Japs Provide Facilities For U. S. Dealings

By GLENN BABB
Tokyo—(AP)—The growing importance of Japan's dealings with the two Americas has caused the foreign office to re-organize its internal structure to provide more officials and better facilities for handling Japanese-American affairs.
An American bureau has been established with Kensuke Horinouchi, until recently consul-general in New York, edified as its first chief.
Hitherto one department, called the Bureau of European and America Affairs, dealt with the empire's contacts with all nations outside of Asia.
But the increasingly vital nature of Japanese diplomatic relations with the United States, the controversies over questions of Manchuria and China, the remarkable growth of trade with Latin America and the highly important questions relating to Japanese emigration to Brazil swamped this bureau.
It has to be split in two. One half becomes the American Bureau, the other a new European-Asiatic Bureau.
The re-organization gives a clue to Japanese official interpretation of the terms "East Asia" and "East Asiatic nations" used freely, but without delimitation, by Japanese spokesmen during the recent controversy over Japan's "white hands in China" policy.

Europe's Colonies Involved
These terms raised the question whether Japan considered her eastern possessions of occidental powers to come within the category of "East Asiatic nations" with which Foreign Minister Koki Hirota said Japan was willing to share responsibility for the peace of East Asia.
Such a position was interpreted in some quarters to indicate that Japan desired to deal directly with such colonial possessions in disregard of the sovereignty of the owning powers and thus indirectly encourage independence movements in the colonial areas.
The new organization of the foreign office, however, indicates that the Tokyo government still regards such possessions as mere appendages of the empire, for the new East Asiatic bureau deals only with China, Siam and Manchukuo.
Russian Status Revealed
Relations with the Philippines are assigned to the American Bureau, those with India, French Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies to the European-Asiatic Bureau, which also deals with such western Asiatic nations as Persia and Afghanistan. Perhaps the heaviest duties of the

FILM CAREERS OF CHILD STARS ARE USUALLY SHORT LIVED

What happens to child film stars when they grow up? Their careers usually last three years or less and they seldom make a comeback. Midge Evans is an exception. She was starred in movies at the age of 5 and now she is one of the better known leading ladies. She is shown at left as a little girl and as she appears now. Jackie Coogan, who earned an estimated $2,000,000—more than any other child star—can find at 19 no major company willing to risk starring him again. At right are pictures of Jackie grown up and as he appeared in "The Kid," the picture that first brought him fame. Contrary to popular belief the salaries of movie babies are not enormous. Shirley Temple (center) gets only $150 a week and it costs more than two-thirds of that to keep her in pictures. What does the future hold for her? (Associated Press Photos)

European-Asiatic bureau are concerned with the involved and not overly friendly contacts with Moscow. Evidently the Soviet Union is not considered an "East Asiatic nation" with which Nippon can share responsibility for the peace of East Asia.
The American Bureau is divided into three sections. The first deals with the United States, the Philippines and Canada; the second with Central and South America, Mexico and Cuba, and the third with emigration and passport questions.

New Books

By JOHN SELBY
Three books of antipodal characteristics have arrived this week. One is Knut Hamsun's "The Road Leads On" (Coward-McCann). Readers who have followed this author before on austere Norwegian trails will find a new quality in his writing—new and perhaps surprising, the gift of humor.
This, however, doesn't mean that Hamsun has suddenly taken it upon himself to write lightly. But here and there throughout this new novel, which deals with Segelfoss, the village already well-known to Hamsun readers, a deft and ironic touch brings out a chuckle or a smile. The 74-year-old author presents a new facet of his genius, and "The Road Leads On" should manage thereby to avoid the designation of the "stark."

Hamsun has here brought together a great many of what may be termed "loose threads" from previous books, returning, as it were, to creations of his which he had left behind, and resuming their stories. Among them are August the Wanderer, Juliet Koff of "Vagabonds," and the son of Theodore Paa Bua. The book is cosily knit, and its author writes in his usual realistic manner.

Boy and Girl
"Striplings" (Linton) is something and Netta. They are left to grow and his half-sister in England, Biff and Netta. They are left to grow up quite unattended among the wreckage of a family; they have a governess, it is true, but she is a futile rather than a help. The parents are useless for different reasons, so there is nothing for Biff and Netta to do but live according to their own lights. They do it with always astonishing and sometimes tragic results. N. Warner Hooke has written a novel that at times may shock its readers, but that all the time is credible. Making children live in a book is the most difficult task a novelist has. Miss Hooke has accomplished it.

