WHAT ABOUT SATURDAY?

The primary of two years ago is now history, and we mention a few occurrences of the first primary, not to criticize at this time, but to bring to the attention of our Board of Elections and our citizens the possibilities of recurrences of some of these things in the primary this week unless some definite steps are taken before hand to see that these things do not occur.

Two years ago, following the first primary, we called attention to some of the things that occurred at some of the polling places and we here now repeat some of those with reference to the Greenville box in order that the election officials might be on their guard. Before the primary two years ago, we urged that more voting places be provided in Greenville and Chicod townships in the interest of better supervision and to make it easier for the voters to cast their ballots without congestion and interference. No action was taken prior to the primary and as a result of this inaction the Greenville box was completely overrun throughout the day with many voters becoming disgusted and leaving the polls without casting their ballots.

The Board of Elections then admitted their inability to handle the situation at that time, but promised that before another election, steps would be taken to see to it that ample provision for voting places would be made. With the exception of splitting the book here alphabetically and using two entrances for the voters, nothing has been done to provide adequate voting facilities.

As a result of the congestion here are some of the things that happened: Throughout the day candidates, or their workers, had free access through a back entrance to the voting booths and many voters who entered booths to mark their tickets found persons interested in certain candidates attempting to give them unwanted assistance with their voting. This was common knowledge to those who stayed in close proximity to the polls that year, and affidavits to this effect are available if it should become necessary to produce them. Another thing that caused much unfavorable comment at the last primary was the system of counting the ballots, in which it was freely charged that some of the candidates were "out-counting." The writer was present at the time the count for certain of the offices was completed and it is known personally that the figures of the different checkers did not tally, but no recount was made. No persons directly interested in the campaign of any candidate should be permitted to handle the ballots or keep the tally sheet and so long as such is permitted there will always be the complaint that some of the candidates are counted out. We repeat, we again mention these things, not in an effort at this late date to cause any row over the last primary, but to urge that steps be taken to prevent their recurrence.

According to reports brought to us from one township in the county, trouble is brewing over the naming of certain ticket markers to assist the voters at Saturday's primary, and certainly the election officials should put a stop to this even before it gets started. Under the present state law, there is no such thing as an "official ticket marker" and it is the privilege of the voter to invite any election official or any citizen he chooses to aid him in marking his ticket. We make this clear in order that voters who desire and need help in marking their ballots may know that they do not have to accept help from anyone other than the person they name.

Honest and fair elections are possible if our people want and demand them to be so, but so long as we put up with the present evils that accompany balloting in the county, just that long will they continue. If the Board of Elections would see to the strict supervision of every polling place and cause the arrest of the first person that violated the election laws after the polls open next Saturday morning we venture the assertion such action would have its good effect upon the balloting for the remainder of the day, and then if they will see to it that after the polls close the ballot counting is conducted in such a way as to avoid even any suspicion of crooked work.

The time has come that the people should demand that they be allowed to vote their own convictions without hindrance, and with the assurance that after they cast their ballots the same will be fairly counted and the parties actually receiving the highest number of votes declared the nominees.

Science Says 'Hard Time Illness Is Similar to War Cases'

By F. B. COLTON (Associated Press Science Writer) Washington.—(AP)—"Depression shell shock" is the newest ailment confronting medical men. It is brought on in victims of hard times in much the same way as the familiar shell shock attacked soldiers in the World War.

The victim of this "disease" unconsciously magnifies some minor ailment into a disabling sickness in order to escape the worst difficulties of poverty and unemployment without losing his own self-respect and the respect of others. It is described by Dr. Roscoe Hall, clinical director of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Federal institution for mental ill.

Mental Processes Same A man suffering from "depression shell shock" undergoes exactly the same mental processes as a war shell shock victim, Dr. Hall explains. In many instances, however, his case is more difficult to handle because the fears built up by battling enormous economic odds often are greater than those inspired by the horrors of battle.

A war-time shell shock victim was torn between two desires—one for self-preservation and the other for self-respect and approval of his actions by his fellow-soldiers. To run away would be disgraceful, yet to face the dangers of battle seemed unbearable.

The depression victim is faced with much the same dilemma, says Dr. Hall. Under the American scheme of things it has been considered disgraceful to be unable to earn one's own living. A man out of a job has two alternatives: to keep up the fight for a job, going hungry—and worse still, seeing his family suffer; or to apply for public relief.

