GOVERNMENT SEEKS TO BOOST COMMODITY PRICES

Plan Loans On Crops As Means Of Raising Prices

PARITY PRICE PICKED FROM OTHER YEARS

Standard Taken From Golden Age of Agriculture in 1909 to 1914; Measure to be Submitted to Congress Would Allow AAA to Extend Spending to Crops Other Than Cotton and Corn

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—(AP)—The AAA which has set the farm prices of 1909 to 1914 as a goal to shoot at may seek to use widespread loans on commodities as its ammunition. The prices of the pre-war years, the relatively golden age of American agriculture, were called "parity prices."

Recent moves to increase cotton loans to 12 cents and extend corn loans to January 1, 1934, were regarded as a bridge between the present loan policy and the new one to be included in the seed storage bill to be submitted to the next Congress.

The measure would allow the AAA to extend its spending to other crops than corn and cotton, officials believe.

By lifting the loan value of commodities gradually while maintaining production control to prevent surpluses, some officials think the government could create a level of farm income throughout the year which would restore parity.

There is some dissension on the point in the AAA. Some officials say the plan resembles closely the operation of the Federal Farm Board. Proponents answer that it differs from the Farm Board in that farmers retain actual possession of their crops and that production control is assurance that prices can be maintained at or near the loan values.

LEAF PRICES OPEN HIGH ON OTHER MARKETS

Average of Above $25 Per Hundred Report Ed From Other Parts of the Belt

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 23.—(AP)—Prices rocketed to record-breaking height today as the sing-song of the auctioneer began in the world's greatest tobacco belt.

From points scattered along the bright belt came reports of light breaks and prices ranging from $22 to $27 per hundred pounds. Prices for some grades doubled and tripled opening figures for last year. Even at the opening day prices which are always bettered as the sale season progresses, North Carolina farmers would receive roughly $100,000,000 for their crop, or about $2,000,000 more than they got for the crop of 100,000,000 pounds larger last year.

At Wilson 500,000 pounds were on the floors, bringing an indicated average of $25 a hundred as the sales progressed, or 150 per cent above 1933 prices.

Prices for the lower grades ranged from $10 to $25 at Rocky Mount as compared with $3 to $8 last year. First sales there indicated an average of around $25, the highest in ten years. The floors held 400,000 pounds.

There, as at Wilson, 750,000 pound breaks have been infrequent in past years.

Wendell had 175,000 pounds on its floors with the average price for early sales running between $22 and $24 a hundred as compared with the opening day average of $11.50 in 1933.

Buyers paid an average of $27.31 for the first 9,950 pounds sold at Goldsboro. At Tarboro the average ranged near $25 with between 75,000 and 100,000 pounds on the floors.

Offerings, available reports indicated, were largely of first and second primings, with a few baskets of top grades running as high as

CIVIL COURT QUILTS WORK

Around 25 Cases Disposed of In Three Days Session Here This Week

The one-week term of civil court which convened here Monday morning, caught up with its calendar yesterday at 5 o'clock and adjourned.

A one-week term of criminal court will convene here Monday morning with Judge R. Hunt Parker, of Roanoke Rapids, again on the bench.

Court officials said today that around 25 cases were disposed of during the three-day sitting, the majority of them having gone the compromise route. The calendar continued about forty cases.

Three cases were completed during the closing session, one being comprised another non-suit, and the other receiving decision by the jury.

One of the most unusual cases heard here in many a year was that of Robert King and others vs. A. C. Fornes and R. W. Gorman. There were two separate cases, one against Gorman and the other against Fornes, but they were consolidated and heard as one.

It involved a house and two lots in the vicinity of Gorman's Warehouse in the western part of the city and the property automatically went to the University of North Carolina when it was established that its original owner, Abram Mills, was born in illegitimacy, had no legal descendant, and died without issue.

When Mills died, his wife, Amanda Mills, under the law, obtained a life estate. When she died she bequeathed such property as she possessed to Fornes. Previous to her death she deeded the property in dispute of the Gorman estate.

When it could not be established that Mills had any legal descendants the University of North Carolina was made a party defendant and following the decision of the jury the property automatically went to the University, causing all concerned to lose any claim they may have had on it.

Compromise was effected in the suit of G. S. Williams vs. Bank of Fountain. Williams claimed the bank held capital stock belonging to him, and the bank contended the stock was held at collateral on a note.

After all evidence had been submitted, the parties got together and reached a compromise, the nature of which was not determined.

Non-suit was ordered in the case of Paul Baker vs. Brown & White. Baker, evidence revealed, bought a car from the local firm, and missed some payments, and the machine was repossessed. Baker demanded the automobile be returned to him as he was under age when the contract was signed. It was revealed, however, that the mother of the youth signed the contract, making it entirely regular, and causing the youth to lose his claim.

FIELD DAY IS BIG SUCCESS

Special Event Here Yesterday Boosted Finances of Local Ball Club

"Field Day" at Third Street School grounds proved a financial salvation for the local club of the Coastal Plain League, it was made known today by R. L. Powell, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, who was in charge of the event.

