WALK-OUT OF AUTO WORKERS IS PREVENTED

Agreement in Labor Controversy Reached Last Night Averting Strike

Washington, March 26.—(AP)—President Roosevelt looks for a new order of relations between the working man and his employer as a result of his eleventh hour settlement of the controversy that threatened a general strike in the automobile industry. He and Hugh S. Johnson obtained agreement of executives and labor leaders last night after a week of exhaustive negotiations. It established representation for all employees in dealing with the management while extending protection to the unions against intimidation and interference.

"It is my hope," the President said, "this system may develop a kind of working council in industry in which all groups of employees, whatever may be their choice of organization or representation, may participate in joint conferences with their employers."

He held this as a basis for a more comprehensive, adequate and equitable system of relations than ever existed in a large industry.

Under the arrangement the NRA plans to complete before nightfall a three-man board, one neutral and a member on either side. It will sit in Detroit and there settle all questions between employers and employees including discharges and claims of discrimination.

The name of Richard E. Byrd, Pontiac, Michigan, was handed in by a spokesman for the automobile workers as the name of their representative on the board. The motor executives had several men in mind to present but put off a choice until later in the day. Johnson also had several in mind to serve as the third or neutral member. The decisions of this board shall be final and it shall have access to all payrolls and the union lists. On the basis of these three shall apportion the number of employees representing each class of the American Federation of Labor locals, company unions or other unions in the ratio of the number belonging to each. The union lists would not be disclosed to the manufacturers without an order from the President himself.

Find Body of Negro Missing Eight Weeks

The body of Willie Tucker, Beaufort county negro about 23 years of age, was found floating in Tranter's Creek Saturday afternoon just eight weeks after he had disappeared. Tucker was last seen alive on Saturday afternoon January 27 as he paddled a boat on the creek.

The next morning the boat was found floating in the creek and Tucker could not be found Saturday afternoon. Robert L. Griffin, while fishing in the creek came upon Tucker's body floating in the water and immediately reported it to nearby residents.

During the negro's absence there had been rumors in the neighborhood of foul play and when the body was located on the Pitt county side of the creek Saturday Coroner A. A. Ellwanger, of this city, was called to the scene to investigate. The body was badly decomposed, the coroner stated, but no evidence of foul play could be determined and the coroner's jury returned a verdict that Tucker met his death by drowning when he fell from a boat in Tranter's creek.

New Style Blue Eagle Here Now

The present emblem will be supplanted by another blue eagle for all employers operating under codes. The new eagle has the letters NRA between its outstretched wings.

Under its talons is the word "code" the trade or industry registration number, and "1934". In smaller type are the words "property of the U. S.—not for sale", and the patent design number. Counterfeiting or mutilation is illegal. This move is to make certain that only concerns complying with codes display the emblem. The emblem will be distributed by the Secretary of Retail Code Authority for Greenville, and concerns applying will have to prove to the satisfaction of the Code Authority that code requirements are being complied with before the emblem will be issued. Those applying will be required to sign for the emblem on receipt. Being the property of the government it can be taken back by the NRA in case of code violation.

Hawaii's 1933 pineapple pack of approximately 8,000,000 cases was estimated to have a value of $22,400,000.

DELAY TRIAL OF JEAN NASH'S SON

Because the boat bringing his mother, the former Jean Nash, from Europe to United States was delayed, the trial of Andrew B. Kirwan (left) on a charge of murder on the high seas was postponed for three days at New York. Kirwan is alleged to have stabbed William Sessoms to death on board an ocean liner. His mother, now the wealthy Mme. Paul Dubonnet, will attend the trial. (Associated Press Photo)

'MONOPOLIES' UNDER CODE PROTECTION IS PROBLEM FOR THE ADMINISTRATION

By BYRON PRICE

The opinion is gaining ground in Washington that the government may have gone too far in permitting practices which ordinarily would be punishable under the anti-trust laws. A decided change of front is not impossible.

President Roosevelt, himself, is concerned about charges of price-fixing, unfair competition, and other monopolistic policies which are being put in operation in some industries under the protective clauses of the new codes.

