GOVERNMENT CONSIDERS GIGANTIC CROP LOAN

Supply Control Plan To Leave Up To Planters

MODEL MOVE AFTER LATE LOAN PLAN

Pegging of Prices of Cotton and Corn Viewed As Success By Farm Administration; Proposals Would Sell Tobacco When Price Reaches 15 Cents; Farmers Will be Assisted in Holding Crops

Washington, D. C., Aug. 7.—A gigantic crop loan which would leave control of 1935 supplies in the hands of farmers who grow them is hatching in the Farm Administration.

Modeled after this year's corn and cotton loans the plan will call for government loans on a wide range of their crops. There will be stipulation that supplies must be sold when prices go to a certain point.

Last year the government advanced farmers 10 cents a pound on stored cotton and 45 cents a bushel on corn sealed in cribs or warehouses.

This pegged prices at those levels and officials say the plan was a success. As prices advanced beyond those levels recently farmers began selling crops, paying off loans and taking profit. The farmers were continuously assured of those prices and the government was sure of recouping its investments as long as the price stayed at above the loan value.

In the case of cotton, the plan said it must be sold when the price reached 15 cents. This, officials said, prevents the price from rising too far, since the flow to market when the cotton reaches that point will tend toward stabilization.

The Farm Administration declared the plan will assist farmers in holding their crops instead of selling at harvest time when marketings are ordinarily heavy and prices consequently low.

Tobacco Men Will Meet At Oxford Farm

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 7.—(AP)—Tobacco men, plant topologists and members of the staff of the United States Department of Agriculture will open a three-day meeting at Oxford tomorrow to study tobacco growing.

The gathering will be held at the tobacco test farm of the State Department of Agriculture with interested persons from the two Carolinas, Georgia, Virginia and the Federal Department expected to attend. C. B. Williams, chairman of the tobacco research committee and head of the North Carolina State College agronomy department, said today the first day will be devoted to discussion of the best cropping system for tobacco and the best method of control of blue mold.

Trips to observe tobacco control methods in the various tobacco producing sections will be made.

CERRO GORDO STORE ROBBERD EARLY SUNDAY

Cerro Gordo, N. C., Aug. 7.—Town and county officers in several North and South Carolina counties last night were asked to be on the watch for three young negroes who are alleged to have robbed the Williamson Department Store here early Sunday morning. Entrance to the building was gained by the use of keys, giving evidence that the robbers were experienced in their work. Eight or ten suits of clothes were taken along with a large quantity of silks and other fancy cloth, although an accurate estimate of the total loss has not been arrived at by the management. The loss is not expected to exceed $300.

200 MINERS ARE TRAPPED IN LENZ MINE

Lenz, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Two hundred miners were trapped today in the 1,000-foot level of a coal mine where they were imprisoned yesterday by a group of twenty P. Lish miners protesting the discharge of two comrades.

The group blocked the galleries and air, water and electricity were cut off entirely, paralyzing the mine.

A foreman was descended into the shaft last night to negotiate for relief was also held below. Heavy police guard surrounded the shaft, but communications ceased at 10 p. m. yesterday.

Men Imprisoned in Reprisal Move by Polish Workmen Over Discharge

FOREST FIRE WARDENS HERE

Forest Fire Wardens from Districts 4 and 5, involving around ten to twelve counties in this part of the State, were holding a get-together meeting at the courthouse here today with high State forest fire official in attendance.

The meeting, which began this morning, was scheduled to go through the day. It will be featured by several talks with the main speaker being State Forest Fire Warden W. C. McCormick of Raleigh.

Discussion of the forest fire situation as it affects the two districts will be one of the highlights of the session, and was expected to result in closer co-operation of the wardens in their effort to reduce the annual loss resulting from forest conflagrations.

L. A. Carter, of Windsor, and F. L. Hooker, of New Bern, are chief wardens of the two districts represented here today.

REGULATIONS FOR NEW POOL FIXED TODAY

Swimming Pool Committee Works Out Rates and Hours for The Opening

Greenville's municipal swimming pool will be formally thrown open to the public tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, it was made known by the committee today.

Bath houses, however, will be opened at 12 o'clock to give the city ship an opportunity to look over the plant prior to the formal opening. The main entrance to the pool will be on Cotanch Street at Model School site, affording ample parking space for patrons.

At a meeting this morning the swimming pool committee decided on the following regulations for the pool:

Swimming prices by the hour, starting promptly on the hour: Five cents for all children up to and including twelve years old; 10 cents for all persons 13 years or over.

After opening tomorrow the pool will observe the following hours for all week days: 7:00 a. m. to noon; 2:00 to 6:00 p. m.; 7:00 to 11:00 p. m. Sunday: Open 1:00 p. m. continuously to 8:00 p. m. Closed for one hour: 8:00 to 9:00. Re-opens 9:00 to 11:00.

Children using the pool at night must be accompanied by parents. The mayor left a sick bed this morning to attend the meeting of the committee, and at the time set for the gathering he was the only one present. However, it was said the committee would get together later in the day.

Although still unwell, the mayor was anxious to get plans for the swimming pool outlined completely today, and that was the reason he went contrary to the advice of his physician to remain in bed regardless of pressing business. The mayor was sent home Saturday suffering from a severe attack of malaria.

TOBACCO CROP ABOUT HOUSED

Pitt Planters Turning Their Eyes to August 23, Date For Market Opening

With 95 per cent of their crop already housed, Pitt County tobacco growers today were turning their eyes toward August 23, the date set for the opening of this great leaf tobacco market.

K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales of the local market, who has visited virtually every tobacco-growing section of Eastern North Carolina, said today farmers were pushing their work toward completion and would have the entire crop in the house ready for marketing in ample time for the market opening.

The crop this year will be smaller because of the Federal reduction of acreage campaign, but it was hoped the shortage of poundage will be made up for improvement in prices.