The various attractions drew the largest crowd ever seen on the field, it being estimated that from 2,500 to 3,000 persons were on hand to witness the various stunts and the clash between Greenville and Kinston baseball clubs.

Several awards were given by local merchants to players showing the greatest skill in throwing, running and other things of the kind, but when the contest was over it was found that the majority of prizes remained in the hands of the ball club. Only three or four were awarded.

Wick, Kinston center fielder, was the only player hitting for an extra base during the game, and he received the award for this feat.

In the race to throw a ball through the bull's eye in a barrel on second base, nobody won but those in charge of the contest decided that Umpire Hood deserved the greatest credit, and gave him a pair of shoes, the award for the event.

Rogers, Kinston pitcher, was also given an award or so for taking first place in one of the contests.

Powell said numbers of merchants had given things to be distributed in the various contests, and that they would be returned to the donors or used at a later date.

Powell stated he was highly gratified over the outcome of the day, being it had resulted in putting the local club in position where it would be able to mark a portion of the red from its ledger and come out at the end of the season in better shape than expected.

SEEK DOUBLE HEADER HERE ON SATURDAY

New Bern and Greenville May Clash In Double Bill At Close of the Season

The prospects for a double-header here Saturday between New Bern and Greenville grew brighter today and efforts were under way to make the day one of the "red letter" days of the season, in view of the fact that the games will conclude the Coastal Plain League schedule.

R. L. Powell, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said today negotiations were under way to set the double bill for the last day of the week, and if plans carry, special features will be provided to make the games of more interest to the thousands of people expected to be in attendance.

The Greenville-New Bern game was rained out about three weeks ago. It has to be played before the end of the season, and there is little likelihood of the club being able to get to it before Saturday, especially with a double bill scheduled for tomorrow with Kinston. Powell said preparations would be rushed to completion as rapidly as possible after a decision has been reached.

Local club officials were to confer with New Bern today to reach an understanding, and as the rained out game must be played off an agreement was considered almost certain.

Powell also stated that special awards would also be offered players for special feats during the two games, and this is expected to add to the interest of the double bill.

With New Bern vying for competition for a place in the championship series by defeating Ayden yesterday, the two battles here would prove among the crucial of the week, and hundreds of people from both towns would be attracted to witness the contest.

SEEK DROUGHT CATTLE HERE

Effort Also On Foot to Obtain Relief Cannery For This Community

A previous survey made by government men revealed the fact that no sufficient pasturage was available here to justify the shipment of cattle, but since that time Mr. Little has made a complete survey of

HOME OF CODE HEAD BOMBED BY CHISELERS

Warning Issued To Nathan Wolf Head of N. Y., Cloak and Suit Code

Richmond, N. Y., Aug. 23.—(AP)—The home of F. Nathan Wolf, secretary of the Cloak and Suit Code authority, was bombed early today in what police interpreted as a warning to Wolf to cease NRA prosecutions.

Wolf and his family were out of town, but tenants on the first floor of the double building were asleep when the bomb wrecked the porch and shattered the windows, Samuel Fass, a guest of the Isador Jacobs family, was showered with plaster, but no one was hurt.

Detective Mack Black, who attributed the bombing to NRA chiselers, said Wolf had been active in prosecuting code violators.

As always, thousands of people were on hand to witness the opening sale. Through the din of tramping feet and conversation the bark of hot dog vendors and itinerant musicians and showmen could be heard on the outside, forming an appropriate setting for this, always the greatest day of the year.

With improved prices expected because of the good prices paid on Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina border markets, farmers and the public generally were gratified when the early bids showed that the improvement would also be in evidence here. It put new heart into thousands of men and women engaged in the greatest industry of the section, and means that millions of dollars will pour into the pockets of growers and business people alike as the season progresses.

OVER TWICE AS HIGH AS LAST SEASON

Slightly Over Million Pounds of Fair Grade Leaf Offered Here Today, Lightest in Years; Light Sales Due to Two Sets of Buyers; Five Sets Promised Monday; Farmers Overjoyed Over Price Improvement

At 3 o'clock this afternoon prices were described as around two cents a pound higher than those prevailing during morning sales. This information was given out by K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales, who will prepare an official report of sales sometime tonight to be made public tomorrow morning.

The Greenville tobacco market opened this morning with prices the highest in several years and joy ran unchecked throughout the territory as a result of the price improvement.

It was indicated on the basis of early sales, no official figures being available, that the average would be better than 25 cents a pound.

Only fair grades of tobacco were offered by the farmers this morning, as the first day is always known as the "testing season" for the thousands of people who jam every conceivable nook and corner in the great warehouses to see how prices are going to pan out.

The average for the first half-hour sales was estimated at $25.57 per hundred pounds, over double that paid on the opening day last season, the range being from 5 to 60 cents a pound. The opening day average last year was $10.89 per hundred pounds.

Slightly over a million pounds of leaf was on the floor of the various warehouses, making it, the lightest opening day in years. This was due to the fact that only two sets of buyers were on duty. The same number of buyers were used on all markets of the belt, but it was indicated the regular five sets would be on duty Monday morning when the real rush is expected to begin.