Whether more revision of the codes will accomplish what Mr. Roosevelt wants to do is problematical. Senator Brah had a most interested and respectful hearing when he told the senate recently that the national recovery act should be amended, and the provision suspending the anti-trust law repealed.

The theory at first was that business was in such dire straits it would think patriotically of national recovery as a whole if given a larger measure of self-government, and would take no unfair advantages. But with respect to several industries, Washington is beginning to be less confident of that.

Trade Commission Speaks

The Federal Trade Commission, which up to now has been more or less the ugly duckling of this commission era, is largely responsible for keeping the question always in sight.

For some 20 years before NRA and AAA and all their works were through of, the trade commission had been negotiating codes of fair competition and uncovering anti-trust law violations. Out of its vast experience it never seemed quite so trustful of big business as some other branches of the government.

The commission swallowed its disappointment when the laws against monopoly were suspended and the new and much advertised codes were turned over to NRT and AAA. It bided its time, but the corridors of its ramshackle old quarters hummed with speculation about what was going on in the shiny new offices of the freshly empowered code agencies a few blocks away.

Now the commission has begun to speak openly. In two days it took two significant steps. It directly attacked permissive clauses of the NRA's steel code, and declared with respect to a milk case from Illinois that AAA was permitting practices which ordinarily would be adjudged in restraint of trade.

Same Old Questions

The whole sequence of events has reverted major attention on the trust question for the first time in many years.

Mr. Roosevelt, faces the same problem which has worried more than one of his predecessors: whether it is better to give business more rein, so that it can accomplish real economies and betterments by concerted action, or to forbid that concerted action because of the abuses to which it may be put.

Some presidents have decided one way, some the other; and it is a testimony to the complexity of the problem that whichever way the question was answered in the past, trouble ensued. Perhaps Mr. Roosevelt can find the happy medium.

With both the trusts and the tariff back in the front row of political controversy, just as they were in the early years of the century, a good deal of force is taken away from those oft-repeated allusions to the new day in which we are supposed to be living.

BEGIN TRIAL FOR MURDER ON HIGH SEAS

New York, March 26.—(AP)—The first trial for murder on the high seas in the southern New York district since 1928, got under way today in court before Federal Judge Robert A. Inch, where Andrew Donaldson Kirwan, 23-year-old son of the former Jean Nash, is the accused. The case was called before Judge William Bondy and was immediately sent to Judge Inch for trial.

Kirwan's mother, now Mme. Paul Dubonnet, of Paris, known as the best dressed woman in Europe, took her seat at the defense counsel table. Also at the counsel table was Kirwan's grandmother, Mrs. Emma Donaldson, with whom he lives.

Kirwan is charged in a federal indictment alleging first degree murder for the fatal stabbing of Gilliam Sessoms of Seattle, Wash., in an argument over religion aboard the liner President Garfield, February 10. Sessoms died a few days later in a Staten Island hospital and the case came under federal jurisdiction because he suffered his fatal wounds on the high seas.

To Investigate Wirt Statement

Washington, March 26.—(AP)—A congressional investigation appeared probable today of the statement of William A. Wirt, Gray Ind., that members of the "Roosevelt brain trust" were seeking to overthrow the government.

Late News Flashes From Over World

Restore Pay Cut. Washington, March 26.—(AP)—Providing President Roosevelt approves, federal employees will have one-third of their 15 per cent of the cut in their pay restored as of last February 1, and a second third restored July 1. The Senate decided today in voting, before returning to the veterans' compensation question, to yield to the House instead of insisting on restoration of the entire amount that was cut off. Whether the President will sign the bill is still uncertain, however, depending on what shape the bill finally reaches him.

Free of the veterans question for a time the House put more time on the bill to grant the president wide tariff bargaining powers. Debate ran about as expected administrationists favoring the measure and Republicans against.

Before returning to the reciprocal tariff bill the House went through the final motions of the temporary air mail and cattle commodity measures, the first regularizing army flying of the mails temporarily now goes to the President.

