LEGION WILL NAME OFFICERS

Important Meeting of Local Post to be Held Here Tonight At 7 o'Clock

The Pitt County Post of the American Legion will hold its most important meeting of the year tonight at the Third Street School field house at 7 o'clock. Significance is attached to the meeting because this is the night for the annual election of officers as well as the selection of twelve delegates to the state convention of the Legion which will be held in Greensboro on August 26, 27 and 28.

The post now has a paid-up membership of 228 members, exactly doubling its last year's membership and hanging up a record unequalled in the state and seldom equaled in the nation. The post has had special recognition from the state and national headquarters by virtue of its large membership as well as the faithfulness with which it has carried out the Legion's state and national program.

S. C. TEXTILE STRIKERS GO BACK TO WORK

Movement of Foodstuff and Operation Of Traction Lines Under Way in San Francisco; National Guardsmen and Police on Duty to Prevent Disorders

(By The Associated Press) Labor troubles spotted each part of the nation's three coast ports and More than 100,000 workers have been called out on strike and members of many other unions threatened walkouts.

Twelve thousand employees of the four plants of the Piedmont Manufacturing Company near Greenville, S. C., returned to their posts after what was described as "amicable settlement" of their strike had been reached.

The 100,000 union workers in San Francisco, heart of the maritime walkout, relaxed their hold on the general strike sufficiently to permit the movement of foodstuffs and operation of the municipal traction system, but the situation still remained critical.

Branding the hardship of the general strike as "undeserved and intolerable," Acting Governor Frank Merriman promised officials of Sacramento last night to act with utmost vigor for the public weal. Nine thousand National Guardsmen and police were ready at San Francisco for his orders.

The general strike spread across San Francisco bay to the Oakland area where the union had fixed for today their walkout in sympathy with longshoremen. Violence drummed its prelude yesterday, four persons being hurt by flying fists and weapons. More than 100,000 Alabama textile workers went on strike this morning.

Truck drivers struck again at midnight. Four thousand men joined the previous strike in which two were killed and two hundred hurt. Minneapolis cleaners and dyers and laundry workers voted to strike, leaving the time of the walkout to be decided tonight. They are asking a closed shop and forty hours a week.

Senator Wagner, chairman of the National Labor Board and friends of labor, flew to Portland, Ore., hoping to aid in what he described as "a critical situation."

Clark-Bailey

The Baptist Church at Everetts was the scene of a simple but beautiful wedding Sunday morning at nine o'clock, when Miss Susie Bailey of this city, became the bride of C. B. Clark of Williamston. The church was beautifully decorated in a pink, white and green color scheme with gladioli, ivy and cathedral candles.

The ushers were Paul Bailey and George Taylor, Jr., brother and nephew of the bride.

To the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Lela Brown Barnhill, the bride entered upon the arm of the groom and approached the altar where the impressive ring ceremony was performed by Rev. E. C. Shoe. She was gowned in a navy going-away suit with white accessories and carried a bouquet of bride's roses.

Immediately following the ceremony the couple left for a wedding trip to New York and other northern cities after which they will make their home in Williamston. The bride is well known in Greenville, having held a responsible position with the Greenville Banking and Trust Company for several years.

The groom is manager of Young's store in Williamston.

Attend Wedding

Among those attending the Clark-Bailey wedding at Everetts were: Mrs. W. H. Woodard, Mrs. F. A. Jordan, Mrs. A. L. Blow, Miss Agnes Fullilove, Miss Jape Hadley, Miss Martha Lee Cowell, Miss Mary Woodard, Miss Ethel Croon, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Arnold and children, Andrew Moore and John Congleton.

First Church of Christ, Scientist

"God" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all churches and societies of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 15.

The golden text was from Revelation 7:12: "Blessing and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens; let thy glory be above all the earth" (Psalms 57:5).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, by Mary Baker Eddy: "God is infinite, the only life, substance, Spirit or Soul, the only intelligence of the universe, including man. Eye hath neither seen God nor His image and likeness. Neither God nor the perfect man can be discerned by the material senses. The individuality of Spirit, or the infinite, is unknown, and thus a knowledge of it is left either to human conjecture or to the revelation of divine Science."

'N' RULED 'WITHIN' ON BOND MATURITY

Duluth. (AP)—The word "in" threatened for a time to block sale of $60,000 in funding bonds here.

Legislation enacted by the State Legislature stipulated the bonds should mature "in eight years after date of issue."

