NATIONAL GUARDS PATROL SAN FRANCISCO DOCKS

Something More Reported Now Brewing In Germany

FORMER NAZI LEADERS ARE NOT THROUGH

Vigilance against further revolt taken by Party Members; Hitler Will Prove that "Iron Fist and Strong Will" Still Rule Germany; Renewed Anti-Jewish Activity Reported.

Berlin, July 6.—(AP)—A Nazi vigilance against revolt was resumed today with disquieting reports that "something more is brewing" among friends of liquidated Nazi leaders.

The Nazi party spokesman said the Roehm revolution had wide ramifications and was well organized and that those delegated by Chancellor Hitler to preserve the regime are taking no chances on Roehm's sympathizers.

Storm troopers in civilian clothes were under orders not to wear uniforms in the wedding district of Berlin, former stronghold of the Communists who are said to have shouted "revenge."

This and other indications, the spokesman said, have brought renewed vigilance and determination to prove once and for all that the "iron fist and a strong will rules Germany."

Further disquieting, although unsubstantiated reports from the German provinces of renewed anti-Jewish activities and events which have disturbed Catholics were heard in Berlin.

Meanwhile the course of government policy was believed to have taken a step toward conservatism with the delegation of new powers to Kurt Schmitt, Minister of Economics, who it was hinted might attempt to quell some aspects of the anti-Jewish activities of the government in order to better Germany's economic situation.

The strengthening of the guards in Berlin was believed to have been decided on during Hitler's recent conference with Nazi leaders in the inner council particularly as a measure for preparation for the eventual disbanding of the storm troops.

An important victory for the conservative element of the Nazi government was seen in the granting of almost autocratic commercial powers to Kurt Schmitt, economic minister. He is authorized to impose unlimited fines on persons and institutions who refuse to obey his orders.

Raleigh, N. C., July 6.—(AP)—A total of $19,068,998 was spent in North Carolina during the fiscal year 1933-1934 for relief and civil works, Mrs. Thomas O'Berry, State Administrator, revealed today.

Each of the one hundred counties of the State shared in the distribution of both relief and civil works funds with relief moneys being extended each month while civil works administration functioned.

Pitt County received $143,483 for civil works labor, $37,052 for materials, $95,075 for FERA expenditures, or a grand total of $255,612.

UNLAWFUL ENTERING TO BE INVESTIGATED

Durham, N. C., July 6.—The Durham Citizens' Council has appointed a committee of three to investigate the alleged illegal practice of Durham police officers and constables "who have promiscuously and unlawfully entered into the search of homes of the city" without following the proper procedure.

"Action on the part of many officers in their wild escapades in the homes of people has been a gross injustice to many," a member of the council said.

The committee selected to investigate the alleged practice has been announced as follows: Alston Stubbs, chairman; Ludlow Rogers, and Mrs. F. G. Cower. It was said that the investigation will continue for several weeks.

TWO MEN ARE EXECUTED AT STATE PRISON

Raleigh, N. C., July 6.—(AP)—Two murderers, a negro and a white man, were electrocuted at State's State Prison today.

Clyde Ferrell, the white man, was given three shocks of current as his life was exacted for the murder of Thaddeus Tilley, Durham County filling station operator.

John Lewis Edwards, youthful Mecklenburg County negro, was given two shocks after he had reiterated previous statements he was innocent of the murder of J. W. Branch, Charlotte street car motorman.

Ferrell, 25 years old, entered the death chamber trembling and was very pale as he sat in the chair.

"I'm all right," was all he said. It took eleven minutes for the execution of Ferrell at 10:47. As Edwards walked into the death chamber it marked the first time in the history that a white man and negro had died in the chair on the same day.

The 17-year-old negro spent several minutes shaking hands with Warden Honeycutt, prison attaches, negro ministers who accompanied him and others, and to each he said: "May God bless you."

"I am not guilty of the crime I am accused of and some day God will show everybody who is the guilty man," Edwards said.

FARELY ESCAPE FROM BURNING APARTMENT

Asheville, N. C., July 6.—Awakened in their sleep Tuesday night by fire, Mrs. R. B. King and her five-year-old son barely escaped from their burning apartment at 8 Caledonia Road.

Mrs. King told fireman, who answered the alarm at 11:15 o'clock that the greater part of the interior of the apartment was in flames when she was awakened, and that she had considerable difficulty reaching the doorway.

The apartment was over a garage. Mrs. King said she did not know how the blaze started. She said there was a box of matches under a sink where the fire probably started.

Late News Flashes

France Assured Collaboration. London, July 6.—(AP)—Technical collaboration of Great Britain in the event that Belgium is ever invaded is all that France is asking of England and indications are that she may get it, the Associated Press was informed today.

France has not asked and does not expect, it was learned, any sort of political or defensive alliance with Great Britain not because the French would not want it, but because months ago Britain plainly informed Paris that the Locarno pact was the only one to which she wished to adhere.

The technical collaboration would consist of military cooperation which is a matter affecting the general staff of the two nations military forces and not a political point.

Attempts to Kill Hitler. Breslau, Germany, July 6.—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler, it was revealed today, barely escaped assassination Saturday at the hands of Edmund Heinnes, one of those whom Hitler tried to arrest at Ernest Roehm's

FINAL RITES ARE HELD FOR DRURY SETTLE

Funeral services for Drury Settle, 20-year-old Greenville young man, who was killed in an automobile-train collision at Marsden early yesterday morning, were conducted from Eighth Street Christian Church this afternoon at 4 o'clock and burial was made in the Mount Pleasant Churchyard on the north side of Tar River. The rites were in charge of Rev. W. H. Ryan, pastor of Eighth Street Christian Church, assisted by Rev. W. A. Davis, of Washington pastor of Mount Pleasant Church.

