Mexican Held In Kidnaping Of June Robles In Arizona

PLOT BARED IN DOCUMENT PENNED BY MAN

Others in Plot Described as Mexican And Wife and Unidentified Man; Man Delegated to Collect $15,000 Ransom Frightened off by Widespread Hunt For Girl

Tucson, Ariz., May 9.—(AP)—The Associated Press was told today by an authoritative source that one of the men who figured in the kidnaping plot of June Robles, six-year-old heiress, had been found by investigators and is now in custody.

It also was told that a written document giving details of the plot and location where the child has been secreted was found penned by the man.

Not formally under arrest nor subject of any charges, the man has been in the custody of investigators for a week. The document, it was learned, implicates him as one of the four persons in the kidnaping of the girl last April 25 from her home here. He was identified as a Mexican.

The others in the plot were described as a Mexican and his wife and a man whose nationality was not revealed.

The document, it was ascertained, outlined a plan in which the man and the Mexican couple were to have taken June to Santa Cruz, Sonora, and wait there while the other Mexican now in custody negotiated for the ransom set at $15,000.

The money, the document, disclosed was to have been obtained in the first 12 hours after the kidnaping. At the end of that period the child was to have been spirited to Cananea, 55 miles south of the border below Bisbee, Arizona.

There she was to have been left with a relative of the man who wrote the document and a request made to the relative to take the child back to the Robles family. Investigators it is known, have questioned the relatives and have absolved them of any part of the kidnaping.

The Associated Press was told that the man delegated to collect the ransom was frightened off by the widespread hunt for the child. Thus the first part of the plot for collection of the money failed.

D. J. Whichard Attends Reception At White House

D. J. Whichard, Jr., owner and publisher of the Daily Reflector, left this morning for Washington, D. C., where this evening he will attend a reception at the White House and dinner at the Hotel Shoreham in connection with celebration of turning over the Warm Springs Foundation fund to President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mayor R. C. Flanagan also received a special invitation to attend the celebration but was prevented from accepting on account of pressing official business.

The reception is being given under auspices of the National Committee for the Birthday Ball for the President. At this time the Warm Springs Foundation fund will be presented to President Roosevelt. The dinner will be held for the purpose of commemorating the presentation of the Birthday fund.

Mr. Whichard was a member of the committee charged with responsibility of staging the President's Ball here several months ago. He was accompanied to Washington by Rev. A. W. Fleischmann, pastor of Memorial Baptist Church, and E. A. Griffin of Goldsboro, who are visiting the capital city for sight-seeing and business purposes.

SIX LOST IN PLANE CRASH

Four Frenchmen and 2 Englishmen Perish As Plane Crashes in English Channel

LeBourget, France, May 9.—(AP)—Four Frenchmen and two Englishmen were believed killed today when an Air-France tri-motored passenger plane disappeared on a flight across the English Channel, between Dieppe and New Haven, England.

It was believed the plane plunged into the channel fifty miles from Widet Point, sinking immediately.

The plane was sought on both sides of the channel by air and sea forces several hours before hopes were abandoned.

The military notified ships along the coast to search the channel but they reported they were unsuccessful.

RUSHING TO FINALS YOUTH MEETS DEATH

Lexington, May 9.—(AP)—Fear lest he delay commencement exercises at Reed's High School near here, from which he was to have been graduated last night, today was blamed for the death of Raeford Whitman, 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Whitman.

Rushing home for a book needed at the exercises the boy's car struck another driven by Clyde Davis who said the student was traveling at high speed and attempted to pass on the left as the two cars met.

Whitman's car turned over several times and the boy lived but a short time.

No charge was placed against Davis. An inquest was set for Monday.

SWITCHMAN DIES AS RESULT OF INJURIES

Rocky Mount, May 9.—George F. Guill, 46, Atlantic Coast Line switchman who was severely injured while on duty in the north yard here Saturday, died at a local hospital yesterday.

Mr. Guill was said to have been in the act of separating two moving cars when he was jerked from the end of one of the cars and thrown to the ground. He suffered a fractured skull when his head struck a rail. He was rushed to the hospital.

CITY SEEKING MORE WORKERS ON POOL HERE

Mayor Flanagan and Delegation go to Raleigh to Make Request of FERA

Mayor R. C. Flanagan went to Raleigh today to confer with Federal Emergency Relief authorities regarding more workmen for the swimming pool here. He was accompanied by K. T. Futrell, local director of the FERA, J. H. Rose, superintendent of schools, and George Clark, police chief.