The county board's resolution for selling the bonds, however, provided for maturity seven years after the date of issue and a New York bond firm refused to approve the issue, basing its rejection on the word "in."

However, a Minneapolis firm of attorneys said it would approve the issue, declaring the word "in" to mean "within," thus paving the way for sale of the securities.

SPITE MARRIAGE

by Katharine Haveland Taylor

SYNOPSIS: Marsha Moore had thought herself in love with Geoffrey Tarleton. But he introduced her to the "new Mrs. Tarleton," and she married Bob Powers out of spite. Now Geoffrey has come to call on Marsha, and although Bob has gone to the village, Marsha feels the danger that he may discover the truth. And Marsha loves Bob now, and does not want him to know.

CHAPTER 20 THE BLOW

MARSHA joined him, wearing a scarlet frock that made her a flame; she called from the doorway, "Why didn't you smoke, Geoff? There are things on that low table by you."

She settled in a deep chair near the hearth and again he sat down. He fumbled among the promiscuous brands that filled the humid air, lit the captured cigaret, stared at the gorgeously colored flames.

"Dramatic voice you have," said Geoffrey, "powerfully dramatic and sweet voice, and one that can sway a man, who hates you, Marsha."

Once she had felt herself to be decorated by a hate that grew of love, or she had been "amused" at it. Now she wanted peace; a pleasant relation with any human whose elbow even brushed hers in a hurried passing.

"Must you hate me, Geoff?" she asked gently. "I would really so much rather you did not."

He turned upon her suddenly. "You know," he accused, "how it was with me. I always fluttered around other candles, but then you always let other chaps singe their wings at your flame. We were even, there! But I thought—you made me believe—my soul, Marsha, you said, and not any more than six months ago—"

"But Geoff—"

"No, wait! You said you agreed with me in feeling that we would make it go all right. I understood you'd marry me."

She laughed scornfully. "What about your side of it?" she asked. "I came back and found you with the new Mrs. Tarleton."

He stood up, and she followed his lead; the moment's tense quality made repose difficult.

"What?" he asked, frowning fiercely. "What?"

"That night—" (His hands closed around her upper arms as she spoke, closed to hold her firmly) "that night I saw you at the Frivolity Club you introduced—" she stopped suddenly and swallowed.

"Perhaps he's through with me; I think very probably he is. But that wouldn't make me seek warmth elsewhere. I couldn't, having known him, let another man so much as touch my hand. Will you try to understand it's over between us? And—will you go?"

Geoffrey's ideas for revenge had faded. He was hurt, but, too, he was awed. And he had hurt her, whose sincerity had put within him a new sort of love.

"God," he said brutally, loudly, "I am sorry!"

She made no response. He turned to the door. At the door he paused. "If you want anything I can give you—"

She shook her head violently. He heard a weak, "But thank you."

He saw her sink to a small stool by the hearth; he left her crouched there and staring into the flames.

As he reached the hall he heard above him the hard tread of some one who must pace a room. He was leaving an inferno, which would haunt him, he knew.

If he could reach Powers to make Powers believe that truth that had grown in Marsha, would that help? He doubted it. A man of Powers sort probably could not forgive a woman who married him in order to keep from wearing the limp robe of the fitted; who married him, too, in order to tell another man that she did not mourn his having married.

"Lord, what a mess!" he murmured.

There was sleet in the air as he stepped out. The wind was bitter and cutting. He looked back at the small house, ominously silent. "And now what for them?" he asked of himself. "And their next move?"

Divorce, he presumed. He had never before forgotten himself through others. But Marsha's face had made him see how it was with her. She had looked old, and agony was in her eyes, and he had learned what love may be by looking in them. Her pain mattered, not his. (Copyright, 1934, by K. Haveland-Taylor)

Bob turned then, toward the door and for an outdoor man whose tread was sure, he was pitifully uncertain of motion.

"Bob!" Marsha appealed. He did not respond and she realized that, no matter how physically close they could stand, hereafter, he would ever be beyond her reach.

Geoffrey was smiling.

"No end sorry," he said, as Bob disappeared. She covered her face with her trembling hands. He moved closer to pat her shoulder. He felt her shrink. "After the divorce," he said with a gentleness rare for him, "You'll look me up! We won't lose any more time. I won't trust you again for fear you might think me married to anyone who happened to be in the same room, on the same block—"

"Don't!" she appealed. She dropped her hands and he was shocked by the change in her face. She smiled slowly, stiffly.

