KIWANIS WILL PLAY HIGH AT WINTERVILLE

The Kiwanis baseball club, vanquished by the local high school Tuesday to the tune of 7-6 will go to Winterville tomorrow to play the high school of that place. The game will be in connection with commencement exercises at Winterville and hundreds of people are expected to be on hand.

Donald Conley will pitch for the Kiwanians, and if he isn't as wild as a March hare as in the game here Tuesday the clubmen stand a good chance of coming out with the big end of the score. Three players, Flye Massey and Ellwanger, who were out of the lineup with high here are scheduled to be back on the job at Winterville. They are among the most dependable players on the club and their loss Tuesday played a conspicuous part in the clubmen losing to Coach Hewlett's youngsters.

Joe Taft, captain of the Kiwanis team, said a number of games have been scheduled with various school clubs of the county, in addition to the Rotary-Kiwanis game to be played at some future date. The Rotarians accepted a challenge from the Kiwanians at their regular meeting Monday night and this promises to be one of the outstanding games of the year.

The Kiwanians are attempting to raise an appreciable sum for the purchase of new books for Sheppard Memorial Library, and it is likely the fund will be increased in forthcoming games.

By ALAN GOULD

The answer to why Princeton's Bill Bonthron didn't choose to race his arch rival, Glenn Cunningham and Gene Venke in the special one-mile event at the Penn Relays is enough, so far as Matty Geis, the Tiger track coach, is concerned.

I asked Matty about it at Philadelphia and he replied: "It's too early in the outdoor season for Bonthron to try any high-pressure mile racing. He has had a big let-down in training since he ran Cunningham twice on indoor tracks. Weather conditions are too uncertain at this time of the year to try for any foot-racing objective so important as a return race between men of the caliber of Bonthron and Cunningham."

"Look what they had for the first day of the Penn carnival. Nothing but rain and mud. Sonny told me after his relay race, in which he lost to Horstbostel of Indiana, that he never felt as though he could get his spikes into the ground, it was so mushy and slippery with water."

It's uncertain just now whether Bonthron and Cunningham will meet again, although there is talk they might enter the national A. A. U. championships at Milwaukee the end of June or otherwise be invited to an eastern meet prior to the Princetonian's departure in July for England, where the combined Princeton-Cornell teams will meet Oxford-Cambridge forces again. Tiger Bill also is anxious for that return bout with Jack Lovelock, his record-breaking conqueror of 1933.

Bonthron Just Worried

Geis tells a story about Bonthron in connection with last year's intercollegiate at Cambridge, where Bill won the 800 and 1500 meter championships in brilliant fashion.

"I saw Bill looking worried and nervous the day of the finals and asked him what was the matter," said Geis. "He told me his legs felt weak and funny and that he even doubted his ability to run a single race that afternoon. 'Why, coach, I don't know what's the matter with me' he said. 'I started to walk up a flight of steps and had to sit down. My legs just wouldn't move. I don't see how I can do any running at all.'"

"I asked him if he had slept all right and eaten a good breakfast. He replied he had. Then I went on Bill, the only thing the matter with you is you're feeling the natural tension before a race. All good runners experience that. The minute you step out on that track you will feel perfectly all right and go places. Quit worrying. He looked relieved at once and turned in two of the finest performances of his career in the finals."

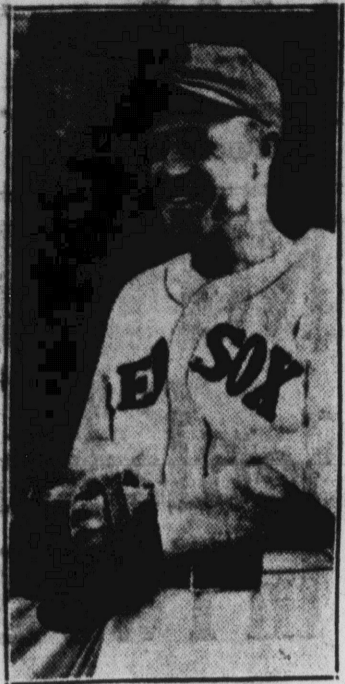

Loose Style Only Fairness

Being somewhat curious as to why or how Bonthron adopted his "loose" style of running or, rather, the habit of striding all over the track during the middle stages of a foot-race, I asked Geis about it.