As always, thousands of people were on hand to witness the opening sale. Through the din of tramping feet and conversation the bark of hot dog vendors and itinerant musicians and showmen could be heard on the outside, forming an appropriate setting for this, always the greatest day of the year.

With improved prices expected because of the good prices paid on Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina border markets, farmers and the public generally were gratified when the early bids showed that the improvement would also be in evidence here. Sundown Stories

Christopher's Suggestion. By MARY GRAHAM BONNER. Jelly and Honey Bear and the cubs Jupiter and Blacky had just seen the pigs at the honeycombs...

"They'll be in the jelly next," growled Jelly Bear, as he gave one pig a cuff with his paw.

The pig squealed but put his snout in the jar of jelly he had seen with it, and Jelly Bear was about to give the pig a good punishing when Willy Nilly came along.

"We're in for it! We can't seem to do anything about it. But quarrels won't do any good. I'm beside myself with all this confusion. The place is upset almost beyond repair, and there is hardly any food left," said Willy Nilly.

"Christopher whispered in my ear a moment ago that he could fly around and peck all the visitors, but I don't think that would be such a good idea. It would be a pity to have them all hate us when we've given them almost every bit of food we have!"

Willy Nilly sighed to himself as he mentioned the word "ear." When, oh when, would he be able to do anything about his ears? When would he be able to do anything? Their food was gone. Puddle Muddle was in one of the worst muddles it ever had known.

Just then Christopher came forth with another suggestion. "I might capture a hornet's nest—using great care and skill—and bring it here and then chase all the bees out and let them make merry with our guests."

"Well," said Willy Nilly slowly, "that's an idea."

Tomorrow—"The Sleepy Ones"

The Sleepy Ones. By MARY GRAHAM BONNER. "I'm afraid," said Willy Nilly to Christopher, "that if you did that the bees would sting the Puddle Muddlers as much as the visitors. How could you explain to the bees which ones to sting?"

"You could all leave before I brought over the nest," said Christopher Columbus Crow, "and I could fly away as soon as I let the bees escape."

"Well, you're certainly a cleverer crow," said Willy Nilly admiringly, "but I'm not sure whether we'd better leave the place to all these creatures who upset everything, and to a lot of bees who'll only make them so angry they'll be apt to do anything."

"And I suppose it wouldn't be very nice, either, although I am so desperate I'm ready to do almost anything. Let me see what I can do in the way of hints."

Willy Nilly went around speaking to the hens, the chickens, the roosters, the dogs, the pigs, but hardly any of them paid any attention to him.

They had eaten and eaten and eaten so much that they were too lazy and too sleepy to feel like talking.

"Your masters will wonder where you are," Willy Nilly said, speaking to one group after the other. But hardly an answer did he receive.

Now his bed, the couch, the floor, the porch, the garden, the path in front of his house—everything and all the space—were occupied by a collection of sleeping hens, chickens, roosters, dogs and pigs!

Tomorrow—"Willy Nilly Accused"

SEEK DROUGHT CATTLE HERE. (Continued from Page One) the county and finds there is not only plenty of land but people perfectly willing to turn it over to the government for this use.

Thousands of heads of cattle are being shipped to the eastern section of the state at this time and the government has called on the state to prepare to increase its allotment from 75,000 to 175,000.

Mrs. Thomas O'Berry, state administrator, said today it was impossible to say whether the state would be able to handle such a large increase of cattle, but that if canneries could be erected quickly enough, she thought it quite probable.

The cattle will be killed for relief purposes during the winter. Mr. Little said Greenville should join the rest of the country in an effort to obtain a cannery for the canning of meat after the beef has been killed. Numbers of towns have been awarded plants of this kind. They employ around four hundred people.

With the facilities available in this section, Mr. Little declared he felt sure any application from this city would receive much consideration. Citizens interested in the project were urged by Mr. Little to confer with the department at Raleigh and see what can be done in the matter.

CLINTON BEASLEY INDICTED BY JURY. Smithfield, Aug. 23.—Clinton Beasley was formally indicted by the grand jury in Wayne county superior court Wednesday charged with feloniously and fraudulently "kidnaping" Camelia Price on May 12 last and requisition papers were issued from the governor's office on Wednesday afternoon requesting Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York to deliver this defendant to Wilbur F. Barber of the state of North Carolina to receive the fugitive.

Beasley was placed under arrest Saturday in New York, along with Sarah Beasley, alias Mrs. Arthur I. Krane. Both are held as fugitives from North Carolina. The New York hearing for the two has been set for Friday.

CONFESSES FORGERY. SAYS HE WAS IN NEED. Durham, N. C., Aug. 23.—Joseph Jefferson, 27, a Pennsylvania school teacher and a Duke University summer school student, in Recorder's Court today was bound over to Superior Court on three cases of forgery. Judge J. R. Patton, Jr., describing Jefferson as a genius at his game, supported by plenty experience, set his bond at $1,000.

Jefferson admitted he had committed the acts because he needed the money. Asked if his parents were living, he said he did not remember. The three cases of forgery were attested to by officials from Duke University, the Home Savings Bank and the Durham Men's Shop. He was remanded to jail in default of bond.