"You don't understand—" she faltered, "I don't know how to make you understand. But you must believe in love. I'm deeply in love with my husband. There will never be anyone else for me."

"Perhaps he's through with me; I think very probably he is. But that wouldn't make me seek warmth elsewhere. I couldn't, having known him, let another man so much as touch my hand. Will you try to understand it's over between us? And—will you go?"

Geoffrey's ideas for revenge had faded. He was hurt, but, too, he was awed. And he had hurt her, whose sincerity had put within him a new sort of love.

When she drew away some magnetism made her turn toward the door where Bob Powers stood looking at them.

"Sorry to seem the spy," he said through stiff, set lips. "Come back rather sooner than was expected, I presume."

He slipped a shaking, icy hand in her pocket; he had picked up in the village a small ivory elephant he had thought she would like; an amusing small thing that would, the credulous believed, bring the owner luck.

Marsha saw him moisten his lips; glance slowly at Geoffrey; at her, back again.

"Bob!" she whispered.

"You needn't bother to explain," he managed to say and fairly steadily. "I heard some of this; all apologies to you both. I couldn't help hearing it. Rather knocked, you see. I tried to speak, and couldn't. Hope you'll manage to overlook it."

Geoffrey, who was not a coward, was at his best during such moments. He had had practice with them. Nevertheless, Bob's attitude troubled him; he was not used to apologies from husbands who had overheard.

"No end so. Powers," he murmured, "but there was a misunderstanding."

"So I understand," said Bob. He turned to Marsha with a question; by the executive committee of the code authority.

Mr. Lanier will leave Saturday for South Carolina to address the warehouse associations of that State.

Work of administering the code will begin in Georgia, he said, and he and his men will work along with buyers on the opening of the various markets.

The code provides for fair trade practices in the tobacco industry as approved by the President, and as Mr. Lanier had an important part in the making of the code, he is expected to push its administration rapidly and with good results to the selection of the officers.

LEGION TO NAME OFFICERS

The selection of delegates to the state convention will be a matter of vital interest because the contest for the office of state commander is keener this year than it has ever been. Last year no one was nominated with the exception of the present commander, Tom C. Daniels. But it will be different this year. The commander comes from the "West" this year and Burlington, Statesville, Lexington, Charlotte and Hamlet are putting forth candidates. The chances are that the delegates from this post will go unopposed. So far Herbert Olive of Lexington seems to have the largest number of instructed votes.

Other matters to engage the attention of the post tonight will be preparations for the observance of Armistice Day which comes on Sunday this year, and regular routine of business.

The local post will take to Greensboro "Miss Pitt County" and "Miss Greenville" in the person of Miss Mary Rachel Teel who won the dual title in the beauty pageant recently sponsored by the Legion. Miss Teel will compete with other beauties from the state to determine the title of Miss North Carolina, and Miss North Carolina will be given a trip to the national convention of the Legion at Miami in October.

The usual supper will be served and the meeting will be presided over by Commander Rose.

DUCKINGS EMBODY LUCK FOR LONDON LAWYERS

London. (AP)—Lincoln's Inn, one of London's ancient and famous legal societies, finds its luck hanging on the fate of two ducklings.

It is traditional that good fortune comes to the Inn in years when ducks are hatched in this quiet spot buried away from the rush and noise of the city.

A pair of mallards came this season, built a nest and 11 eggs were laid. The custodian of the Inn, to help the birds, moved the nest for protection. The mallards flew away.

With the luck of the Inn at stake a hen was placed on the eggs. She pecked to death all of her brood except two, but they are being treated as carefully as the Inn's most precious tome.

Jelly Bear Rewarded

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Everyone was talking at the same time. Rita was telling her story, Jelly Bear was growing explanations to Willy Nilly, and Willy Nilly was telling the people what had happened.

At last they understood. "We thought Rita was lost," her father said. "We found her missing and walked everywhere until we saw her here. We thought the bear had bewitched her."

Rita and her family and their friends lived in another direction from Puddle Middle and had never met any of the Puddle Muddlers, nor the people around who knew them.

But now when they realized what Jelly Bear had done they began to make a great fuss over him. And Rita was willing to say goodbye to him now that they, too, were grateful to him. She gave him a hug and he promised to visit her.

"We'll have a medal made for you," the people said, and Jelly Bear asked Willy Nilly what a medal might be.