Carl Brown, also of Greenville, who received precarious chest injuries when the car in which he and Settle were riding, collided with a moving freight train, was reported somewhat improved today, although his condition was described as still serious. Physicians said yesterday he had a "fighting chance" to recover.

Robert Exum, of Snow Hill, driver of the machine, suffered only light injuries and was released from the local hospital yesterday.

The funeral for young Settle was largely attended, and a profusion of flowers told in a mute way of the love and esteem in which he was held by hundreds of friends in this and other sections of the county.

After graduating from the local high school and studying two years at East Carolina Teachers College, Settle entered Drake University at Des Moines, Ia., last session to prepare himself for the ministry. He was an honor student, and established a fine record.

He was spending his vacation here with relatives and was returning from a river camp below Washington July the Fourth for a swim when tragedy overtook him and snuffed out his life.

He was the son of Rev. and Mrs. H. H. Settle and a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Spain, of Greenville.

Because of his genial and friendly manner he was beloved by a wide circle of friends who received news of his death with unspeakable shock and sorrow.

BOMB BLASTS ARE REPORTED FROM STYRIA

The Fatherland Headquarters and Govt. House at Kindberg are Bombed.

Vienna, July 6.—(AP)—The government Fatherland headquarters at Kindberg, Styria, was dynamited today and the home of a government commissar at Kindberg, Styria, was bombed with heavy damage in both cases.

Continuance of terrorism in Austria aroused a conference of Catholic storm troops at Klagenfurt to demand that the government do something against the Nazis.

The conference urged particularly that Nazis in government be dismissed and supervision be installed in all business and factories suspected of being Nazi.

In the Kustin district the government issued an order forbidding government employees to patronize shops owned by Nazi sympathizers.

POLICE SLAY SEVERAL DOGS

Effort to Protect Public Against Rabid Animals Continues In This City

The Greenville police department, like Hitler in Germany, is in a killing mood at this time, but whereas the German character is killing human beings, the policemen here are confining their attention to the extermination of dogs caught running at large on the streets of the city.

Eight or ten canines met death at the hands of patrolmen last night and more will meet the same fate if they are caught running at large in any section of the city.

Chief of Police George Clark said today: "The campaign on dogs started here about a year ago when several children were bitten by dogs suffering from hydrophobia. Since that time a hundred or more dogs have gone the death route and more are scheduled to go the same way."

Chief Clark said today that a child was bitten by a dog here last week, and while it was not believed the dog was mad, no chances could be taken for the sake of the child's life.

Several mad dogs were seen in the city several months ago and numbers of animals were bitten. It was then that the police head issued an ultimatum that all dogs must be kept up and not permitted to run on the streets.

Numbers of dog owners have not considered the seriousness of the rabid dog situation and are permitting their dogs to enjoy liberty of the streets, but if their dog fails to come home at mealtime they can't blame the officers of the law. They have been instructed what to do and orders are orders when human life is jeopardized by rabid animals.

They expressed confidence in the sincerity of Captain Straford's intention to revive Army activities and assured him they would endeavor to increase the appropriation if conditions and his activities justified it.

J. B. Johnson appeared before the board and asked that fire protection be improved in the western section of the city so that property owners might obtain lower insurance rates.

He set forth that in a certain area of the city hydrants to take care of an emergency were not available and they could not obtain lower rates until this condition had been improved.

The matter was referred to the insurance committee for action.

DEPARTMENT HEADS NAMED BY ALDERMEN

Re-election of Chief Employees of Government Feature of Last Night's Meeting

Heads and assistants of various city departments breathed easier today following their re-election at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Aldermen last night at City Hall.

G. A. Clark, veteran police chief, was re-elected along with W. L. Brewer as assistant chief. The personnel of the department was left in the hands of Chief Clark and members of the police committee from the board of aldermen.

George Gardner was re-elected chief of the fire department with Sumner and Jones, truck drivers, also being selected for continued service.

J. O. Duval, was renamed city clerk and W. H. Patrick, assistant clerk and tax collector.

Chester Harris was returned to the treasury department.

The matter of salaries came up for brief consideration, but this was left to the mayor and various committees for discussion and solution with present salaries being permitted to prevail until action has been decided upon.

Mayor R. C. Flanagan requested a committee of the board to present an estimate of their needs for the new year so that they might be included in the budget when it is adopted sometime in August.

The board heard an explanation by Mayor Flanagan pertaining to the movement on part of the County Health Department to provide a whole-time health officer for Pitt County. The mayor said the city and county had been asked to devote $100 each to the cause. The board referred the proposition to the mayor and sanitary committee with power to act. They will appear at the forthcoming meeting at the Board of Commissioners and present the Greenville position.

Captain Stratford, of the Salvation Army, who appeared before the board at a previous meeting because he said he "thought it was the beginning of the new fiscal year," again presented an appeal for his organization last night to be sure he was included when the time rolls around for making the budget.

He enumerated the need for Salvation Army activities during the fall and winter, and urged that the monthly contribution to the cause be made as large as possible. Members of the board assured the representative that they were fully in sympathy with his work, but in view of the lack of results shown by the organization in recent months, the monthly stipend of $20 would be continued until more noticeable improvement was evident.

They expressed confidence in the sincerity of Captain Straford's intention to revive Army activities and assured him they would endeavor to increase the appropriation if conditions and his activities justified it.

J. B. Johnson appeared before the board and asked that fire protection be improved in the western section of the city so that property owners might obtain lower insurance rates.