Growers have been greatly encouraged by the favorable prices evident at the opening of the Georgia market and were looking forward with eager anticipation to the opening here and the accompanying jingle of money in their pockets.

Keeping step with progress of the planters, business houses were on the eve of their annual rush. Tremendous stocks of goods were being placed on shelves in anticipation of the pick-up of business always noted after the opening of the market. Farmers spend huge sums for home and farm needs when they market their tobacco and this season was expected to the general rule.

The courthouse custodian at Columbus, Kansas, reported that when he shut the water off at the nozzle of a garden hose, a woodpecker drilled a hole in the tubing so birds could bathe.

Long 'Sore At Him' Gov. Allen Asserts

Gov. O. K. Allen (above) of Louisiana says that Senator Huey Long is "sore at him" because he would not dismiss the national guards he called out in the fight between Long and Mayor T. STAGE SET FOR OPENING POOL ON TOMORROW

Final Plans Whipped Into Shape For Christening Municipal Project

Plans virtually had been completed today for opening of the municipal swimming pool tomorrow at 2 p. m. It was made known today by the swimming pool committee.

Finishing touches were being put on the pool today, paraphernalia was being gotten into place and when tomorrow afternoon rolls around everything will be ready to receive the hundreds of people expected to take their first plunge in the pool.

It had not been fully determined today whether there will be any formal exercises in connection with the opening of the pool, but Mavor R. C. Flanagan, who has been advised by his physician to rest as much as possible, but should his condition improve, it is more than likely the mayor will do a little bit of speaking, telling the public something about the trials and tribulations of the swimming pool committee in finally getting the pool completed.

Representatives of the city government were to Raleigh today to make final arrangements for financing the completion of construction on the pool.

The pool, with splendid filtering plant, bath houses, wading pool and adequate life-saving equipment, is one of the finest in this part of the State. Along with the culvert built in close proximity, the pool project was originally estimated to cost $29,000. During the last few days, however, the aid-men were told it would be impossible to complete the project without an additional $5,000.

With the citizenship clamoring for completion of the pool, the Board of Aldermen immediately made arrangements for completing the project and authorized Henry L. Rivers, engineer in charge, to continue work with a view to opening Wednesday afternoon as previously announced.

The opening of the pool will be something of a red-letter day in the life of the community, and hundreds of people, whether they swim or not, were expected to be on hand to watch the christening of the pool.

HELD FOR COURT ON CHARGE OF ABDUCTION

Wilmington, N. C., Aug. 7.—Louis Jones, young local man, was bound over to Superior Court under $500 bond after a hearing in Recorder's Court Saturday before Judge George L. Peschau, on a charge of abducting twelve-year-old Annie Mae Baker from her grandmother's home here.

Under cross-examination by Aaron Goldberg of defense counsel, the girl readily admitted she was not molested in any way by Jones on the trip to Marion, S. C., where the couple spent the night after finding that the purchase of a license left them without funds to secure the services of a preacher.

Thousands Mourn As Germany Buries Beloved Von Hindenburg

VICTIMS OF MINE BLAST ARE LOCATED

Seventeen Bodies Recovered From Stone Gap Mine No. 3 in Virginia Today

Derby, Va., Aug. 7.—(AP)—The all-night vigil at the Stone Gap Coke and Coal Company's mine No. 3, ended at 6:20 this morning when rescuers brought out the bodies of the last of the seventeen victims of yesterday's explosion.

As had been anticipated the bodies of nine workers who perished in a lateral gallery of the mine were found within a comparatively small area and their condition indicated they were nearer the center of the explosion than were the eight whose bodies were found yesterday a few hours after the blast.

With all workers who had been in the mine accounted for it was left deserted, although large fans continued to displace poisonous monoxide gas in its passages with fresh air.

An investigation to determine the cause of the tragedy was deferred until the air was cleared and funerals for the disaster victims had been held.

HEALTH BOARD TO CONSIDER NEW DIRECTOR

Resignation of Dr. R. S. McGeachy Will be Acted on Here Tomorrow

The Pitt County Board of Health was scheduled to meet at the courthouse tomorrow to consider the resignation of Dr. R. S. McGeachy, director of the department of health, who announced the latter part of last week he had accepted the position of health inspector in Halifax County.

The resignation was contained in a written statement and will be read to the Board at its regular monthly meeting.

Dr. McGeachy has been director of the Health Office for the last four years. Recently he brought to the attention of the commissioners the alarming mortality rate among children in the county, and declared he hoped the fight on this situation would continue after his departure.

The Board will also consider its budget tomorrow. Included in the budget is a request for $2,500 above last year's budget to enable the department to more fully combat the sanitary situation throughout the county. The high death rate among children was said by the Health Director to be caused by poor sanitary conditions existing in many of the homes. He placed the Pitt County infant death rate as the highest in the State.

The Board had not intimated who was being considered as a successor to Dr. McGeachy, but it was understood that a number of recommendations will be on tap when the question is taken up.

Late News Flashes

President In North Dakota. Devil's Lake, N. D., Aug. 7.—(AP)—President Roosevelt left his train here today shortly after 10 a. m. to make a motor inspection tour of the drought region and the site of the proposed Missouri diversion project.

Acquitted In Liquor Case.

Raleigh, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Herbert Redd of Augusta, Ga., charged with the illegal transportation and possession of 116 cases of assorted bonded liquor seized here Sunday, today was acquitted in city court by Judge Barnes after the state failed to prove that any of the liquor was disposed of in North Carolina.

Redd's companion, W. J. Mitchell and Harry Walker, charged with the same offense, were also acquitted.

Redd later was tried on a charge of operating his truck in North Carolina without a state license, and (Continued on Page Six)

BUDGET WORK DEFERRED BY COUNTY BOARD

Fixing of Tax Rate For The New Year Also Postponed Until Friday Night

The Board of County Commissioners met in regular monthly session here yesterday and decided to meet again Friday night to complete work on the budget and several other matters which could not be completed yesterday.