"I wonder," said Jelly Bear, "if you'd mind asking them to give me one?"

some jelly and some honey instead? I don't care about a reward, but if they're going to bother about a medal I'd just as soon have something to eat."

Oh yes, the people promised all sorts of good things to eat for Jelly Bear, and that very afternoon an automobile drove up the rough roads of Puddle Middle filled with a great deal of food.

As the sun went down the Puddle Muddlers had a banquet, and then Jelly Bear went to his cave to rest.

School Contribution To Public Welfare Set Forth by Speaker At Rote Meeting

By WYATT BROWN
The outstanding contribution of the public schools has been their entrance into the field of health education," said Dr. Howard McGinnis of East Carolina Teachers College last night to his fellow Rotarians in presenting what his profession has done recently for public welfare.

"They have done this through classroom instruction, drill and practice; through dental, oral, optical and general physical clinic; through home visitations and instruction of practical hygiene in the community among adults."

"Kick, knock, criticize if you will but the modern school curricula is the best that has ever been developed. Schools have modified and improved the course of study as best it could to meet the conflicting needs and desires of an incoherent public demand. Courses have been introduced and then thrown out because the public considered them too expensive. Schools have taken over almost completely the task of developing the skills, the habits, and the attitudes of worthy citizenship in children. It has given children a working knowledge of the mother tongue, history, mathematics, science, health, government, etc. Next, it has given trade training in shop work, home economics, agriculture, business, etc., in so far as the public has requested it and provided the necessary funds to carry it on," he went on.

The remainder of the evening was given over to a musical program rendered by the musical talents of Mrs. Glenn Scott and J. E. (Jimmy) Dees. Mrs. Scott accompanied Jimmy for three numbers. When Jimmy was singing "Love's Old Sweet Song" and "Annie Laurie" cigarettes and cigars went unsmoked and serious minded Rotates studied the floor and searched the ceiling pensively. Martin Swartz with benign expression stared moodily at his hand folded upon the table before him. Following the vocal numbers, Mrs. Scott presented her own interpretation of "The Rosary" and broke all Rotary precedents by winning such favor that the members voted to stay overtime in spite of the heat for another number.

President of the Club Herbert ReBarker brought to the attention of the membership the receipt of a request from the superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage at Raleigh requesting that the Rotarians do all they could to help locate a secretarial position for Marjorie Leggett in Pitt county. She is a graduate of high school and had business training and is now ready to leave the orphanage.

The budget committee made a detailed report of the past year, announcing an average membership for the period of forty. A very interesting figure given was the sum of $62.50 for fines and extra guests for the year. One wonders how many times Julian White and Dr. Pace contributed to this fund for being tardy?

Julia Cherry, Colored, Dead Burial Friday

Julia Cherry, 59-year-old colored woman, died at her home here this morning after an illness of one week. Funeral services will be conducted from A. M. E. Zion Church Friday and burial will be made in the local cemetery.

Julia had lived in Greenville all of her life and was highly respected not only by members of her race but by numbers of white people who knew her.

'Ty' Wagner Holds Lead With Bat

By R. O. MOYE
Ty Wagner continued to lead the local club in hitting with a percentage of .366. Second place goes to Martin with a percentage of .320 and third place goes to "Skipper" Harrington with a percentage of .308. The entire batting average of the club is .263 per cent. Only three of the scheduled games were able to be played last week which accounts for the little change in percentage column.

The record follows:

'BUGS' TRIM NEW BERN IN 'PLAY-OFF'

New Bern, N. C., July 17.—Greenville collected fifteen hits off Kennel and Dunn to defeat New Bern 6 to 3 yesterday in a play-off of a game postponed from last week. Reynolds May, Duke University hurler, pitched the route for Greenville.

Kennel went to the showers during a seventh-inning splurge which netted the visitors three runs. The Greenies scored three more in the ninth to sew up things.

The locals' runs came in the third on four bunched hits. Bullard, new second-sacker from Gastonia, made two for three to lead New Bern's eight-hit attack. May with three for four, led Greenville.

Base umpire Jowdy quit in the second inning because of the Greenville manager's alleged strong language in disputing a decision. Smoky Joe Ferebee, handling eight chances perfectly, featured afield for New Bern. H. Ferebee caught for New Bern; Wagner caught for Greenville.

New York Cotton

New York, July 17.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady, nine to eleven points lower under dissipating Liverpool cables and profit-taking.