"Solution" Is Illness To many, however, asking for charity seems as cowardly as running away from battle. The solution, for both the soldier and the unemployed man is the unconscious one of developing an illness. The soldier knows it is not disgraceful to leave the front lines if he is too ill to fight. The depression victim can avoid the futile struggle for existence if he is too ill to walk

Murder at MOCKING HOUSE BY WALTER C. BROWN

SYNOPSIS: Sergeant Harper has needed to find a certain .45 caliber revolver to establish his theory that the two men found dead in Pierre Dufresne's house were murdered by a third person, and did not kill each other. Dufresne and others of his household have placed obstacles in his way. Now he has found the gun hidden in one of the roof gutters.

CHAPTER 31 A GUN TALKS

In his eagerness Harper bent down to reach the revolver, but Lafferty jerked him back by the collar. "You can't get it that way; you'll lose your balance. We need a rake or a pole."

"I'm not going to wait for that. Here, hold me while I crawl after it!" Harper stretched down the slope head first, while Lafferty kept a tight grip on his ankles. Lower and lower he crawled until he picked up the gun by the barrel.

Lafferty promptly hauled him back to safety. Without even bothering to shake the snow from his clothing, Harper stood up and broke open the revolver. "There you are! One empty shell! Jack, this is the real murder gun. Now, if we only knew who hid it up here!"

They hurried downstairs, and Lafferty sprayed the heavy revolver with the insufflator. He tapped the working brain. Not many people could think up a good trick like that under sudden pressure. If he hadn't dropped the twins we might still be at sea.

"Just a moment, Jack. We really have no proof that Dufresne hid the gun. We're assuming that he hid it in the house, except Mrs. Dufresne and her nurse, was there at the time. The fact that it was found near where he was sitting doesn't prove he dropped it."

"But didn't you yourself see Dufresne searching the room for it, later?" "Let's not jump to conclusions, Jack. We've got to weigh everything down to the last grain. If we solve this thing at all it will be only because we strike just the right balance."

"Who else could have been smart enough to engineer it?" Lafferty challenged.

THAT'S a dangerous way to reason it out. We know the gun was in Dufresne's room this morning, for you saw it there. But did Dufresne know it was there? The fact that it was there to be seen as late as this morning's search raises a doubt. If you had such a gun to conceal, wouldn't you pick a better gun with steady strokes of an unopened pocket-knife, to dislodge all loose particles, then bent his tall body over the table as he adjusted the circular lens to the proper height and squinted through the glass at the magnified surfaces.

Sergeant Harper stood beside him, watching closely. But his expression did not reflect the extreme disappointment of Lafferty's as the latter straightened up and muttered, "Not a mark—curse the luck!"

"I didn't expect to find any," Harper commented. "We've got to be content with having recovered the gun and that's something at least. Direct proof of chicanery is what we've needed most in this case."

He picked up the distorted bullet rescued from that dark cavity under the stone steps and held it beside the discharged metal shell. "I'm sure these belong together. If they do, we've got our cornerstone in place. It won't be hard to check it up."

"Sure, it's a hundred to one this is the gun. Only one bullet has been fired and the caliber looks right. The barrel's fouled, too." Lafferty sniffed at the muzzle opening.

THAT certainly was an inspiration, looking in the gutter of the roof. Whoever put it there was a fast thinker, no doubt about that.

"Mrs. Whitmore's chance words gave me the idea. For no particular reason they called up a vision of a window being raised and the gun dangling outside with the string doubled through the trigger guard. At the same time I remembered how the eaves projected over the top-floor windows. The gun could be swung higher and higher until it landed very neatly in the gutter overhead and out of reach.

"Free one end of the string, draw it down, close the window and there you have it. The wet section, where it rested in the snow, should have told me that, and I suppose it would have eventually, but Mrs. Whitmore unknowingly jogged up the process."

"Well, if Dufresne did it, we've got to credit him with a smooth-the streets. Usually the victims do not realize that they have followed this course of reasoning, and their illnesses are real, but caused almost entirely by a mental process rather than by some physical disorder.