KILLED INSTANTLY AS TRAIN HITS HIS CAR. Roxboro, Aug. 23.—Alec Hester, well-known negro, was killed instantly yesterday around noon when the 11:55 train from Roxboro to Durham crashed into his car at a crossing about a mile and a half south of the Roxboro station.

HAPPY DAYS AGAIN

The satisfactory prices on the tobacco market this morning indicate that from a financial standpoint this fall will be Happy Days Again for the tobacco growers of Eastern North Carolina and all because for the first time in their lives the great majority of the growers have joined together in a movement for the common good by signing and living up to their acreage reduction contracts. But for the government program of controlled acreage and the cooperation of the growers in carrying out their part of bargain we are honest in our belief that prices today would not have been what they were and certainly the facts should be sufficient to convince the growers that they should continue on a program of controlled acreage. The present government contracts are for this and next year only, but to be sure a new contract will be offered the growers before the end of next year and they should have no hesitancy in signing. To go back to the old plan of uncontrolled and limitless acreage after the present contracts expire would place the growers right back where they were before the government took a hand last year and such action on the part of the growers would be nothing less than financial suicide. Let us all hope that from now on the growers will produce only such an amount of tobacco as will fill the actual need of the manufacturing companies for in this way and this way only can they hope to get good prices.

Dramatic Action Held Essential If Gandhi Wishes A Comeback

Ecmbady, Ind. (AP)—Mahatma Gandhi's pledge to the British government to refrain from all political activity against the Crown for a period of a year, in return for his release from prison, expires in August. Since he was liberated last year, after his threat to "fast unto death," the world's most famous non-violent rebel has been on his "good behavior," confining himself to his campaign to emancipate India's 60,000,000 "Untouchables" (social outcasts). Up to the present the little Hindu mystic, whose thirty-year battle for India's liberty has cost the British government tens of millions of dollars, has given no indication what form his new defiance of the British empire will take when his pledge of "good conduct" expires. But he has announced repeatedly that he will "die fighting the British."

TIGER ISLAND

A New Serial by Gouverneur Morris

SYNOPSIS: Captain Wanda B. and her redoubtable partner go to settle the "Hobbes" in the mountains. But meanwhile the skin has been put on the Dutch post of Sabin because the owner of the estate of wild animals Angus McLeod, must have an immediate operation. Harry Bowers, big game hunter, volunteers to accompany the animals on to Singapore for a McLeod and ensures they are taken to him by cutting him a tunnel for shooting animals.

Chapter Eight IVY'S STORY

HAVING snubbed Mr. Bowers and put him in his place, Ivy Green was willing to be friendly. Not warmly friendly, but conveniently so.

It was not to be forgotten that he had lifted her, by the offer of employment, out of a state which bordered on despair. Her entire world in this world had been the five tigers and the monkey Helen; and Helen, in terms of dollars and cents, would hardly, in a country overrun with monkeys, have fetched the price of a square meal.

She was going to work for Bowers and she must manage to get along with him. But what a ridiculous situation! She may have been hard and worldly. She could have been unflinchingly cruel to a man, or to a woman, even to a child; but in whatever concerned the dumb animals, she was hypersensitive, and here she was engaged to work in close companionship throughout a long voyage with a man who at a cursory examination appeared to be her opposite, a man who delighted in hunting down and slaughtering those things which she herself most loved to protect and cherish.

As a matter of fact, they were more nearly opposites than she suspected.

If Bowers was ever unkind to a man or a woman or a child, it was by accident; and even if it was deserved, it was an unkindness which he had no power to sustain.

From cave-dwelling ancestors, perhaps, he had inherited the instinct to hunt down and kill those animals which must have made the lives of the cave-dwellers a long horrible nightmare. He killed without compunction or remorse, but he had never killed an elephant or a monkey. He never would, and he was rather foolish about dogs.

His most remote ancestors, perhaps, had lived in trees. Those more recent ones, who had dwelt in caves, had perhaps domesticated the elephant and the dog. He never took the trouble to reason these things out. They were instincts. He could not see a lion or a tiger without an itch to put a bullet through its head.

But under the circumstances Bowers found it in his heart to wish that his success as a hunter had not made him so very well known. Ivy Green attracted him more and more. He had perhaps underestimated her good looks. It was a pity that they had so little in common, that their respective interests and hobbies, indeed, made them antagonistic to each other.

ON the drive through the clean and colorful streets of Sabin, she vouchsafed a little information about herself, but not much. Her father had been a naturalist. There had always been lots of pets and things, monkey, mouse-deer, birds and snakes. She could not remember a time when she had not had important daily duties to perform among these.

Her father's parents had died before she was born. He had neither brothers nor sisters nor any relations with whom he cared to correspond. His correspondence was all with scientific men, scientific societies and museums.

He had been distinguished in a way, but not so distinguished as he deserved to be. If she had a smattering of education, it was owing to his efforts. Outside of the scientific books, which were many, there had been other books, but not many. Her father had said that they were good books; and when she had been taught to read and write and figure a little, she had acquired from them such little learning as she had—hence the quotation from Blake which had "so greatly surprised Bowers."