AGED LADY PASSED AWAY SATURDAY

Mrs. Phyllie Laughinghouse, over 95 years of age, the oldest white woman in Pitt county, passed away late Saturday afternoon at the home of her daughter Mrs. Mack Smith near Shermerside, this county.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon at three o'clock at Pleasant Hill Free Will Baptist church followed by interment at Oakley Cemetery. Death was the result of illness over a period of about two months together with infirmities of age. Services were conducted by Rev. W. G. Ennis, pastor of the church.

At the time of her death Mrs. Laughinghouse's age was 95 years, three months and six days. She was a native of this county and had spent her entire life in the Shermerside community. For years she had been a member of Pleasant Hill Free Will Baptist church and was its oldest member both in age and in years of membership. She was widely known in the community and well beloved. On the 18th of the past December she celebrated her 95th birthday at which time the great majority of her children, grandchildren and kinspeople gathered to enjoy the day with her. At that time she was still active and the day was an enjoyable event for her.

She is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Mack Smith, Mrs. Victoria Adams, Mrs. Maggie Lewis and Mrs. Susie Taylor; one son J. H. Laughinghouse, all of this county. Other survivors include 27 grandchildren and 62 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services for the funeral include six grandsons as follows: W. M. H. H., and P. G. Laughinghouse, Dave Taylor, R. E. Adams and Johnnie Lewis.

'HOLY WEEK' SERVICES HERE

Good Attendance at First of Series of Services This Morning

A good attendance marked the opening of the Holy Week services held in the Methodist church this morning, at which Rev. W. A. Lillycrop was the speaker.

At the service tomorrow morning Rev. A. W. Fleishmann will deliver the sermon on "Conquering Christians." The congregational singing at these services is under the leadership of Mr. J. H. Rose.

Since the services last only a half hour, closing promptly at 8:30 it is possible to attend them before going to one's place of business. The school authorities have granted permission to attend, if they so desire. It is expected that the attendance will increase daily during the remainder of the week.

SPILMAN TO LECTURE AT CAMPBELL COLLEGE

Bale's Creek, March 26.—Dr. B. W. Spilman, of Kingston, field secretary of the Sunday School Board, Southern Baptist Convention, will give a series of chapel talks beginning Monday on "A Literary Portrait of Jesus." Dr. Spilman is a distinguished alumnus of Campbell and one of the most devoted friends of the late president. After graduating at Wake Forest and at the Louisville Theological Seminary, he came to Campbell and took a business course.

MOTOR STRIKE PLANS SUSPENDED

INSURANCE SUIT ENDS IN MISTRIAL

Jury Unable to Agree in Case of Hardee Against Insurance Company

The $1,900 suit of Grover Hardee against the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Company in superior court here resulted in a mistrial late Saturday afternoon after the jury had the case for about six hours and found themselves unable to reach agreement. Hearing of the case was begun Thursday and consumed all the time of the court until it reached the jury about noon Saturday.

The jury made its report about 6:45 Saturday evening and was discharged by Judge Frank A. Daniels, of Goldsboro, who presided over last week's sessions. Hardee's claim against the insurance company was for losses he had suffered by fire but the company contended that his policy had lapsed at the time.

A second week of court for the trial of civil cases got under way this morning with Judge J. Paul Frizzelle, of Snow Hill, presiding.

This week's sessions was also to have been presided over by Judge Daniels but by agreement he opened court today at Clinton in place of Judge Frizzelle the later taking over the sessions here.

Century's Weather Records Foretell a Warm Spring

By F. B. COLTON

Washington.—(AP)—The first crocus, the first day warm enough to go barefooted, and the first day you can go in swimming ought to come early this year. Unless all signs have failed the weather bureau it will be a warm spring.

Although that's not an official forecast, it's the general conclusion drawn from bureau records going back for more than 100 years. They show that, generally speaking, warm winters follow warm autumns, warm springs come on the heels of warm winters, and—prepare for the worst—hot summers follow warm springs.

The winter just ended was a warm one, warmer than normal over nine-tenths of the United States. So, if the past is any guide to the future, bring up your overcoat and get out your bathing suit early.