The mayor last week was authorized by the board of aldermen to go to Raleigh to see if the working force at the pool could not be increased from 20 to double that number so that the pool might be completed and in operation by the hot summer months.

When construction work was begun under the CWA, plans called for completion May 1. The CWA disbanded the latter part of March and work on the pool was suspended until the latter part of last week when twenty men were put to work under the federal government's new relief act.

Part of the pool proper remains to be completed along with both houses and filtering plant. If more help is not given it will be late in the summer before the citizenship will be able to enjoy cooling plunges in the pool.

It was understood that twice the number of men assigned the Greenville project have been put to work on pools in cities about the same size, and the mayor and aldermen think the same consideration should be shown this city.

Get Busy On War Debts.

Washington, May 9.—(AP)—Coincident with a statement by President Roosevelt that the United States expects full payment on war debts in June unless there are convincing reasons for reduction, Andre de Laboulaye, the French ambassador, conferred today with State Department officials on his country. SEVEN KILLED DURING STRIKE

Abermarle, May 8.—Three suits for damages aggregating $120,000 were filed in Superior Court here this week against Frank Patterson, Jr., F. N. Patterson, Sr., and Mrs. Mary Snugg Patterson. The actions were filed by Mrs. Lillie Mae Helms, administratrix of the estate of James Paul Helms, Jr., Mrs. Lillie Mae Helms, and James Paul Helms, Sr., and were the outgrowth of the automobile accident on March 29th when a car driven by Frank Patterson, Jr., struck James Paul Helms, Jr., four and one-half year old son of the plaintiffs, and inflicted injuries from which the child died the following day. Young Patterson is now under indictment for murder in connection with the case.

Six Men and Woman Die In Disturbances In Kalameta Harbor At Athens

Athens, May 9.—(AP)—Police and troopers turned machine guns upon strikers today, killing six men and one woman during disturbances in Kalameta harbor. An undetermined number of persons were injured.

Military and police fired on the mob of strikers who held their ground. Bodies of the dead lay in the streets.

Additional soldiers were asked to quell the disturbances. The authorities unlimbered their machine guns when strikers attempted to destroy the new grain elevator devices which had been installed in the harbor. The workers protested against the construction of the modern devices contending they would throw numbers of men out of work.

The government immediately issued a communique saying the situation was serious.

CITY TO HONOR MEN OF SOUTH MEMORIAL DAY

Exercises to be Held At High School Tomorrow in Memory of Confederacy

Confederate Memorial Day will be appropriately observed in this city tomorrow with exercises under auspices of George B. Singletary Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

The principal address will be delivered at the high school by Judge Dixie James of County Court at 10:45.

The exercises at the high school will be followed by a procession to Cherry Hill cemetery where the flags of the Confederacy will be placed, flowers on the graves of the dead heroes of the Sixties.

All business houses of the city have been urged to fly the Confederate flag during the day and help bring back memories of those days when the North and South clashed in mortal combat.

The public has been given cordial invitation to attend the exercises.

The program at the high school will consist of salute of the flag, invocation by Rev. G. R. Combs, song "The Old North State," greetings by Supt. J. H. Rose, special music by the high school Glee club, introduction of the speaker by Mrs. W. P. Moore, address by Judge James and song, "America."

All veterans of the Confederacy in this county are either dead or too old to attend the celebrations, but the observance will be continued from year to year to perpetuate the ideals of the sturdy men of the South. Last year no veterans attended and none were expected to be present this year.

LEAS STARTED TO N. C. FOR TERMS IN JAIL

Tennessee Supreme Court Turns Former Senator and Son Over to N. C.

Nashville, Tenn., May 9.—(AP)—In two automobiles with a machine gun and automatic rifle, Luke Lea and Luke Lea, Jr., were started for North Carolina today to receive penalties imposed for bank law violations.

The Tennessee Supreme court turned the former United States Senator and his son over to Sheriff Laurence E. Brown and Deputy Sheriff Frank Lakey of Asheville, N. C., whom Governor Hill McAllister had named as agents when he ordered the Leas extradited more than a year ago.

The Supreme court was packed to capacity to hear the order turning the ex-publisher and his son over to the custody of North Carolina. The crowd of several hundred poured down the capitol steps to see the Leas enter the cars parked across the street. Neither of the defendants made any statement and the cars sped swiftly away.

As the head car was leaving Luke Lea, Sr., was asked if he expected to pay his fine.

"I haven't any money," he replied. Luke Lea, Sr., is under a six to ten year prison sentence. His son has the alternative of paying $25,000, his fine and cost, or serving two to four years.