The budget was to have received final consideration yesterday but in view of the fact that figures could not be decided upon for one or two departments, final work was deferred until the adjourned meeting.

The tax rate for the new year was also discussed at considerable length and indications at this time point to an 85-cent rate for the present year compared with $3 the past year. The commissioners got within half a cent of the rate and then abandoned work until Friday night.

No action was taken on the proposal for employment of an all-time sanitary officer, or the increased appropriations for the County Health Department. More funds are sought by the health workers to combat the death rate among infants throughout the county as well as the general health situation.

The commissioners also heard of the resignation of Dr. R. S. McGeachy, director of the department of health, during consideration of the health department budget which provides for an increase of from $5,000 to $7,500. Dr. McGeachy has been with the department for four years and it was largely through his efforts that the movement looking to the improvement of infant mortality was brought to attention of the commissioners.

Increase of the tax rate is said to be due to increased appropriations to some of the departments and lack of any appreciable increase in valuations over last year.

RUSH WORK ON MARKET CARDS FOR GROWERS

Farm Department Also Announces Tax Free Cotton Allotments Are Ready

According to E. F. Arnold, County Agent, marketing cards and allotment cards, are being prepared for the twenty-six hundred farmers who signed tobacco contracts. Farmers have requested some seven or eight thousand allotment cards and the office is busy preparing these for the farmers. In spite of the fact that these cards are being prepared until 10 o'clock each night, it appears that it will take until around August 18 before they are ready for delivery. The Washington office requires that the acreage in these contracts be measured and compliance sheets furnished before market cards can be issued. However, every effort will be made to have marketing cards for every farmer in the county before the market opens August 23.

We are advised by the Farm Agent's Office that all farmers who were unable, for some reason or another, to sign a cotton contract, have an opportunity from now until Wednesday afternoon, of August 8, to apply, will find the local committee-men in their usual places in each township.

However, this should be done not later than Wednesday the 8th. At this time all committee-men are required to make their report to the Farm Agent's Office and the time for signing closed.

3 AMERICANS RESCUED BY JAP VESSEL

Two Women and Man Taken From Pacific Ocean After Their Ship is Wrecked

Tokyo, Aug. 7.—(AP)—The rescue of three Americans—two women and a man—who had drifted on the Pacific Ocean in their sailing vessel with its mast broken since June 24, was reported to the U. S. consulate today.

The consulate was informed that the Japanese surveying ship Koshu called at isolated Fey's Island, near Yaw, July 20, and rescued the three Americans who sailed from Santiago March 1.

The mast was carried away. Natives of the Minala Island rescued them from the sea.

The Koshu took the Americans and their vessels to Pelew.

The Americans said they wanted to repair the craft and continue on to Manila, but they had only $17.

About $300,000 will be sent in repair work on school buildings in the lower Rio Grande valley of Texas which were damaged by the 1933 hurricane.

HITLER LAUDS FINE WORK OF AGED WARRIOR

No Mention of Policies of Hitler Regime Made by New President; All Germany Turns Out to Pay Final Tribute to Former President; Hitler Says Hindenburg Opened Door to Nazism

Tannenberg, Germany, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Germany buried Paul Von Hindenburg in a shrine it holds sacred today after Adolf Hitler in an emotional eulogy at the bier said the late president opened the door to Nazism.

Brief and simple was the funeral as the old warrior-statesman has wished, but thousands of uniforms gave it a military atmosphere.

The body of the 86-year-old leader was placed to rest in one of the towers of the national war monument erected on the scene of Von Hindenburg's great triumph over the Russian army in 1914. Thousands of mourners were turned away. But the entire nation paused during the funeral hour in a farewell tribute to its revered leader.

Hitler as on yesterday at the memorial service of the Reichstag eulogized in glowing terms the man whose power he took over, but he failed to give the expected indications of his future policies.

"Von Hindenburg," said Hitler, "his voice trembling with emotion, opened the door to the representatives of Germany's resurgence," referring to his national socialist party.

Diplomats and high government officials were among those seated in the flat great court of the memorial. Everywhere was seen uniforms of various army detachments, the Nazi storm troops, the picked Schutz Staffel guards and Steh'jem, semi-military organization of va. veterans.

The coffin was placed in front of a slender tall cross of bronze. Hitler and the Rev. M. Dormann, Von Hindenburg's army chaplain, were the only speakers.

Just before the ceremony airplanes circled over the crowd of ten upon tens of thousands of people. Shortly before 8 a. m., three hours before the start of the ceremony, the side of the court of the national memorial was nearly filled. Two hours later everyone of the 6,000 seats inside were taken.

At conclusion of the brief inspiring service the body was taken to Von Hindenburg's tower where it will remain during the mourning period. Afterwards a permanent mausoleum will be built in the tower.

CHARLOTTE COUPLE INURED IN ACCIDENT

Charlotte, N. C., Aug. 7.—Mr. and Mrs. George Soule of 800 North Tyrone Street are in Mercy Hospital suffering from severe injuries received yesterday afternoon in an automobile wreck at the intersection of Poplar and Eleventh Streets.

The wreck occurred when the automobile occupied by the Soule family collided with that driven by Arthur Taylor of 1109 Fairmont Road, according to police report.

Taylor was going north on Poplar Street and the Soule machine was proceeding west on Eleventh when they collided. An ambulance was called from Z. A. Hovis & Sons, and the injured were taken to the hospital.

Attendants at Mercy said the three were resting fairly comfortable, but that the exact nature of their injuries had not been determined and could not be until X-ray pictures are taken. Mr. Soule appeared to be the most seriously hurt, hospital official said.

Dairymen in the Kansas City area estimated drought conditions made it necessary for three-fourths of them to haul water for their stock.

