Japan Refuses To Declare Arms Embargo Eastern Carolina Delegation Seeks To Boost Prices

GOVERNMENT REFUSES TO HELP LEAGUE

Spokesman Says She Is Not Selling Arms To Paraguay and Bolivia; In no Way Concerned With Geneva's Political Affairs; Other Nations Sought to Enter Embargo Pact

Tokyo, Japan, June 8.—(AP)—Japan which departed from Geneva last year, tersely made known today she would not join the League of Nations—sponsored arms embargo against Paraguay and Bolivia.

"Since Japan seceded from the League," a foreign office spokesman said, "she has been following the principle she is in no way concerned with Geneva political affairs."

This reply to the League's invitation to join the embargo probably will be made orally by Consul General Yokoyama at Geneva. Japan, the spokesman said, is not selling arms to either of the South American belligerents.

Negotiations have been opened in London for an arms embargo independent of the League. The object is to secure the participation of Germany, Russia and Japan, non-League members.

The United States, fourth largest power which does not belong to the League, has already put an embargo into effect. Germany, it was understood, is ready to join the plan and exchanges are under way with Russia and Japan.

BETHEL BEGINS 'SPUD' DIGGING

Thousands of Barrels Of Irish Potatoes to Be Moved From Town Next 2 Weeks

The movement of Irish potatoes has been started at Bethel, one of the greatest "spud" producing centers in this immediate part of the State. Although the industry has not hit its stride yet, this was expected to take place around the 15th when thousands of barrels will be shipped from the town daily over a period of two weeks.

Farmers, who last year enjoyed a profit on their sales, were faced by lower price conditions this year with indications that they may break even if prices do not drop lower. Last year "spuds" sold around $2.25 to $2.50 at the height of the season, but this year with the season just beginning the price is from $1.25 to $1.75 a barrel.

However, it is said by those in close touch with the industry that the crop is considerably larger this year than last, and this will help make up for some of the price shortage. However, at the best, growers can't see themselves doing much better than breaking about even, and that isn't much after the long days in producing the crop.

Bethel moves from 25 to 35 carloads of potatoes daily at the peak of the season, and if weather conditions remain favorable for digging operations, it is possible shipments may go beyond that mark this season.

Wet ground resulting from heavy rains in recent days have interfered with digging somewhat, but if the rain man will lay off a few days longer conditions will be sufficiently improved to enable growers to move their crop. Although heavy rainfall was reported in some other sections of the county last night, Bethel escaped with very little precipitation which cheered the hearts of farmers planning to continue digging today.

HOPE TO PUSH FERA RELIEF ACTIVITY HERE

County Virtually Assured of Additional Funds Within The Next Few Days

It was indicated today that emergency relief work which has been virtually halted here the last several days will be continued on numbers of projects within the next several days.

K. T. Putrell, director of FERA activities here, said today indications were that new appropriations would be made to Pitt County in a short time now so that most of the emergency projects could be continued.

Small groups of men have been working on some of the relief projects recently, but due to lack of funds the majority were laid off until more funds became available.

School work, swimming pools and other projects which have not yet been completed will be rushed to completion as soon as possible, Mr. Putrell said.

He said he had been practically assured that more funds would be appropriated to this county in a short time now, but was unable to say exactly when that would be.

The Greenville swimming pool is one of the projects caught uncompleted when the CWA was abandoned some time ago, and while additional men were put to work about a month ago under the FERA program, funds were not sufficient to enable them to continue. Mr. Putrell expressed belief that the pool could be completed in thirty working days, and said this project, along with school construction, would be pushed forward as rapidly as possible when new funds become available.

City officials were assured sometime ago that work on the pool would be rushed to completion in time for this summer, but with the shortage of money prevailing at this time, indications are that it will be mid-summer or later before this will be accomplished.

WOMAN KILLS HUSBAND AND WOUNDS HERSELF

Rocky Mount, June 8.—Falling to wrest a pistol from his wife's hand as she attempted to kill herself here yesterday, Willie Gay, 39, was fatally wounded and his wife, 29, sent to a hospital with two bullet holes in her lungs.

The shooting occurred as the couple, with their daughter, Audrey Lewis Gay, 11, rode along a highway just north of the city limits. F. H. Dudley, city employee working at the airport, was first attracted when he saw a car careen into a ditch near the airport, heard a pistol shot and a woman's scream. Dudley said he found Gay slumped under the steering wheel of the car, a bullet wound in his right side, and the woman with the gun in her hand and a wound in her chest.

RECENT BATCH LEAF CHECKS DISTRIBUTED

Additional Checks From Government Expected at Farm Office Any Day

Practically all of the last batch of government tobacco checks received at the local farm office had been distributed today and more are expected at any time now. E. F. Arnold, director of the department, said today.

The checks covering equalization and rental payments to farmers who participated in the government's crop production campaign, totaled about $10,000, Mr. Arnold said. Farmers were notified immediately upon receipt of the checks, and only a few had not been called for today.

