MURDER AT MOCKING HOUSE
 BY WALTER C. BROWN

Chapter 13
 INQUISITION

A FEW minutes later Mrs. Dufresne's sister arrived, with her husband, Richard Croysden. One had only to glance at Aline Croysden to recognize her as the sister of Sylvia Dufresne. Her hair approached an auburn shade rather than the golden blonde coloring of her sister.

Her features, too, though of the same distinctive beauty, had less of the fragile and ethereal quality. Her natural manner was more vigorous and forthright, though not lacking either in poise or graciousness.

Mrs. Croysden excused herself at the first opportunity to go upstairs and see if she could be of any service. Harper continued to talk with Richard Croysden. He found this brother-in-law of Pierre Dufresne a nervous, impulsive personality, but with an alert, incisive turn of mind.

He questioned the detective closely along lines which showed that he had a keen grasp of the essentials of the mystery and a bond of mutual liking and respect sprang up between him and the Sergeant of Detectives at their first contact.

It was not until later that the detective found out that Croysden was the famous concert pianist.

Croysden was not the only one who exhibited a strong interest in the strange mystery of the breakfast-room. The chauffeur, Donaghy, listened intently and said nothing. And Harper was surprised to glance upward and find Dr. Ulrich standing near the head of the stairs, absorbed in the conversations below. He caught the detective's look and slowly backed away, with a sardonic gleam of the eye.

When Mrs. Croysden returned from upstairs, Harper mustered them all into the breakfast-room. They formed into two natural groups, facing the body in the chair. In one group were Pierre Dufresne, and Mr. and Mrs. Croysden. In the other were the two Whitmores, Andrews, and Donaghy.

The detective gave a brief summary of the situation, to which they listened in absolute silence. He demonstrated how the features had been altered by the disguise.

"Have any of you ever seen this man before?"

Pierre Dufresne looked on in stony silence.

"Have you, Mrs. Croysden?"

"I am sure I have not," she answered in a very small voice.

"Mr. Croysden?"

"No, Sergeant. Sorry I can't help you."

"Whitmore?"

The black-browed Mrs. Whitmore spoke up before her slow-minded spouse could pull his wits together.

"No, we've never seen him," she answered, sharply.

"Perhaps your husband would prefer to answer for himself," Harper suggested, annoyed by her air.

"Well, I ought to know. We've been married twenty-some years, and if I didn't see him, John didn't see him," she shot back, her black eyes snapping.

"That's right, I don't know him," the slow-voiced John Whitmore replied, with a sheepish look.

"Andrews?"

The tight-lipped butler looked more glum than ever as he silently shook his head.

"Donaghy?"

The handsome chauffeur had been the most interested member of the group. He looked long and carefully at the unidentified victim. "It seems to me I have seen this man somewhere before," he stated, slowly.

His deliberate words had the effect of a bombshell in that room.
 Harper caught the sudden tenses-ness, the sharp hiss of some one's breath, a catch that just missed being a gasp. His eye swept the group.
 Andrews' look was positively venomous. The detective scented something in the wind.

"Think hard, Donaghy. This is most important."

Joseph Donaghy held his pause to the limit, then he smiled and shook his head. "For a moment I thought I had it—something about the face.
 I'll try to remember, Sergeant. Maybe it will come back to me."

Moscow Seeks Foreign Students MOSCOW—(AP)—The All-Union Society for Cultural Relations Abroad, known as "VOKS" for short, and the "Intourist" are organizing one-month summer courses for British and American students at the First Moscow State University. Lectures will be varied by trips to various parts of the Soviet Union.

That was what Donaghy's words brought to Harper's ear, but it was as if Donaghy's real voice had been saying, "I know this man. That knowledge is dangerous to one of you. Will it be made worth while for me to forget?"

And more than one pair of ears was aware of the importance of both messages!

The following day, Wednesday,
 January 11th, dawned clear and cold.
 The heavy fall of snow had tapered off about midnight and there had been very little wind to disturb it afterward.

Harper, arriving for duty at Dufresne's house shortly after eight o'clock, noted with satisfaction the undisturbed condition of the white blanket surrounding the house. A caprice of Nature had contrived this smooth carpet to record a portion of the previous night's fantastic story and the detective proposed to make good use of it.

Harper found Mrs. Richard Croysden in the hall, deep in consultation with the black-browed housekeeper, Mrs. Martha Whitmore. Despite the late hour at which she had retired, Aline Croysden was serene and clear-eyed, and without a trace of fatigue.
 She wore a tailored morning dress and its sheer simplicity of line enhanced her air of youthful charm.

"Good morning, Mrs. Croysden," Harper greeted her, and nodded pleasantly to the housekeeper.

Mrs. Whitmore returned a grudging nod and retreated to her domain in the rear of the house. "Good morning, Mr. Harper," Aline responded, with a cordial smile. "Or should I say 'Sergeant Harper'?"