A hearing on a petition in Federal court, seeking to prevent removal of the two Leas to North Carolina, ended abruptly when information was received that the State Supreme court had placed them in custody of North Carolina officer.

Federal Judge John Gore did not rule on the petition.

Pres. Roosevelt Says Debtors To Be Given Hearing

NATIONS IN DISTRESS MAY ASK FOR CUT

Whether Taken Payments Will be Accepted in June Depends on Merit of Individual Cases; Debtor Nations Which Have Made Payments so Far Exempted From Johnson Bill; No Applications Yet Made For Reduced Payments

Washington, May 9.—(AP)—President Roosevelt emphasized today that the United States stands for collection of war debts but will grant a hearing to nations in distress who ask for reduced payments.

Whether token payments which have been made in the past by Great Britain and some other debtors will be accepted in June will be decided upon on the merits of the individual case, the President said at his press conference.

Debtor nations which have made token payments as a part of the obligation owed have been exempted so far from the rigid terms of the Johnson bill, barring financial transactions with the United States by defaulting debtors.

The president said that no negotiations had been entered into with the foreign nations on debts due next June 15. No applications have been made for reduced payments.

It was made plain that the United States will insist on war debt collections and is offering no terms of revision.

CURRIN WINS COURT ACTION

Brinkley and Spain Fail in Suit Against Georgia Man in Superior Court

Brinkley and Spain, operators of a tobacco warehouse here several years ago, lost their suit for recovery of around $600 against R. E. Currin of Georgia, in yesterday's session of Superior court.

The jury yesterday afternoon returned a decision in favor of the defendant, also a former Greenville tobacco man who moved to Georgia some years ago.

Brinkley and Spain were suing Currin for recovery on two judgments they had obtained against him for $600 which they alleged they loaned him about ten years ago.

Last season a load of tobacco which Currin supposedly brought from Georgia was sold on the local market. It was valued at around $1,500 and Brinkley and Spain had it attached. Currin offered testimony that the tobacco was not his but belonged to his son and was raised on land loaned the son by his mother.

The son lived in Florida, the tobacco was raised in Georgia and then sold in Greenville. The son also entered a plea that the tobacco belonged to him and not his father. Currin also virtually won out in another suit when the court non-suit the case of Savage Feed Company vs. R. E. Currin involving an account for $245. Lack of evidence caused the court to order non-suit at the expiration of testimony.

HIGH TAKES CLUBMEN FOR 7 TO 6 RIDE

The long-scheduled encounter of the Kiwanis and High school baseball clubs actually happened at Third Street Athletic field yesterday afternoon and today the high school lads were gleaming over their 7-6 victory and the majority of clubmen were applying liniment and lotions, to aching, sunburned limbs.

The game, played in behalf of funds for Sheppard Memorial Library and the High School athletic organization, combined every variety of baseball seen on the local field in many a day, but the high school lads, under direction of Coach Hewlett, had the best end of the bargain from the beginning to end.

In fact it looked like a high school field day until the fifth frame when the Kiwanians put their first two runners over the rubber by reason of the fact that the high schoolstop became confused when a grounder was hit to him, failed to try to catch the runner going home, threw wild to first and let another runner land on the scoring corner.

Except for that mistake, the high school lads played exceptionally good ball and really made the former league and college players comprising the Kiwanis team feel like graybeards, or something. It was a test of trained youth against experience and lack of training.