DRIVERS NEED TRAINING

Street and highway speeds are still increasing. This places a high premium on the ability of the driver. Factors of skill and responsibility are required which may not be needed at lower speeds. Training is required before a man is qualified to operate safely a modern high speed car, capable of terrific damage when out of control.

First to enter the church were the ushers, W. S. Bost, brother of the bride, and Harry Fisher of Philadelphia, nephew of the bridegroom.

Mrs. W. S. Bost, as bridesmaid, was followed by the groomsmen, Franklin Bowers of New York, and Hal Tankard of Rocky Mount. Next to enter was Miss Frances Taft of New York, as bridesmaid. Mrs. Bost and Miss Taft wore identical gowns of green organza, made along princess lines, with ruffles falling gracefully from the waist forming a demi-train. They wore off-the-face hats of maline, organza gloves in matching shades, and carried arm bouquets of mixed garden flowers tied with green ribbons.

Mrs. James Exum of Snow Hill, sister of the bride, as dame of honor entered next, wearing pink organza made similar to dresses worn by the bridesmaids, pink hat and pink organza gloves. Her arm bouquet of mixed garden flowers was tied with pink ribbons.

The bride entered with her father who gave her in marriage. She wore a most becoming gown of white organza, fashioned on princess lines, the ruffled cape effect fell gracefully over her shoulders, the neck was quarter length, worn cap effect and over her face. She carried a white prayer book showered with valley lilies.

The bridegroom with his best man and cousin, Harlan Kugler of Philadelphia, met the bride at the altar where the Reverend Sidney S. Bost of Durham, uncle of the bride, united them in marriage. After the blessing by the minister, the choir sang the ever beautiful "The Lord Bless Thee," by Ingham.

N. C. Symphony At College.

Tomorrow evening the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra, Lamar Stringfield conducting, will give a concert at East Carolina Teachers College. The time set is 3:30 p. m.

The Symphony Orchestra has a good show to offer, one that will appeal to the musical tastes of a variety of people. If you were planning to go tomorrow to a square dance, the orchestra offers for your safe, as a substitute, "Farmers in the Dell" by Brahms, which probably was the first tune you ever danced to. If you prefer a foreign dance, the orchestra will play you "Bolero" from traditional Spanish music. "Turkey in the Straw" by John Powell, is on the program, too.

If you were planning to trail a brass band, pause a moment. The Symphony Orchestra offers for you "Filaria," by Sibelius, the brasiest symphonic composition you ever heard of.

If in your soul you feel the call of the wide open spaces, attend the concert. The orchestra will play you a cowboy melody, plaintive and western, written by a New Yorker named Goldmark.

If it is Beethoven's quiet perfection you need to soothe your imagination, Beethoven will be played for you.

Probably you will not have the chance to attend this show, or such another again. If you've never taken the time to find out for yourself that symphonic music is good entertainment for ordinary sensible folks, avail yourself of this opportunity before the orchestra comes West to play for the grand old mountaineers. Soon after returning to Chapel Hill from your concert, the whole orchestra will go to Asheville to make headquarters there for six weeks.

YOUNG WOMAN INJURED IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT.

Goldsboro, July 6.—Miss Mary Sasser, 19, was cut over the eye and three other young people escaped injury when the truck in which they were riding was in collision with a car driven by Charlie Her-ring turned over down an embankment on the old Seven Springs road, three miles south of Goldsboro about 10:30 Wednesday night. The truck and car were badly damaged.

LaFayette Britt was owner and driver of the truck. Other occupants were Albert Daniels and Miss Sallie Hall. They were taken to the Goldsboro Hospital and left after Miss Sasser had received treatment.

ONE KILLED, TWO BADLY INJURED IN COLLISION.

Columbia, S. C., July 6.—(AP)—J. F. Long, of Saluda, S. C., was killed early today in an automobile collision here in which two companions received serious injuries.

Long was riding in a light coach with R. B. McCarty of Watt's Mill and Ben Sample of Saluda when it struck a loaded truck driven by Al-len Brittain, of Brevard, N. C.

The three men in the coach were unconscious when removed from it. Long died on the way to a hospital and McCarty and Sample were reported by hospital attendants to be seriously injured.

Brittain escaped without injury. Tom Mitchell, of Brevard, who was on the truck with him was severely bruised.

The accident occurred at 2:30 a. m. near the Congaree River bridge. The truck, loaded with cabbage, was going west as the coach came east.

Brittain said the car was on his side of the road and that, thinking it was about to park or turn left, he pulled toward the middle of the road. They car, he said, did likewise.

STRIDENT JAZZ ADDS 'FACE' TO SHANGHAI FUNERALS.

Shanghai—(AP)—To cheer the departed on their way to the next world, wireless sets with loud speakers are being used in funeral processions here.

The strains of American jazz could be heard when mourners wound through the streets with the bier of a recently deceased Chinese merchant. The loud speaker was on the coffin.

This added greatly to the clamor of the procession and, according to Chinese ideas, gave much "face" to the dead man.

Music by Chinese bands, incidentally, seldom fits occidental ideas of what constitutes proper atmosphere. With a limited repertoire, the bands usually play the same "hot pieces" for funerals and weddings.

HOT SPRINGS WOMAN DIES BY HER OWN HAND.

Hot Springs, N. C., July 6.—Mrs. W. R. Ellerson, 43, member of a prominent family of this section, and a sister of W. N. Garrett, of Asheville, committed suicide about eight o'clock Wednesday morning at her home here by shooting herself through the right temple with a revolver, dying instantly. She was alone in her room at the time.

Her daughter, Miss Elizabeth C. Ellerson, and her nurse, Miss Clara Blankenship, who were at breakfast heard the shot, but thought it was someone shooting birds near the house. The nurse found Mrs. Ellerson's body when she went to attend her a few minutes later.