"Mainly," he replied, "I think it's because Bonthron has a deep-rooted desire to avoid the slightest chance of fouling any rival runner. What looks like ragged running on his part in a big field is merely the impression he gives while seeking to avoid any bodily contact."

"Rather than risk bumping anybody or trying to get through a hole Bonny will run away around anybody in front of him. Often he loses valuable ground. It was costly, for instance, when he raced very wide around Venke in the 1500 meter national indoor championship and just failed to overtake Cunningham at the finish."

More Safety For Drivers Assured By New G-3 Tire

Increased safety for drivers of modern high-performance automobiles is assured by a new tire, known as the "G-3" according to Floman Buggy Company, local dealers for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co.

"The tire got its name," says Mr. Flanagan, "from the symbol that was used to identify it in the laboratory and on the Goodyear test fleet during the years of its development to perfection. The G-3 All-weather proved in all the rigorous tests to which it was subjected that it would average 43 per cent more non-skid mileage."

"Good tires are more important to automobiles today than ever before for several reasons. The modern automobile is faster than its predecessors, has smaller wheels, will start and stop more quickly and needs the traction to show its best performance."

"With G-3's tires an automobile will have the advantage of non-skid safety for 43 per cent more miles than with any tire ever offered previously by the Goodyear company."

"The difference between the new G-3 All-weather and any previous tire may readily be detected by the naked eye. The G-3 has a wider and flatter tread, which is the primary fundamental of its increased non-skid life. The tire, in any given size has more of its tread in contact with the road."

STREET WORK PUSHED HERE

Improvement of Dickinson Avenue And Fifth Street Making Progress

Construction work in connection with the improvement program under way on Dickinson Avenue and Fifth Street was making considerable progress today and probably will be completed in the next few weeks.

Fifth street is being widened from from Library street to the city limits and Dickinson Avenue is being reformed preparatory to resurfacing.

Resurfacing has been delayed somewhat on account of improvement of the A. C. L. crossing on the upper end of Dickinson Avenue, but this work is scheduled to be completed probably the latter part of the week. Reinforcement of weak places will also be completed in the next several days.

When the avenue has been resurfaced it will be among the finest streets of the city. It was said by officials sometime ago. The brick pavement in numbers of places had fallen below the surface and such depressions must be lifted to normal position before resurfacing work can be started.

The highway which connects with Fifth street at Library street is being widened in keeping with the city pavement. Several blocks are involved in this improvement and traffic the last week or so has been routed down Library street to 4th street and thence back into the highway. If work continues as rapidly as during the last few days, the highway probably will be opened the next several days.

The WORLD of STAMPS

By QUINTON JAMES

New stamps from South America again are to the fore in the world of philately. Both Costa Rica and Uruguay have just announced sets for airmail and regular postage, while Paraguay has another new air stamp of a high value.

The Costa Rica issue containing 13 values provides that country with its first complete set of airmail postage, most of the previous issues having been surcharges on regular postage. Starting at 5 centimos, the stamps scale up in denomination to 10 colons.

Two designs are used, that on the nine stamps from 5 to 75 centimos depicting an airplane in flight over the fertile valleys of Costa Rica. Numerals are in the lower right-hand corner. From 1 to 10 colons, the four values have an allegorical figure representative of aviation. On these the numerals are near the upper left hand corner.

Uruguay Set.
The Uruguay stamps, eight in number for regular postage, are commemorative in connection with the establishment of the "third republic." In contrast with most of the stamps of this country, they are not pictorial, the space on the stamp being taken up with significant lettering.

Values are 3, 7, 12, 20, 36 and 50 centimos and 1 peso. They bear the dates 1933, 1934 and March 31 with the phrase "third republic" in an arc across the center above three stars.

From Paraguay.
The Paraguayan airport inserts in the current stamps available for plane letter transmission a value not heretofore used. It is 33.75 pesos. The stamp has a view of the postoffice at Asuncion, capital of the country.