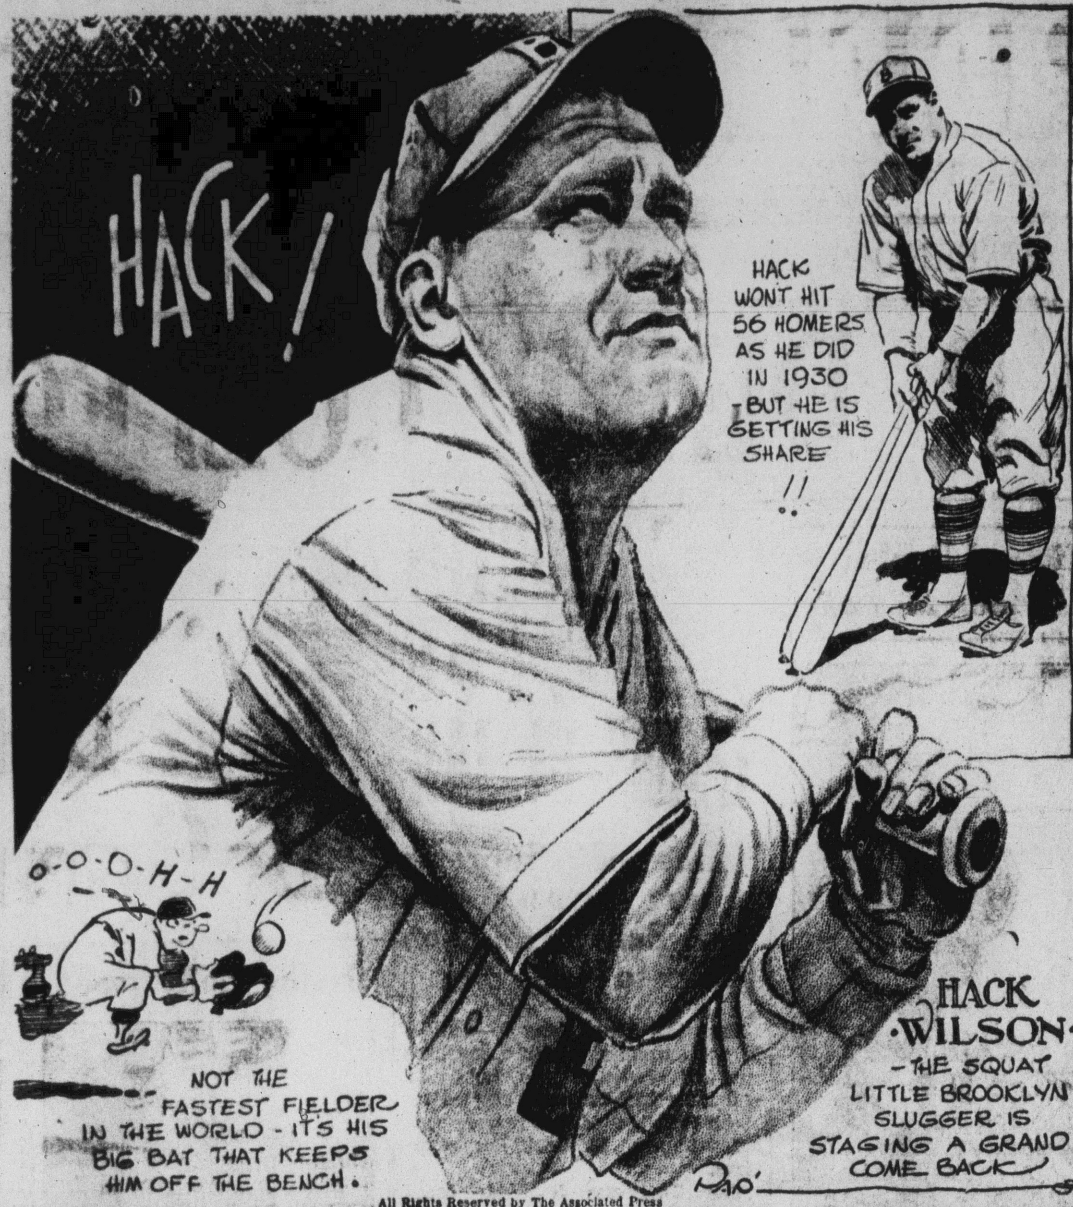

The Kiwanians were handicapped because three of their best men, Ellwanger, "Mus" Massey and Flye, were not on the job. They were forced to get non-members to fill the vacant positions and this slightly upset the appiecart. Manager Joe Tatt declared after the game.

However Floyd McGowan regular catcher of the club, snatched honors for the day by slapping out a home run in the fifth frame with two men on the paths. The drive sent the old apple under the bleachers in left field and it was not returned to the diamond until McGowan landed safely home.

A long, lanky youth by the name of Madrin vied with McGowan for batting honors, connecting for two triples which figured largely in the high school victory.

Coach Hewlett used all of his pitchers—not because they were knocked out of the box but to give them a chance of keeping in trim. Wells, ace, hurled the first three innings, and held the clubmen completely under control. Parkes followed for three innings and then came Vinomat, left hander, who also pitched remarkably fine ball.

Don Outley went all the way for the Kiwanians. He was wild as the proverbial March hare, but pitched a fairly good game. His support at times was ragged, several of his team mates being unable to hold the ball.

The good citizens of Sudbury, Ontario, did the handsome thing by Dave Komonen when he returned from his triumph in the classic Boston A. A. Marathon this spring.

The board of trade gave the Finnish-American runner a banquet. Mayor Brodie welcomed Dave on behalf of the citizenry and presented him with a razor and toilet set. The Finnish consul tendered him a set of towels and the Food Mine Athletic Association, whose colors Komonen carried in the race, gave him a club bag.