Mrs. Ellerson had been in poor health for some time, members of the family said.

GETS ROAD SENTENCE FOR RECKLESS DRIVING.

Sanford, N. C., July 6.—Alex Moore, young negro of Pinchurst, was sentenced to twelve months on the roads by Judge Thomas J. McPherson in recorder's court yesterday, when he was convicted on a charge of reckless driving.

Moore, in driving an automobile past a stop signal in the business district of Sanford, struck Miss Zona Kelly, a well-known Sanford young woman, inflicting painful injuries. The accident occurred June 16, as Miss Kelly was crossing the street.

Judge McPherson said he would pay Miss Kelly's hospital bill, and the costs of the court. His relatives are endeavoring to secure the necessary funds to do this.

VICTIM OF ACCIDENT LAID TO FINAL REST.

Jonesboro, N. C., July 6.—The remains of Frank T. Holiday, who was killed in an automobile accident in Florida, were buried in Mt. Vernon Springs cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. Jonas Barclay pastor of Mt. Vernon Springs Presbyterian Church, assisted by Rev. W. R. Weaver, of Bonlee.

Mr. Holiday, who was 59 years of age, was a member of a well-known Chatham County family. He was a native of Texas. Surviving are his widow; two children, Misses May and Lane Holiday of Mount Vernon Springs, and one sister, Mrs. Kate T. Williams, of Millican, Texas.

The coal reserves of the world, it is estimated, approximate 7,863,555, 600,000 metric tons.

ROTHSCHILD FILM ANSWERS HITLER AND UHAROH

(Fayetteville Observer)

As a piece of propaganda wherein the Jewish people set forth their answer to Shakespeare for Shylock and to Hitler for Nazism and to the Wizards and the Kiangs for the latter day Ku Klux Klan, the motion picture "House of Rothschild" which plays the first of this week at a local theatre deserves the attention of every social-minded Gentile.

It lends the vehicle of the newest art of expression to the oldest race struggle of the civilized world, the struggle of the Jewish people to be accepted in the words of the film "to walk with dignity."

Without its propaganda angle the film regarded purely from the angle of drama is effective and presents the suave Arliss, if not at his best at somewhat near his top. The story is "The Merchant of Venice" with Shylock in the role of hero instead of villain, with Europe as his stage and demanding an interest on his loans not a pound of flesh but tolerance for his persecuted race.

Arliss, however, remains Arliss rather than becoming Nathan Rothschild and the picture in gaining the great ability and personality of Arliss loses the personification of a great, able and personable Jew. He doesn't look like a Jew, talk like a Jew, reason like a Jew or gesture like a Jew. He looks like Arliss, talks like Arliss, reasons like Arliss and gestures like Arliss.

A lesser actor than Arliss might have made a better Jew out of Rothschild at the risk of producing a lesser picture.

The picture portrays the persecuted Jewish race as it existed in Germany about the time when the colonies were gaining their liberty in America. It shows them segregated and forbidden to take part in any of the trades or professions except that of buying and selling and lending. Thus it uncovers the foundation of the money instinct which the Jewish people retain even though the necessity of protecting themselves by money alone in great measure has passed.

It also uncovers, although not so effectively, the almost spendthrift generosity of the Jewish race, and its innate sentimentality, and its profound idealism—qualities which above and beyond its acquisitiveness have seen it, unscathed through an eternity of persecution which began with Pharaoh, and which, let us hope, will end with Hitler.

How long the Jewish people as a race can survive the death of persecution will be a matter for history to record, but the races which assimilate them will be the gainers by the process.

'Shadow Army' Of Frenchman Matches Nazis

By JOHN EVANS

Paris.—(AP)—France has her own "shadow army," trained and drilled to match the marching hosts of Nazi Germany.

Marshal Petain, minister of war, says the French army "fears no one," and he praised the country for its "revival of the military spirit."

War talk, justified or not, has brought comparisons of strength, so Petain recently gave official figures of armed forces.

But behind the armies are the big masses of men who could be thrown into a conflict in short order. France's army, on paper, is 600,000 men, with two-fifths in the colonies.

SPITE MARRIAGE by Katharine Haviland Taylor

SYNOPSIS: Since the death of her parents, Marsha Moore has lived with her Aunt Gertrude. That bitter winter has turned Marsha into a hard young woman of the world whose consideration for her unmemorable past has been casual only. But Bob Powers has proved different; she has taken his ring and, gone to call on his mother. All the time Geoffrey Tarleton, disolute but amusing, has been in the back of her mind. Now she has decided to break off with Bob.

Chapter 10 BITTER SCENE

"I'M RATHER disappointed," Marsha confessed, "but at least that's new!" She studied Bob. The small chair he had selected seemed entirely inadequate for his bigness. Marsha liked him in it; liked the way he rather disconcerted her aunt's snobbish little drawing room.

She liked his bronzed skin; his spikey, unmanageable, sun-bleached hair, and his big, strong hands. "Man's man," he had been called, and he was that and more; he was a friend to men.

He was capable of being a real lover of one woman, and incapable of playing with love; he was realizing it with poignant bitterness and it showed.

She had not dreamed he could tremble so.

"How did you know?" she asked. "Has your cousin Letitia been whispering sweet nothings of me?" His eyes narrowed. "Do you think," he questioned in turn and with a sternness she had never known from him, "that I would listen to anyone who would say anything that was less than good-of you?"

"I don't suppose you would," she agreed weakly and with shame. She saw him fumble for his cigarette. He lit one with fingers that were unsteady. She had not dreamed that he, so balanced, could tremble as he trembled now. "You haven't answered me," she reminded, "and I want to know how you understood."