But if you plan any early gardening, you'll probably need garden hose along with your rake. The spring is getting off to a dry start in most sections of the country according to the weather bureau, with a serious drought already raging in the northwest.

Pick Your Own Spring

There are really two springs in the United States, which don't coincide, and you can take your choice. One, the official Weather Bureau spring, began March 1 and is almost one-third over already. In general, so far, it has brought colder than normal weather to the eastern half of the country and abnormal warmth in the western half.

The other spring is the astronomical spring, which began March 21 when the earth moved into such a position that the sun now shines more strongly on the hemisphere north of the equator than on the southern hemisphere. It more near-

NEW ORLEANS HIT BY STORM EARLY TODAY

Five Blocks Were Levelled in Two Minutes by Terrific Wind Storm

New Orleans, March 26.—(AP)—A thunder squall of great intensity blew down at least 75 houses in five blocks of the Edgewood section of New Orleans shortly after eight o'clock today. At least a dozen injured persons were brought out of the wreckage by an hour after the catastrophe no deaths had been reported. A baby was reported to be imprisoned, dead or alive under a house.

The wind swooping, rising in stinging blows struck with terrific force, the residents said. All of a sudden it turned dark as midnight, lights went out and a roaring whistling crashing noise followed. The blow had come and gone in two minutes but left destruction and panic in its wake. When the wind struck there were screams of horror from men, women and children and when police and firemen arrived on the scene they found families, dazed with fright, wandering about in a downpour of rain. Live wires and bursted gas mains offered another menace and the police herded the families out of the stricken area into neighbor's homes. Particular care was taken with small children who had become separated from their panic stricken parents. For two hours the residents were hysterical to give an accurate account of their experiences and were digging into debris searching for their possessions.

The five blocks area presented a mass of twisted and torn houses, felled telephone poles and smashed automobiles and garages. Roofs were blown into the streets and houses were turned on end.

The wind first struck a garage on St. Cloud Avenue, wrecking the building and crushing about 20 automobiles. It then skipped two blocks to level a filling station. It roared upon the five block area where it turned the neighborhood into wreckage and pandemonium. The section consisted mostly of one story frame dwellings and was occupied by approximately 400 persons of moderate means.

PLAYING WITH SHOTGUN BOY WOUNDS COMPANION

Fayetteville, March 26.—Jethro Freeman, small Negro boy from Parkton, is in the Highsmith Hospital here seriously injured from a gunshot wound inflicted accidentally it was said, by a friend with whom he was playing. The load, fired at close range, entered his left hip. It is believed he has a good chance to recover.

Hold Country Club Meeting Tomorrow Night

The annual meeting of the stock holders of the Greenville Country Club will be held at Sheppard Memorial Library tomorrow night at eight o'clock, and R. C. Stokes, Jr., club president, this morning stated that he hoped a full membership as well as other persons interested in the Country Club would be present. As a result of lagging interest in the club and the recent fire, the organization finds itself in financial difficulties and one of the chief topics of discussion before tomorrow night's meeting will be whether or not to make an effort to continue to maintain a Country Club for Greenville or to let the property go under foreclosure procedure.

Three-Legged Chick Thriving

Shreveport, La., March 26.—(AP)—A three-legged chick, normal in every other respect, was hatched on the farm of J. L. Moore. He says it runs around with the brood and is growing just as fast as the others.

LIBRARY FINDS HENSCRIP OF SPEECH BY LAFAYETTE

Lexington, Ky.—(AP)—Transylvania college located in Lexington was one of six American schools to confer honorary degrees on General LaFayette when he visited the United States in 1825. It was learned recently.

The disclosure was made by the Huntington library in California which found a manuscript of the address the general made in accepting the degree. A photostatic copy has been obtained by the college.

Other colleges that honored LaFayette were Bowdoin, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Harvard and William and Mary.

Nearly 13,000 acres of farm land owned by Indians of the Kiowa reservation in Oklahoma have been transferred in a soil conservation program.