The detective smiled with her.

"Not unless you prefer it. There is a theory that the best way to address a Sergeant of Police is to call him
 'Captain,'" he bantered, meeting her pleasant mood.

"That's a clever idea. I shall call you Mr. Harper and reserve the 'Captain' in case I should need it later," she said, teasingly. "You know, I have been quite surprised at your assistants. I had the idea that detectives were heavy-set men with clipped moustaches, that they always chewed on unlighted cigars and wore derby hats which they never removed, except possibly to sleep. Or do detectives ever sleep?"

"Sometimes for weeks at a stretch," Harper assured her with mock solemnity, "but when a big case comes along we have to get our sleep when,
 and if, we can find it."

MRS. CROYDEN dropped her tone of light raillery. "But I am keeping you from your work. I fear the others will not be down for some time yet. It was so late when we retired. My sister asked me to take charge of the household arrangements until she is able to be around again."

"She asked you?" Harper caught her up quickly. "Dr. Ulrich told me that Mrs. Dufresne was not to talk for several days."

Aline nodded. "Of course, Mr.
 Harper. I used 'talk' in a figurative sense. My sister has already arranged a system of communication.
 Whenever she has a question or a message she writes it down on a pad.
 It works out quite easily."

"By the way, how is Mrs. Dufresne this morning?"

"Poor girl, she's naturally greatly worried over the possibility of a scar, and then those tragic happenings are keeping her on edge."

Sergeant Harper and Mrs. Croysden entered the breakfast-room. Although the victims had long since been removed, the room retained a tragic and depressing aura that not even the bright morning light could dissipate.

There were those dark stains on the rug, for instance, and the unknown dead man's clothing piled on a chair, complete from the shoes to the beribboned nose-glasses. But the most characteristic seal of the police visitation were the numerous patches of dusting powders that had been sprayed here and there in the search for fingerprints.

"You certainly leave nothing to chance," Mrs. Croysden observed.

"This morning I saw there was a policeman guarding Mr. Dufresne's room. Isn't that a rather unusual procedure, Mr. Harper? Surely, last night's events put an end to the danger?"

The detective shook his head.
 "This is an unusual case, Mrs. Croysden. We do not actually know that the man found in this room is the man who threatened Mr. Dufresne and attempted to kill him."

"But surely you have a theory? I thought the matter was quite clear."

The monument itself will bear two bas-reliefs depicting Turkish policemen on the job. One will show officers rushing to rescue a family

Resolutions For Dr. Wright.

Resolutions of respect for Dr. Robert H. Wright were adopted by the faculty and staff of East Carolina Teachers College at a meeting of the entire staff on May 9.

"We, the members of the faculty and staff of East Carolina Teachers College, in deep sorrow, and realizing the loss of our leader, Dr. Robert H. Wright, wish to express our appreciation of his worth and leadership, and our profound personal affection for him.

"Since nobody knows when civilization has been enriched and mankind has been made better through the influence of the lengthened shadows of men such as he. His courage, his ideals, and his high sense of honor have been an inspiration to the thousands of youths who have come under his influence. He camped among the crags and peaks of wisdom and his idealism was contagious and uplifting.

"In his going the state has lost one of its first citizens; the nation has lost an outstanding leader in education; and the institution which he guided through its first quarter of a century has suffered an irreparable loss. As an executive, he possessed constructive wisdom and the courage to lead in the face of adversity.

"He was abundant in the sympathetic touch that led his co-workers to their best effort, and wise in the freedom he provided for their activities. His sympathy was without bounds and his inspiration was a joy to those who strive to achieve in cooperative effort. He was a messenger of good-will to those in distress; he went the second mile and exacted no ransom. He performed his functions in meekness and expected no cheering multitudes to inspire his purposes. He made up his mind in the calm of his own soul and with courage achieved mightily for God and man.

"Our sympathy is sincere with all those who mourn his loss, and we pour out our hearts with his loved ones and remember him with an affection that shall grow more sacred with the passing of seasons."

Reedy Branch News

Rev. J. C. Moye delivered his morning sermon Sunday to one of the largest congregations we have had in quite a while. We were glad to see so many out for Sunday school and the morning service. Plans are being made for "Homecoming Day" to be held at the church the first Sunday in June. Several neighboring churches have been invited to arrange programs. Also there will be solos, quartettes and duets by people of the local community churches and from Greenville.

Professor Hurst, a noted violinist of Goldsboro, will be here with us. Dinner will be spread on the church grounds. All are invited to come and bring dinner and enjoy the day together.

Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Moye were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Carroll.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Couche were here for the week-end.

Miss Gladys Mae Tripp spent the week-end in Snow Hill.

Miss Juanita Worthington has returned from Boone, N. C. where she taught the past session.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Buck of Rose Hill, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Taylor.