"It's not easy to explain," he responded, "and especially for a raw sort who doesn't talk easily. But you made it too clear at luncheon today. Or rather, after luncheon. . . you remember we were halted by a signal and you saw a child you said was sweet and you looked at her—rather hungrily. And it made me quite lose my head, you remember?"

"Yes."

"It wasn't sensuous, Marsha, although God knows, I am alive with you. There will never be anyone else who can matter in all ways as you do." Frowning, he puffed hard on his cigarette. "I had a flash," he went on, "of what life could be for a man and woman who loved as I thought we did."

"And I thought of my own childhood which was happy and I thought—of how happy any child must be with you for a mother, you see? And I put my hand on yours, you remember? And I said 'I love you so, when are you going to be long to me?' and you shrank."

She said again, "Yes."

"Then I left you here, and I went home and I began to think of how I had forced this matter and of how you had drawn away. Not from caresses, Marsha, but from any talk of realities. You were uneasy when belonging to the Union of Societies for Physical Education. These societies, all told, have 450,000 members, but only 80,000 of them are said to be trained in handling arms.

Germany, says Marshal Petain, can add to her 500,000 army about 600,000 men in a week and "in an extremely short time" have a total of 2,800,000 men in the field.

France gives no figures on her reserves. Each year an average of about 250,000 men, trained by their one-year military service are sent back to civil life. They remain in the reserve until they are 49 so that theoretically there may be called to the colors 7,000,000 men who have been soldiers.

I planned. Those were the moments when you had to 'go somewhere,' when I 'bored' you and you said so. How many times have we danced away the time in which I longed to plan?"

"I don't know," she answered honestly, "a good many, I suppose, Bob."

"Well, anyway—" he faltered, "I began to know how it was."

"Do you hate me?" she asked. If he said he hated her it would be easier. But he did not say he hated her. He shook his head.

"I couldn't hate you," he whispered, "I have loved you too well." She saw his lips twitch.

"One thing," he said slowly and after a little pause, "I am going to ask you to do for me."

"DON'T let another man kiss you, if you don't care. It isn't—quite fair, Marsha. You see, if I had not learned what kissing you means to me, it would be a little easier now. As it is—I'm a serious thirty-five and utterly inexperienced in this sort of play and, well—but I don't want to bother you and I realize I did impose myself most frightfully. You're not alone to blame."

He tried to smile at her then; she couldn't answer his smile.

"Then I'll think, I've been dreaming. She was only capable of summer stuff with anyone. And I'll wonder whose cigarette you're lighting, whose hand touches yours, who thinks he is slipping into Heaven only to wake up in Hell."

She made no answer and after a few moments had passed he said a short "Sorry," that rasped. The taxicab slowed behind a car Marsha knew; Geoffrey Tarleton's car. As they waited their turn to halt before the canopy, she saw Geoffrey Tarleton step from his car, help a pretty youngster from it, speak to his chauffeur and, with a debonair swing of shoulders that Marsha knew well, turn toward the door beyond which was a polished floor and forgetfulness for such as can find it in din.

Marsha, tense, forgot Bob. She was to see Geoffrey. And seeing him she knew she could bring him to heel. His only freedom from her, he had admitted, lay in his keeping beyond her reach. The girl who was with him did not "really matter," Marsha was quite certain.

But her life's pattern was made, as was Bob's, by her meeting "the insane girl who did not 'really matter.'"

WHEN Marsha and Bob entered the heavy-aided room where tables were crowded and a stretch of gleaming floor said, "dance," a bit of something that should have been young was rolling her eyes and wriggling suggestively as she voiced through tiny song her need of "Mummy."

After the head waiter had bowed low to Marsha, whom he knew well, Marsha selected her place with a cool nod, and she and Bob settled on a padded bench against the wall and behind one of the fragile, small tables.

She scanned the space eagerly. Evidently Geoffrey and the child had lingered in some corridor to talk and smoke, but they would be along. She sagged back and tried to relax; she must guard against showing Geoffrey her need to see him.

The song died in a nasal whine; obese men with fat-wrinkled necks applauded furiously. Bob felt, through the sodden-dullness which had gripped him ever since he had been certain that he understood, the nausea that was usually put in him by such a place and such inept "entertainment."

"Doubleless the poor, small thing needs mummy," he commented in a level, heavy undertone, "but the return would be rather hard on mummy, I would say."

The hostess, crowded into a glittering sequin-spangled gown and bulging from it, stepped to the small raised dais by the piano; she

"Thanks awfully for liking my last; she's a good kid—" the hostess-owner sang out; "and now, give this little girl a hand. Just off the farm, aren't you, honey? Say hello to the big boys and their babies, dearie. Don't be afraid, nobody eats anything up here; we haven't time!"

She raised a phantom glass to drink from it. Loud laughter; the girl, who could have cut a window pane more easily than could a diamond, rolled her eyes, said, in a high, near-baby lisping voice, "Hello, everybody—!"

Marsha turned to Bob to see his quizzical eyes and to know that his lips would have curled if he had let them. "A good time," he murmured, "that is what you call this, isn't it? I would not so resent it, if you were built for it. But you're not."

"Lectures have always bored me, Bob, and I get plenty at home—" she stated. She was watching the entrances. They had not yet appeared. What—her heart caught—if Geoffrey had decided to go elsewhere, as he often did after having entered a place to survey it with lazy, insolent eyes?

"I put my memories in tins for use in Mexico," said Bob. "I shall bring this out when I feel a hunger for 'civilization.' Odd, most of this group would dodge a subway, thinking it contaminated them."

"Do you smell the bay rum, Marsha? And that delicious scent called 'lila' that is so loved by the barbers and their patrons who wear what they call 'flashy patterns.'"