DON'T HIDE BEHIND THE SCHOOLS

Previously we have had much to say in this column regarding the propaganda being spread to the effect that but for the sales tax we would have no schools and thereby endeavoring to gain friends for this form of taxation. It has been and still is our opinion that the sales tax is with us because those "other sources" from which the state should have derived revenues for the schools were powerful enough not only to evade further taxation at the hands of the last General Assembly but to shift a portion of the taxes already being borne by them to the shoulders of the masses of our state, those least able to pay. It seems that the propaganda continues and even the Governor, speaking before the gathering of teachers in Raleigh on Saturday let it be known that we cannot afford to give up our schools and therefore it is necessary for us to continue the sales tax. We agree heartily with the News & Observer in the following editorial in which that paper declares it is high time that all the ills of our state are not blamed upon the schools. The Observer says:

"If I had to choose between the sales tax, as much as I loathe it, and the schools, God helping me, I'd choose the schools." Governor Ehringhaus told the members of the North Carolina Education Association, who applauded vigorously.

The Governor meant, we take it, that as between tolerance toward the sales tax with unimpaired schools and the repeal of the sales tax at the cost of the schools, he would take his stand by the tax and the schools.

The Governor might have been happier had he generalized. It is conceivable that the choice to be made may be between the sales tax and some other sort of tax. I am not going to stand for the repeal of any tax unless something is put in its place to keep the schools open," the Governor promised.

Certainly there can be no confusion about the Governor's certain loyalty to the schools. There ought to be none about any North Carolina Legislature's loyalty.

The Governor, it is recalled, professed his loyalty to the schools long before he proclaimed his advocacy of the sales tax. He did that during his primary campaign when, in company with other candidates, he announced his devotion to the principle of a State-operated school system supported by revenue "from sources other" than ad valorem taxes on property.

the desirability of the sales tax, should now seem to predicate the continued sufficiency of the schools on the continued levy of the sales tax.

There was the old whiskey tax of tainted memory. Whiskey was sacrosanct because its taxes supported the schools. Unquestionably the State's ultimate action on prohibition was deferred for years because of local concern, not so much for whiskey as for the money with which the whiskey supplied for the schools. Then the schools, freed from the liquor tax and surviving, were wedded to the property tax. And this in turn became so utterly unbearable as to threaten public education. As between the property tax and impaired educational facilities, it is altogether possible that North Carolina, without the contented itself in 1931, would have contented itself with lower taxes and poorer schools. The commitment of North Carolina by Constitution and statute to a State system of schools is not contingent upon any schedule of taxation. It is a charge upon the whole revenues of the commonwealth as the schools are upon the conscience of the commonwealth. The sales tax may remain or it may fall. There's sure to be a mighty fight over it.

At any rate, let's leave the schools out of it and keep the record clear. Evaporation of 295,000 acre feet of water lowered the level of Utah lake more than four feet last year.

LUMBERMAN FATALLY HURT BY FALLING TREE

Fayetteville, March 26—Hector Patterson, 20-year-old Negro lumberman, died in a local hospital from a fracture skull after being brought here from a logging camp near Clinton. A tree fell on him while he was working in the woods Friday.

New Orleans is not at the mouth of the Mississippi river but nearly 100 miles upstream.

Judith Lane

by JEANNE BOWMAN

SYNOPSIS: Judith Lane has reorganized the old Bevin Construction Company, acting as agent of Bevin. But she must face the enmity of Morton Lampere, formerly Bevin's attorney, and of Mrs. Bevin. Judith's determination to carry out Bevin's plan to build the big hotel here, may also wreck her domestic happiness, for she is the wife of Norman Dale, and Norman is Lampere's law partner.

Chapter 19 TRAGIC INCIDENT

THE sloping green roof, the slim pillars, the green shutters, the tiny balcony jutting out above the entrance, each had been dreamed out by the two of them, sketched roughly on letter books, then turned over to the architect.

Slowly she entered and stood in the hall, pulling off tight gloves. Delphy came in from the kitchen. "Law-ee, you is late—"

"What are all the lights on for, Delphy?"