The runner, feeling his English inadequate to the occasion, bowed his acknowledgment in preference to attempting a speech.

On Looking Backward
Ray Barbuti, the Olympic runner who saved Uncle Sam's face from becoming completely red by winning the 400-meter race at the 1928 Olympics at Amsterdam, happened to be on hand when the following item landed on our desk from Canadian sources:

"The Winnebago veteran (Jimmy Ball) finished second to Ray Barbuti of the United States in the 400-meter final. He turned his head 10 yards from the tape to see his foe, threw himself out of stride and became one of trackdom's 'roats'."

"So what?" we asked Barbuti.

"That's the first time I ever heard that explanation," he replied. "It is true that Ball nearly ripped me at the finish—as I found out later, after being picked up from the track—but I always have understood that it was because he timed his spurt a trifle too late. As a matter of fact, Ball, from the outside, had no trouble seeing me all the way down the stretch because I was in front of him on the inside."

"The mistake I made was in starting to 'kick' as soon as I hit the stretch, where I found myself in the lead. The result was I began to tie up and I thought I never would reach that tape. The last 100 feet looked like 100 miles to me."

To me, the Barbuti-Metcalf sprint final in the 1928 Olympics, Ball, like Metcalf, was coming up faster at the finish, but at the precise moment the runners hit the tape, Barbuti's chest, like Tolans, was still a shade in front.

Cunningham off Record
Glenn Cunningham's name would be among the world record breakers whose performances came up for approval before the congress of the International A. A. F. this summer in Stockholm, thereby paying the penalty of all Americans who reserve their best achievements for the boards, instead of the indoors.

The I. A. A. F., which has the finest work in listing any universal track and field standard, does not even consider indoor performances. This is not necessary because the performer may have an advantage by competing on the boards but due chiefly to the standard outdoor requirements and the fact that outside of the United States, indoor athletic competition is practically nil. The American A. A. U. recognizes indoor marks but it is the eagle's screaming when you hear them referred to as "world records."

Cunningham's one chance to get into the international record book this year seems to have been frustrated by his Olympic rival, Luigi Beccali of Italy. The great Kansan bettered the listed mark for 1000 yards when he negotiated the distance outdoors in 2:11.1 but Beccali is credited with 2:10.1 in a race at Milan last November.

Highs To Play Final Game On Thursday

The local high school baseball team will close their current season Tuesday afternoon at the Third street park when New Bern will be played. This will be the last home game, but Washington will be played there next Tuesday which brings the season to a close.

New Bern defeated the locals 3-1 there last Friday and has a mighty good team. Fuller, their ace pitcher for the past three years, was in the box in that game and while allowing 7 hits as never in any great danger, and struck out 13 men.

Ed Wells, the locals' fine right-hander, pitched as fine a game as any high school hurler usually pitches, but the entire team played a miserable game behind his fine work, and allowed New Bern to score eight runs. Both of these boys will be the starting pitchers again, and a real mound duel is in store for those fans who journey out for the game. Fuller will be one of New Bern's pitchers in the Coastal Plain League this summer, and this should attract additional fans to see the game.

The usual outfield combination of Clark, Forbes and Forbes will be used. Hodges, Madrin, Pierce and Hatem, the latter a newcomer in the local line-up, will form the inner defense and Wells and Carroll will form the battery.

Several of these boys are playing their last high school game in Greenville and everybody is asked to be on hand at 3:45 for the last and biggest game of the season.

Install Marshals at College.

The newly elected marshals of East Carolina Teachers College were installed last night with the beautiful formal ceremony used each year. The outgoing marshal and incoming marshals marched down opposite aisles. The two chiefs met in the center of the stage and Miss Edwina Birch, chief of the past year, placed her regalia upon the shoulders of the new chief, Miss Katherine Hinson, from the Lanier Society. Each of the old marshals then transferred their regalia to the new marshals who are as follows: From the Lanier Society: Misses Clara Mac Martin, Rachel Stone, Ellen Jenkins, Rebecca Pridden and Janice Jenkins; Emerson Society, Misses Thelma Peela, Virginia Akers, Eloise Birch, Beatrice Hammond, Jean Thomas; Poe Society, Misses Frances Monk, Jewel Cole, Hadalene Coley, Margaret Fulton, Helen Davis.

The producers of the picture are confident: the Norma Shearer interpretation of Elizabeth Barrett, with the supporting cast which includes Frederic March and Charles Laughton, will be one of the best hits of the year.

Round Table Club Meets.