Other New Ones.
The semi-independent state of Andorra; which is under the joint control of France and the Spanish bishop of Urgel, now has its first set of air mail stamps. This issue, under the Spanish administration, contains 12 adhesives, 25 centimos to 5 pesetas. The airplane is the basis for the design on the values from 1.75 pesetas up, while on the lower denominations, 25 centimos to 1 peseta, is a mountain scene, an airplane propeller and wings and the official seal.

IN COURT WITH TINY 'CULPRITS'

For a second time recently New York parents were haled into court because their children romped on forbidden grassy plots in Central Park. The latest were Mr. and Mrs. Armond Trotter, whose babies, Marilyn, 3, and Phyllis, 19 months, a policeman testified, played on one of the "restricted" lawns. They spent several hours in a police station, were paroled over night and when the case came up the next day the magistrate found them guilty but suspended sentence. (Associated Press Photo)

Why the new WHITE PALM BEACH SUIT is favored by the wise!

It stays clean longer, due to the yarns of its patented weave.

It washes or dry-cleans to perfection.

If not only holds its shapely lines, but automatically smooths out the line of wear—if hung up overnight. It comes in new weaves—distinctive, unusual.

And—it superbly tailored by Goodall, who are the makers of famous Palm Beach Cloth.

We are showing these handsome whites in single breasted and double breasted models that are the newest fashion creations of the season.

Showing how Palm Beach Suits retain their smooth lines. Each of these summer suits, made of four totally different summer fabrics, was subjected to precisely the same muzzing treatment. Two sets of photographs were taken: (1) immediately after muzzing; (2) after hanging the suits up overnight. The Palm Beach Suit not only wrinkled or muzzed less than the others...but also showed truly amazing facility in the matter of "automatic recovery." (See actual photographs. Commencement Exercises
On Thursday evening at eight o'clock the elementary grades of the Arthur high school will present an operetta and a play.

Friday morning at ten o'clock the seventh grade will give a program and receive their certificates.

Following the seventh grade exercises, Mr. R. C. Deal of E. C. T. C. will make the final address.

At twelve o'clock the community will enjoy a basket picnic.

The final exercises will be the class day and graduation exercises in the form of a three-act play.

Edison Used Insull's Name on Trip to Paris

New York—(AP)—Samuel Insull's name was so little known in 1889 that Thomas A. Edison used it as a "nom de mer."

Edison booked passage on the steamship "La Bourgoigne" August 3, 1889, to attend the Paris Exposition where his electric light and other inventions were being shown, and to leave New York with as little fanfare as possible he obtained tickets under the name of Insull, his secretary since 1881.

The New York Daily Tribune in its Sunday edition, August 4, 1889, stated:

"Among the passengers who started for Europe yesterday was Thomas A. Edison, the electrician. Considerable mystery surrounded his departure. His name didn't appear on the official passenger list of the steamer La Bourgoigne, which carried him to Europe. His tickets were purchased in the name of his private secretary, Samuel Insull, and wife, as Mrs. Edison accompanied him."

The Tribune's reporter wrote that Edison's employees knew nothing of his plans even an hour before the boat sailed. Edison, said he had no desire to see England but he wanted to see the Paris Exposition because he had never seen all his patents together.

about a month later carried the item:

"Mr. Edison appears to have entertained an idea that he is not well known by sight in New York, for he booked his berth as Samuel Insull (his wife's maiden name) and kept his departure a secret? Unfortunately for his chances of incognito, there was about as much concealment possible as for the nose on a man's face Paris is making, as it should, a great deal of the ingenious American, and it is possible when his next surprise, an electric railway on new principles, is shown at Chicago at the end of the year, the world will be again ringing with the real name of "Samuel Insull."

Officials of the French Line in New York said Edison's name with that of his wife appears on the passenger list as sailing on that date, but the register as signed by the inventor and the records of the booking office could not be located.

Byrd's Men In Little America Use Tunnels

(By Associated Press)

While Admiral Byrd is spending the antarctic winter in his observation post on the Ross Barrier, his men—56—are snug under the snows of Little America in their tunnel-connected houses on the Bay of Whales. Their community has power and light, broadcasting station, tractors, planes, library, medical office, material ward for dogs (there are 122 of these huskies and seven pups), a science hall, dairy with cows and even a motion picture theatre in the mess hall. Snowdrifts have covered the buildings, some of which are eight feet high.