"Ma'ss Norman, he say there's a mite a company comin' t'night. Miz and Miz Bevin and Miz Dale and Mista Lampere—"

"Norman," Judith turned to her husband who had come into the hall from his den, "is Lampere coming here?"

up—"Ma's Lampere, he say he'd like to talk to Miz Dale, alone. . . ." "Tell him Mrs. Dale has retired," said Judith.

She shrugged out of jacket and skirt, went to the wardrobe, reached in and drew out the first robe. She had slipped into it before she realized it was the emine trimmed peach-glow she had worn the night of Tom Bevin's death.

"Norman, was it Lampere's idea they meet here?" she asked as she stood before him tying the folds of belt.

"Yes, but he came at my invitation."

Judith stood on tiptoe, slipped white arms about his neck and brought his head down to hers—"Normy, I understand so much more than you think I do. I'd like to tell you my side of the story, but it's useless, you're too prejudiced to understand. Kiss me goodnight and tell them down there that I'm . . . oh I know a nice Lampere ef'm, "prostrated from the ordea. of the afternoon."

BUT when he had kissed her lingeringly, and had left her she was no longer poised, cool and self-contained. She trembled with a nervous chill and Delphy, coming up, snuggled her into a blanket, in a deep chair and brought a pot of hot chocolate (her panacea for all ills) and a hot brick. After the old colored woman had left, her kindness hung about Judith like an aura, a comforting aura. She looked out of the window on the swale and beyond to the grove of trees stretching east. She loved it all . . . this home, and Norman.

She drowsed a little, then sat up alert as Mathile's laugh sounded from the hall. Judith thought of the sob scene in the office that afternoon.

The sound of motors came from the driveway, meshing of gears, then silence. Soon Norman would come up and they would discuss things and perhaps find a way to compromise.

The moon was topping the grove as it had topped the Gulf horizon that night . . . eons ago it seemed to Judith. She had stood on the trawler deck and watched the shadows.

There had been a triangle and she with the strange premonition of women-kind had sensed the shadow as more than a filament of fancy. One black bar had dissolved . . . one life had faded, and yet the triangle seemed to hold its place in her life.

Word by word she recalled her conversation with Norman that night. She had asked him if she must make a choice between her work and her marriage and he had said no. He had promised that she would be contented. She had been.

She would have been stronger in her fight against Lampere had she not been able to see the whole affair from Norman's viewpoint. She was a girl-wife, a stenographer, devoted to the memory of a man who had stood by at her father's death, then as soon as he was able, had given her a fine position.

He had suffered sunstroke, softening of the brain, something which had given him peculiar ideas . . . why else would a man leave the building of a dam to a stenographer? He had worked out a cunning plan and by playing on the girl's eternal loyalty was literally forcing her to carry them out.

(Copyright, 1933, by Jeanne Bowman)

Tomorrow, Norman goes over to the army.

Ma's Norman, he say there's a mite a company comin' t'night.

Christopher Returns

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER When Christopher Columbus was flying away from his tree and leaving it to the annoying monkeys he heard one of them calling him a robber, and knew that his nest was being examined. He flew back quickly and called down to Willy Nilly: "Can't you stop those chattering monkeys?"

"That's my Crow's tree," Willy Nilly said to the Signor who owned the circus. "They have no right there."

"I've found all sorts of things in his nest," cried the monkey. "He puts on airs, but he's a robber just as all crows are."

"They're my own belongings," cawed Christopher angrily, from the branch of a neighboring tree. He did not go too close to the monkeys as he did not like having sticks thrown at him.

The monkey who had discovered the nest started throwing everything from it to the ground. There were bits of china, pieces of tin foil, some string, several marbles and a number of other odds and ends. It was surprising how much the nest held.

"They're just things I've discovered in my travels," cawed Christopher Columbus miserably.

The monkeys swung from branch to branch, then they came down to the ground and sat around a little table the Signor fixed for them and behaved just as though they were at a dinner party. The Signor handed bananas to them and they pecked the fruit and started to eat when Christopher flew to the table and grabbed the largest banana of all!