DRIVE CAREFULLY TODAY

KEEP COOL—Anybody can drive safely when everything goes all right, but the real test of a safe driver is how he acts when everything goes wrong. Try to keep cool and keep your temper at all times when you are driving. Try to develop a calm driving temperament. Don't attempt to drive when you are in an angry or nervous state of mind.

SPLIT MARRIAGE

by Katherine Hamilton Taylor

Chapter 25
SORE SPOT

THE subject so rasped his inflamed nerves that he could not lift as they spoke of it. Now he asked Marsha whether she would mind having coffee in the library.

"But of course not," she answered easily. He decided with a further tightening of a tension already too great, that she did not mind at all that after the divorce, their connection would be done for all long time. The fact still could and did torture him.

He rang for Bartholomew, who carried the tray to the library. Marsha settled before a black-marble grate in which a coal fire whispered and whimpered. Rain beat suddenly, steadily against the windows, which looked on that dismal court.

"Miserable day," Bob thought. He glanced down at her, sitting back and relaxed. He was normally reasonable, entirely fair; but now, he felt anger at the fact that she could sit so, while he was in hell!

"When do you want the divorce?" he asked sharply.

"Oh," she answered easily, and after a lift of shoulders, "why not let nature take its course? Then it will hatch when I've been on the Reno or Paris nest the proper number of months."

"I wish you did not have to be flippant," he flung out, "about this I happen to loathe it anyway!"

"What do you want me to be?" she asked, "and do?"

"I'm fool enough to be fond of dignity," he responded.

"But there is no dignity whatsoever in this situation," she pointed out, "nor in the personal habits of today. A man finds a woman to be considerably less than his dreams and he casts her off as he would a pair of old shoes that were mired by a bad day's play. Understand, I'm not asking you to keep me. I don't want to stay. She didn't want to stay now, she knew; that is, unless he wanted her to stay. At one desperate time she had felt differently about it, but that time was gone.

"And that rather gets me!" he admitted with a harsh, mirthless laugh; "I supposed you might think me half a sport, at least, because I did not try to hold you."

"But you did not want to hold me, did you?" she drawled, and it seemed, with ease, "Heavens!" she thought; feeling the pound of her heart.

"No," he responded and loudly.

"Well—" she murmured.

"All of which," he stated, "is useless and getting us no farther than we were last night and the night before. I say we drop the damned business. I beg pardon—" he ended quickly. She did not reply.

"WILL you live with your aunt?" he asked after the tick of the clock had become too assertive, and the flickering whisper of a fire had begun to make itself heard. He did not want that for her.

"I don't know. I don't know what I'll do."

"And it is none of my business," he added harshly.

"Well," she admitted judiciously, "I suppose it isn't, but inasmuch as I don't resent your interest why don't you allow yourself to gratify your idle curiosity?"

He didn't reply.

"I'm sorry," she said softly.

"For what?"

"For being unnecessarily flippant. I don't mean to be. I really want to help you, Bob. But sometimes my particular devil—" she stopped, shook her head and stared into the fire. He wondered what made her particular devil walk, as she wondered at the wickedness of women, and how a loving woman could want to hurt the man she loved, because he did not love.

"I think I must be off," she announced as she rose, "I have letters to write."

"I never knew a woman who wrote so many letters!" he complained irritably.

She did not seem to hear that; he stared tragically after her, and she did not turn her head to glance back at him.

Alone, Bob sat staring at the chair in which she always sat, while they were in the library, head thrown back, sometimes an arm raised and back of it.

"Why," he had questioned, early in their knowledge of each other, "do you almost always throw your head back, dear?"

"Because," she answered lazily, "one of my first adorers admired the line of my throat. It is beautiful, and that realization has made the habit."

He knew it was beautiful, and he knew all of her many lovelinesses. But it was the thought of those depths he had glimpsed only once or twice—through her kiss on his home-coming, her gently tender, comforting hands—the thought of those that made the idea of leaving an ache.

He seemed to see her as if she were still in the chair on the opposite side of the fireplace; to feel her eyes, which sometimes held a bitter hurt he could not analyze, her lips which curled occasionally with a faint, and also analyzed scorn.

The problem rose.

Was it fair to her, who could not understand or sense the depravity of a chap like Geoff, fair to her not to protest? He began his pacing again. Should he ask her to come down to Mexico for a year to visit him? He'd make the proposition clear, so clear she wouldn't be afraid. And certainly she'd trust him. A year while she thought it over.

And they would play around together, and she might like some things about the place. He felt certain she would like Mexico City. And they could go there once a month and perhaps oftener. And perhaps, after the year was up, she might like some things about him.

HE brought himself up abruptly. And the hard lines in his face which had been dispelled by dreamings, came back with cruel force.

"I must not let myself imagine things!" he reminded himself half aloud; "I must not hope again. I can't stand another cropper!"

He settled to take a magazine from a near-by table. Dull things, magazines. No, he must not let himself go to dreaming about taking her back.

They could ride down there and she would like the scenery. And perhaps the boys would entertain her . . . they were an amusing lot, and they would certainly vie with each other to do it! They'd all go utterly mad about her and he would have to make her understand that she must not hurt them.

Applicable to Marsha, that Eastern maxim, "Truly it is written one precious woman will cause more strife than twelve armed men can quell." He would make her understand and promise not to hurt any of the boys by playing with them. She did keep her word.

But she probably wouldn't, for one minute, consider going, even if he could bring himself to tell her that he felt she should test Tarleton for a year, before casting her lot with his.

A year with her for himself, thus. But, he realized, it was her good he was thinking of first.

They could play cards. Alexander's contract was unusually good. No, she didn't like cards. What was he doing, planning so? He must not let himself go!

She would miss a piano; well, he'd have a piano towed up from Mexico City. He had managed harder jobs, he would manage that; because without a piano she would be lost.