Two hundred and fifty feet southwest of the administration building are two parallel lines of buildings. Starting at the left, there is the mess hall, 15 by 30 by 7 1/2 feet. In a cubicle is a motion picture projection booth. Two movie photographers bunk there. In the mess room itself there are two long tables. The cook has his bunk in a corner. Next there is the science building, one end of which, partitioned off, is a library lined with books. Scientific instruments are grouped at the other end. Other scientific devices for studying antarctic conditions are housed in the two little shacks further on.

The second row of buildings starts with the one containing the gasoline driven generators, and storage batteries. These supply the camp with power and light. A 40-foot tunnel leads to the radio shack, from which the broadcasts to the United States are made. Next to the radio shack is "Dog Heim," private residence of two of the men. Past this is the cow barn, containing four cows and one bull, a dog, two kittens, and two men. Off this is the tunnel leading to Dog Town where the huskies and pups are kept.

Outside there is nothing but the antarctic snows and three airplanes of the expedition, which are being enclosed in walls of snow. The fourth plane crashed in March.

CHARLESTON DICTION IS EASY ON BRITONS

Charleston, S. C.—(AP)—Englishmen find the speech of Charlestonians easier to understand than any other in America.

At least that was the experience of Commander W. F. Wake-Walker and the crew of the British cruiser Dragon which touched here on a good-will visit.

MAY TENTH

Today once again the South observed Confederate Memorial Day. Although more than seventy years have passed since the beginning of the conflict in which the few remaining Wearers of the Grey took part the South fittingly pays tribute each year to those departed heroes and those few living memorials of the conflict that threatened for a time to divide our nation; but in the end resulted in a Union for all time.

The South loves these veterans and although they gave their best seemingly for a lost cause they are no less heroes. As time and the progress of the nation has gradually overshadowed the once existing enmity between the North and South the American people as a whole have come to more fully realize the splendid show of valor and heroism of the soldiers of the South in the early Sixties, and each year as the ranks grow thinner and thinner more American people gather on the Tenth of May to hear again the stories of heroism and sacrifice and pay tribute and homage to those who have long passed on and to the few remaining living memorials of that enmity that is now long buried in the past.

Young Fatherland' Drills Austrain Boys

By WADE WERNER
Wien—(AP)—Children fought on the barricades in Austria's civil war last February. Their number was not great, for only about 40 juvenile prisoners were taken.

But the role they played is tactically recalled in an announcement that the first youthful socialist revolt prisoner to come before the juvenile court will be a 10-year-old lad.

He carried a rifle in one of the bitterest battles of the war, an engagement finally won by government troops using an armored train.

In the fighting involving many thousands of men with machine-guns, rifles, hand grenades and field artillery, the participation of a handful of youngsters passed almost unnoticed. Indeed, most of the 40 juvenile prisoners had been released by mid-April.

But the children now being trained on the victorious side—not so much for actual military service as for being grounding in the patriotic idea of home-defense—are a colorful part of the street scene in the new Austria.

The government's plan is a youthful force similar to Italy's ballia. Hence the nation-wide census recently taken laid special emphasis on the count of youngsters of pre-military age, as well as on the military and athletic experience of adult males.

Already between 60,000 and 80,000 youngsters are receiving training as members of the fascist Heimwehr organization, "Young Fatherland."

Murder at MOCKING HOUSE

BY WALTER C. BROWN

SYNOPSIS: Although a policeman and a stranger apparently have shot each other in the home of Pierre Dufresne, Sergeant Harrington is not convinced. Mrs. Dufresne claims to have seen the bodies. She thinks and utters her fears; Dr. Ulrich, apparently anxious to keep his name being questioned, demands absolute quiet for her. Harper and the police sergeant discuss the case.

Chapter 14

"HAND OF GOD"

ON THE surface it's as clear as a pane of glass, but I have a feeling there's a nigger somewhere in the woodpile," Harper went on. "What induced Hamill to walk in here and deliberately shoot down a man seated at a table, smoking a cigarette? Why should the man shoot a policeman? Why was that man masquerading as Dufresne, the owner of the house? Look here."