HE was at ease now; more at ease than he had ever been with her. It was over; nothing he could say or do would change her mind; so nothing mattered. He sat back heavily.

"I don't quite like you tonight, I think, Bob," she murmured.

"Sorry, I'll try to be less of the beast, Beauty. I hope you have plans for food. My gastronomic imagination seems to be over-shadowed by another variety. One world and one hunger at a time, hum?"

"If you'll give me a cigarette, Bob, I'll try to ferret out something we can do. But I must smoke with serious thinking. And I'd like a Manhattan, please."

He ordered the cocktail from a hovering waiter who was rude to certain patrons and too servile to others. Bob stiffened at his fawning.

"Hate it," he said brusquely, close to violently, "and you should; this synthetic tenderness of the 'hostess' while dealing with her 'children'—Lord! And behind the scenes she teaches them how to strip the butter-and-egg Rajah. I don't know what we're coming to—it is so perniciously and assaultingly vulgar."

"You should have been born in Disraeli's time; you would have gathered a mean primrose—" drawled Marsha. She looked, then, quickly toward the piano where the child of the farm told a risque tale in what was called a song. They were entering; Geoffrey; the girl. Geoffrey must not see her once glance his way. How her heart pounded!

A man who had been bitterly hurt by Marsha had said, "The devil gave her her beauty; the homage of her lovers has given her her enchanting arrogance; an iceberg has lent a chunk of itself for the space that is usually reserved for a heart, and heartlessness has put into her steady hands, a two-edged sword."

And perhaps, Bob thought, something in it. Of course he had forced her; he must be just to her. Heavens, for the chance to get away from her and to be alone in the dark. But she had said she had wanted to dance and with him, and thus, for him, the matter was inflexibly arranged.

The amber-colored glasses had come; Marsha downed her cocktail quickly, and quickly she rose. "I want to dance," she said, smiling at Bob who did not answer her smile. Geoffrey and the girl were dancing.

Bob danced unusually well; Marsha had admitted that she would rather dance with him than with anyone else and that their steps were suited.

"Can't you smile a little on me," she asked.

"I don't think I can," he answered with some effort.

Tomorrow, Marsha is shocked out of her poise, for once.

DEAN DOWNS 'BUNNIES' IN MOUND DUEL

The Greenville "Bugs" of the Coastal Plain League, who have been coasting along nonchalantly on next to the bottom rung of the standing of clubs around the most of the season, showed signs of returning consciousness this week and today were credited with four victories in a row.

After taking three straight games from the luckless Tar Babies, the "Bugs" behind the masterful pitching of "Lefty" Dean, yesterday afternoon took the New Bern "Bunnies" into camp to the tune of 2 to 1. It was the first game Dean has pitched since rejoining the locals this season, and did he give the fans an eye-filling and careful? He had the most dangerous "Bunny" swatters, metaphorically speaking, "eating out of his hand" over the entire route with him whiffing the ozone in a futile attempt to connect for safeties. The bespectacled giant Kennel, in right field, found himself helpless before the baffling speed ball of the local hurler, and after fanning twice, he managed to connect for one single the latter part of the game.

It was a southpaw duel between Dean and "Lefty" Dunn, diminutive and cunning "Bunny" hurler, who despite getting into hot water three or four times while Greenville was threatening to increase the run lead, pulled himself clear of the dangerous situations and pitched a splendid game.

Greenville was credited with a total of 18 hits to New Bern's five. Both clubs in the official box score tabulation were credited with errorless ball but some agree to disagree over one or two plays by both clubs which might have gone for errors instead of being chalked up as hits. However, the "official" source is the law in the game and what he says must be considered as final.

"Ginger" Martin, who might well claim kin with "Pepper" Martin of big league fame, was the only local batter to get more than one hit. He was credited with two safeties, one going for two bases. The two-base drive looked as if it were bound for a ride over the fence, but it missed the goal by a few feet and Martin, busy gauging the ball, fell down at first and failed to make his deserving third sack.

E. Ferebee, one of several men by the same name with the "Bunny" outfit, walked away with batting honors for the visitors with two hits, one for three bags. The Ferebees are something to cope with at bat, but brother E., or cousin E., whatever the relationship, did well to add an extra single to his list.

with the invincible Dean going like wild fire and a "Big League" scout sitting in the grandstand watching the Oak Ridge lad do his stuff.

Representatives of each club at short provided the fielding features of the afternoon. Mills, who recently joined the local club, making good several chances that might easily have gone for safeties, and the same old E. Ferebee doing the same for the visitors. That boy Mills looks mighty good both at bat and in the field and is expected to play an important part in the "Bugs" attempt to take Ayden and Kinston, league leaders, for a ride in the future.

Fans were generally agreed it was the best game here this season, and they are all excited over the forthcoming contests with the big shots of the circuit with visions of several more Dean victories dancing before their eyes.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

I have no direct means of knowing just what happened, nor is it likely that any of the parties involved would care to enter a personal discussion of the matter, but I would not be surprised if the boss of the New York Giants said something about as follows to the boss of the National League recently: "John, when you are making up your mind who to name as manager

A Duck Fuss

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I'm going to tell on you," quacked Downy.

"Tattle tale," quacked Quacks. "Can't stand a little poke without crying and talking about it?"

"What's the matter?" quacked Camp Director Big Duck in a loud voice.

Downy was about to speak when all the other ducks started shouting: "Tattle tale! Downy is a tattle tale!"

"Now look here," cried Camp Director Big Duck, "I don't like ducks that tease, I don't like ducks that cause trouble, nor do I like ducks that tell on each other. I hope with all my duckish heart that I have none of these in my camp."