Then at night they could have music—he loved her voice, a voice at which she laughed—and he could stand near while she played and sang those little French songs that sounded as if they must be very wicked.

Perhaps sometimes she would be glad to see him when he got back in the evening. Perhaps she'd say, "Bob, I'll never love you as I do Geoff, but I like you and I know now, I don't like him." Somehow it did sound quite like her, and if she ever came to saying that, he'd never let her go!

And he'd have an elaborate suite added to the east side of the place—it would get the sun in the morning and miss it after four in the afternoon—and they could probably rig up a drainage system that wouldn't be bad, and a tin tub that would drain . . . Clark would do that.

Clark who had done wonders, with raw labor, some pipes and his head, for another woman who preferred Mexico and a man to New York without him.

Marsha's frailness, tomorrow, troubles Bob.

Hens that are fed a small amount of cod liver oil, about 2 per cent of their ration, produce eggs containing more copper and iron.

Himalayan Lakes have fluctuated fifteen to twenty feet in depth through minor climatic changes in the last one hundred years.

Recent experiments seem to indicate that tooth decay can be at least partially prevented by the proper diet.

CLUBS PLAN TO 'BOOST' CITY

Rotes, Kiwanians, Tobacco Board and Chamber to Take Part in Program

BY WYATT BROWN

A huge "Boost Greenville" meeting is to be held by the leading local civic clubs—Rotary Club, Kiwanis Club, Tobacco Board of Trade, and Chamber of Commerce. The Rotary Club voted unanimously last night at their regular weekly meeting to cooperate with and join in the occasion. K. W. Cobb, Jasper Winslow, and Howard McGinnis were appointed as the Rotary committee to join with Bruce Stagg, Guy Smith, and George Woodward of the Kiwanis Club.

"Tick" Pool, manager, and ten members of the Greenville baseball club, were guests of the Rotarians last night. As the "Rotes," with their delicate appetites (?) topped with the tempting viandes, they looked with envious eyes upon the voracious appetites of the young athletes—a guest with a good appetite is a joy to any host.

The Reverend Potts, who is fellow-boarder with the team, told the Rotarians what fine clean fellows make up the Greenville nine. Quoting John J. McGraw's advice to him, Reverend Potts advised the Rotarians that winning baseball was 65 per cent luck, and that since Greenville has had such few "breaks" so far, one could not but help to look for Greenville's share of luck in the near future. Reverend Potts paid the local ball club a high compliment for their having avoided the playing of Sunday baseball to help the ball treasury. He bespoke co-operation from Greenvillians for this team that has behaved so admirably.

Evelyn Hart, who is member of the staff of the swimming pool, also appeared last night at the Rotarians' meeting and told them about pools, advantages of our pool, and how rules must be regarded—in fact, she discussed pools from the time Aquius Claudius in 300 B. C. started building baths in Rome up to the use of the modern Schaeffer method of resuscitation. Miss Hart said that swimming is a science, and has some exacting rules, but that there was lots of fun and gaiety mixed with sport and healthful advantages.

She told how the local pool has not only been designed by expert architects to satisfy requirements of the State Department of Health to reduce the possibility of disease and water contamination, but has included a foot-bath calculated to prevent the nowadays prevalent foot diseases.

From hearing Miss Hart one gathers that the pool is well staffed. Two of the life-guards are graduates of the Red Cross Life-Saving Corps School—Eric Tucker, the manager, and Miss Hart. They both went to Brevard this summer and took an intensive course in water front safety and first aid, not to mention diving contests and pageants. But Miss Hart said she wanted above all things to emphasize safety which means regarding rules strictly by all. For life-guards cannot do it all. One should not go in when over-heated.

By JOHN SELBY

England has anyone who goes into the subject can find out, an amazing divorce law. So secure a divorce in England (not Scotland; things are different there) one of the other of the parties must have broken the seventh commandment. But if both parties have broken it, divorce is impossible.

A. P. Herbert believes this is all nonsense, and to do his share toward correcting it, he has written one of the wittiest books out of England this summer. He calls it "Holy Deadlock" (Doubleday Doran).

John and Mary Adams are the victims. Both are a decent sort; each has tried his best to make a go of a partnership that was obviously foredoomed to failure. After eight years, each sees a partner who seems to offer what each wants a partner to offer. John agrees to furnish grounds upon which Mary may divorce him.

So he goes to an agency which specializes in furnishing grounds as painlessly as possible. His experiences from that moment on are very well worth recording, and Mr. Herbert has used the right touch.

Thumbnail Reviews

"Defy the Foul Fiend," by John Collier (Knopf): The somewhat ribald and very talky adventures of a young Englishman loose upon the world without proper preparation—without and preparation at all, forsooth.

"The Woman He Chose," by J. H. Wallis (Dutton): Another of Mr. Wallis' mysteries, competent in every department, if not inspired in any.

"Dynamite," by Louis Adamic (Viking): A new edition of Mr. Adamic's too-little-known story of labor troubles in this country, duly brought down to date and more readable today than it ever was.

"Blue Plate Special," by Damon Runyan (Stokes): A collection of Runyan's short pieces, some of his best; the one about the chap who sold tickets for a football game between the "Yales" and the "Harvards" is here.

King George's Head The 1-shilling stamp is the only one which does not include the inset head of King George. Instead it has a close-up of a sea gull on its nest.

The group of uprights, the designs for which are identical, include, besides King George's head, a map of Ascension. However, as part of the border significant of the use of the wireless for communication to and from the island, aerial masts have been worked in showing part of the antenna wires. These four stamps are: 1-penny green and black, 2-penny orange and black, 3-penny olive and black, and 2 shillings, 6 pence lavender and black.

More Duck Dope The recently introduced duck hunter's stamp has been productive of quite a few queries as to whether it is possible to include it within a collection. The answer to that is found in a questionnaire of the Department of Agriculture, which among other things, says in effect: "Just because you own a duck stamp does not mean you are under an obligation to shoot a duck."