Harper lifted the man's left hand. The first and second fingers had been seared by the burned-out cigarette. "This fellow recently wore a ring—very recently. There's the mark around his third finger. If you will look closely at the knuckle joint you will see where it was forced off. Where is the ring?"

"There was no watch, no wallet, no papers, no cards, nothing that you would expect to find in a man's pockets, except a handkerchief and a pair of shoes. When he broke into this house he completely discarded his identity.

"Look at these. There are no occupational calluses or stains. These are not hands used to manual labor, nor are they quite the hands of a gentleman of leisure." He turned them over. "Look at the fingernails. Cut blunt. Clean, but not cared for otherwise."

Harper snapped wide the nose-glasses and let them drop on the floor. "These glasses are not his, either. Look at the red marks indented on the sides of his nose, made by the pinners. He certainly was not accustomed to them.

"Formal clothes, but his shoes, while of good quality, have been soled. We haven't even found his hat and coat. Oh, there are a lot of questions here that need answering."

Dr. Miller shook his head. "I've told you all I can and I doubt that the autopsy will add much to that knowledge."

The front door opened and there was an influx of the belated party from the Alsteritz. Harper dropped the telephone and went forward to greet them.

Evidently Markison had put into practice Harper's orders to use heroic methods to get Dufresne back on his feet. He was bundled to the ears against the cold and storm, and still a little unsteady on his feet, leaped on a supporting arm held out by the lean and gum-looking Andrews. Markison and the second detective were just behind them and a moment later an athletic, handsome young fellow in a chauffeur's uniform entered briskly. "This was Joseph Donaghy, Mr. Dufresne's chauffeur."

AT THE same moment Dr. Ulrich appeared on the stairs, rolling down his shirt sleeves and fastening the cuff links as he descended. "Hello, Pierre," he exclaimed cordially, advancing to shake hands.

"Why, Doctor, what on earth are you doing here?" Dufresne asked, extremely puzzled.

Dr. Ulrich shot a questioning glance at the detective, but before he could answer Harper cut in. "There has been a very regrettable accident, Mr. Dufresne. When we first discovered the bodies, one of the reporters assumed, from the disguise the man was wearing that it was you and told Mrs. Dufresne. Of course she came over immediately. She fainted, and in falling struck her face against the edge of the table."

"My wife—here?" Dufresne positively stammered. He looked around at the circle of faces as if he could not digest the meaning of the words Harper had just uttered. His eyes fastened on Dr. Ulrich's, "Sylvia—scarred—for life?" he mumbled.

Dr. Ulrich took him by the arm. "Pull yourself together, Pierre," he commanded. "There's at least an even chance that it will heal without a scar."

"Gest in main du Selgneur!" Dufresne stumbled forward and sank down on the lounge.

"What did you say?" Harper asked.

Dufresne looked up. "Pardon me, I am upset. Where is she now? I must see, at once!"

"Certainly, certainly, Pierre," Dr. Ulrich said soothingly, "but a little later, if you please. You will only be in the way if you go now."

providing of fresh and suitable material for the military forces.

What the "Young Fatherland" troops emphasize most now is the development of a feeling of comradeship. The aim of the movement is to transform children of all classes and degrees of prosperity into a corps who think of one another as comrades and fellow-Austrians.

In a few minutes Pierre Dufresne stood up, with a great change in his bearing. His face had become hard and expressionless, his carriage more erect, his step firmer. "I want some hot coffee. Tell Mrs. Whitmore."

"Mrs. Whitmore?" Harper repeated blankly. The name was strange to him.

"Haven't you seen Mrs. Whitmore? She hasn't appeared, with all this commotion in here?" Seeing Harper's blank look, he went on to explain. "Mrs. Whitmore is my housekeeper. She and her husband have been living in the apartment over the garage while the decorators were working in the house. Andrews, get her on the house phone and tell her to come over."

"Yes, and call up Aline and Richard. Mr. and Mrs. Croydne," he explained to the detective. "Mrs. Croydne is my wife's sister. Their house is on the next street. You can see a corner of it from our back windows."

Andrews went to rouse the sleeping Whitmores. There was a special telephone connection between the rear of the house and the rooms over the garage.