Several hundred additional checks remain to be sent here and when they are received notices will be mailed to the growers, informing them when to appear at the local farm office. The setting of dates for growers to call for their checks has been instrumental in eliminating confusion, and the payments are being moved rapidly without congestion at the farm office.

Hundreds of growers visited the office with receipt of the first batch several weeks ago and department employees were kept busy for days distributing the checks to the rightful owners.

Thousands of dollars have been poured into the pockets of growers of this county through payments of this kind, and many have been enabled to finance this year's crop and at the same time provide themselves with the necessities of life. Loans from other government agencies also have played an important part in general farm activities and much of the embarrassment caused farmers in recent years because of shortage of funds has been practically eliminated.

MODIFY ORDER FOR CROPS ON RENTED ACRES

Government To Permit Planting of Forage Crops On Retired Farm Lands

E. F. Arnold, director of the local farm department, was notified today that "restrictions on the use of contracted or 'rented' acres which have been retired from basic crop production under government contracts are modified to permit the planting and harvest of all forage crops except corn and grain sorghum, and to permit pasturing of those retired acres and harvesting of hay for forage from them."

"The action taken today to modify contract restrictions," said a statement from Chester C. Davis, administrator, "extends earlier ruling made for the official drought counties to the entire country." It also greatly increases the possible use of contracted acres, both in the official drought counties and through the rest of the country. Previous rulings permitted pasturing of contracted or rented acres in the drought counties. Planting and harvesting of forage crops, except corn and grain sorghum, is now possible on all acreage, in addition to pasturing.

Explaining the modification order, Mr. Arnold said it meant that any kind of hay or food crops, except those mentioned in the order, may be grown. These include potatoes and other garden crops.

Such crops, however, it was said, must be raised for individual use and cannot be placed on the public market, Mr. Arnold said.

Left-over cooked asparagus may be mixed with celery, pickle relish and salad dressing and served on lettuce, or it may be combined with left-over ham or veal and served in a cream sauce on toast or buttered toasted rolls.

Investments In Youth

Would you be willing to "INVEST" in the boys and girls of Greenville? How much? FOUR HUNDRED DOLLARS! Twenty-five cents per week, or One Dollar per month for a child. Five cents per day! HOW MANY CHILDREN will you provide for?

WHAT WILL YOU GET FOR THIS INVESTMENT?

Four hundred children will have the opportunity of spending three hours each day for four weeks, June 18-July 13, in the GREENVILLE DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL, at the Third Street School Building and Grounds, conducted under the auspices of the Greenville Churches and the City School System. Within this time, under the capable leadership of trained and consecrated teachers, their characters will be greatly strengthened, they will have wholesome recreation and helpful occupation. The great central truths of Christ the Lord and the finest moral teachings of the Scriptures will be brought to these boys and girls.

The Greenville Ministerial Association herewith makes this public appeal to the citizens of our city, and to the Civic Organizations, to back up this effort in behalf of the child life of our community with financial support. We feel confident that we can offer the challenge:

"No better investment can be made" and "Greater returns for such an investment will not be procured from any other source."

It would be a most heartening thing to have a ready response from the citizens of Greenville to meet this challenging task. DO NOT wait for others to act. IF YOU LOVE boys and girls and are vitally interested in their welfare ACT NOW. Send your gift at once!

Let us, through this effort, put back upon our school campuses in the fall large groups of children who have had instilled into them the principles of righteousness so that through their influence many others may be helped to turn their lives into useful channels of noble, upright living.

ALL GIFTS may be directed to the DAILY REFLECTOR, and they will be acknowledged through the columns of this paper. Dr. G. R. Combs, pastor Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church is chairman of the Finance Committee.

REGISTRATION DAY will be next FRIDAY, June 15. All children who will attend the school are requested to come to Third Street School on that day at 9:00 a. m. Registration will continue for several days through the first week of the school. All children from 4 to 14 years old will be eligible.

DEMOCRATS TO DRY FORCES RALLY JUNE 9 MEET TONIGHT

Precinct Meetings to Be Held in All Townships of The County Saturday Afternoon

Democrats will rally in various townships of the county tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock to select delegates and alternates to the county convention to be held at the courthouse in the city Monday, June 11, at 10 o'clock.

Precinct meetings were called by W. E. Hooks, chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee several days ago, and hope was expressed that all of the precinct gatherings would be largely attended.

The object of the county convention is to select delegates and alternates to the State Convention scheduled for Raleigh Thursday, June 21, and to discuss other matters affecting the party which may be presented at that time.

Democrats gathering in the precinct meetings will also name an executive committee of five members for each township.

Considerable interest is always centered around the precinct meetings and the county convention also, and it was expected several hundred party members would be present in various sections of the county to help name delegates as well as to make plans for attending the convention in Raleigh.

