NOW IS TIME TO LOOK AFTER IT

With our County Board of Elections now officially reappointed it is to be hoped that no time will be lost in taking steps to provide adequate voting facilities in the larger precincts of the county before the coming June primaries.

The congestion and lack of facilities at some of the polling places in this county at the primary two years ago brought about conditions that should not be tolerated by officers who desire orderly and clean elections and it is to be hoped that a repetition of such conditions will be avoided by providing adequate polling places and supervision this year.

She slipped from the bed and went to an open window. A soft wind, faint echo of the previous evening's gale, came in with the breath of sleeping fields. The servants' cottage was a dark square topped with moon icing. The little stream was a trickle of quicksilver among the shale.

Judith looked... it and shuddered. She felt as though there were tears in her heart which trickled along like quicksilver. All of her life she had wanted to belong to someone. Her father, embalmied in grief at her mother's passing, had been companionable, but she had felt her love for him was more maternal than his was paternal.

We bring this matter to attention of the Board of Elections at this time, not as criticism of what transpired at the polls two years ago, for we realize that the vote that turned out was far greater than had been expected and at that late hour there was no provision that could be made to remedy the situation, but in order that they might have time to take steps now to prevent a recurrence of those things.

DELPHY, round eyed, brought her orange juice at the usual hour. She surveyed the untouched pillow, said nothing, but tucked Judith in with unnecessary thoroughness considering she was about to rise. Then, glass clinking on tray, she stalked down the hall to the guest room.

Upstairs, Norman was splashing around, slamming doors with early morning thoroughness. In the shortly after midnight on Friday night of last week, and because operatives at the cotton mill had told the sheriff that Gay was off his job at the mill about the time of the robbery, County Prosecutor W. W. Cohoon thought that he would be able in recorder's court yesterday to make out a case against Gay sufficient to establish probable cause and justify holding him to answer for the crime in Superior court.

EVIDENCE TOO SLIM TO HOLD DEFENDANT

Elizabeth City, March 27.—Because Mrs. Alvin L. Divers told Sheriff Charles Carmine that Ishmael Gay, employe of the Elizabeth City cotton mill, had a voice like that of one of the men who she and her husband claimed, robbed them in their home on West Church street extended beyond the Dr. Lowmy home of about $19 in cash

Judith Lane by JEANNE BOWMAN

SYNOPSIS: Norman Dale has invited Tom Bevins' widow and daughter, Mathie, with Morton Lamper, their attorney, to his home to discuss the Bevins will. Judith, Norman's wife, has been left the Bevins fortune and instructions to carry out Bevins' plan for a dam on the Rio Diablo. Lamper, although Norman's law partner and former attorney for Bevins, wishes to break the will and build the dam for his own benefit. Judith refuses to see the will, and goes to bed to think over the tangle.

Chapter 20 THE RIFT

DIG TOM was projecting himself from the other side of death into Judith's thought, by cleverly pre-empted communications.

To Norman, Morton Lamper, his partner, his father's partner before him, was a person to be admired, almost revered. His world would weigh more than that of a young girl, Lamper was a friend of a lifetime, and Norman had known her a comparatively short time.

Perhaps Norman was right, and she with her self assurance was wrong. Perhaps Lamper was right! She weighed this thought as she looked out on the terrace where the lights which had blocked yellow oblongs on the greensward were suddenly blotted out.

She would discuss this with him and if he could prove her wrong she would gladly make any concession. She prepared for bed, turned on the bed lamp to let him know she was awake, then waited.

"We have tried to be lenient with Mrs. Dale, because of her husband," said Mr. Lamper, following the meeting held in the office of the Bevins Construction Company, "but obviously, the power which comes with such a sum of money has come to her head."

"We anticipate no difficulty in breaking the will because we have plenty of evidence to prove that the young lady used undue influence in causing the aged gentleman—"

"Aged gentleman," cried Judith aloud, "the idea of calling Tom Bevins aged at sixty-two!"

"to change his will during the illness which took his life. My partners and I will exert every effort to see that justice is done to the bereaved widow and young daughter."

The newspaper in fairness had given the same prominence to the story of the reorganization of the Bevins Construction Company. They used in their lead the fact that the three hundred workers at the dam, due to her spirited refusal to comply with a request for resignation, would not lose a day's work.

NO wonder, thought Judith, that Mathie Bevins had laughed that triumphant laugh meant, she now knew, for her ears. No wonder, Norman had been unable to face her. She walked into the dining room—"Delphy," she called, "remove my plate."

This done, she folded the newspaper to that article and tipped it up against the bowl of daffodils that Norman might see it when he sat down. She went then to the telephone, called a cab, then went to her dressing room, locked the doors and packed her bags.

Norman met her at the door as she was leaving—"Judith," he protested, as he saw her bags. "You should thank me, Norman," she returned, "I'm simply making things easy for you. Lamper told us a wife could not appear against her husband and that rule works both ways. Deseriton will provide you with grounds for divorce and you can... as the morning paper says, 'fight your wife to obtain millions for your former sweetheart.'"