The stamp, as has been explained, is a $1 tax to help in developing a wild animal home life and is affixed to each duck hunter's license. Apparently plenty of them will be available to the collector in an unused condition, but bona fide users ones no doubt will be rather scarce.

By HERBERT PLUMMER Washington, D. C.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's decision to invite industrial producers to Washington in the fall for a conference on decentralization of industry promises to move into the limelight another alphabetical agency of the "new deal"—the FSHC.

FSHC—Federal subsistence homesteads corporation—is one of the lesser known of "new deal" agencies. It may be the means, however, of Mr. Roosevelt's realizing one of the most cherished dreams of his administration.

It was set up under the national industrial recovery act in exactly 84 words to the purpose of "aiding the redistribution of the balance of population in industrial centers." Its capital stock was fixed by Congress at $25,000,000.

The interest displayed by Mrs. Roosevelt in the projects thus far sponsored by FSHC, particularly the one at Reedsville, W. Va., has attracted some attention to the work. The forthcoming conference here, within the next two months, however, promises to focus the attention of the whole country on FSHC.

Long-Term Plan The President's plan for decentralization of industry is essentially a long-term idea. It is estimated a period from ten to twenty years will be required to persuade industrialists to move their factories from crowded cities to the countryside.

From the time it was created FSHC deliberately has proceeded on a small experimental basis. Many difficulties have been encountered ranging from apathy on the part of those who would be benefited, to selfishness on the part of individual promoters.

Something like four and one-half million dollars in projects have been submitted, but many have been found unsuitable. A total of forty-eight projects in various States have been approved.

One is centered in the steel district around Youngstown, O. Here the homesteads are scattered, instead of being placed in a compact group as at Reedsville, in the hope

Dusty Wings By MARY GRAHAM BONNER An automobile had come dashing around the curve, and suddenly seeing Top Notch, the driver had stepped on the brake with full force, pulled the emergency brake, and in doing so on the dusty road had skidded into a rut.

The skidding of the car had saved Top Notch's life, for it had all taken place so quickly that he had not known what was happening.

At first Top Notch thought he was killed. The terrific noise, the shock, the cloud of dust and his fall had made him feel as though everything had stopped in one startling moment and that there would never be any more life for him.

But now he realized he was alive. He picked himself up, and moved about to see if he really was all right. He felt his wings, he reached over and got his little mirror that he carried under one wing. He looked at himself. He was a dusty, shabby looking rooster but not a bit of him had been harmed.

He got up and cackled angrily to the people in the car: "You should be ashamed of yourselves—coming around a corner like that. You think because you've got a big, strong engine in your car that you have all the power in the world and can go running around, frightening creatures and running risks. "Why can't you enjoy the beautiful country? It wasn't made to be dashed through. Why are the trees so pretty, the wild flowers so sweet, the brooks so cheery if only to be hurried by? And now I'm a dusty sight."

That particularly annoyed Top Notch.

Tomorrow—"Stately Top Notch"

Washington Oversees Work on each project is watched from Washington. Federal employees supervise everything and expenditures are controlled rigidly. Contracts for homestead deeds are made directly with FSHC.

The President's plan and that of FSHC officials, if the experiment proves successful, is to take it out of the $25,000,000 laboratory set up under NIRA and turn it into a huge and far-reaching national project.

In that event the government would provide the guiding hand only. Large governmental expenditures are not contemplated. Loans might be made to industry to aid on decentralization, but they would be loans and not Federal grants.

Movement of Property The Last Few Days Not as Active As Previously

The movement of real estate was not quite as lively as usual in Pitt county the last several days and records in the office of the register of deeds this morning showed only ten transfers had been filed for registration.

The next important deal was from George N. Edwards and wife to W. O. McGiboney, trustee, for consideration of $2,800.

The remainder of the transactions followed: Interstate Tr. Corp., to N. C. Jr. S. K. Land Bank, $1,000.

of power. The Republicans had plenty of it when they were the majority party. In each of the four instances when Republicans were voted out of the White House since the Civil War a party split had a good deal to do with the party defeat.

Of course the Republicans are far from united now, but that is old story. The noteworthy thing about the present Democratic factionalism is that it dispenses any pretension that the party had been reunited completely and freed of internal dissension under the leadership of Mr. Roosevelt.

Official announcement was made today that the swimming pool will open tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock. This is a long-awaited-for event and while much of the summer is already passed there will still be enough hot weather for the pool to be of much service and benefit this year. The pool will fill a long felt need in Greenville and no doubt tomorrow's opening will draw a tremendous crowd.

Despite the law against and the dangers attached to the practice, there are still some children under the sixteen years age limit driving automobiles here. Parents should see to it that children are not permitted to drive and if the parents do not see to it, then it is up to the officers to enforce the law.

HERE'S HOW

(News and Observer)

Faithfully by way of recording that something may be done about slot machines, number rackets and all the other devices of a vicious and fraudulent business in human imposture. It is well enough to see down a piece of news from Philadelphia.

There the sentence of an evil which took a tremendous toll from the innocent and the credulous, was met by the conviction of a special court which last week adjourned its second term with the conviction and sentence of 21 defendants.

Most of these were engaged in the number racket. Sentences ranged from 30 days to one year, depending upon the prisoner's willingness to reveal the identities of the higher-ups.

And this strikes us as the way to proceed. There is little point in levying a petty fine on the little agencies of a racket, which is sufficiently profitable to be impervious to fines. A good stout sentence will serve nicely to indicate to those who get a relatively small part of the very large proceeds from the business, that they are engaged in a dangerous game. It may serve, also, to establish the trail to the big promoter who is carefully concealed behind a network of minor operators.