Her father had died very hideously of black water fever, and left her stranded. At the time, she was fifteen years of age and firmly determined not to starve to death. Bowers got the impression that some kind Dutchman had taken care of her for a year or two. How she immediately had fared she did not say positively.

This period had been followed by a "passive resistance" and speech-making, avoiding any direct violation of the law which might cause the viceroy to order his arrest. Gandhi has already served seven terms in prison, and is said to be convinced of the futility of further time spent behind stone walls.

a short experience with an opera company which gave performances of Gilbert and Sullivan and went on the rocks in Calcutta.

Since then, with a number of hiatuses, which she left to the imagination, she had been in the circus business. First as a snake-charmer; and then, following the demise by tiger-violence of "Goralkin the Animal King," she had volunteered to take over his troupe of dangerous felines and go on with his act.

It was not as if she had had no experience. She had sometimes appeared with Goralkin as his assistant, and she had watched him so much that she knew precisely how to confuse a beast when it became suddenly exasperated, and how to win its confidence between times.

Tigers, she said, were supposed to be the most recalcitrant of the cat family. Most trainers preferred to work with lions; but naturally in India and Malaysia, where these are not indigenous, you had to work with tigers and leopards or nothing.

Goralkin's had been a mixed troupe, tigers and leopards; but the species are not happy together and she had gradually eliminated the latter. She wished that Bowers could have seen her tigers. She had known how to keep their coats beautiful and their dispositions calm.

One, an old tigress named Maudie, had been a love of a thing, always flinging herself down to be tickled and petted. Ivy Green had been so sure of Maudie's good manners that she had sometimes taken her for a walk through the main street of a native town.

"When the villagers saw us coming," she said, "it was fun to see them disappear." She laughed a little at the recollection, then suddenly frowned. "And then there was this Matassori business."

BOWERS asked her about it. It was the usual thing, apparently. Business had not been good and while there had still been a little money in the cash-box, Señor Matassori had thought best to have it all for himself.

Ivy Green was under the impression that she might have shared the money with him as Signora Matassori if she had ever given him any encouragement. But he had been, it seemed, a detestable, Italian, fat and greasy. Once, the worse for liquor, he had tried to force his attentions on her. She had wrenched free and managed to open Maudie's cage.

Maudie loved nothing so much as to be invited out for a romp. The moment you started to fiddle with the fastenings of her cage door the anticipation of immediate and delightful pleasures caused her to open her vast mouth as wide as possible, and to roar tremendously.

The effect upon anyone not intimately acquainted with her disposition, was disquieting. As Maudie came roaring out of the cage, Señor Matassori fled howling from the tent.

He had never relearned his molestations. He had leered and ogled and hinted, but he had not dared to touch her. She had told him that if he ever laid his hands on her again, he would have the worst kind of tiger trouble. She would loose them all, all five of them, and sic them on him, just as if they had been five highly trained police dogs.

"And he believed you?" asked Bowers.

"No," said Ivy Green, "and again yes. He wasn't sure."

Bowers chuckled. "What was the truth of the matter?" he asked.

"The truth? If I'd turn them loose, some of them might have run amok, but I wouldn't have been allowed to choose the victims."

She asked him about McLeod's shipment, and of just what it consisted.

"I was only on board a short time," said Bowers. "There are two tigers, beauties. Mr. Flint, the wireless, made a point of showing them to me. Then McLeod sent for me and I had only the impression of a lot of cages and crates and things and glimpses of some of the birds and small fry that you see in these parts. I noticed the head of a big python sticking out of some litter, and a lot of monkeys exactly like Helen. She'll have plenty of company on the voyage."

"Any other big cats?" she asked. "I think not. There were two little honey-bears, cubs, awfully cute."

followers are tired of the Mahatma's fasts, his threats to starve himself, his repeated diatribes against the British government, his constant urging of the Indian masses to go back to the primitive age of hand industry and to ban everything foreign. All these formulae have been tried, foreign commentators here say, and India seems to be as far away from real home rule as ever.

Militant Leadership Sought

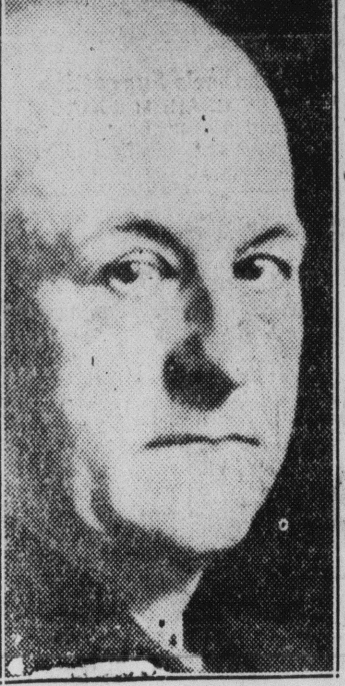

That Gandhi has been losing ground steadily since his last strange act in threatening to fast unto death because of his dissatisfaction with the British prison regime, is admitted even by many of his supporters. They point to the recent repeated attempts of Indian hot-heads to kill him. Even his campaign to wipe out the curse of "untouchability," India's greatest evil, has earned him many enemies, for the higher caste Hindus are by no means agreed that the lower strata of Indians should have equal privileges and standings.