College Women Can Land Jobs, And Here's How

By SIGRID ARNE. Washington (AP)—Restricted professional employment of recent years has not made it impossible for the intelligent college woman to find a job if she really wants one.

"Such women," says Mrs. Jouet Shouse, "are still fitted into industry and the professions, although it usually takes longer and the pay is not so large."

Mrs. Shouse helped to establish and now aids in directing the Institute of Women's Professional Relations, a privately endowed research group which has headquarters at Woman's college of the University of North Carolina.

It is the only clearing house in the country for information on professional opportunities for women. Through it Mrs. Shouse is able to determine how the depression has affected the trained woman worker.

"First, a young woman seeking a job must know exactly what she wants," says Mrs. Shouse. "And it is quite as important that she have appearance and a professional attitude."

"Take a concrete example. Suppose a young woman wants to be an industrial engineer. She should read the trade journals in that field find the firms employing women, determine the trends, and then if possible, work out something new she can do. She is much more likely to get a chance than if she were making the rounds of employment agencies."

But even so, it would be difficult for a woman to know the many turns a profession can take. Mrs. Shouse learned that when she, as Catherine Filne, was graduated from Wheaton college. As a result she made a survey of women's professions and brought out in 1929 a compilation of discussions by successful women. It was called "Careers for Women" and has served since as a sort of "time table on life" for the girl graduate.

Frances Perkins Writes. Now the second edition is out, rewritten and brought up to date. In that time much has happened to one of the original writers. Frances Perkins, who wrote about factory inspectors for the 1929 edition, has brought the article up to date from her desk as secretary of labor.

Federal Officers Hound Kidnapers

By SIGRID ARNE. Washington (AP)—Quietly but relentlessly the blue pencil has been moving down the secret "public enemy" list which the federal government compiled this year checking name after name as prison gates clanged behind another criminal.

During the last year that list has held the names of 31 men wanted on some particularly spectacular violation of federal laws. Now 18 are behind prison bars, three are waiting trial, two killed themselves, one was shot in a gang attempt to free him, two were lynched and five are at large.

All were involved in some kidnaping or extortion case, or both. The justice department's division of investigation has stayed on the trails of less spectacular federal law violators, but the big push has been against kidnapers.

It started a year ago when the country was engulfed in such cases. Through the spring and early summer almost each week saw some family receiving ransom notes. The so-called "Lindbergh law" was new on the books, giving federal agents the right to enter any kidnaping case.

Attorney General Cummings took office, and almost immediately he called in his aides to order: "Don't let up until you've got the kidnaping gangs broken up."

J. Edgar Hoover reorganized the division of investigation and sent a terse order down the line: "Tighten up." Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan visited strategic points and kept federal and state and liberalize allowances for veterans.

In both instances, in the face of terrific temptation, the House refused to side with the 15 per cent pay cut for government employees and greatly increase veterans' benefits. "A lot of us have been arguing," said Brown of Kentucky, a first-term member and one of the most outspoken critics of the "gag" rule, "that if the leaders would give us a chance to consider these bills and vote on their merits we would do the sensible, deliberate thing. We have demonstrated that fact."

Any hope, however, of immediate and drastic liberalization of House procedure probably is vain. Such things don't happen.

Most observers believe a start has been made.

Many thought that when Congress reassembled in January a bipartisan effort to obtain more freedom in considering legislation would be started. Byrns of Tennessee, the Democratic leader, said publicly before the session started he didn't think it would be necessary to resort to the tactics used in the special session.

The House hardly had settled down to business, however, before the most drastic "gag" rule of them all was clamped on. It not only had the effect of silencing the members on one piece of legislation but on all the appropriation bills.

The familiar cry that members of the House were prevented from exercising little more than a voting membership again was heard.

still is supreme was demonstrated very clearly by the vote snatched victory from what everyone thought was defeat on the vote on veterans' allowances.

The vote finally recorded was 190 to 189 in the administration's favor. The roll was called—and before disclosing the count—Rainey announced it was so close to recapitulation was necessary.