"For a moment there I thought I had. But I really don't believe I heard what I thought I heard. At least I will pretend it was all a mistake."

"There was a moment of silence and the ducklings all blushed underneath their soft down, for they were ashamed of what had happened.

Downy and Quacks were both ashamed of themselves.

It certainly was wonderful of Camp Director Big Duck to act as he had.

"Now," quacked Camp Director Big Duck, "we will continue the drill!"

The ducks swam in wonderful formation and then they had flying exercises after which they all tried out the quacking chorus. It went like this:

"Let's cheer, cheer, cheer.
For all of us are here.
And each one thinks it's luck
To be a little duck!"

ber of men older in the business of managing ball clubs than my Mr. Will Terry. But who can say there are any wiser or more successful managers? Mr. McGraw, who managed your team last year, is dead. There is no one of his stature and reputation left to consider. But there is Mr. Will Terry, who learned the game under McGraw, and within the time afforded him to show results so far has done all that could possibly be asked. I recommend him to you as the best and most logical man to take the responsibilities of leadership."

Easy Way Out

All this, as I say, is mere supposition, but something of the sort must have happened, behind the scenes, to prompt the decision by both leagues to shift rapidly from the older heads, such as Connie Mack and Bill McKechnie, to the youthful player-manager, Joe Cronin and Will Terry.

In one sense, it is the easy way out. It avoids the possible jealousies and arguments, although I cannot imagine anyone in the American League objecting to having the venerable Mr. Mack again occupy the dean's chair in the dugout for the all-star activities. Nor, for that matter, would there be any disposition to begrudge McKechnie the reins for the National League, inasmuch as he is the senior pilot.

George Arliss in THE HOUSE OF ROTHSCHILD

STATE MONDAY TUESDAY

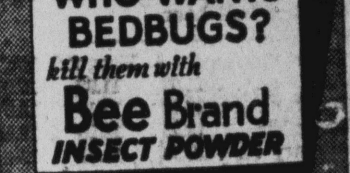

The choice of Terry and Cronin, however, sets a precedent. It is fair enough, too, as a reward to the men who prove the most successful leaders. As far as managing a team of stars such as each league will put on the field at the Polo Grounds, July 10, maybe the bat-boy could do it.

No-a-Flash

"Mr. Bliss," writes Al Wolf of the Omaha World-Herald, "was around in a mere 67 pokes to come within one stroke of Goodman's course record. . . . Rod went to work like Maxie Baer whittled down Ponderous Primo. He knocked down six birdies, two four holes single-handed, one-putted no fewer than eleven greens and slipped over par figures only on the second hole. . . . Little carded an even par, 72. Goodman a 74 and Cowdery had a 76. Johnny won two holes. Little and Cowdery one each."

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, July 6.—(AP)—The slow motion stock market displayed further signs of firmness today, although much of the feeble buying was highly selective and prices as a whole held to a restricted range.

The majority of leaders while inclined to be a trifle more bullish than for sometime past, showed little disposition to take large share cargoes.

Extreme dullness prevailed during the greater part of the session. At the same time, despite lightness of dealings, a few issues climbed into new high territory for the year.

It was noted that sellers were quite timid.

Commodities proved of no help to the equity list. Corn reacted more than a cent a bushel on reports of more rain in the drought district. Selective buying prevailed in late dealings.

Transfers were 450,000 shares.

home near Munich.

Only through determined and timely intervention of one of the Chancellor's aides who shot and killed the man when the latter ran up to Hitler with a pistol was disaster to the Chancellor averted, it was revealed.

The story was told to an American citizen residing here by a friend of Heineke's who was said to be absolutely reliable. Heineke was chief of police of the Nazis.

Americans May Quit France

Paris, July 6.—(AP)—Many American firms in France feared today they will be forced to quit the country because of Premier Doumergue's failure to get Parliament not to ratify a long pending treaty with the United States listing double taxation.

Some firms were said by a spokesman for American interests to be already considering leaving the country in order to aid collection of $100,000,000 in excess taxes which have been suspended by the French for several years.

French-American trade relations also may seriously be complicated through an avowed intention of the Chamber of Deputies committee handling the matter to hold up the treaty ratification on the war debts matter.

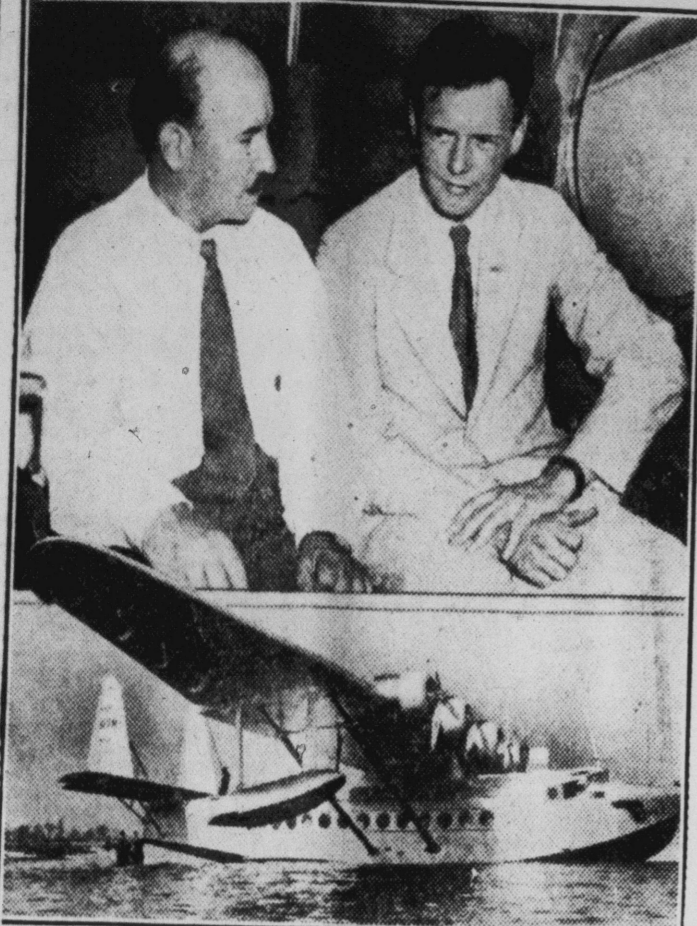

Preached Fined in Court.