"Is it necessary to have all these men running through the house?" Dufresne questioned testily. "The place seems to be swarming with police. Who are all these men and what the devil are they doing here?" "There are certain regulations and formalities to be complied with in a case of this sort," Harper explained. "These men are doing routine work. As soon as it is completed, they'll clear out."

THEY went into the breakfast-room and Harper closed the door. Although Harper was watching closely, he could detect no spark of emotion on Dufresne's face as he stood inside the door and surveyed the murder scene. With the two faces there before him, Harper saw that there was indeed a startling resemblance, more than enough to confuse the casual eye.

"That's the way we found them. The electric lights were not on. Now, Mr. Dufresne, does that suggest anything to you?"

Dufresne shook his head. "I am completely mystified, Harper. I can't tell you why any man should try to murder me nor why he should disguise himself in that fashion, break in here, and then shoot a policeman. I can't even understand why the policeman entered the house. I assume that this is the man who has been threatening me."

"It seems likely. While we have not yet established any definite connection, the circumstances of the events from this afternoon on can hardly be laid to absolute coincidence."

Harper removed the false moustache, the goatee, the eye-glasses. At once the resemblance to Dufresne was dissipated. This man was at least ten years younger. The lines of his face exhibited strength, persistence, and determination. Doggedness was in the line of his jaw. Not at all the lineaments of an imbecile, nor those of a homicidal maniac.

"I never saw this man before in my life," Dufresne declared, emphatically.

"Are you quite sure of that, Mr. Dufresne? Remember, he had probably been following you about for some time. Think well."

"I am positive. I have a good memory for faces—an excellent memory. I do not know this man. I have never seen him before."

"Would you have any objections to my bringing in the others and asking them the same question?"

"Not at all, Harper. I believe that would be the best procedure."

Sergeant Harper called in Dr. Miller and the two ambulance men. "We'll be all through in a few minutes," he said. "Then you can strip this body and take it away. In the meantime, you may remove Hamill."

There was now more confusion than ever. Mr. and Mrs. Whitmore had arrived and were listening, wide-eyed and almost incredulous, to the low-voiced explanations of Andrews.

The man had come up from Headquarters with the missing gray and white dusting powders for the insufflator, and Harper set the fingerprint man to work on the decausers and glass and the two guns.

The trained nurse Dr. Ulrich had summoned arrived in a taxicab and was whisked upstairs by the doctor before the detective had a chance to see her face.

But for all the activity, the house remained what it had seemed when Harper first arrived—a house filled with the grisly feet of death.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep...Vigor...Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes of filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. They should pour out through the bladder 3 pints of fluid a day which contains 4 pounds of waste matter.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and distress. If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS—a doctor's prescription—which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes. Your common sense will tell you that this is impossible. Treatments of this nature may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS—the old reliable relief that contains no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

Men who really know their oil and who keep a shrewd eye on operating costs will tell you that Tiolene can "take it." These comments are typical:

"Used Tiolene eight years in fleet...lowest cost per mile based on accurate records..." "Two million miles of cab operation without a bearing failure...used Tiolene exclusively..." "Am a salesman...travelled 150,000 miles in present car...on Tiolene..." "Used Tiolene five years...both light cars and trucks...costs less per mile than other oils we have tried."

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER
 Washington — (AP) — In a year such as this, when the entire House and one-third of the Senate are up for re-election, members of Congress become keenly aware of what is said about them and their activities in the newspapers.

Some are more sensitive than others, but all keep an eye on the Senate and House press galleries and are quick to react to what is written by "you newspaper boys," as some members describe the correspondents.

Even the leaders are not excepted. Joe Byrns, Democratic floor leader of the House, felt it necessary recently to arise to a point of personal privilege and repudiate a statement attributed to him in the press.

Someone had accused him of speaking disparagingly of the Senate leadership in the present Congress. He denied that it was true and paid high tribute to the leaders on the other side of the capitol.

Blanton Calls Names.
 Representative Blanton of Texas for weeks has been regaling the House with his grievances against what he alleges are unfair attacks on him by certain newspapermen and newspapers.

The outspoken Texan has called names and made specific threats. He has openly dared at least two prominent newspapers to continue what he alleges to be personal attacks on him.