Some Indians are openly advocates of a new and more militant leadership of the Indian Nationalist ("Congress") Party. They want the mild, persuasive, praying Gandhi replaced by a real fighter, a "man of action, virility and violence," who will advocate armed revolution against India's British rulers. But the difficulty is that the only capable Indian answering this description is in prison. He is Jawaharlal Nehru, brilliant Oxford graduate, Hindu firebrand and uncompromising foe of the British empire, who is serving a two-year prison term for seditious utterances.

Giant Elk's Head Found
Dublin.—(AP)—The head of a giant elk believed to have roamed Ireland some 20,000 years ago during the first part of the glacial period has been dug out of a bog in County Dublin. It was found by members of the Danish expedition headed by Prof. Knud Jessen, Copenhagen scientist. The head is about three feet long and in a good state of preservation.

LOCALS LOSE CRUCIAL GAME TO KINSTON

Hitting opportunely behind the fine pitching of Orlin Rogers, Kinston yesterday afternoon defeated Greenville at Third street school grounds before one of the largest crowds ever witnessing a game on the local diamond.

The game was the highlight of a field day program in which players were given an opportunity to display their skill in batting, throwing, and running. This part of the program preceded the game which was witnessed by between 2,500 and 3,000 persons, a large number coming from Kinston. Grandstand and bleachers were packed to capacity, and the crowd overflowed into the field and football bleachers in the outfield. The score was Kinston 3, Greenville 1.

The game resolved itself into a pitching duel between Rogers and Reynolds May, ace Greenville hurler, until the seventh and eighth innings when Kinston bats got busy, connected for several Texas leaguers, and ran around sufficient counters to put the game on ice. One run was chalked up in the seventh and two in the eighth on a total of eight hits.

Greenville drew first blood in the third frame when a wild throw and hit enabled them to shove their only run of the game over the rubber. They threatened to score on two or three occasions after that but Rogers was master of every situation, and backed by splendid fielding of his teammates at critical stages, proved almost invincible.

The victory placed Kinston a game and a half ahead of Greenville for the honor of first place, but in view of the fact that New Bern spanked Ayden to the tune of 3-0, Greenville today continued to cling precariously to the second rung.

By defeating the locals, Rogers hung up his 17th victory of the season. Tommy Irwin with three singles led the stick attack for the visitors, with Rogers accounting for two. Each club was credited with two bobbles. Weaver and Bostic were the chief factors in the field for the local club while Hayworth, Kinston first sacker, grabbed honors for the visitors.

Rogers had five strikeouts to his credit and May none. It is probably the first game of the season that the Duke's pitching ace has not had a single knockout to his credit with the brand of ball he hurled during seven frames yesterday. He literally had the slugging Kinston nine eating out of his hand until he apparently weakened, or Kinston stopped trying to slug and dropped a few Texas leaguers on the outside of the infield to enable them to walk away with the victory.

FLYTHE BLANKS AYDEN

New Bern, N. C., Aug. 23.—Stuart Flythe limited Ayden's touted sluggers to a pair of hits yesterday as New Bern hustled for a brilliant 3 to 0 victory.

Counted out of the league running by everybody except the home fans, the locals tallied once in the second and twice in the third to go in front early. After that it was just "too much Flythe." The tall blonde was touched for a hit by Wall in the fourth and for one by Smith in the seventh, but the rest of the time he had the visitors in a well-corked jug.

Biddle led New Bern's eight-hit attack on Shields. Biddle made three hits, including a second-inning homer with Johnson aboard. Each club made an error, but all hands fielded sensationally.

It was a desperate fought affair and packed stands were in constant turmoil. Keyed to a feverish pitch. New Bern fans were laying two to one with few takers at game time. Ham Ferebee and Dock Smith did the catching.

SNOW HILL WINS IN 11TH

Tarboro, N. C., Aug. 23.—Snow Hill turned on the scoring heat in the 11th inning to defeat Tarboro 6 to 2, here yesterday afternoon.

The visitors bunched three hits with a couple of errors to score four runs in the second extra inning and thus break a two-all tie which had existed since the fifth inning. Tarboro came from behind in the fifth to tally two runs.

A single by Mewborn, a triple by Griffin and a triple by Cheek were

SPORT SLANTS

The old-timer leaned back, lit a fresh stogie and opened up on another season in the major leagues. It seems, has given him a new lease on life. The game was worth bringing him back to the press box again. There was or there are, for instance, the Deans—Dizzy and Daffy.

"There, my boy," remarked the old-timer "are a pair of pitchers John McGraw would have loved to handle in his prime. The fact is John tried to buy Jerome Dean from the Cardinals the first year he came up. Gabby Street couldn't handle the elder Dean at all.