ROOSEVELT EXPECTED TO ACT IN STRIKE

President May Attempt to Prevent General Strike of Steel Workers

Washington, D. C., June 8.—(AP)—A direct move by President Roosevelt to prevent a general steel strike from crippling recovery machinery was imminent today.

TE NRA and the Labor Department has made no apparent headway toward peace and it was recalled that in a similar impasse President Roosevelt stepped in at the eleventh hour and averted a major steel strike.

Developments included: A group of grim-faced steel workers after visiting the White House and finding the President not in his office said, they would be back today. They said they would ask him if 300,000 steel workers have got to strike to secure collective bargaining?

Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, said he would write to the American Iron and Steel Institute, asking the industrialists to come to peace terms with the workers.

Hugh Johnson, NRA Administrator, awaited a letter on his way from the institute in New York. Whether it contained a reply to Johnson's proposal for a special labor board to settle steel disputes was not disclosed.

Measures to prevent bloodshed were discussed yesterday in a conference between Secretary of Labor Perkins and Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania who flew here.

Michael Tighe, president of the Amalgamated Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, organization which threatened a strike in mid-June, on grounds that the right of collective bargaining has been denied them, is expected to reach here today.

NEW CODE TO BE ANNOUNCED BY NRA SOON

Miscellaneous Industries To Be Provided For in Ready-made Pact in Making

Washington, D. C., June 8.—(AP)—NRA will announce soon one big ready-made code for miscellaneous industries whose pacts have not been completed.

This basic code will be almost as simple as the President's re-employment agreement with which the Blue Eagle started its flight a year ago. It aims to give regulations which will be easily enforced.

The NRA chief's objectives are: Shortened hours to make more jobs; wages not below living.

Prohibition of commercial dishonesty and obvious forms of unfair trade practices.

The small secondary industries will be given opportunity to subscribe voluntarily and if they want better trade practice regulations they will be required to present 85 per cent of their firms.

SCOTLAND LESS SCOTTISH SAYS CHURCH COMMITTEE

Edinburgh.—(AP)—That Scotland is becoming less Scottish every year "in blood, tradition and religious attachment," is the conclusion of a Church of Scotland committee after long study.

One of its greatest concerns was "the staggering growth" of the Roman Catholic Church which it laid wholly to Irish immigration. Roman Catholics, the committee figured, numbered two in every fifteen residents in 1931 compared with one in every 30 in 1821.

More than one-third of the population was found to have no regular church connection.

Eastern Carolina Delegation Seeks To Boost Prices

Late News Flashes

Washington, June 8.—(AP)—The administration divided its engineering today between efforts to avert the steel strike and entering upon a broad future program for the security of the men, women and children of the nation.

Both to be sure, attracted only passing notice in Congress, intent on silver and other legislation.

In the midst of all this, Democratic Senate Leader Robinson told President Roosevelt that he believed "the work may be concluded by next week"—meaning adjournment.

But the capital did not overlook the significance of the immediate as well as distant occupation of the Roosevelt ranks.

NRA and labor department officials conferred separately with the spokesmen for steel manufacturers and labor. A point in maneuvering to have peace instead of strikes late next week, was suggested by a board to mediate in the same manner that the automobile industry's difficulties are being handled.

In touch with that only indirectly so far the President's message to Congress was that he is looking ahead to social insurance and other legislation beginning next winter.

It was a message destined for debate in the fall congressional campaign.

One of his present proposals, in the meanwhile, was being finally pushed in the House committee. If (Continued on Page Four)

HEAVY RAINS ARE DAMAGING TOBACCO CROP

K. W. Cobb Says Survey Of Situation Shows Serious Damage To Leaf Fields

Rains which have been visiting this section the last several days, are doing severe damage to the tobacco crop. K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales of the Greenville tobacco market and an extensive tobacco grower, said today.

Mr. Cobb, who has ridden over several parts of the county, said he saw acres of tobacco and other crops under water. He stated much fertilizer had been washed away and that this would cause light crops.

Several acres served by the local tobacco market are suffering also because the ground has been too wet to plow the last ten days or more, Mr. Cobb said, and the heavy rain of last night only tended to retard progress of the crops.

Mr. Cobb, in addition to keeping posted on the general condition of the tobacco situation, gives attention to the operation of several farms in this territory, and also is vitally interested in conditions that affect the crops.

JOHNSTON COUNTY TO FIGHT FOREST FIRES

Raleigh, N. C., June 8.—Johnston County Commissioners have agreed to appropriate $5,000 for forest fire protection in that county during the fiscal year beginning July 1. Waylan Jones, game and fish warden for the county, reported yesterday to the Department of Conservation and Development.

This sum will be matched by an equal amount from State and Federal funds, all of which will be available for expenditure for the protection of Johnston County from forest fires.

The Johnston appropriation is the first made by the county to enter the State's co-operative forest fire protection system, and it brought the number of counties co-operating with the State in this work to 34. A number of others are expected to come into the system before the beginning of the new fiscal year.