There also seemed to be some selling based on the belief that recent job advances had eased the technical position of the market, but there was sufficient trade buying and covering to absorb offerings at the decline to 13.03 for December. The market steadied as the selling tapered off. At the end of the first half hour, October was selling around 13.02 with the more active positions ruling with in three or four points of yesterday's closing.

The market advanced later in the morning on covering, or rebuying promoted by the weather news from the Southwest and rally in wheat. October sold up to 13.19 with active months showing advances of two to three points at midday.

There was a carry-over of selling in early transactions, but this did not last long. While trading was still at a low ebb, leading equities recovered fractions to around a point. Brokers emphasized the fact the public is continuing to hold aloft from speculation and even professionals are not inclined to expand commitments. A sharp rally in grains may have aided in brightening the security figure. Wheat jumped more than two cents a bushel. An irregular appearance was seen in the market throughout the day.

Lite price changes were generally small. Transfers were 600,000 shares.

Make Plans To End Strike.
San Francisco, July 17.—(AP)—A member of President Roosevelt's labor dispute board revealed today that a definite proposal is underway to end the general strike by submitting the entire controversy to arbitration with the immediate return to work of all men involved.

The general strike touched Oakland in a triangular glow today and reached toward Portland as if lightning its grip on San Francisco. After a day of idleness San Francisco municipal street cars rolled from their barns while numerous cars of the Key system didn't turn a wheel in the East Bay area.

Walkout of the Key line trammien initiated the general strike in Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda and other bay cities extending the strike's paralyzing grip to an additional 500,000 of the metropolitan areas 1,300,000 people.

Ferry boats of the Key route system also went out of service, crippling transportation for the thousands who commute between San Francisco and Oakland.

Southern Pacific ferry boats were left to bear the burden of the entire traffic.

Orders Probe of Mail Contracts.
Washington, July 17.—(AP)—President Roosevelt has signed an executive order directing the Postmaster General to investigate foreign air mail and ocean mail contracts made prior to June 16, 1933, and to make recommendations relative to the modification or cancellation of such contracts.

Strikers Storm Alabama Mill.
Huntsville, Ala., July 17.—(AP)—Strikers stormed the Fletcher cotton mill here today shortly after a state-wide walkout had been called and forced it to close.

Armed with sticks and clubs the workers swarmed about the plant calling on workers on the inside to quit their jobs.

Police and special deputies armed with one machine gun and high powered rifles rushed to the scene but the closing down of the mill ended the tense situation.

ELM CITY MAN FOUND DEAD IN WILSON HOTEL

Elm City, N. C., July 17.—Local residents were shocked Monday to learn of the death in Wilson of one of their leading insurance men, represented the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, and was considered one of the best insurance men in the county. His work frequently took him to Wilson. He went there last Friday and registered at the Briggs Hotel. He had been seen going in and out of the hotel up to Sunday, and on Monday morning on his Elm City associates, W. J. Laflinghouse, called at his room to keep a joint engagement with the deceased. Upon entering he found Neubanks in bed dead. Wilson authorities said he had suffered a heart attack. Mr. Neubanks came to Elm City from Savannah Ga., to which city his body was sent for interment. He was unmarried.

THE END OF THE RACE! —and then he Smoked a Camel!

IT TAKES A MAN like "Bill" Horn, who won the Gold Cup in 1932, to wind a big racing hydroplane up to 3000 r.p.m. and hold her to a speed of 60 to 70 miles per hour...for mile after mile. And when he's tired Camels quickly increase his vim and energy.

YOU'LL LIKE this delightful way of "turning on" your flow of energy

A famous New York research laboratory reveals that smoking a Camel produces a definite increase in your flow of natural energy. The effect is delightful, completely natural.

Horn, winner of the gruelling Gold Cup race, refers to his experience in these words: "The man who drives a Gold Cup winner needs the last ounce of energy he's got. After a championship race I 'break out' my pack of Camels quickly, believe me! In no time at all I get a 'lift' and everything is all serene! It's a swell feeling—just to smoke a Camel and be your real self again! That's what I do whenever I feel played out, and Camels never get on my nerves."

Turn to Camels and learn the truth of the saying, "Get a lift with a Camel." Like to smoke steadily? Smoke as much as you wish! Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS than any other popular brand. They do not get on the nerves.

Try this pleasant and convenient way of ironing out fatigue and increasing vibrant energy.