Worth Money

"Chances are if McGraw and the Giants had got Dizzy they would also have got Paul because things like the Deans always come in pairs.

"Of course these Deans are a little too soft and too talkative to be compared with rare birds like Rube Waddell or Bugs Raymond. Money didn't mean anything to these fellows. Now these Deans may have 'temperament,' but they also have some business sense, too. The publicity they have been getting from arguments with the Cardinals, first over salaries and lately over fines, is worth thousands of dollars in gate receipts. Yet I hear baseball men saying it's all silly!

"Why, in my day, that sort of thing was encouraged. Smart managers or club owners always were delighted if they could stir up some trouble and get the fans arguing. The players, too, were quick to seize this is his 19th year in the big show. Crowder's arm was supposed to have gone "dead" from over-work last year, when he worked over fifty games for the Senators, but he got better against the Yankees as he went alone and turned in a critical victory for Mickey Cochrane's crew.

Hoyt's defeat of the Giants was not so unexpected, inasmuch as the former "boy wonder" has been pitching brilliantly in his come-back with the Pirates.

As the situation is related to us from London, a pair of pompous officials of the All-England Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club, who as stockholders have waxed affluent on the club's tremendous earnings from amateur tennis, were in serious conversation in the club lounge.

An American reporter in the next chair, who couldn't help overhearing, almost pulled two stitches out of his latest operation as he got the drift of the talk.

"Something must be done about these boys who make their living out of tennis," said the fatter, more-asthmatic of the two.

"Righto," agreed his companion, between sips of tea. "Here they do nothing the year around except play tennis and have a high old time at our expense."

"What we must consider," continued the first, "is their futures. What are they equipping themselves for? Nothing. What in the world are they going to do when they quit playing tennis?"

Think of the Lost Sleep

Both undoubtedly were troubled about it. One finally, after deep thought, arrived at a very plausible solution:

"What we should do at the next meeting is pass a rule absolutely cutting out all this expense money we pay out every year. If they are genuine amateurs they will be glad to pay their own way to get to play at Wimbledon. As it is all we're doing is making a lot of bums out of them."

"You're right," his companion agreed. "But on the other hand, I guess you've sort of got to look at it from another angle. These boys are the ones who will pull in the crowds. You've got to give them credit for that, even if they do hold us up on expenses."

"Perhaps you're right," reluctantly. "I guess there's not much we can do."

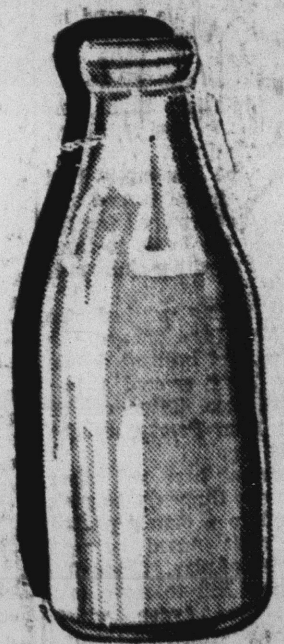

"They sighed in unison, like men thwarted in a heartfelt desire to make honest, upright citizens out of the world's amateur tennis stars. One little bit more drifted back as they ambled out to watch a match or two:

"I understand we have a complete sell-out for the Davis Cup challenge round."

Democracy Finds Ardent Champion In Switzerland

By ALEXANDER H. UHL. Bern.—(AP)—Little Switzerland, almost surrounded by dictators, still has a good work to say for Old Lady Democracy.

With the dictatorship of Italy, Germany and Austria touching three borders and France on her four giving dictatorial powers to Premier Doumergue, the Swiss nevertheless don't want any "one-man" government for themselves.

Democracy is the blood of the Swiss and will stay there, said former President Giuseppe Motta, now foreign minister and member of the federal council of seven, the executive power in Switzerland.

Each Citizen a Unit. Declaring that each citizen is conscious of being a unit in the popular sovereignty, he asserted the country intends to be master of its own destiny. He added:

"To say to this people that it ought to concentrate in one man, no matter how honest and intelligent, all power; to suggest that it should abandon, no matter how grave the circumstances, its form of government; in a word, to recommend to the Swiss, who by reason of long tradition carry the idea of liberty in their blood, a dictatorship, even under the modified form of authoritative government, is to show a gross lack of elementary good sense. A Federal Council, free from the fluctuations of parliamentary and popular votes and strong because united, yes; a federal council free from strict control, no!"

Foreign Minister Motta expressed firm conviction that in case of future war the neutrality of Switzerland must also do its duty, which is to remain armed to defend itself against any aggressor.

Fears recently expressed in the Italian press for the welfare of the Italian-Swiss canton of Ticino, which is Hotta's home region, brought the following comment:

"We are a confederation of different elements which have a sense of higher unity; our diversity is a spiritual force because it assures to each element a development, conforming to its nature, in perfect equality. The Italian newspapers, which recently have been displaying worry as to the fate of the canton of Ticino, are needlessly alarmed. Switzerland is a country which observes scrupulously its own duties."

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 23.—(AP)—Cotton opened fairly steady, unchanged to two points lower with steadier Liverpool cables offset by reports of more rain in Oklahoma and Arkansas.