The depression shell shock victims, like those of the war, probably in many cases will continue to need treatment and care long after the emergency that caused their trouble is over, Dr. Hall believes. At the start of the present depression, relief agencies still were rehabilitating victims of the previous depression of 1920.

teaching college. "Patriotic merit" is the criterion for the rubber stamp atop the diploma of every student who does his "Arbitrar," or college preparatory work, and which alone permits matriculation in a university.

By virtue of the December decree the 15,000 admitted students are divided among German states according to populations; thus in Prussia 8,984 were re-admitted, in Bavaria 1,670, and so on.

Parents Resent Decree In no case may women students in any state exceed 10 per cent of the total allotted to that state. According to one Dresden school official, who made a report of a meeting of educators, 150 parents in his city made verbal complaints against the new system. None, however, he added, cared to sign a petition on their grievances.

At the same educators' meeting, to which the public was not admitted, it was revealed that the wish of one father that his son study law so he later might take over the legal department in the parental factory, was refused.

A curious case, almost leading to a diplomatic incident, also was reported. The son of a German father and Japanese mother, whose parents wished him to study, was refused admission to a university.

The father pointed out that his son was a "non-Aryan" but the authorities insisted that the son was a German citizen, and these fore exceptions made in the case of foreign-born students wishing to study at German universities could not apply.

Lecturers Cite Hitler As a last resort the father sought the aid of the Japanese embassy, and it was only after the Japanese expressed willingness to give the youth Japanese citizenship, that the Nazi authorities relented.

Feeling against the educational measures is being countered by student-parent lectures at which Hitler's utterances against "pallid intellectualism" are being cited.

At a recent Berlin meeting 700 young men and women, who had been turned away from university doors were told:

"It is Hitler's idea that students should snap out of the bad habit of over-estimating professions like civil service, and the intellectual professions in general."

"What we need," the speaker continued, "are people competent in matters of practical life."

Miss Lipscomb was then asked to read the preacher's message, which read as follows:

"Dearly Beloved! Now don't get excited or even misled. This isn't a real wedding but a shower instead. So if you should find a bouquet of roses

HOME LOAN BANK CUTS INTEREST RATE

Winston-Salem, May 30.—(AP)—Effective June 1 the interest rate on loans made to member institutions by the Winston-Salem Federal Home Loan Bank will be reduced from 6 to 4 per cent, President Thomas W. Ellett announced today.

Decision to lower the rate was reached by the directors last week, but announcement was withheld.

"An interest rate of four and one-half per cent will be specified in our notes for long-term advances, but borrowing institutions will be billed on the four per cent basis," Mr. Ellett said.

"The new rate anticipates a material increase in volume of business," he said. "Our members generally have indicated this will result, and its essential to a continuance of our service at this reduced rate."

Here's How You'd Borrow Money Under New Plan

By CARL C. CRANMER
Washington, D. C.—(AP)—John Smith wants to build two additional rooms to his house at a total cost of $2,000.

Paul Jones has his eye on a suburban lot where he would like to build his own home at a cost of maybe $25,000.

George Brown has in mind an old-fashioned residence that would cost $20,000 to modernize.

John Smith, Paul Jones and George Brown must borrow money to carry out their plans, and because lenders are very cautious, they are marking time until "money loosens up," and meanwhile the carpenters, plumbers, bath-tub manufacturers and real estate men with whom they could do business may be lacking work.

If He's 'Good Risk' John Smith has nothing but his personal note to offer. Paul Jones would have to borrow $20,000 and that would mean putting a first and second mortgage on his new property, and at the present time second mortgage money is scarce. George Brown is in about the same fix.

It is into this situation that the Federal government, if Congress accepts the housing and mortgage insurance scheme proposed by President Roosevelt, would step.

Here is how the scheme would work for John Smith:

He would go to his bank, trust company, personal finance company, mortgage company, building and loan association, or other financial agency to borrow the $20,000 on his note. He might need only $200, but $2,000 would be the most he could borrow.

The bank or finance company then would apply to the Home Credit Insurance Corporation, which would be set up with a capital of $200,000,000, to have its loan to Smith insured.

The corporation would investigate and if it found John Smith a "good risk," would agree to stand good for 20 per cent, or $400, of the loan.