The Round Table Club held the last meeting of the club year on Tuesday, May 8th, with Mrs. J. L. Lewis as hostess, at the home of Mrs. Herbert ReBarker. Guests for the afternoon were Mrs. K. R. Beckwith, Mrs. J. A. McIver, Mrs. Earl Forbes and Mrs. R. J. Slay.

During the usual business session conducted by the president, Mrs. Rose, the club made donations to the library consisting of the twelve new books read by the club this year, twelve copies of the booklet, "Arms and the Man," and an additional ten dollars, thus bringing to a total its annual gift of forty dollars. Following the business session the club was delighted with a few words of greeting from Mrs. Beckwith, who was one of its charter members, and a former president.

The subject for the day: "Forces in the Peace Movement," was very ably discussed by Mrs. Lewis. She said that our task is to strike at the root of the evil that it assumes. If and when war comes to Europe, we must be the one great nation to remain at peace. When the Golden Rule is applied by governments of nations, they will learn war no more. The threat of war is graver now than at any time since the World War—due to the increased armaments by all the major nations—led by the U. S. A.

Mrs. Lewis' treatment of this subject proved to be one of the most interesting of the club year. Mrs. J. E. Winslow, chairman of the program committee, presented plans for next year on the subject, "Women Through the Century," which were approved by the club. The hostess, assisted by Mrs. ReBarker and Mrs. Slay, served a delicious ice coffee.—Reported.

A-Flutter

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER Soon they saw what was happening. A handsome young partridge with a most beautiful ruff of rich, coppery red around his neck, was drum-drumming on an old log. He was a proud, beautiful young partridge.

And now he began to beat his wings up and down and back and forth, and the swish of his wings sounded like music in the cool quiet of the deep woods.

"Don't say a word," whispered Christopher. "Partridges are very shy and we do not want to frighten them."

"We'll be very quiet," they all murmured.

The drum-drumming continued. It seemed to be almost the only sound in all the woods. Now and again the trees swayed in the breeze and the wind sang little melodies; but the drum beat and the rustle of wings seemed more important.

There was a fascinating mystery about it. "There she comes," whispered Christopher, and the others saw, coming along a path of soft, damp leaves and moss and pine needles, a younger, smaller partridge. The feathers of this partridge were not as bright as those of the one who was drum-drumming, but there was something wild and sweet and lovely about this bird, too, as though the woods and the bird belonged to each other.

And now the partridge who was on the log began to drum harder than ever, and his fluttering wings beat little tunes against the air. The Puddler Muddlers smiled as they watched.

A Partridge Wedding

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER "Will you," asked little Master Partridge, "be my wife?" And as he said these words in partridge talk the wind sang a little love song through the trees.

"I heard you drum-drumming and calling for me," said little Miss Partridge, "and as I came through the path in the woods I heard your wings beating a tune which I knew, too, was for me. You love the woods as I do."

Oh yes, I will be your wife, and we will make our home in the woods." "Excuse me," said Willy Nilly, and the partridges turned to look at him. Although they were both very shy they were not afraid of him. "Excuse me," he said again, "but won't you make your home in these woods?"

He was pretty sure they would refuse, though, for there were too many Puddler Muddlers around where they were.

"You'll forgive us if we do not accept your very kind offer," said Master Partridge, "but here it is a little too open for us. We love the wilder woods better—and I had just been planning, to move to deeper forests. What do you think about it, my dear little Miss Partridge?"

"I agree with you," she said, looking at Master Partridge. "I am not afraid of the creatures here now, but we are too close to fields and farms. I'd feel safer and happier in wilder woods."

"I understand how you feel," said Willy Nilly. "And I know you will both be very, very happy."

The partridges stood for a moment on the old log, but soon they were off to be feathered partners in the deep forests.

House Members Turn Energy To 'Helping Friends'

By HERBERT PLUMMER Washington — With the present session of congress drawing near its close and election time at hand, the practice known on Capitol Hill as "helping a friend" is going at full blast.

"Helping a friend" is the act of one member of congress arising on the floor and talking for the Congressional Record in praise of the hard-working, conscientious and statesmanlike colleague who perhaps is having a little tough sledding back home in trying to return for another term.

There are lots of them in such a fix this year, especially in the house.

Primary campaigns have been under way since early spring and will continue through the summer months into the fall in some states. Every little bit helps, particularly contributions of praise from a colleague who has had opportunity to see you in action on the firing line in Washington.

With 'Applause'

Here's a typical illustration of how it's worked, recently put in the Record by a southern member of the house.

"Dear Tom: When you go home I want you to tell those ex-servicemen for me that they will make a serious mistake if they turn against you after all you have done for them. . . ."