Profits from workshops in the Virginia penitentiary at Richmond totaled $3,983 for a six-month period and the entire amount was spent for the benefit of prisoners.

GOVERNMENT ASKED TO BUY TRUCK CROPS

Representatives of Bean and Potato Growers of This Section Would Have Truck Purchased for Relief in Effort to Boost Prices; Declare Disaster Faces Farmers With Present Prices

Washington D. C., June 8.—(AP)—A delegation of Eastern North Carolina men came here today for an afternoon conference with Harry Hopkins, Federal Relief Director, to ask him to buy beans and potatoes for relief work and thus "save truck growers in our section from disaster."

The delegation, which included Henry Stevens, of Warsaw, past American Legion Commander, also planned to lay before the Consumers' Council of NRA charges that low prices being paid farmers for trucks are not being reflected in reports to consumers.

Earlier this week Governor Ehringhaus of North Carolina telegraphed the AAA here asking action in aiding the general situation. The delegation carried charts showing an estimate of the acreage supply of the various trucks and sought to prove that purchases of the foods for general relief distribution would give the market support and insure farmers at least production cost figures.

Purchase of 15 per cent of the Irish potato crop now ready to be dug in Eastern North Carolina, the delegation said, would raise prices from $1.75 a barrel for best grades to $2.60.

The delegation included Thad Thigpen and W. C. Denmark, of Goldsboro.

The men made arrangements to confer with Senators Reynolds and Bailey and with Eastern North Carolina representatives in Congress before the Hopkins conference.

Fire Destroys Packhouse And Stables Near Here

Fire, believed to have originated from a bolt of lightning in the storm which swept over this community last night, destroyed the pack house and stables on J. Key Brown's farm on the Washington highway near the city limits.

The total loss had not been estimated today, but it was known it would go into several thousand dollars.

Six mules housed in the stables were driven to safety before the flames engulfed the entire building. Stored in the pack house were 250 barrels of corn, hay, soja beans, thousands of tobacco sticks, farm implements and other things.

DEMONPOSED BODY IS FOUND IN RIVER

Asheville, N. C., June 8.—The body of an unidentified man was discovered in the French Broad River at Craggy Wednesday.

Members of the sheriff's department who investigated the case said the man was apparently a negro and that the body had been in the water for some time, probably since last winter.

It was washed against a railroad trestle at Craggy and was noticed by some children. It was removed and taken to an undertaking establishment.

MURDER AT
MOCKING HOUSE
BY WALTER C. BROWN

SYNOPSIS: Sergeant Harper is not much closer to finding the murderer of a policeman and a stranger in Pierre Dufresne's house than at the beginning, although he has assembled a great deal of evidence.
But he has at least determined that the man who wrote a series of threatening letters to Dufresne
wrote them on paper he found in a wastebasket in Dufresne's basement. Note to find the writer.

Chapter 33
PUMPING WHITMORE

THE Sergeant's meditations were interrupted by the return of John Whitmore with the spoils of his tour through the house. The booty was entirely devoid of interest except for the six or seven slips from Mrs. Dufresne's pad. Harper deftly rescued these, pretended to poke through the rest of the papers, then sent Whitmore to dispose of the trash, telling him to return afterwards.

While he was gone Harper ran through this latest collection of slips, evidently covering the recent visit of Dr. Ulrich. But once again the almost monosyllabic brevity of the penciled notes defied reconstruction. The lady was either distraught or wary.

Whitmore returned to the breakfast-room with the sleek air of a successful conspirator. The detective realized that in this placid-minded handy man of the household he had his best chance to get some genuine
"inside" information.

The detective rose and locked the door with a theatrical flourish. "I don't want any interruptions for a while," he explained, as he returned to his chair. "Sit down, John, and make yourself comfortable. What do you say to a friendly little chat?"

Whitmore hitched his chair a bit closer. "Yes, sir. Anything I can do—"

"Oh, before we talk," Harper interrupted, "there's a little test I want to make." He then explained about the hand-lettered warnings and put Whitmore through the same paces
with the dictated notes, first leisurely,
then rapidly.

"Just as I expected, no similarity
at all," Harper announced heartily, putting the sheets aside. "Now that's out of the way, we can relax." He drew out his pipe and tobacco pouch.
"Do you smoke, John?"

Whereupon John produced a curved briar pipe even more scarred
from use than Harper's own and accepted a filling from the detective's pouch.

For a few moments they puffed away in silence. "This is good tobacco, sir," Whitmore commented, nodding his head sagely.

Harper smiled. "I have the mixture made up specially for me," he explained. "I smoke a lot and it's worth the difference in price. There's nothing like a pipeful of good tobacco when you've got a bit of thinking to do."

John nodded agreement. "I guess
this business has given you plenty of that, sir. It's a queer one, all right."