After selling off to 13.28, December rallied to 13.33 with the general lift ruling about net unchanged to two points higher at the end of the first half hour.

The market was quiet later in the morning, but held steady with slight offerings offered by covering or trade buying.

December worked up to 13.36 with active months showing advances of three to seven points around midday.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Aug. 23.—(AP)—Stocks were less feverish in today's trading as enthusiasm called perceptibly and prices turned somewhat irregular.

While the financial section apparently lacked administrative assurance that no war on the profits was contemplated, it was felt that other factors would have to be considered in relation to the market movement.

The activity in equities was about half that of the previous session. Profit-taking was also in evidence. But commission houses were not discouraged, attributing the settlement of the list to a "consolidation" of grains.

Commodities were only slightly higher. Grains were exceptionally quiet and narrow as was cotton.

Stocks were quiet and irregular in the late trading. Transfers approximated 770,000 shares.

Late News Flashes

Washington, Aug. 23.—(AP)—Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the special strike committee designated to direct a general strike in the cotton textile industry, reiterated today that the instructions of the New York convention to call a walk out by Sept. 1 would be followed to the letter.

The committee evinced little interest in the forthcoming statement by Robert Bruere, chairman of the cotton textile relations board which is expected to contain a plan for settling the controversy.

Members of the committee said they would be interested in no proposal that did not contain specific concessions in their favor from some one authorized to offer them.

Really to Call General Strike

Washington, D. C., Aug. 23.—(AP)—Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the special strike committee designated to direct a general strike in the cotton industry, reiterated today that the instructions of the New York convention to call a walk out by September 1 would be followed "to the letter."

The committee evinced little interest in the forthcoming statement by Robert Bruere, chairman of the Cotton Textile Relations Board which is expected to contain a plan for settling the controversy.

Members of the committee said they would be interested in no proposal that did not contain specific concessions in their favor from someone authorized to offer them.

"If the industry can see the wisdom of averting the strike by correction of grievances it has the infini special strike committee power to do so," Gorman said, adding: "The special strike committee does not expect the industry to move voluntarily toward betterment of conditions because the industry has been moving in the other direction ever since the cotton textile code was approved by the President."

One's hands are indicative of one's character, and I believe in taking the best care of them possible. An excellent way of keeping the nails strong, and at the same time keeping the cuticle free from hangnails, is to rub cuticle oil into them every night before retiring.

II. DUCE MAKES SCIENTISTS ELIGIBLE FOR GOLD MEDALS

Rome.—(AP)—Scientists, explorers, mountain-climbers and athletes who risk their lives in the public interest are now eligible for gold medals, thanks to Mussolini.

Looking over an eight-year-old law governing the award of medals for valor, he discovered that no provision had ever been made for heroes of these followings. Forthwith he amended the regulation.

In a published explanation he called scientists "superior men who in many cases sacrifice their lives for the high ideal of human progress."

GROWS STEADILY WORSE

Winston-Salem, N. C., Aug. 23.—(AP)—After apparently improving for two weeks, the condition of Mrs. Margaret Cowan, victim of a 52-day siege of hiccoughing, has grown steadily worse in the last three days.

A reporter calling at the home of the young woman today found her hiccoughing at the rate of about 12 or 15 times per minute, and for the past few days the only relief the patient has had came from hypodermics, except for about three hours in the early morning. From about 5 to 8 a. m. the patient is able to sleep, probably only because of complete exhaustion, physicians say.

Mrs. Cowan has been under almost constant care of physicians here, and for awhile in Norfolk, Va., but without avail. Monday an X-ray photograph was taken of her spine in the hope of locating the source of a possible nervous disorder. The victim is still hopeful of successful treatment here, she said, but if it fails, will try a change of climate.

School Prizes, Wild Rides Occupy Boy Heir To Throne

New Bern, N. C., Aug. 19.—Lefty Kennel assumed a story book role Saturday in pitching and battling New Bern to a 2 to 1 victory over Kinston's league leaders.

Not content with limiting the visitors to four safeties, the 220-pound southpaw singled in the second inning to send Patten and Ham Ferebee scurrying across the plate with the runs which brought victory.

Irwin's double, Zasier's single, and Kinston tallied in the fourth on Hayworth's outfield fly.

Kennel had the leaders well at bay throughout. Bolger turned in a great pitching performance for the losers. He held the locals to three hits. No player on either club made more than one hit.

Sensational fielding marked the game, and New Bern showed the way with a pair of brilliant double plays. New Bern erred twice; Kinston erred once. Tatum caught for Kinston; Ham Ferebee caught for the locals.

Kinston's defeat here and other results of the day threw the league's first division into a closely packed trio as the circuit ended the next to the last week of play. Greenville won over Snow Hill to move into second place over Ayden, which lost to Tarboro. Kinston Saturday night held a margin of half a game over Greenville, which enjoyed a like margin over Ayden.

The league's season will come to a close next Saturday, and all indications are for a battle unto the last day to decide which two clubs will enter the post-season championship series. The club finishing in the first and second place positions will meet for the title.