It was revealed in the progress of the trials that some of the operators were dealing with children. And whether or not the players are children in age, a casual survey of the racket as practiced anywhere indicates numerous cases in which the victims are both wives and children who are entitled to protection by such law-enforcing agencies as there are from an open and shabby defiance of the statutes.

It cannot be emphasized too strongly that the cure is not more law, but a determination to use the law that already is on the books.

POLITICS at random

By BRYON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Development of violent factionalism always is a prime danger to dominant political parties, and the present situation of the Democratic party is no exception.

In several important States Democratic prospects in the 1934 campaign have been complicated measurably by the appearance of factions where six months ago all seemed harmonious.

One result is that, justifiably or not, the Republicans are hopeful today in localities where six months ago they saw no hope.

Senatorial candidates have, in most instances, provided the cause of division, or else become the vehicles for deep-seated disputes over local party control.

It is to the harmonizing of some of these situations that Democratic leaders now are addressing major attention. Upon their success may depend in large measure the party strength in the next session of Congress.

To date the results have been rather difficult to analyze. Democratic national headquarters has followed the usual course and announced publicly a complete neutrality as between rival senatorial candidates.

Yet, in several instances, local politicians have claimed definite administration support, have hinted very broadly to the voters that Mr. Roosevelt wanted them nominated, and have gone unimproved from Washington.

In Ohio, West Virginia, Indiana, Texas and a number of other States, candidates have been put into the field under circumstances which, on their face, set up a presumption of administration favor.

With Farley's Blessing

In the case of West Virginia, National Chairman Farley even went so far as to say in a public statement that candidate Clavin Switzer was one of the original Roosevelt men, and would, if nominated and elected, be a source of administration strength in the Senate.

Such a direct declaration by a national chairman is unusual, and it becomes even more surprising when it is recalled that Mr. Farley also is a member of the Roosevelt cabinet and recognized everywhere as a political spokesman of the White House.

His action will increase greatly national enmity over the outcome of the West Virginia nomination contest.

In Indiana the candidate who posed as the "Roosevelt candidate" was not nominated. In Texas the reverse was true.

Of course once nominated, every candidate immediately affirms his support for the administration, but it will be interesting when the nominations are complete to see how many really owed their selection to "word from Washington." "Factions Plague 'Ins" It is notorious that the party in power has, normally, far more factional difficulty than the party out

LOCALS AGAIN DEFEATED BY TAR BABIES

Tarboro defeated Greenville 6-5 yesterday in a play-off of a postponed Coastal Plain League game. Great relief pitching by Olin Perritt, Tarboro manager and utility star, featured the contest. Skipper started on the slab for the visitors but weakened in the fifth and held the locals hitless over the rest of the route. Skipper had been reached for eight hits.

David Shihl pitched the full distance to the Greensies. He gave nine hits, several of the extra-base variety, and the visitors made their likes at timely stages. The Greenville made three errors.

There was much bickering by players on both clubs and fans—over the umpire's rulings on alleged balls and strikes.

Richardson caught for Tarboro; Bostic caught for Greenville.

Ayden Will Appear Here Wednesday

By D. BUG
Well, tomorrow is another half-holiday and few people will have to wonder where to go for amusement, because there will be a real hot baseball game on the local lot.

Amid regal ceremonies a spry "doodle bug" will be buried under third base sometime between dusk and dawn tonight and with the assistance of this spry little insect, things are bound to happen when our runners slam a foot on the third sack.

Ayden will be our opponents and the game will be the first of a straight four-game series with them. These four games will also be the deciding factor in our race for the top of the ladder, and if we bring home the bacon it will be nearly assured that Greenville baseball fans will be treated to the post-season series battle.

Our pitchers are in trim and air-tight ball is promised those who attend.

Remember that game Saturday—well, wasn't it fast and furious?—but that was only a sample of what will happen at tomorrow's half-holiday game, and both Ayden and Greenville will be out there fighting to win. No slow ball stuff, but hit, torrid pitching, sizzling, batting, lightning tesses from all corners of the field, and no doubt, some exciting base plays.

Be out there, support the boys, and in doing so, have a bunch of fun for yourselves. You can almost be guaranteed that your Adam's apples will be swallowed more than once, and that the game will be so interesting that the bleacher seats will feel like over-stuffed easy chairs.

Well, so long until tomorrow; we'll see you at the game.

SHERIFF UNAIDED CAPTURES OUTLAW

Sylva, N. C., Aug. 7.—(AP)—Wesley Bryson, alias Dick Bryson, of Cashier's Valley, Jackson County, who was declared to be an outlaw after allegedly threatening the lives of the men, was arrested at his home in Cashier's Valley at 9 o'clock this morning by Sheriff John J. Maney, of Jackson County.

For two months Sheriff Maney had been playing a lone hand in the search for Bryson. At dawn today he went alone to Bryson's home, walked to the front door, and found Bryson sitting in a room. Bryson calmly told his wife good-bye, and without any show of resistance, accompanied the sheriff to Sylva where he was lodged in jail.

Sheriff Maney said Bryson had told him that he had been in Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia for the past two or more months and had returned only recently.

CONTINUE SEARCH FOR BODY OF DROWNED BOY
Washington, N. C., Aug. 7.—The body of Clifton Disharon, sixteen-year-old boy who lost his life Sunday afternoon while in swimming below the Norfolk Southern trestle, has not been located up to this time.

A large party of searchers worked with tongs, nets and other means until late Sunday night and renewed their efforts again early today. Six sticks of dynamite were used in an effort to dislodge the body but this failed.

Through the efforts of Congressman Lindsay Warren, the Pamlico Coast Guard cutter, has been enlisted in the search. It arrived here late yesterday afternoon and began the search.