And there also is "I Claudius," by Robert Graves (Smith & Haas). Mr. Graves has allowed Claudius the Stammerer to tell his own story in the form of a pretended autobiography.

Claudius gossips along, telling about himself from boyhood to the day when, quite against his will and expectation, he was suddenly made Emperor of Rome. "Claudius" story is interesting enough, but even more to the point is his attitude and his information about others of the Clodian family—Livia, Augustus, Calpurnia, Nero and the rest.
The first half century of Rome after Christ is brought to life thus.

The casualness of the story is half its charm.

For Reference

Three years ago a compilation of data concerning authors was made under the title "Living Authors." It filled a certain want, the published felt, but not all the field. Now comes a companion volume called "Authors of Today and Yesterday" (Wilson).
Inlets are 320 sketches of twentieth century writers, many of them prepared by the writers themselves or written from material furnished by the subjects. Also included are sources from which more information may be extracted, lists of the works of the writers, and portraits thereof. It is a book for the reference shelf—incidentally, it often reads exceedingly well.

First Church of Christ, Scientist.
"God the Only Cause and Creator" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all churches and societies of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 10.

The golden text was from Psalms 72:18: "Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "Therefore, ye brethren dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and crown, so stand fast in the Lord, my dearly beloved. Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." (Phil. 4:1-8).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Mortals think wickedly; consequently they are wicked. They think sickly thoughts, and so become sick. If sin makes sinners, Truth and Love alone can unmake them. If a sense of disease produces suffering and a sense of ease antidotes suffering, disease is mental, not material. Hence the fact that the human mind alone suffers, is sick, and that the divine Mind alone heals."

PETIT AND YORK ARE TO BE TRIED IN JULY

Kenansville, N. C., June 14.—Arthur W. Petit and Clark York, escaped convicts who were arrested early yesterday morning in the woods near Beaulaville, in Eastern Duplin County, for the third robbery of the Bank of Magnolia last Saturday morning, are scheduled to be tried at the July term of criminal court here, sheriff's officers said today.

Both are being held without bond. The term of court is scheduled to be opened July 23. Deputy Sheriff Kerby Daily said that the men have declined to talk regarding the hold-up. He also expressed the opinion that a third man involved had escaped this vicinity in one of the two automobiles used in the robbery.

Petit, who was sentenced to five to seven years for the first robbery of the institution late in January of 1932, escaped from a road gang working near here about two months ago. York escaped recently while serving thirty years for murder.

Although the depression has generated a 40 per cent increase in the demand for books, incomes of libraries has shrunk 34 per cent, the State Library Association of California revealed.

To Give Program Information.
Starting in the Friday issue of the Reflector, T. Y. Walker, manager of the State Theatre, through the cooperation of the Reflector, will provide for parents, teachers and others a regular advance estimate of the pictures to play at the State Theatre. This estimate will represent the joint estimate of the preview committees: General Federation of Women's Clubs, California Congress of Parents and Teachers, Woman's University Club, United Church Brotherhood and the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution. The audience classifications, indicating suitability will be given as follows: Children, up to 14 years. Adolescents, from 14 to 18 years. Young People, 18 to 25 years. Family, suitable for children accompanied by adults.

These estimates are provided by the committee for the organizations named and are printed in "Selected Motion Pictures" by the Motion Picture Producers of America, Inc., at the request of the preview committees.

Mr. Walker said, "Like books, many pictures afford splendid entertainment for adults but will neither interest nor entertain children." Many parents prefer to select their literature for their children. To aid them in this selection in cooperation with the Reflector, the theatre will publish these reviews each Friday exactly as they are received by us.

In addition to this service the theatre will maintain a file of these reviews, and will be glad to give further information on request.

Someone has asked just how long the withered wreath is to remain at the base of the Confederate monument on the court house square. This wreath was placed beside the monument as a part of the May 10th observance. If it is necessary to have a wreath there at this time let us suggest that somebody replace the dead one with a fresh one.

Greenville in time boasts of many firsts but unless there is some change in the baseball situation in the Coastal Plain loop we are going to find out that one will have to start at the bottom of the column in order to find Greenville first.

With only two races of county-wide scope scheduled for the second primary to be held June 30, it is the opinion of many that the vote in the primary will be exceedingly small. The voters must remember, however, that voting on the candidates for these two offices is still just as important as it was in the first primary. Helping to elect the public officials is one of the great duties of citizenship and no voter has performed his or her duty in this respect until every race has been finally decided.