Terms of the loans the government would insure would be left to the decision of the corporation, but officials have indicated standard terms probably would be interest at 5 per cent, with 1 per cent added for the insurance fund from which losses would be made good. The time of the loan probably would not exceed five years, with an "installment" feature added to permit John Smith to pay off his $2,000 loan in monthly payments of about $40 for the first year, and less as the principal was paid off.

The government would insure this type of loans made up to January 1, 1936.

Second Mortgage necessary Paul Jones, with $5,000 of his own money, would borrow the remaining $20,000 from his bank on a first mortgage against his newly acquired property. Jones might intend to build a more modest home costing perhaps only $4,000, but $20,000 would be the most the government would insure, and the government would not insure a mortgage that was more than 80 per cent of the assessed valuation of the property.

Thus Paul Jones would not have to carry a second mortgage, and its higher interest rate and high renewal fees.

Terms of these loans, to be left to later decision by the corporation, but they would be on long-term mortgages, probably to be amortized in twenty years, at as low an interest rate as possible and with installment features.

George Brown would be treated just about the same as Paul Jones, except that Brown could get an insured mortgage for only 60 per cent of the appraised value of his existing property.

A considerable decrease in the number of applications for seed loans is regarded as a sign of marked economic improvement in the extensive farm belt of Eastern North Carolina.

Jupiter Speaks

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER
"The rope broke!" exclaimed Willy Nilly in horror. "Jupiter was too great a load. Is he hurt?"

"A rope you killed, my darling?" Honey Bear cried. "Oh, speak to me. Are you alive? Oh, Jupiter, my dear, sweet little cub baby. Speak to me."

"Give him a chance to speak," cackled Top Notch, the rooster, kindly, but in his usual practical, sensible fashion.

"And from the bottom of the well came the voice of Jupiter: "Oh, what a bump! Oh, I feel so sore."

"Only sore? It's nothing more than that?" asked Willy Nilly as he looked down.

"That's enough," groaned Jupiter. "I'm very sore."

"You don't think any bones are broken, my precious?" cried Honey Bear.

"I don't think so," he answered. "Well," said Willy Nilly, "we've got to do something else. Maybe we'd better send down some food to Jupiter before we plan anything."

"Would you like something to eat, my darling?" asked Honey Bear, leaning over the well again.

"Yes," answered the weak little voice of Jupiter.

"There's a honey comb in the right-hand corner of the pantry," Willy Nilly said to Rip. "It's in a pan and has a bowl over it. Fetch it for Jupiter."

Rip was back, carrying the honey comb in his mouth, in a very short time.

"Oh," said Jupiter, as he caught it, "this is good."

Rotes To Play
Kiwanis Friday;
Rained Out Tues.

The Rotary-Kiwanis ball game scheduled for the college athletic field yesterday afternoon was postponed on account of rain which soaked the diamond and made play impossible.

Shortly after the time set for the game to begin, managers of the two clubs got together and decided to play Friday afternoon at the same place.

This means that fans of the two clubs will have the opportunity of seeing what is conceded to be one of the most memorable clashes of the season between two organizations that are trying to do their bit by the high school athletic organization and other groups attempting to do some worthwhile work.

Veterans of the diamond will be seen in action for the two clubs. The Kiwanis Club is comprised mainly of former league and college players, and it is rumored that the Rotary team is of an unknown quantity and is expected to spring something of a surprise.

Stiff limbs and sunburn are expected to be the order of the day after the game and wives and sweethearts of the participating players are given advance warning to have the old reliable liniment bottle handy to alleviate human suffering. Some of the boys don't like to admit it, but they aren't as young as they used to be and activity such as that involved in a ball game produces a physical upset never experienced in their favorite fields of business and sources of relaxation and diversion.

AGED WOMAN PASSES;
VICTIM OF ACCIDENT

Tabor, May 30.—Mrs. Elizabeth Merritt, about 70, died at 12:30 yesterday in a local physician's office from injuries she received late Monday afternoon when she was struck by an automobile driven by G. E. Richardson of Raleigh. Robert Best, 12-year-old youth, with her at the time, suffered a fractured thigh.

No charges were preferred. The driver of the machine surrendered to the State Highway patrolman in the district. An agreement was reached with members of the family by which Mr. Richardson is to defray funeral costs under promise that no legal action will be brought, kinsmen said. He was not held to blame.