There's one member of Congress, however, apparently impervious to this sort of thing. At least it would seem so from his actions. He is Senator Ashurst, one-time cowboy who has represented Arizona in the Senate as a Democrat since it was admitted to the Union.

The tall, bronzed Arizonan is up for re-election this year.

Recently he received a communication from the editor of a leading Democratic newspaper in Arizona whom he describes as his "most constant and most savage critic."

The entire communication was concerned with opposition to certain of the senator's views on legislation enacted and pending in the present Congress.

Not Thin-Skinned.
 After reading the letter Ashurst wired the editor for permission to have his opposition in detail printed in the Congressional Record.

"If you grant me permission," he stated, "I shall, of course print your letter without any deletion. Please do not be thin-skinned but imitate me as I am a pechydermatous."

Permission was granted immediately by the writer. Arising in the Senate, Ashurst declared to his colleagues that he had "fondly believed for some years that I was sterilized and vaccinated against the vicious habit of reading letters into the Record, but it now appears the habit has recurred."

The letter was sent to the desk of the vice-president and read to the Senate by the chief clerk. When it was concluded the Senate returned to its regular business.

The owboy senator delivered no speech in reply.

in the far southwest corner of the state. Fierce sows with litters attack men at times. They battle with such deadly effect that hungry coyotes and wolves are unable to seize any of their young. Originally domesticated, the animals were turned loose before maturity in the shinny (dwarf oak) region to fatten on "mast," or acorns. Cowboys rope those they wish to kill, but when one unexpectedly flushes a mother and her young, the sow does not hesitate to charge the horse and its rider. The sows band together in groups of three or four, quickly forming a circle when proving animals attempts to slip into the herd and snatch a pig. Fighting savagely with razor-like tusks, the sows are a match for any predatory beast of the region.

My Beauty Hint
 By GENEVA MITCHELL
 I prefer this treatment to any powder base. Moisten the nose slightly with warm water and gently massage it with one finger until it is nearly dry—then apply the powder. This is quite a delicate process, for if the skin is a bit too moist there are splashes of powder, and if too dry the powder will come off. But if successfully done, the result is pleasing.

AND UP AT FACTORY

There are always two sides to an opinion. There can only be one side to a fact. If you are considering the purchase of a car—weigh these facts about the new Terraplane 6.

1st in BIGNESS
 By foot rule, yard stick or tape measure, there can be only ONE car that's BIGGEST. In the low price field to-day, that's Terraplane—15 feet 10 inches from bumper to bumper!

1st in PERFORMANCE
 Performance is just another word until it's proved. The Terraplane proves its performance with facts. The new Terraplane will even outperform the Terraplane 6 that broke official AAA record after record last year.

1st in POWER
 Of two different figures—one is either greater or less than another. With 85 H. P., the Terraplane 6 is the most powerful 6 in the low price field.

1st in STYLE
 A car either has a tire carrier or baggage trunk in the rear—or the rear lines are clean. With clean, flowing rear body lines and a front end free of all air pockets, the Terraplane 6 is first in fully advanced streamlined style.

1st in ECONOMY
 Terraplane economy is not a matter of trick test or special adjustment. It has been proved in owner service—by owners' sworn statements.

EXCITED?

You bet! We've got the NEW

"G-3"

Here's what you get in Goodyear's new "G-3"!

You get the broader road contact of a flatter, wider All-Weather Tread.

You get quicker-stopping and the greater road grip of more non-skid blocks in the center.

You get the easy steering and smooth travel of wider riding-ribs.

You get the slow, even wear of closer-nested non-skid blocks and ribs.

You get more rubber in the tread, an average of two pounds more per tire.

—all of which adds up to 43% MORE NON-SKID MILE-AGE at no extra cost to you!

COME in and see it—the tire that licks the problem of rapid tread-wear!

"G-3" is its name—just an engineer's symbol for the tread that stood up under the toughest punishment the Goodyear test fleet ever gave a tire.

They pounded it over the roads day and night—starting, speeding, stopping—frazzling brakes and wracking cars. And when the reports were in, the "G-3" All-Weather was the winner!

It kept its grip twice as long as competitive tires—gives 43% more non-skid mileage than any previous Goodyear All-Weather!