WILMINGTON WOMAN DIES BY ASPHYXIATION

Wilmington, N. C., June 14.—Mrs. W. G. Hughes, 52, wife of a Railway Express Agency route auditor, was found dead in the gas-filled bathroom of a studio apartment here today.

Coroner Asa W. Allen said he deemed an inquest unnecessary. Mrs. Hughes, it was learned, recently suffered a nervous breakdown. Her body was found by one of her grown sons, R. D. Hughes, when he returned to the apartment this afternoon shortly after 1 o'clock. The son and his brother, E. T. Hughes, left their mother, over whom they have been keeping close watch on account of despondent

MURDER AT MOCKING HOUSE BY WALTER C. BROWN

SYNOPSIS: At last, things are looking bright for the two victims of Pierre Dufresne's house. He has exposed the fact that both Mr. and Mrs. Dufresne are paying Ellen Becker, a former maid of theirs, to keep quiet about some notes demanding a ransom, and he has broken Pierre Dufresne's supposedly air tight alibi.

Chapter 44 MRS. DUFRESNE

THE dark blue limousine pulled up outside No. 34 Powhatan Terrace. It was only a little past seven o'clock, but the darkness was advanced as though the night were hours old. Through the twin cylinders of light from the headlights fluttered the vagrant snowflakes that heralded the sequel to the storm of the preceding day. The air was creepy with chill.

"Wait here for me, no matter how long," Harper instructed the driver. He opened the door and entered. There was no one in sight and no sound of activity anywhere. He walked down the hall, unlocked the breakfast-room door, and turned on the wall lights. Whenever he returned to this locked room, he had a feeling that someone had been there in the interim looking over the "exhibits." He had that feeling now, strongly, but could discover no evidence to substantiate it.

Dropping his hat and overcoat on a chair, he went to the fireplace. Sure enough, there was the brass urn in a corner of the hearth, exactly as Ellen Becker had described it. Harper pulled it forward and handful by handful sifted the sand. Having made sure that nothing was hidden there now, he poured the white sand back into the urn, smoothed it down, and returned it to its place.

Harper went to the door and looked out into the hall. He waited, hearing a quiet footstep. The butler appeared, saw the silent figure watching, and came to him.

"Where is every one, Andrews?" "They are at dinner, sir." He indicated a door farther down the hall.

"And Mrs. Dufresne?" "Mrs. Dufresne is having dinner in her own room. Did you wish to speak to anyone?"

"Not yet, Andrews. Later in the evening will do just as well. Is Donaghy about?"

"I'm sorry, sir. He asked Mr. Dufresne for the evening off."

"What time will he be back?" "Eleven-thirty, at the latest. That is the rule of the house."

The detective went back into the breakfast-room, took up Mrs. Dufresne's stained slippers, locked the door behind him, and went quietly up the stairs. Still quietly, he rapped on the door of Mrs. Dufresne's room. Without any preliminary sound the door was opened a foot or so and Miss Burkett's red head gleamed in the opening.

Sergeant Harper pushed against the door gently but firmly and inserted himself through the opening. "You can't come in here," protested the watch dog supplied by the hostile Dr. Ulrich.

"No," queried Harper, smilingly, already inside. Over the nurse's shoulder he saw the mistress of the house seated in a deep armchair. "Good evening, Mrs. Dufresne. Forgive my intrusion, but it is imperative that I speak with you—now."

MRS. DUFRESNE was resting very comfortably in her chair, her feet on a stool, a book open on her lap, and a soft blue lounging robe covering her. Dr. Ulrich's handgazes hid the right side of her face.

The detective turned to the nurse. "I wish to talk with Mrs. Dufresne privately. If you will please leave us—I'll ring when I've finished."

The red-headed woman looked at her patient in inquiry. "But I have orders to stay here," she objected. "Dr. Ulrich told me—"

"Never mind what Dr. Ulrich told you—"

"Go, Miss Burkett." There was no denying the authority in that quiet voice from the armchair.

Preceded by a polite "May I?" Harper pushed up a chair to face the still figure. "I hope your injury is responding to treatment, Mrs. Dufresne. I understand from Dr. Ulrich that you would have to keep to a liquid diet for a few days."

Mrs. Dufresne ignored the subtle exposure. She reached out her hand toward the stand at her elbow. On it were a writing pad, and a pencil. She picked up the latter.