A's Defeat Boston Sox
Philadelphia, Pa., May 30.—(AP)—A four-hill batting rally in the eighth which scored two runs today gave the Athletics a 5 to 3 victory in the morning game with the Boston Red Sox. Alton Benton went the route for the A's on the mound.

Canning Code Signed
Washington, D. C., May 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today signed a code for the canning industry providing the creation of an agency in 90 days to study and propose means of establishing quality standards and proper labeling, a chief objective of the proposed Tugwell pure food bill. Establishment of a definite quality standard on package food whose contents is not visible to the consumer has been the chief demand of the consumer group since the administration went into the code fixing business.

The canning code ordered and proved by the President also required that data for upward revision and improvement of working hours be submitted by December 1.

Approve Extension Steel Code.
Washington, May 30.—(AP)—Approving indefinite extension of the revised steel code today, President Roosevelt acted to stem the threat of strikes in the industry by arranging for employee elections in the steel mills.

The presidential executive order contained a statement not a condition to his approval of the code that they provide free exercise of the collective bargain rate of employees. "I will undertake promptly to provide as the occasion may demand, for the election of employees in each industrial unit of representatives of their own choosing for the purpose of collective bargaining and other mutual aid and protection, under the supervision of a government agency and in accordance with suitable rules and regulations."

The action struck directly at the chief complaint behind the strike threat. Simultaneously the President announced he had directed the Federal Trade Commission and the NRA to make a joint study of portions of the basic point system of establishing prices to see whether it resulted in artificial distribution to the consumer or encouraging price fixing.

Youth Held in Extortion Plot.
Greensboro, May 30.—(AP)—An attempt to extort $25,000 from W. M. Tompkins, New York business man, under threat of kidnaping his daughter, Shirley, a student at Salem College, Winston-Salem, was revealed here today with the arrest of a 16-year-old Greensboro boy, who was said to have confessed the plot.

R. E. Joseph, special agent of the Department of Justice, said the boy John Shaw, adopted son of a hosiery mill employee, and a sixth grade student, confessed to the preparation of a letter received by Tompkins three months ago. Tompkins' home is at East Williamston, Long Island.

Present Conference Report.
Washington, May 30.—(AP)—Chairman Fletcher of the Senate banking committee, today presented to the Senate a formal conference agreement on the stock market control bill and announced he would try to get it approved by tomorrow.

Formally signed yesterday, the report needed final approval of the House and Senate before the bill goes to the White House. It was believed likely the report would be approved by both houses.

Memorial Day.
(By The Associated Press)
On the once blood-drenched battlefield of Gettysburg, President Roosevelt leads the nation's homage today to its dead soldiers.

The President, arranging to lead his busy desk around midday for the CWI war meeting ground will stand as the first Democratic chief executive to speak at the cemetery where the greatest thrust of the Confederacy met the stone wall of Meade's blue clad ranks.

Throughout the nation, including those that commemorate their heroes on April 26, banks and other public buildings were closed.

Polish Mendicant Auctions Birthright To Quiet Daughter
Warsaw.—(AP)—There is excitement among the beggars of Warsaw, comparable to those high moments when a king abdicates or an industrial overlord gives up his mastery of men and wealth.

For Mowshé Akensdrot, the newspaper reporter, has sold his "stand" at the gates to the Jewish cemetery, a station which for generations has been the property of an Akensdrot.

There was Mowshé's grandfather. When he died Mowshé's father became a fairly wealthy man, it is said. But Mowshé's father continued to beg. At his death he left his oldest son a very decent house. To Mowshé, the youngest, went the "stand" and the money.

Mowshé carried on the tradition. He educated his children. He lived as an honorable citizen. But one of his daughters, it is reported, could see no glamor in the old "stand"; could not appreciate the generations of effort which had made it a source of endless coins falling into her father's outstretched hand.

So Mowshé retired. But first he called for bids and a fellow-beggar paid $1,000 for the Akensdrot place of business.

The number of beggars in Warsaw is reported considerably reduced from the figure of 3,000 estimated last fall. Five hundred have been arrested, police report, and placed in "beggars' homes" where they must earn their keep.

Another 500 are reported to have fled to provincial towns to escape the threat of labor.

Hundreds of planters in five counties surrounding Durham, N. C., have organized the Farmers' Mutual Exchange for buying their necessities and selling their products co-operatively.