TROOPS GUARD CHANCELLERY

This ominous-looking armored-car outside the chancellery in Vienna testifies to the dramatic events taking place inside as Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss lay dying from gunshot wounds inflicted by Austrian Nazis who seized him and members of his cabinet. New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 7.—(AP)—The stock market tried to rally but ran quickly into fresh selling and then turned dull. By the early afternoon the market was sluggish and prices were mixed. The day's news failed to bring any fresh impetus to the securities. Bonds again were soggy, notably rails, but maintained a better undertone than yesterday. Grains encountered profit-taking after a recent advance by cotton, rubber, sugar and hides. There was much more interest in speculative quarters in commodities than in securities. One source of selling of the rails was said to have come from speculators who were long of commodities and had sold rails short as a hedge. Raw sugar duties touched two cents before a payment of duty for the first time since 1930, and bar silver pushed up 47 cents an ounce for the first time since late 1929. Transfers were 700,000 shares.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady, ten to 13 points advance on Liverpool cables, lower dollar exchange and continued dry weather in the Western belt. The opening demand carried December up to 13.33, rice held steady in a narrow range in the early morning and the market at the end of the first half-hour showed advances of about 12 to 79 points. The early buying movement carried the market up to 13.33 for December, or 15 points above yesterday's closing quotations, closing within 13 points of the uly high level. The demand then tapered off somewhat as prices reacted partially later in the morning.

Push Long Injunction. New Orleans, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Court action to force the state to demobilize the national guards, called out in the bitter factional dispute between Senator Huey Long and Mayor Walmesley was blocked today through continued inability of the sheriff to serve Adjutant-General Raymond Fleming with a summons. Hearing in the injunction proceedings brought by members of the Walmesley faction was continued until August 14.

Senator Long who has been served in the demobilization suit and who has been missing for three days, did not appear in the courtroom this morning but his attorney, Mayor Walmesley, was on hand. District Judge Nat Bond ruled the hearing would not proceed until General Fleming had been served with a citation and temporary restraining order issued by the court last Friday.

Meanwhile gunfire broke out in the armed political dispute early today after a serious comic show of armed strength for more than a week.

A Washington Day Book

By HERBERT PLUMMER Washington, D. C.—(AP)—The warning sounded by Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, that a "pay day" is coming for the huge expenditures of the "new deal" fits in perfectly with the line of strategy now being mapped out by the Republican high command. "Regimentation," "surrender of constitutional rights," "abandonment of principles on which the country was founded and has prospered in the past" have been favorite themes of Republican politicians attacking the present administration, but everybody was aware of the fact elections are not won on such issues.

The question of who will pay the bills in the end and where the money is coming from is the kind of appeal calculated to make those who cast votes sit up and take notice.

Democrats Have Answer Representative Snell of New York, Republican leader of the House, began talking on this subject as far back as the close of the special session when the administration first inaugurated its program of vast recovery expenditures. Snell warned of what he described as the "new deal's" "trick system" of bookkeeping—separating actual expenditures for running the government from those for recovery.

G. O. P. spokesmen in steadily increasing numbers since have "viewed with alarm" the billions being pumped out of the Treasury for recovery and are demanding to know how they are to be repaid. The Democrats have an answer ready.

Sums Under Estimates They point to the fact that the administration is spending far less money for recovery than first planned. President Roosevelt himself stated at the outset he expected to spend seven and one-half billions in 1934. At the close of the fiscal year less than four and one-half billions had been spent. The administration is particularly proud of the fact that of the total $6,452,846,304 expended by the RFC since the corporation was set up in the Hoover administration more than three and one-half billions represent loans against which collateral has been placed. Holders of these loans pay more interest to the government than it pays the bondholders. RFC ended the fiscal year showing a net profit of more than twenty-one million dollars.

MISS MITTIE WOOTEN IS KILLED IN CRASH

Tarboro, N. C., Aug. 4.—Miss Mittie Doris Wooten's popular young woman, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Wooten, of Macesfield, was killed instantly at 11 o'clock last night near Pinetops when the automobile in which she was riding was driven off the road by another automobile. In the automobile with Miss Wooten were Bennie Bell, of Fountain, and Norman Moseley, and Leslie Webb, of Macesfield, who were painfully but not seriously injured in the accident. The automobile crashed into a tree. Moseley and Webb suffered cuts and bruises. The driver of the automobile who drove the party off the road did not stop his car, it was stated. Miss Wooten is survived by her parents; two sisters, Mrs. Ray Felton, Mrs. Henry Ellis, and two brothers, Amos and Lewis Wooten, all of Macesfield.

BIT BY COPPERHEAD SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

Ayden, N. C., Aug. 4.—Z. V. Whitford, of Ayden, manager of the J. R. Turnage farms, who was bitten by a copperhead snake yesterday morning, is much improved and expected to leave the hospital today. Mr. Whitford was near Bridgeton when the accident happened. He thought at first that it was a brier scratch on his hand and went to a nearby store for some simple treatment. In a short while the wound started stinging and his arm began to swell and he and a colored man went back to the place where he was hurt and found and killed the large snake. Realizing the seriousness of the bite, he got someone to take him to the hospital in New Bern, and on the way he became first blind, then unrecognizable, and remained so until late in the night.

WASHINGTON YOUTH IS DROWNED IN RIVER

Washington, N. C., Aug. 7.—Clifton Dishron, aged 16, was drowned yesterday afternoon at 4:30 near Grandpa's Island, located in the center of Pamlico River across from the Norfolk Southern trestle. Young Dishron, with three other boys of about his age, were preparing to go in swimming from the island when a wave flew in the boat and caused three of the boys to dive in the water sooner than they expected. While attempting to swim about 25 yards from the boat to the island Dishron either suffered a cramp or was not a good enough swimmer to make the distance. Claude Dudley, one of the party, heard him call for help and tried to reach him, but Dishron had gone under three times before he could be reached. He was a son of Mrs. Walter Dishron of Seventh Street, and a popular member of the 11th grade of the local schools.