"Let us put an end to these little fictions, please," he said, quietly. "If you can hold a conversation with Dr. Ulrich, you can talk to me. It is time we had an understanding about certain matters."

"What do you want, Mr. Harper?" she asked in a muffled voice, for the surgical dressing covered one corner of her mouth.

"I want the truth about certain incidents, Mrs. Dufresne, and only you can supply that," Harper answered. "There is no use beating about the bush. We have found out a great many things from one source and another, some things we do not yet understand fully, but this case has definitely moved from the backstairs to the upstairs, to put it bluntly."

Sylvia Dufresne flinched. "Mrs. Dufresne, who was the man who was murdered in the breakfast-room? What was his name, and what brought him to this house, not once, but many times? I believe you can tell me!"

"I don't know," the lady faltered, not challenging her questioner. The detective's brows went up. "Where did you go when you left Mrs. Morlock's house last night?"

The hands tightened so that the knuckles shone taut and white. "Who told you I left Mrs. Morlock's?" she gasped.

For answer, the detective posed the stained slippers on the side table. "These are the shoes you wore last night, Mrs. Dufresne. They show that you walked a considerable distance through the snow. But that is not all. We have an eye-witness who will testify that you left Mrs. Morlock's house."

Sylvia Dufresne was silent, but the one wholly visible eye was wide with apprehension.

"Would you not rather explain things to me here, quietly, than answer these same questions in a courtroom?" Harper asked. "Perhaps you will realize what I mean when I tell you that I talked with Ellen Becker this afternoon. She told us everything."

Still the wide-eyed silence, as though the Sergeant of Detectives had exercised a hypnotic spell over her.

"Believe me, Mrs. Dufresne, you should have realized that the truth could not be suppressed long by bribery. Ellen Becker took the money, but she has told her story. Donaghy, apparently, has also cashed in on this, and I have no doubt he can be made to talk as readily as the girl."

"Joseph?" Mrs. Dufresne murmured. "Yes, Joseph Donaghy," Harper repeated. "Not to mince words, Mrs. Dufresne, it will be charged that you held secret rendezvous with the man who was killed."

Sylvia Dufresne cried out at that and put her hand over her face, but the detective went on remorselessly. "We have been told there were a number of jealous quarrels between you and Mr. Dufresne and that he openly charged you with infidelity. At the time he stated that he would never give you a divorce."

"It has been remarked that ever since this affair reached its climax Mr. Dufresne has avoided your presence. It will be intimated that you entered into a plot to kill your husband and that in a quarrel subsequent to the attempt on his life you killed this other man."

"We are certain that Officer Hamilton was admitted to this house by some one he recognized as belonging here and was then shot down."

"You have my word that as the evidence now stands it will make a strong circumstantial case. You will be amazed to see how much of our evidence will fit into that theory."

"I have studied these facts and suspect a different story, but if you will not confide in me I shall have to act on Ellen Becker's testimony. I ask you once again to tell me the truth about last night."

Then her voice came. "No—no—I have nothing to say. To you—or any one. Not even if you arrest me. You must do as you like. But please—please—don't question me!"

The tears rolled silently down her cheek, but she would not give way to audible distress.

Harper rose. "I am very sorry," he said, reaching for the bell. The nurse responded to the tinkling call as the detective picked up the slippers.

"Miss Burkett, I make you accountable for Mrs. Dufresne's safety. She is not to have possession of any article with which she might inflict an injury to herself or others. That includes anything with a pointed or cutting edge. You will also see to it that all visitors are barred from this room until further notice. Those are official instructions."

The Fire Fighter BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

With all her strength, Honey Bear still fought the fire. She was afraid now that her voice had not carried through the heavy air, for had the others heard her they would have come by now.

She pushed through the smoke and pulled down branches of nearby shrubs, and tried to put out the fire with these but they only cracked and caught fire too because of the long dry spell. Everything seemed only to add to the flames.

Oh, if the ducks' pond was only nearer! How desperately she needed water. She cried again for help but her voice sounded weak in the still air and the smoke choked her.

And then she heard a wonderful sound. Could it be possible? Yes, she certainly heard the voice of Christopher Columbus Crow. He was flying overhead.

"Christopher!" she called in her husky, hoarse voice. "Christopher, Christopher!" she repeated. "Get help! Be quick! Quick!"

That was all she could say as she needed her strength to continue fighting the fire until help came.