She was down the steps, the startled cab driver behind her—"To the Rice," she said, when they were on the highway she gave Clia's address.

Because she worked for a morning newspaper, Clia worked nights and so was still in bed when Judith arrived. She looked up from the telephone she had wrangled to within arms reach of the bed, then spoke into the mouthpiece—"here she comes with Reno in her eye. If I don't mistake the signs she'll sob it out on my motherly shoulder."

"Okay, Jim, I'll call you later, stick around the field, I may need you."

She slammed the receiver on the hook—"Had coffee?" she asked, "then take two steps left and bring up longside that gas plate. I don't speak English until I've had two cups and three cigarettes. You'll find the coffee in that little do-funny on top of my dresser."

Tomorrow, Clia gives some good advice.

Mr. Cohoon threw up his hands after a number of witnesses had been examined and after the circumstances of the robbery had been recited on the stand in great detail by both Mr. and Mrs. Divers and the defendant was released.

kitchen Delphy was banging pans as if venting anger on the aluminum ware, and on the driveway Lige was industriously raking wind scraps into small heaps and burring them, the small pyramids sending up woody incense in quivering spirals.

Judith hummed as she worked. She heard the newsboy throw a paper to the porch, called to Lige that she would get it, and went out. Two morning newspapers lay there. She picked them up, unrolled them and smoothed them out, looking down towards the highway.

There, staring up at her was her latest photograph, her best. In the next column was one of Mathie Bevins. Between them were heaped sketched bags of money, five million dollars printed thereon. Below was a picture of Norman.

Stunned she read the caption: "Rightful Heir to Bevins Money to Sue Millionaire Stenographer." Her eyes rejected this for something more surprising—"Lamper plays trump card. Firm of Dale, Lamper and Morrison to take up Bevins fight. Husband may fight wife in effort to Regain Money for Boyhood Sweetheart."

Judith stood on the veranda until she had completed the newspaper story. It was an interview given by Morton Lamper.

"I have tried to be lenient with Mrs. Dale, because of her husband," said Mr. Lamper, following the meeting held in the office of the Bevins Construction Company, "but obviously, the power which comes with such a sum of money has come to her head."

"We anticipate no difficulty in breaking the will because we have plenty of evidence to prove that the young lady used undue influence in causing the aged gentleman—"

PUBLIC FORUM

DISCUSSING PROBLEMS OF INTEREST TO THIS COMMUNITY. IN ALL CASES NAMES MUST ACCOMPANY ANY COMMUNICATION. Please Make Your Discussion As Short As Possible.

ARE YOU INTERESTED? There seems to be a disposition among the people of today to ignore things of greatest importance. Since the "good old days" of "spell-binding" stump oratory we have drifted with the tide or fallen asleep or just naturally let things shape themselves and old way.

Now we all know that such a course is far from right, therefore as one of the people I am urging and all, old and young, to wake up and get busy at once and let everybody else know just where we stand and just what we want and expect of our next legislature, and of all our county officers.

Since it is no longer stylish to have county conventions to nominate candidates, and since the candidates no longer go into each precinct to grasp the "horny hands of toil" and to tell the dear people where they stand and what they intend to do if elected, suppose we take advantage of the press—I am sure the columns of our county papers will be open to the discussion of any matter of general interest. If we let our candidates know what we expect of them they will certainly conform to our wishes as if we express them plainly and vigorously.

Do we ask that our highways be made safe for travel? Then say so. Are we expecting a more liberal policy toward our schools? Then advocate such policy. Do we wish our laws enforced? Then let everybody know it.

Do we favor a more economical administration of affairs, county, state and national? Then proclaim it aloud. The time for action is near, who will be first to endorse these suggestions?

The Quarrel

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER "Give me that, you robber!" shouted the monkey whose banana had been taken by Christopher Columbus Crow.

"I won't have a monkey making a monkey of me," cawed Christopher. "Peace! Peace!" shouted the Signor.

"Oh, do let's have a little quiet, Christopher," begged Willy Nilly. "I've been insulted," cawed Christopher.

"Bow-wow-wow," barked Rip. "The monkeys make such a noise I can't hear myself bark."

"Who wants to hear you bark?" cried another monkey. "Your voice is not so beautiful. No one would ever ask you to sing. Our circus dogs can all do fine tricks, and one of them can sing a solo. There they come now."

The circus dogs had come over to find out what was going on, and now they began to do tricks, standing on their hind legs, begging, jumping. Poor Rip could do hardly any of their tricks although he tried.

The monkeys were laughing at him, and how he hated to be laughed at. And now everyone was shouting, and the Puddle Muddlers were all making rude remarks to the circus animals, and the circus animals were making fun of the Puddle Muddlers because they could not do any tricks.

The leading dog performer of the circus was about to do his wonderful singing act. Poor Rip certainly couldn't sing. Suddenly he had a bright idea. The circus dog started his song but stopped almost at once and ran off. The circus animals couldn't understand it.