This was signed by the chairman of the house committee on world war veterans' legislation.

And another, taken from the speech of a Missouri member of the house in which he referred to a colleague from Texas.

"Speaking in behalf of the people of my state—and expressing, I am certain, the sentiments of those of every state in the union—I desire to thank the citizens of the . . . district of Texas for sending . . . here and keeping him here all these years."

And to make it all the more impressive the word "applause" is bracketed at the conclusion of such tributes.

'Helping Friend'

The member so praised is free to have such personal tributes printed in any quantities he desires and "franked" to his constituents. If he doesn't care to go to that trouble or expense, there it is in the Record where all may see or where it can be read with pardonable pride when the time for taking the stump rolls around.

Just the other day, when everybody in the house was anxious to get to consideration of the important stock market control bill, a democrat felt the urge to "help a friend." Snell, the republican leader gallantly acquiesced.

"I want it understood, however," he said, "that I know it is a purely political speech, and if someone on a little later, I hope there will be no objection from the democratic side of the house."

Murder at MOCKING HOUSE

BY WALTER C. BROWN

SYNOPSIS: A man made up to resemble Pierre Dufresne, contractor and political power, and a policeman apparently have shot each other in Dufresne's house. Mrs. Dufresne has fainted and cut her cheeks at the sight. Dufresne has not yet arrived from his downtown hotel. Sergeant Harper, however, cannot quite believe that the shots were real as the evidence seems to indicate.

FURTHER investigation was temporarily interrupted by the sounds of a new arrival at the house. Harper went out into the hall to find out who it was. A tall figure, wearing an enormous fur coat, strode toward him. "Dr. Ulrich?" he inquired.

The tall man nodded curtly. "Are you Sergeant Harper?"
The detective nodded. "Mrs. Dufresne is in her room. I'll go up with you."

"What are all these policemen doing around here—and that ambulance outside?" Ulrich demanded.

"We found the bodies of two men in the breakfast room here, one the policeman from this district. The evidence seems to indicate that they killed each other, but we haven't had time enough to go into the details."

The doctor stopped dead in his tracks, his eyebrows arched in surprise. "So that was the 'little trouble' you mentioned over the telephone? Who is the other victim?"

Harper shook his head. He had taken an instant dislike to the aggressive, patronizing manner of the medical man.

The detective had left him and was half way down the stairs, when Dr. Ulrich, coatless and with his shirt sleeves rolled up, came striding after him and seized him by the arm. "You damned clodhoppers!" he blazed, glaring down at Harper from the height of his seventy-odd inches. "What have you been doing to Mrs. Dufresne? If you've been trying any of your dirty third-degree methods on her I'll see that you answer for it."

Harper pushed the restraining arm aside. "There's no use blustering around here, Doctor. This place happens to be in the hands of the police and I am in charge. You will please confine your efforts to your patient. When that is done, I'll be glad to answer any questions about Mrs. Dufresne's accident."

WITH an angry growl, Dr. Ulrich ran down the steps and seized the telephone. Harper returned to the breakfast-room where Carlin was once more absorbed in studying the mark on the wainscoting left by the spent bullet. The detective revolved slowly around that strange corpse in the chair, studying the body from all angles.

A few minutes later Dr. Miller appeared. "Dr. Ulrich has sent for a nurse," he announced. "He says it will be best not to move Mrs. Dufresne."

"What does he say about the cut?"
"He thinks it can be healed without leaving a scar, but Mrs. Dufresne will have an uncomfortable time of it for a few days. She'll have to be fed through a tube and she won't be able to talk or move about. Any sudden jolt or movement of her jaws would open up the cut and undo all the work."

"He warned me that she is not to be cross-examined or annoyed in any way. Why is he so hot under the collar? He seems to have an idea that we've been grilling her about this business."

Harper frowned. "I've been wondering why he jumps to that conclusion so readily. At the moment I see no necessity for questioning Mrs. Dufresne about anything. I only hope that it turns out as he expects. I'm more than sorry it happened at all and I can't help feeling that I am partly to blame."

"Nonsense," Dr. Miller declared. "It wasn't your fault."
"All right, Doc, let's drop it. I'll have something to say about that later. Let's get on with this before there are any more delays. You've examined the bodies?"

Dr. Miller nodded. "Superficially, of course, but I doubt that the autopsy'll tell us any more than we can see with the naked eye. Matter of form in a cut and dried case like this."