"As queer as any I've ever handled," said Harper, gazing thoughtfully into the circular view of the room projected on the Girandole mirror over the buffet.

"Two murders in one night—right here in this room," Whitmore almost whispered. "It doesn't seem real."

"It was real enough for the poor devils who were killed. You knew Officer Hamill, didn't you, John?"

"Yes, I knew him. Talked to him
lots of times last summer. A nice, pleasant fellow."

"He was a fine man and a good policeman. Everybody liked him, John, from his Captain down.
He leaves a wife and children and it's going to be hard on them. The other fellow may have been a crook, or a blackmailer, or a gunman, but
the world's better off without him,
as Mr. Dufresne says, but the family of a man like Hamill has to pay the price for it."

Whitmore nodded in sympathy.
"I've heard what they have to say about the murder upstairs," Harper went on, "and that's very little to go on. What I have been wondering, John, is what the staff thinks about it?"

"They're not saying very much and that's a fact," Whitmore answered, and chuckled. "Between you and me, sir, you've got 'em all suspicious of each other. They're going around watching each other out of the tail of their eyes."

"Have there been any arguments
or bad feeling lately?"
"Nothing to speak of, Sergeant.
We all get along together pretty well, better than in most places. Of course, once in a while old Andrews
gives Joe a raking over the coals, but that's only when Joe has been too flip with his tongue. Joe's young and hot-headed, not as well broken
to the harness as the rest of us."

What is the mystery of Ellen Becker, Harper wondered tomorrow.

"Joe—you mean Donaghy, the chauffeur?"

"Yes. He gets a bit beyond himself at times, talking up all kinds of wild ideas about capital and labor, and plutocracy, and that sort of stuff.
Joe has it in for the rich, all right."
Whitmore snickered.

Harper stretched out more comfortably.

"Donaghy struck me as being a pretty lively lad," the detective murmured. "He's a good-looking fellow and he acts as if he knew it."

Whitmore winked heavily. "Sure,
he's a devil with the ladies, anyway,
to hear him tell it. He's going to find a rich young widow, says he,
and then he'll marry and live in style. He says he can double her money over and over, but he's more likely to run through it in six months, him and his 'parlay' bet."

"Oh, so Joe likes to bet on the horses?"

"He does. I never heard of a man ever took a dollar away from the races in the long run, but that doesn't stop 'em from betting. Sometimes he's lucky, though. Just today I saw him counting over a roll of bills as big as your fist. He said he'd got a bet down on the right horse at last. Came in at 100 to 1. But that's once in a lifetime."

"That's right," said Harper softly, looking out at the snow-covered grounds, "it's once in a lifetime."
Then, after a few moments of silence he resumed, "Andrews is really devoted to this family, isn't he?"

"MAKE no mistake about that,"
Whitmore quickly affirmed.
"He's gruff and old-fashioned and as close-mouthed as a clam, but he's the family watch-dog. You won't get anything out of him."

The detective cocked an eye at John Whitmore. "Why, is there something to be got out of him?
That sounds as if he's hiding something."

"I shouldn't have put it that way," Whitmore hastened to amend. "I've been in service thirty-five years and I have yet to see the family that didn't have trouble of some sort they wouldn't like to have made public. But murder is a horse of another color."

Harper smiled quietly. "Of course,
John, I know you're not the kind to carry tales and I'm not asking you to. I've heard some stories, too, so far as that goes." It was the detective's turn to give a knowing wink.
"That was a pretty stiff row they had last November, wasn't it, just about the time Ellen Becker left?"

Whitmore looked relieved. "So you heard about that?" He accepted at full value Harper's assumed knowledge. "Things have never been quite the same since then," he said, sadly, shaking his head. "For a while it looked like they were headed for a break-up. Mr. Dufresne
has been touchy and sharp-spoken and suspicious ever since, although why he should be jealous of Mrs. Dufresne is more than I can make out."

"Perhaps the roof of Mr. Dufresne's jealousy lies in the difference in their ages," said Harper.
"That often happens, you know."

Whitmore took a long pull at his pipe. "Well, then, take Mr. Croyle.
He's in about the same boat. He's not worried about getting old, like Mr. Dufresne. His trouble is that his wife has so much more money than he has. So they're at it hammer and tongs half the time. Their maid, Hannah, comes over here a lot and some fine stories she brings with her."

John Whitmore warmed to his subject and proceeded to illustrate his philosophy with chapter and verse. Harper listened to it all with half-closed eyes, nodding at appropriate places. John's tongue, subdued for many a moon by the autocratic Martha, rambled on and on, spurred by the odor of a sympathetic ear. He seemed not to question but that the detective's duties
had already made him acquainted with these highways and byways of the household at 3, Powhatan Terrace.

Harper listened, careful not to break the spell by inept questions.
He simply sat there in smiling, friendly ease, smoked his pipe and listened to the thousand and one details that gave him a keener insight than he could have obtained by unbiased cross-examination.