What a tire! It's the only tire that can keep its non-skid mileage on quick-starting—fast-running—quick-stopping modern cars. And that means more safety—longer non-skid wear on any car.

It costs more to build—but you can buy it today at no extra cost!

New York Cotton

New York, May 10.—(AP)—New York cotton futures opened easy 5 to 10 lower under liquidation and weakness in silver on unfavorable prospects for silver legislation. July suggested to 12.23 right after the call while the December sold at 11.49 making net losses of about 12 to 15 points. At the end of the first half hour prices were three or four points up from the lowest.

After selling off to 11.22 for July and 11.49 for December or 13 to 15 points lower, cotton recovered five or six points of its losses on trade buying and covering promoted by the strength in wheat and rallies in silver.

Trading remained quiet and prices at midday showed losses of 10 to 12 points. Futures closed steady, four to five higher, spots steady; middling 11.55.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, May 10.—(AP)—Stock prices dropped sharply today under a selling wave that swept many issues to new low levels for the year or longer. Losses ranged from one to around five points at the worst although there were some mild recoveries later.

There was no specific news developments to account for the severity of the decline but various commission houses said that "discouraged" liquidation was largely responsible.

The ticker tape fell several minutes in arrears during the downward rush and one sizeable block of the more speculative changed hands. Stocks recovered substantially in late dealings. Transfers were 32,150,000 shares.

Durham Wife-Killer Gets Hearing Friday

Durham, May 10.—(AP)—Friday was set as the tentative date by local police for the preliminary hearing of James B. (Buck) Carden, well-known Durham man who murdered his wife last week because she termed him an "ex-convict" in her divorce suit. He will be tried for first degree murder. Yesterday afternoon his bullet-ridden wife, Vera Wagoner Carden, mother of a nine-year-old boy, whose custody she asked in her divorce suit, was buried near her birthplace in Hillsboro. Though there were no eye-witnesses to the shooting, police say they have the names of a number of persons who saw Carden enter his wife's home, heard five shots fired and saw Carden walk out of the house. Carden, however, admitted to police that he shot his wife and did it because she termed him an "ex-convict."

JUDGE JAMES MEMORIAL DAY SPEAKER HERE

(Continued From Page One.) Confederate government that have been made during the years that passed have revealed nothing for which any Southerner should feel ashamed; on the contrary, as we recall events of those four dramatic and eventful years, there is much to make us proud of our Southern heritage.

"The Confederate states were made up of a peaceful agricultural people who had no war industries, no sufficient military organization and very little financial credit. It was an impossible task to form an army under such circumstances, to combat a foe backed by a well-organized government in possession of powerful industries, a well equipped and thoroughly organized army and navy, financial stability and almost unlimited natural resources; but notwithstanding all this, the world has seen no finer exhibition of gallantry and military genius than that exhibited by Confederate troops."

Mrs. W. P. Moore presided over the exercises and presented Judge James as "one of Pitt county's distinguished sons."

Other parts of the exercises consisted of salute to the flags, invocation by Rev. G. R. Combs; song, "The Old North State;" Greetings by Supt. J. H. Rose; special music by the high school glee club, and song, "America."

At conclusion of the program the Daughters of the Confederacy went to Cherry Hill cemetery and placed flowers on the graves of the departed heroes.

The Confederate flag flew along the sidewalks in front of various business houses of the city.

Large advertisement for Lucky Strike cigarettes. Features a woman smoking a cigarette, a pack of Lucky Strike cigarettes, and text: "Here's why—Luckies do not dry out why—Luckies are All-Ways kind to your throat. The difference between cigarettes is the difference between what goes into them and how they are put together. Luckies use only the clean, center leaves, for these are the mildest leaves—they taste better. That's why farmers are paid higher prices for them. And Luckies get the benefit of the famous process—"It's toasted"—for your throat protection. And every Lucky is round, firm and fully packed. That's why Luckies "keep in condition"—that's why you'll find that Luckies do not dry out—an important point to every smoker. Yes, Luckies are always in all-ways kind to your throat. "It's toasted" ✓ Luckies are all-ways kind to your throat. Only the Center Leaves—these are the Mildest Leaves They Taste Better. Copyright, 1934, The American Tobacco Company.