Raleigh, July 6.—(AP)—Rev. Eckie Gattis, Baptist preacher here who had a fight over the keys to the property of the John T. Pullen Baptist Church last Friday, today was fined $10 and cost in city police court on a charge of having assaulted E. D. Green, deacon and custodian of the church. Mr. Gattis immediately noted an appeal to the Superior court and was released under $25 bond.

In another charge of trespass which was lodged against Mr. Gattis, Judge Wiley G. Barnes ordered proper for judgment continued.

The cases grew out of an attempt of Mr. Gattis to reorganize the heavily indebted church, it was alleged.

LINDYPILOTS' AIR GIANT

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh piloted the S-42 (shown above) 190 miles an hour on the day it was licensed for international service on South American trade routes. Lindbergh is shown (right) with Igor Sikorsky, who designed the giant plane. The S-42 weighs 18 tons, has a hull 76 feet long and a wing span of more than 114 feet. Speaks Tobacco Men

White Sulphur Springs, Va., July 6.—(AP)—A. B. Carrington, of Danville, president, told the Tobacco Association of the United States today that "the new deal had brought renewed faith in our country and institutions and renewed courage and hope in the hearts of our people."

"In this new deal," he said, "the tobacco interests have come in for a large share of official and private attention. This is easy to understand when we recognize the fact that it is our second largest crop and touches all points of the globe, and is one of the largest revenue-producing agencies of the government."

"This year we have just passed through has been fraught with many changes, some of them appearing very radical to use to begin with, but as time goes on we are led to believe that those in charge of the tobacco section of the government are more and more filled with the spirit of cooperation and have no doubt worked hard to post themselves on all phases of the tobacco trade."

Hindenburg Again Steadies Reich

(By Associated Press)

Whether Germany shall turn to the right or to the left is agitating the Nazi-governed nation.

It is a struggle for control between elderly, conservative-minded leaders on the one hand and younger elements whose radical inclinations have been set forth by word and deed.

One striking result of the dispute is the emergence from the background of Paul von Hindenburg, 83-year-old President of the "third reich." For months he has been in obscurity while Adolf Hitler conducted affairs.

But then Franz von Papen, non-Nazi vice-chancellor, saw fit to voice dissatisfaction with some of the extremists; measures adopted by the chancellor's chief lieutenants. The speech was suppressed in Germany and there were indications that the radicals intended to snuff out von Papen's political life.

Whereupon Hindenburg spoke, sending the vice chancellor a message whose tenor was "Well done! I agree with you."

There followed comment from Hitler indicating that he thought there was considerable merit in some of von Papen's strictures.

But the fire was smouldering. It blazed into open controversy between the "steel helmets," backbone of the conservative faction, and the brown-shirted "storm troops" of the Hitler drive for power.

General Werner von Blomberg, minister of defense and hence in control of the standing army, the "reichswehr," told the nation that the regulars were loyal to President von Hindenburg and Chancellor Hitler "who came from our ranks and always will remain one of us."

And Hitler himself bade the troubled waters to be stilled. But they continue to seethe and toss.

Heart Of English People Sought By Gandhi Disciple

Bombay.—(AP)—Shrimati Mira Behn, better known as Miss Madeleine Slade, is returning to the land she forsook nine years ago to become a disciple of the Mahatma Gandhi.

She is going back to the scene of her girlhood social triumphs "to work quietly and persistently for a truer understanding between India and England."

Only once before, and then as the faithful attendant of the hardy little leader she serves, has this daughter of a British admiral been in her native land since she entered Gandhi's shrine.

Madeleine Slade as such, the daughter of Sir Esmond Slade, the girl who went in for fox hunting and sports, pretty clothes and dances, died November 7, 1925, she says, and in her place was born Mira Behn, as Gandhi calls her, Mirabai.

Answers Impelling 'Call'

Her explanation for her return to England is brief:

"By birth I am the daughter of an English admiral and by choice the adopted daughter of Mr. Gandhi," she said.

"I feel an irresistible call at this juncture to go to England to work for a truer understanding—to seek with all the strength of the love which is in me to secure harmony between the two countries."

"The idea is my own, and it came to me like a flash. I consulted with two other English girls before mentioning it to Mr. Gandhi. He approved the plan and has given me his blessing."

Asked how she proposed to accomplish her self-imposed mission, the disciple answered:

"By reaching the heart of the English people through the truth and more especially by showing them what Mr. Gandhi really is and what he stands for."

Finds 'Light' in India

Born to luxury, she once explained, she "had everything any girl's heart could desire—except one thing, spiritual satisfaction and real contentment with myself."

Through Romain Rolland, French philosopher, and a book he had written about Gandhi, she decided that "the leader of India's millions of destitute and starving people was the 'light' for which I had been searching."

She renounced all worldly pleasures and prepared herself to joining Gandhi in India by studying, spinning, weaving and living in seclusion with the poorest of Swiss peasants in Switzerland.

Since her conversion, she has been a steadfast follower of Gandhi and twice has been imprisoned. She is now forty-one.