Only once did he interrupt. "Who was this girl, Ellen Becker, and why did she leave?" he asked casually,
following Whitmore's chance mention of the former housemaid.

"I don't know much about her," John replied. "Nobody did. She was the holly-toity kind, not very sociable."

Senatorial Rudder
And speaking of leaders, the absence of Joe Robinson, Democratic leader of the Senate, for a week or so recently because of illness in his family, was sorely felt in the Senate.
For days the Senators floundered around. That rarely happens when Robinson is there. He may have his faults, but when he is on deck he keeps things moving even if he has to resort to slave-driving tactics.

Vice-President Garner closed a recent telephone conversation with President Roosevelt at the White House with "All right, old top, we'll see what we can do..."

It is gratifying to note that the death toll from highway accidents in this state last month was three below that of April. The death toll was 12 for April,
compared with nine for May.
While this change for the better is gratifying there is still room for much improvement for North Carolina's record of highway accidents and death is something of which the state should be ashamed.

The recent primary resulted in nomination of a board of county commissioners all residing on this side of the river and leaving the entire northern section of the county without any direct representation. While it is not often that this occurs there should be some definite steps taken to assure every section of the county equal representation on the board.
Our Representatives in the next General Assembly would do well to have the county cut up into five commissioner districts and then at each election let one commissioner be chosen from each of the districts.

Elsewhere in this issue
there appears an appeal for funds to finance the Daily Vacation Bible School to be operated here for a period of four weeks beginning
about the 15th of this month.
Such a school at this time,
while the children find themselves with much time on their hands, would prove of a distinct benefit to the city and the citizens owe it to themselves and the children to give the project their financial support. About $400 is needed to put this school over as it should be.
If you desire to make a donation to aid in putting on this fine piece of work, you will please forward same to this office at once and acknowledgement will be made through the columns of this paper.

Washington
Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington, U. C.—The rumor that there is to be another important change in President Roosevelt's cabinet continues to circulate among those who profess to have a knowledge of what goes on inside.
The most persistent report is that Secretary Morgenthau will leave the Treasury, possibly for some choice
diplomatic post in Europe.
Those intimately acquainted with the Secretary are quick to discount
the idea. They say he is happy here
he is, that he has no desire to leave.
One person, who should know if anyone does, says that Morgenthau was offered an ambassadorship by the President immediately after the election. He is said to have declined with thanks, declaring he preferred to remain in Washington where things were happening rather than to be stuck away in some foreign country where he must rely on cables and the newspapers to keep up with the progress of the "new deal."

So far as is known, there have been no indications he has changed
his mind.

Outstanding among the many attractive affairs, honoring Miss Mary James Lipscomb, popular bride-elect was the luncheon yesterday when Miss Dorothy White very graciously entertained.

The home throughout was elaborately decorated in profusions of summer flowers in the pastel colors. A predominating color note of yellow was used in the living room, and green was used in the drawing room.

White greeted the guests on arrival and presented them to the hostess, the honoree, Miss Lipscomb, Misses Virginia Jones, Elizabeth Moore, Elizabeth Bost, Clara Louise Moye, and Sarah Gulley, brides-elect; Mrs. Charles C. GIANT CABBAGE GROWN AT THE COUNTY HOME

The county home which has always been a leader in the production of food crops, bobbed up again today with some of the largest cabbages seen in this section in many a day.

Produced under the direction of J. O. Harris, county home superintendent, the cabbage tip the scales at approximately 25 pounds. One weighs 8 1/4 pounds, the other 8 pounds and three ounces, and the third 8 pounds and two ounces.

The cabbages were placed on display in the office of the Daily Reflector today and have drawn much interest from those who like to see what can be done on Pitt county land.

Reedy Branch News

Mr. C. B. Deans of Norfolk, Va., spoke to the Senior classes during Sunday School hour last Sunday.

Mr. Deans gave a very interesting explanation of the lesson. He also spoke to the congregation during the afternoon. We were glad to have Mr. Deans and hope he can be with us again.

Everything went along fine during the service here Sunday. Only a lot of people were very disappointed because they did not hear Rev. J. C. Moye and Brother Frank Harrington sing their duet.

There was a large crowd present, the church and Sunday School rooms were filled and nearly as many people were on the outside. We are sorry there was not more room for all the people.

The Greenville male quartette, composed of Messrs. Lee, Clark, Williams and Sellers, rendered several numbers, also the Greenville Free Will Baptist quartette rendered several beautiful numbers.

The following church choirs also took part in the program during the day: Winterville, Sweet Gum Grove, Red Oak, Piney Grove and Reedy Branch. There were solos, duets and quartettes by people from the above named choirs. Mr. Pate and Mrs. Little of Goldsboro, rendered several beautiful numbers during the morning.

All the music was greatly enjoyed. There was plenty of good things to eat, people from far and near brought baskets loaded with chicken, ham, barbecue, pies, cakes, pickles, breads and sandwiches of all kinds, which helped add more enjoyment to the day.

