in the profits."

The speaker said that President Roosevelt has tried to follow Christian principles to bring about a reconstruction of the social order and that the President realizes that "human prosperity is not brought about by a multiplication of material things and luxury, but by integrity, unselfishness, responsibility and justice."

In conclusion, the speaker insisted on a reformation of manners and morals in keeping with the Ten Commandments if we are to have a reconstruction of our social order on a basis that will endure. "It is economic sickness," he said, "is not so much a disease of the head as of the heart. It is organic. The NRA, CWA and other programs are helps, but if people do not conform to the spirit of the law as well as to the letter, all our talk about codes will be 'as tinkling cymbal or sounding brass.' We must recognize an authority above that which is human. Unless the Lord build the house they labor in vain that build it."

Philco Broadcasts From EAQ Madrid

When owners of Philco all-wave radio receivers throughout the world tune in station EAQ at Madrid Spain at 7:30 o'clock, Eastern Standard time, tonight, they will hear the first of two programs that are being specially dedicated to them by the Philco Radio and Television Corporation of Philadelphia. This will be the first time, according to H. M. Blount of Carolina Kelvinator Co., local Philco distributors, that an American radio firm has paid tribute to the owners of its products with special short-wave broadcasts from a foreign radio station.

The first program was set for Monday evening, Mr. Blount explains, in order that it might be picked up by the liner Manhattan on its way from England to New York and on which will be Carleton J. Dyer, managing director of the English plant of the Philco company. Mr. Dyer will be on his way to the home office of the company in Philadelphia.

"The second program from EAQ in Madrid will be broadcast at the same hour one week later, February 26," Mr. Blount announces. "On both these broadcasts," he says "will appear many of the radio celebrities and musical organizations which have made this station a favorite among Philco short-wave listeners the world over. Station EAQ is one of the most powerful broadcasters in Europe and is consistently heard in America and throughout the world. Philco owners should set their dials at 9.87 megacycles to receive these broadcasts."

"Owners of the powerful new Philco all-wave set," Mr. Blount declares are getting daily and nightly thrills from reception of programs thousands of miles away. Their ability to reproduce these foreign programs, as well as broadcasts programs, with all their true naturalness and color and at room volume, have made these radios exceptionally popular and is the main reason why Philco is today the greatest name in radio."

STRTS DEMOBILIZING FIELD FORCES OF PWA

Washington, Feb. 19—(AP)—In a new step to demobilize the field forces of the Public Works Administration, Secretary Ickes, as public works administrator, tonight ordered services of regional advisers and state advisory boards throughout the country terminated February 28.

The positions were created when the Public Works Administration first began allocating funds for non-Federal projects from the $3,300,000,000 appropriated by Congress.

Recently the Secretary ordered that no further applications be forwarded to Washington, because about $3,500,000,000 of new applications were already on hand for consideration in the event Congress augments the public works funds. Small allotments now being considered by the public works board would be made out of funds previously earmarked but rescinded. Except for an emergency fund of $65,000,000 the entire public works fund has been exhausted.

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 19—(AP)—Cotton futures opened fairly steady five to nine points decline in response to lower Liverpool cables and under liquidation and southern selling.

After selling up later in the morning from 12.28 to 12.34 May eased again, active months ruling around 6 to 8 lower at the end of the first half hour.

The market was comparatively quiet later in the morning. There was sufficient trade demand and scattered buying to hold prices fairly steady in a narrow range.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Feb. 19—(AP)—Stocks displayed symptoms of spirited last trade today and most of the leaders shuffled along in a trendless fashion.

A few specialists showed signs of life but gains in the early hours lacked the lustre of the past week's session.

Silver was a bright spot in the speculative firmament, spot metal advancing 1-2 cent an ounce to 5.46 within one eighth of a cent of its four year peak.

Grains were easier as was cotton and rubber. Sterling was stronger than the dollar but gold was narrow.

Bonds were again firm. Easier tendencies among some of the old lists gave the list an irregular appearance in the late trading.

The Largest user OF FINE TURKISH TOBACCOS ...one reason why Luckies taste better, smoother In Turkey too, only the finest tobaccos are selected for Lucky Strike—the mildest leaves, the most delicate, the most aromatic. Lucky Strike is the world's largest user of fine Turkish tobaccos. Then these tender, delicate Turkish leaves are blended with choice tobaccos from our own Southland—to make your Lucky Strike a cigarette that is fully packed—so round, so firm—free from loose ends. That's why Luckies taste better, smoother. "It's toasted"—for throat protection—for finer taste. From the Diamond Horse-Shoe of the Metropolitan Opera House Saturday at 1:45 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, over the Red and Blue Networks of NBC, LUCKY STRIKE will broadcast the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York in the complete Opera, "Faust." NOT the top leaves—they're underdeveloped—they are harsh! The Cream of the Crop "The tenderest, mildest, smoothest tobacco" NOT the bottom leaves—they're inferior in quality—coarse and always sandy!