"Well, I want a complete post-mortem report just the same and an analysis of the stomach contents. It might be helpful to know when and what he had last eaten and the amount of alcohol consumed. Just a matter of record, Doc, is it possible that this could have been a double suicide, or murder and suicide?"

"IMPOSSIBLE. The nature and location of the wounds make that absolutely impossible. Besides, there are no powder burns. They has no intention of embarking immediately on a huge silver purchase program.

'Permissive' Authority

As a matter of fact Mr. Roosevelt has indicated his position is exactly that. It is his idea to build up the silver reserve gradually and as the administration sees fit—"permissive" authority, if you please.

The ratio of 30 to 70 is the result of an agreement reached at the London economic conference. It was agreed there that the reserve against a nation's money should normally be 75 per cent of gold and 25 per cent of silver. However, a proviso was inserted that in times of emergency the ratio could be changed to 70 per cent of gold and 30 per cent of silver.

Apparently Mr. Roosevelt is ready to accept the proposal laid down at London—with provisos of his own.

High Priced Silver
With the present ratio between the two metals at 12 to 88 any attempt to bring it quickly to 30-70 obviously would mean that the government would have to acquire tremendous silver stocks immediately. Some contend—silverites included—it couldn't be done; that even if it were attempted silver would soar to a price not reached in years.

More simply stated, the 30-70 ratio as such is perfectly acceptable to the silver people, but they know there is little or no opportunity for its attainment.

Therefore a continued clamor for "mandatory" legislation such as the Goldsborough bill, which would set up a permanent monetary authority, and the compulsory silver-purchase amendment may be expected.

The President already has "permissive" authority to do things with money and currency which he has not used. What the silverites want is a showdown.

shot each other and dropped in their tracks.

"Can you fix the time of death?" The police surgeon approached the murdered stranger. He moved the dead man's arms slightly, bent the fingers, and tilted the head a little to one side. He went through much the same performance with Officer Hamill's body.

"I'd say that death occurred somewhere between seven and nine o'clock. As you know, Sergeant, rigor mortis sets in anywhere from three to twelve hours after death, depending on the surrounding temperature, the physical condition of the subject, and so on. In each case the muscles are just beginning to set. This tallies with the coagulation of the blood at the wounds."

Harper nodded. "We've not had much of a chance to trace things," he explained, "and of this one man we know nothing whatever. We do know that Officer Hamill 'pulled his box' at eight o'clock. His failure to ring up at nine led to the discovery of the crime. The search party that went out after him heard the door of this house banging in the wind and investigated. That was about ten o'clock or a few minutes after."

Dr. Miller tucked away his watch. "That fits in all right. Yes, it is my opinion that they died at the same time."

"Well, then, what about this, Doc? Carlin thinks that the wound in the head could only have been made by a .45 caliber steel-jacket bullet. The one we found was a .38 blunt-nose."

"Nonsense," he snorted in contempt. "You can't tell offhand, that way. Bullets are tricky things, no matter what the caliber. When they strike a bony surface there's no telling what course they'll take. Besides, you've got the bullet, haven't you?"

"Yes, we have it. We assume that it's from Hamill's gun."

"That ought to settle the argument," Miller's voice took on a shrewd pitch. "Have you turned up anything that looks fishy?"

"No, I haven't," Harper was forced to admit.

legislation increasing the ratio of silver to gold to a point of 30 to 70. The present ratio is 12 to 88.

On the face of it the proposal appears to be a liberal concession on the part of the President. When boiled down it's another story altogether.

Even Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, one of the most ardent of silver advocates, admits as much. His laconic statement that the proposal is "safe" aptly expresses his views.

Thomas thinks it's "safe" because he is convinced the President

not found in any other low-priced car

CHEVROLET It was a great record of leadership that Chevrolet made in 1933! It's an even greater, more impressive record that Chevrolet is making for 1934! Already, sales are tens of thousands of cars ahead of last year. Production is running higher than that of any other automobile company in the world. And every day, from state after state, comes the same report on registrations: Chevrolet is leading all other cars!

The big reason for such preference is plainly shown at the right. Chevrolet has so many vital features that others in the low-price field have left out: Knee-Action wheels that are fully enclosed for complete safety and absolute dependability. A six-cylinder valve-in-head engine with an exclusive "Blue-Flame" head. Big, "cable-controlled" brakes, the best in the low-price field. Large, spacious bodies by Fisher, with Fisher No Draft Ventilation. And real "shock-proof" steering that brings new ease and comfort to driving. No other low-priced automobile has a single one of these five leading 1934 features. That's why no other can be backed by such a confident statement as this:

Drive it only 5 miles and you'll never be satisfied with any other low-priced car.