We want to extend our appreciation to every church and person who took part in the program and helped in any way to make the day one to be long remembered.

We will be looking forward to this occasion next June when we hope we shall all meet again.

Grave On Trail Poses Mystery Of Girl Pioneer

Guernsey, Wyo.—(AP)—In 1849, when covered wagons were pushing along the Oregon trail, Lucindy Rollins died and was buried beside the trail.

She was 24 years old. She came from Dayton, Ohio, and died on June 11, but whether she was bound—whether her companions reached their destination, whether she has living descendants are facts still unknown to those who found her gravestone.

At first only her name on the weatherbeaten stone was visible to George O. Houser, Guernsey newspaper editor, and Fred Burton, who discovered the market. Under a magnifying glass the rock yielded the date of Lucindy's death and her home town.

The Wyoming historical landmarks commission immediately authorized Houser to place the crumbling stone in a matrix of concrete with a glass window, while efforts are made to find out who Lucindy Rollins was.

Newspaper stories of the discovery are relied upon to bring to light such facts about her as are known. It was thus that descendants of Mary Holmesley, who died on the way to Oregon in a wagon train in 1852, were informed of her burial place. Her grave was discovered several years ago by L. G. Flannery, then editor of a Fort Laramie newspaper, who published an account of his find.

In Oregon a daughter of Mary Holmesley learned the last resting place of her pioneer mother who failed to survive the difficult trek to the Oregon country. The Holmesley gravestone was preserved in the same manner as the Rollins marker.

The year in which Lucindy Rollins died, 1849, was the year of the California gold rush. In that year, too, the Mormon migration to the Salt Lake valley was in progress.

PARACHUTE ALIBI NETS BEAN THIEF

Rome.—(AP)—A parachute prowler is Rome's latest contribution to the fraternity of thieves. He is Eneas Bersaglieri alias Assessoro.

Surprised in a bean patch by a farmer living near the peak of Monte Mario, Bersaglieri calmly began to fold up a parachute which lay wrinkled around him.

"To bad if I've damaged your bean patch," he murmured. "My plane caught fire and I had to jump."

But the farmer had been watching his beans all evening. He had heard no airplane, and turned the marauder over to the carabinieri.

Checking up they found that Bersaglieri had used the alibi afforded by a worn-out parachute on numerous successful occasions.

TWO BOYS DISAPPEAR AND LATER ARE FOUND

Mount Airy, N. C., June 8.—Surry County officers said today that Ellis Cassell, 14, and Clarence Venable, 16, who were reported missing Tuesday from their homes at White Plains, had been located and returned home.

The two boys, sons of Luther C. Cassell, deputy sheriff, and Lonnie Venable, both of White Plains, were reported to have left home Monday and Mr. Cassell made a trip to Winston-Salem looking for them. They were reported as having passed through Pilot Mountain about two o'clock Monday afternoon traveling toward Winston-Salem.

Entomologists of North Carolina State College recently went to Henderson, N. C., and ended an infestation of ants that had defied common household methods of eradication.

New Books

By JOHN SELBY

The authors of the week include Elissa Landi the movie actress. Apparently she really has serious ambitions as a writer and is not merely trying to cash in on her fame as a Hollywood luminary. Miss Landi has written three other books, two of which appeared in England, and "House For Sale" which was published in this country. Her new book, "The Ancestor" (Doubleday, Doran) mentions Hollywood only incidentally—and then rather contemptuously.

The heroine of "The Ancestor" a famous singer, once was under contract to a movie producer described as an "ape-man" who, when she refused to sing "trash," replied: "You'd yer mean trash? It can't be trash. D'yer know yer pay de composer of his twelve hundred a week?"

So the singer blithely disregarded the gold and glamor of the cinema and went on to further fame on the concert stage in England, where the action of the book finds her. The story is concerned mainly with her love for two men, one a wealthy American steel baron in his fifties, the other a handsome young violinist.

With a slightly "different" twist to the ending, Miss Landi contrives to make everyone happy.

Biblical Setting

To the literary world, publication of a new book by Thomas Mann is an event of importance. His influence on modern novelists has been world-wide; and even men and women whose writing could never mix with profound respect, almost reverence.

Now, in "Joseph and his Brothers" (Knopf) Herr Mann ventures into the Biblical realm and has created a world of characters and places, pieced with infinite patience and detail, which should give his admirers many enjoyable hours following his tremendous elaboration of a simple thought.

It is Herr Mann's thesis that Joseph and his Brothers can be made to stand for all the people who had gone before them and, similarly, all those who came after, so that the reader is taken by means of this author's smooth-flowing prose on a survey of mankind. It is not the lightest kind of reading in the world, but it has its rewards.

Thumbail Reviews

"European Civilization and Politics since 1815," by Erik Ashorn (Harcourt, Brace). This is a long title, but the book warrants it with its 879 pages of lucid facts. The author says his aim was "a treatment of modern European history that shall be entertaining as well as informing," and many readers will find it just that.