Very Much Improved After Taking Cardui

"I have suffered a great deal from cramping," writes Mrs. W. A. Sewell, Sr., of Waco, Texas. "I would chill and have to go to bed for about three days at a time. I would have a dull, tired, sleepy feeling. A friend told me to try Cardui, thinking it would help me—and it did. I am very much improved and do not spend the time in bed. I certainly can recommend Cardui to other sufferers." Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit you, consult a physician.

IT'S IMPORTANT THAT YOU DO

says Formfit

Your thighs (that section from your waistline to your knees) are mighty important to this business of having a figure to be proud of. They must be bump-proof, bulge-free and smooth. They've got to be under perfect control—always. Dresses should swoop right over them in close-hugging curves.

"DODGING TRAFFIC TAKES HEALTHY NERVES, TOO, MR. HOCKEY PLAYER."

Miss Ruth Dodd of New York City speaks with authority on the perils of a pedestrian. She says:

"Of course it takes healthy nerves to lead a championship hockey team. But let me say a word about healthy nerves in behalf of those millions of us who do our walking along city streets. People rushing madly by—trolleys clanging—traffic whistles shrilling—huge trucks bearing down on you at every crossing—it's enough to make nerves jump and quiver! I enjoy a smoke any time—and smoke steadily, too. My cigarette? Camels. They're milder, taste marvelously—and don't interfere with healthy nerves."

How Are YOUR Nerves?

Few are those today who have not been face to face with the "jangled nerves" that our modern, high-speed life is blamed for! You know the signs of nerves that flinch—tense-ness, irritability. Fussy little habits like key-rattling...pencil-tapping. Check up now on your habits. Eating. Sleeping. Your work and play. And get a fresh slant on smoking by starting on Camels.

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS than any other popular brand.

You'll find Camels rich in flavor—yet mild and delicate. Smoking will have a new zest. And each Camel renews the enjoyment...the pleasure of smoking at its best!

Awards For Cotton Drive Committeemen

College Station, Raleigh, March 27—Local and county committeemen who have had charge of the cotton sign-up campaign in North Carolina during the past several weeks will be awarded certificates of public service as a partial reward for their unselfish work and for their aid in helping to bring about better prices for the staple.

"The labor of these men has been worth much more than the small amount of money paid them to cover their actual expenses," says Charles A. Sheffield, in charge of the cotton adjustment campaign for the State College Extension Service. "The local committeemen occupy a very responsible position. He must be fair to the grower and to the adjustment administration. He must be sure that each grower meets the requirements of his reduction contract and he must insist on absolute equality in handling the contracts."

Mr. Sheffield said county and community committeemen have rendered a type of service that will last far beyond the immediate present. They are cotton growers themselves and therefore will receive the benefits of the adjustment program but in addition they are assuring their neighbors and friends of greater net returns from their farm operations. It is expected that these committeemen will take the lead in forming the county control association in which each grower who has signed a contract will hold membership. County farm agents will assist the committeemen in settling up the associations and teachers of vocational agriculture in the high schools will also have an important place in this work. Through night classes and at meetings in the local schools, the work of the control associations will be outlined and discussed that they may function efficiently and smoothly.

"The campaign which, so far, has been so successful, in this assured of continuing support until the objectives of the administration are met as nearly as is possible through local effort," Mr. Sheffield said.

TO CONDUCT HEARING IN SPINDLE STRIKE

Rutherfordton, March 27—(AP)—The State Cotton Textile Industrial Relations Board will hold a hearing at the Spindle House in Spindale Tuesday morning beginning at 10 o'clock in connection with the recent strike of weavers at the Stone-cutter mills at Spindale. The hearing was postponed from last Wednesday on account of the absence of C. W. Bolick, representing the employees who engaged in the strike. Mr. Bolick was unable to attend because of the illness of his wife. It is likely that the hearing will last all day as both sides will be given a full opportunity to present any complaints they may have to make.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, March 27—(AP)—Stocks pointed downward today following overnight news that the president had requested Congress to pass exchange regulatory legislation "with teth in it". For half an hour the ticker tape ran one to five minutes behind the floor transactions and leading issues dropped one to three or more points. The selling rush which found blocks of one thousand to six thousand shares appearing then died almost as quickly as it began and moderate rallies appeared. Staleness accompanied the recoveries.

Wheat was down more than two cents a bushel but paired its losses. Cotton was off more than 50 cents a bale and silver sagged. Corporation bonds were heavy but U. S. government securities were firm and the dollar rate in foreign exchange improved.

Allied Chemical, American Commercial Alcohol, U. S. Industrial Alcohol yielded about four points each. Those down one to three included Amerifac Telephone, Chrysler, General Motors, Consolidated Gas, U. S. Steel, Auburn, Western Union, Sears Roebuck, Bethlehem Steel, American Tobacco B, DuPont, Case, U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, National Distillers, Santa Fe Union Pacific, N. Y. Central, United Aircraft and Douglas.