"I haven't been with the others," he cawed back, "but I'll find them."

Honey Bear was half-crazed now with aching paws, smarting eyes and throat, and fear that she would collapse before her friends could arrive.

Why didn't they come more quickly now that Christopher knew what was happening? Honey Bear went into the cave and spread herself over the cubs to protect them. She could fight no longer.

WAYNE COUNTY MAN DIES BY OWN HAND Goldsboro, N. C., June 14—Thomas

F. Jarman, 67, prominent citizen of White Hall, near Seven Springs, committed suicide about 7:30 Wednesday morning at his home by shooting himself in the face with a shotgun. He died instantly. He had been in ill health for some time.

Mr. Jarman borrowed a gun from a neighbor, saying he wanted to kill snakes. He bought shells at a store then went to a woodshed at his home and shot himself, pulling the trigger with a broom handle. His son, F. R. Jarman, heard the shot, and hastening to the shed found his father dead. Coroner T. R. Robinson, of Goldsboro, was summoned, and after investigating, pronounced the case suicide, and declared an inquest unnecessary.

Built Up Strength By Taking Cardui

Here's her own account of how Mrs. T. W. Hardin, of Greer, S. C., was benefited by taking Cardui: "I suffered a great deal from weakness in my back and pains in my side and felt so miserable," she writes. "I read of Cardui and decided to try it. I felt better after I took my first bottle, so kept on taking it as I felt such a need of strength, and it helped me so much." "Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician."

Cliff Sutter, the Southern lad who was omitted from consideration in this year's American Davis Cup line-up for reasons that may have seemed a bit mysterious at the time, thinks it will be little less than a miracle if the U. S. A. beats Australia, the likely European zone winner, and then England in the forthcoming tennis campaign abroad.

Raleigh, June 14.—(AP)—Governor Ehringhaus this afternoon issued a brief statement urging all Irish potato growers in Eastern Carolina to have a voluntary "digging holiday" until Monday as there are indications of imminent danger of price collapse due to heavy shipments.

After a long distance telephone advice that very heavy shipments were being made today from Aurora, Beaufort, Pamlico and Mount Olive sections, the governor said there was danger there would be a collapse. The governor said he was trying to reach Harp Hopkins, national administrator, to see if the administration is going to buy from 3,000 to 4,000 carloads of potatoes and move them to the drought stricken areas.

HOLD NEGRO TO BLAME IN FATAL APEX CRASH

Raleigh, N. C., June 14.—James Mitchell, negro of near Apex, driver of a car in which two negro women were fatally injured when the machine was in collision with another car on May 6, was bound over to Wake Superior Court yesterday by Coroner L. M. Waring.

The coroner took steps yesterday to close his records in another fatal automobile collision, issuing a summons for T. N. Grice, now in Greensboro, to appear Monday for a decision in a crash here in which Dr. Della Dixon-Carroll, prominent Raleigh physician, was fatally hurt on May 15.

Nottie Harrington, negro, and her daughter, Beatrice Barbee, sustained fatal injuries when Mitchell's car and one driven by John Howard, of Durham, collided at the intersection of Route 90 and the Green Level road near Apex last month. Howard had not recovered from his injuries and the coroner said he was informed the young man is probably permanently injured. The coroner held that reckless driving on the part of Mitchell caused the accident.

A CERTIFIED INTERVIEW WITH HELL-DRIVER BILLY ARNOLD

"It took more than Luck to save my Life—it took a Safety-Steel Body"

IT HAPPENED on the Bakersfield highway. Billy Arnold was making time for Los Angeles. Road clear... rising curve ahead. Suddenly... but let him tell it in his own words: "Suddenly another car swept 'round the curve... coming right at me... on the wrong side. I had my choice. A head-on crash... or the gully on the right. I took the gully. "I wouldn't give a plugged nickel," says Arnold, "for my chances in any low-priced car but a Plymouth. Its Safety-Steel Body was undoubtedly the thing that saved my life."

1 "I've been what people call a 'hell-driver' for years. I've done all kinds of daredevil stunts—testing cars. I've even wrecked them on purpose. But this unexpected accident was by far the most hair-raising experience of my life!" 2 "There's where it happened. The diagram shows how my Plymouth smashed the side, bounced up in the air and rolled over five times!" 3 "I couldn't avoid it. I had only a split second to see what was happening. The other car was in my path. I swerved to save him. Down I plunged... turning over and over!"