Amid the greatest confusion witnessed on the floor this session, with Republicans doing everything within their power to compel him to announce the vote, Rainey held out. Administration leaders snatched victory for some one who would change over.

Finally the one vote was found and Rainey announced the outcome, thus single-handedly starting off defeat for the administration.

TEACHERS TO OPEN SEASON HERE TUESDAY

By R. O. MOYE
East Carolina Teachers College will open its regular baseball season here tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock when it meets the Guilford College nine at the college diamond in the first of a two game series.

Although it is not definitely known at this time as to who will do the hurling for Coach Beatty's team, it is expected that "Lefty" Dunn, star pitcher of the Ayden high school last season, will start on the mound. His slants will be received by either Seago or Johnson both of whom have been showing some mighty good work behind the plate in the practices held for the last week.

Coach Beatty has not arrived at a definite infield, but in practice drills the past week the following men seemed most likely to play:

Ridgenhour, first base; Fickett, second base; Hodges or Jennings, third base, and "Runt" Bostic, shortstop.

Outfield work has been paced by Barrett, Kapelic, Eason and Leggett.

Although there are only four men from last year's squad on the team a good game is in store for those who attend.

New York Cotton

New York, March 26—(AP)—Cotton futures opened very steady 12 to 13 points higher on steady Liverpool cables and favorable labor developments. Selling appeared in early trading and prices lost about 4 to 7 points of their gains. At the end of the first half hour the market was holding net advances of around 7 to 9 points. Pressure of near month liquidation and selling by Liverpool in more distant positions caused the market to lose about 7 to 9 points of the initial rally in the morning.

May eased from 12.12 to 12.04 and October from 12.37 to 12.29 and around midday prices were at or within a few points of these levels leaving the general market 4 to 7 points higher.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, March 26—(AP)—News of settlement of the automobile laborers controversy gave most financial markets a cheerful tone today but the enthusiasm generally was noticeably restrained. After fifteen minutes buying rush during the first half hour putting the stock exchange ticker tags a bit in arrears, many profit takers cashed in on their inaugural gains of one to two or more points and the list soon sagged. Activity dwindled rapidly on a moderate decline however, and leading issues did not seem in any great supply. Grains failed to reflect any particular tendencies and cotton, silver and rubber were somewhat higher. Bonds were firm and the international dollar note rate was virtually unchanged.

"You Learn What Safety is worth ON A JOB LIKE MINE!"

A CERTIFIED INTERVIEW WITH MISS DOLENA MacDONALD - NURSE - OF BOSTON, MASS.

"That's why I bought a Plymouth... it's got Hydraulic Brakes and a Safety-Steel Body"

IT'S SECOND NATURE for a nurse to think about safety first. So when Miss MacDonald set out to buy a new car, safety was in her mind.

And after looking at "All Three" low-priced cars... she picked Plymouth.

She feels safer with Hydraulic Brakes. For they are always equalized... they stop her more quickly, and without side-skidding.

And common sense told her a Safety-Steel Body, of steel reinforced with steel, is safer than other types.

Miss MacDonald found that Plymouth alone, in the lowest-price field, offered her both these safety features.

THINK ABOUT SAFETY when you buy your next car. And about comfort, too. Plymouth's Individual Wheel Springing plus Floating Power engine mountings give you a smoother, more comfortable ride.

Any Dodge, DeSoto or Chrysler dealer will gladly demonstrate the New Plymouth at your convenience.

1. "It doesn't pay to run unnecessary risks. And it was only natural for me to inquire about all the safety features."

2. "I was always having the brakes on my old car fixed. And they often made my cars wobble sideways when stopping."

3. "How different with a Plymouth! I merely touch the pedal and the hydraulic brakes take hold evenly. They stop the car quickly - and never need adjustment because that's entirely automatic."

4. "Brakes aren't the only thing. Plymouth is a joy to drive. And it amazes me the way those new springs 'walk' over bumps."

5. ABOVE - the De Luxe Plymouth Coupe. Plymouth prices begin at $495 f.o.b. factory, Detroit, Michigan, and are subject to change without notice.