Miss Arlene Nobles of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Jack Moye and children of Greenville, visited their mother, Mrs. L. G. Mills, here Sunday.

Mrs. Earl Dexter spent Sunday with Mrs. J. R. Tripp.

Saturday, May 26th Is Poppy Day

Greenville will be called upon to honor the World War dead and give aid to the war's living victims by wearing memorial poppies on May 26th. This day, the Saturday before Memorial Day, will be "Poppy Day" throughout the United States and will be generally observed by the wearing of the little red flower of Flanders Fields.

Observance of "Poppy Day" here will be directed by the American Legion Auxiliary, Mrs. R. S. McGee, president of the local Auxiliary Unit has announced. Women of the Auxiliary will distribute poppies on the streets and receive contributions for the Auxiliary's welfare and relief work among the disabled veterans and their families.

Organization of a corps of volunteer workers to distribute the memorial flowers throughout the city is going forward rapidly under the leadership of Mrs. Selma Carson Moore, chairman of the Auxiliary's poppy committee. A large supply of poppies has been ordered. Disabled veterans have been given employment during the winter and spring making the little paper flowers.

"The purpose of 'Poppy Day' is to give everyone an opportunity to pay individual tribute to the men who gave their lives in defense of the nation," said Mrs. McGee. "The little act of wearing a poppy touches the individual more closely than large public ceremonies in which he is only a spectator; and awakens a realization of the individual responsibility to the nation, so greatly needed at this time. 'Poppy Day' also gives everyone an opportunity to share in the vast work which the American Legion and Auxiliary are doing for the disabled men, their families and the families of the dead."

Miss Ruth Stewart Moye of Snow Hill, is spending the week with Miss Gladys Mae Tripp.

Mrs. Bittie Barber of Winterville, visited relatives here Sunday.

Mrs. Alton Tripp, who underwent an operation in Pitt Community Hospital is able to be out again.

Miss Pauline Hicks of Greenville, spent Sunday with Miss Lucile Coward.

Mrs. Sarah Braxton is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Sally Avery.

Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell White visited Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Mills Sunday.

We are glad to know plans are on the way to install electric lights in the church here. The work to be completed by August 1st. This will be a great help to the church and community.

Puddle Muddle Talk

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Willy Nilly sat in front of his little house and said:

"Now I hope each of you will find something to do that will keep you out of mischief. What with one thing and another I haven't been able to attend to my chores or my sticking-out, pointed ears."

"We'll be busy," growled Honey Bear.

"Today is the day I'm planning to give both lessons to the cubs, Jupiter and Blacky. All good bears should be at home in the water, and I'm also going to teach them how wise it is at times just to sit and enjoy the outdoors."

"You've noticed how bears like to sit and swing their heads back and forth? Well, that is when a bear is quietly enjoying life without any fuss or worry or excitement, and that is a lesson, too, that my cubs must learn."

"They know how to stand on their hind legs and sniff the breezes, and they know what to eat and what not to eat—but today is bathing day."

"I must attend to my general store," said Top Notch. "It needs attention."

"I'm going to give the one-and-a-half-cylinder Duck coupe a good cleaning," said Mr. Quacko Duck.

"I'm invited to a party at Mr. Quacker's over in Quackerville," quacked Mrs. Quacko.

"I'm going for a romp," barked Rip, the dog.

"I'm going to look over the few little treasures I have in my nest," cawed Christopher.

Willy Nilly was happy. At last he would have time to attend to his work. At least he thought he would.

Negro School Children Hear Mrs. Roosevelt

Fifteen hundred students of local colored schools applauded heartily this morning as Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, speaking in behalf of the President, addressed the National Educational conference at Washington.

Through the courtesy of J. T. Little, head of a local radio concern, the colored school was provided with radio facilities this morning over which Mrs. Roosevelt was heard.

The broadcast was made possible to the local schools through activity of I. M. Donnell, fifth grade teacher here, and Ambrose Coliver of the Bureau of Education over which Dr. George Zook, commissioner of education, presides.

C. M. Epps, head of local colored schools, was invited to the Washington conference but declined on account of preparations for commencement.

Fayetteville, May 11.—Fifty thousand dollars damages for the death of his wife and two children is asked by James Stocks, of Hope Mills, a negro, whose wife and children were killed by an Atlantic Coast Line railroad train on a trestle over Rockfish creek February 27. The suit against the railroad is based on the allegation that the railroad company permitted pedestrians to walk on the trestis and had no warning sign.

"Full Feeling" After Meals

Here is how Theoford's Black-Draught proved helpful to Mr. Archie W. Brown, of Fort Green, Fla.: "I have taken Black-Draught when I have felt dull from over-eating or eating too hurriedly," he writes. "Small doses right after meals rid me of gases and heavy feeling. I am a great believer in Black-Draught."