"Christopher Marlowe in London," by Mark Eccles (Harvard University Press). Wherein a very astute scholar digs up some highly important documents about the London life of Christopher Marlowe, the great contemporary of Shakespeare, and solves a number of literary mysteries with skill.

"The Dog," by James Dickie (Lippincott). This plain title should prove sufficient to draw many dog lovers, dog fanciers and dog owners. They will be rewarded by a tremendous amount of practical information about canines, in plain or de luxe editions.

"Rebel Destiny," by Melville and Frances Herskovits (Whittlesey House, McGraw-Hill). Seeking "background" information on the American negro, a scientist and his wife journeyed to the interior of Dutch Guiana, South America, to study the descendants of runaway slaves taken from Africa. Their findings are interesting, the setting dramatic and authentic.

CUMBERLAND NEGRO CONVICTED OF MURDER

Fayetteville, June 8.—"Buster" McLeod, seventy-first township Negro, was found guilty of murder in the first degree by a Superior court jury here yesterday, concluding his trial for the fatal shooting of Tom and Herbert Bridgers at a fish-fry last April. Judge E. H. Cranmer will pass sentence later this week.

The Hero

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Christopher Columbus Crow flew over to the next village. The fire was completely out, but he saw a large crowd gathered around something. He couldn't make out what it was. He flew overhead and tried to see what was happening but they were bent over something on the ground.

And then Christopher swooped lower and caught sight of Rip. "Caw, caw, caw," he shouted. "Rip, are you all right?"

"The people looked up at the crow. Christopher was known all over the countryside. They couldn't understand his talk, although at times they had an idea he was laughing at them, but he could understand them, and now they were saying: "Rip is a hero—he's the greatest hero we've ever known. We all forgot that some of our children sometimes play in the deserted barn and when we remembered it was Rip, your dog, who went right in with the burning roof crumbling down, and rescued Nancy and John."

"He wouldn't let us pay any attention to him then, although he was suffering with burns, but now that the fire is out we are doing what we can for him."

"Rip!" cried Christopher. "Do you feel all right?"

"Bow-wow, I do, and I'm ready to go home now. I couldn't—before."

The people were gathering bones for Rip, someone else had just paid for a new license for him, and he was driven back to Puddle Muddle with all honors. The village band played, the children ran after the automobile shouting:

"We love Rip, we love Rip, we love Rip."

Man Who Collects Match Box Tops Finds Tub Handy

By RADER WINGET

New York.—(AP)—A life-work of Eric W. Haas, a New York stock broker, was almost ruined because his wife complained of floating wood in the bath tub.

Haas since he was six years old—and now he is old enough to remember several years—has collected match box tops, or rather the pretty labels, and when he gets a big collection he puts them all in the bath tub to soak off the labels before arranging them in his catalogs.

Helpful Swedes

Mrs. Haas never did like to find the tub filled with match box wood, she said, and her husband's hobby caused her a good-natured argument until Mrs. Haas went on a world tour.

Their parting conversation went something like this:

He: "Don't forget to collect some of the foreign match box tops."

She: "All right."

And she did, she said. Every time she entered a foreign country, she bought boxes of matches, ripped off the tops and preserved them for her husband's collection.

Officials at the office of Krueger & Toll, the Swedish match kings since deposed, gave her labels from all the boxes they had made, and what with all the other countries she visited, Mrs. Haas had an armload of labels when she returned home.

Believed the Largest

Haas now has more than 50,000 labels from almost every country in the world, a number which members of the Blue-Moon match label collectors' club say is the world's largest.

The most attractive labels are arranged according to country, color subject and value. Members of the Blue Moon Club value their tops from one cent to $1. Mrs. Haas said, and they carry on a leisure time trading practice like stamp collectors.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, June 8.—(AP)—Light broke through the stock market clouds today as traders took a more hopeful view of the steel strike situation and advances of one to three points or more were recorded over a broad front. Proponents of the price recovery were encouraged by the fact that activity was about twice as great as that of the previous session and commission houses began to envision a revival of million share days. Grains rallied in the face of rain in the drought area. The government crop report to be published after the close of the market was expected to show a heavy reduction in wheat production. The trading pace was active in comparison with recent dull dealings.

Transfers were 1,350,000 shares.

To The Voters Of Pitt County
I desire to express my heartfelt appreciation to my friends for their loyal support during the recent primary. To those who were unable to support me, I wish to say in all frankness that I have only the kindest feelings.

— a reason

FRANKLY, one of the chief reasons why I enjoy Chesterfield is the fact that I don't get little crumbs of tobacco in my mouth.

Rarely ever do I find a Chesterfield that isn't well filled. The tobacco in them seems to be of the right length, and they must be the right size because they burn right and smoke right.

I like them also because they are milder.
