Sloan Declares Strike Directed At All Industry

SEEKS EFFORT TO MAKE LAW THRU FORCE

Chairman of Cotton Textile Code Puts Question of "Lawmaking by Force" up to The American People; Bitterest Injury Inflicted on the Public

New York, Aug. 30.—(AP)—The cotton textile code authority put the question of "lawmaking by force" up to the American public and the 682 industries under the NRA code.

Speaking as a government official and chairman of the cotton textile code authority, George A. Sloan told the Associated Press Monday that the American people are now faced with a demand "that consideration be given to amending the law under a threat of force."

Sloan, who is also president of the Cotton Textile Institute, refused yesterday to confer with union leaders and the United Textile Workers of America in an effort to prevent the calling out of 600,000 cotton textile workers in a general strike by noon today.

"The bitterest injury will be inflicted on the public," he said today. "At the best it is industrial warfare and it almost inevitably runs into intimidation and physical warfare."

Sloan stated that the strike was pointed not only against the cotton industry but against all codified industry.

LIGHT LEAF SALES STILL HOLD SWAY

Average Price Shows Slight Drop On the Local Market During Yesterday

Because of the influx of a considerable amount of low grade tobacco, the average price dropped to $26.52 on the Greenville tobacco market yesterday. The average the day before was $27.57 per hundred pounds.

The market yesterday sold 620,540 pounds of leaf for $164,336.80. The amount of tobacco was about the same as handled the day before. Sales were expected to some larger today and tomorrow with indications that prices would continue holding their own.

Tobacco men continued advising growers to grade their tobacco carefully and have it in the best shape possible when put on the market. The prices prevailing here since the opening last week have been the highest since World War days and farmers have been overjoyed at the change.

TWISTER SWOOPS DOWN ON TOWN OF LILESVILLE

Wadesboro, Aug. 30.—A tornado dipped down on the outskirts of Lilesville, six miles from Wadesboro early Tuesday night and did considerable damage, although no one was hurt.

It tore up shade trees in the yard of the Jide Poplin home, and uprooted a big oak which fell across the front porch of the W. L. Ingram home, damaging the house considerably.

A small house occupied by Clayton Powell and family was overturned but no one was at home. A small house occupied by a tenant was badly wrecked and a barn belonging to Sam Dawkins was demolished.

A heavy truck which happened to be passing on highway 20 was turned over but the occupants had jumped out and run out of the path of the storm before it struck the truck.

SOUTH MUST DETERMINE COTTON PLAN

Sec. Wallace Declares It Is Up To Farmers To Say If They Will Shrink Crop

Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 30.—(AP)—Henry Wallace, secretary of agriculture, said here today that the south must decide whether it is going to shrink its cotton production to actual domestic needs or continue to grow surplus cotton for world markets.

Secretary Wallace stopped here en route to Marianna, Ark. where he was scheduled to speak this afternoon.

"It is a question of which policy will bring the cotton farmer the greater prosperity," Secretary Wallace said in an interview.

"Heretofore despite objections to the contrary, we have been putting the customary amount of cotton on world markets.

"With the reduced crop this year the farmers of the south must decide if they will continue to grow an 8,000,000 bale crop and compete for foreign trade or whether a 6,000,000 bale crop is more profitable to them."

"Personally I would prefer it if we had a way to increase imports sufficiently to go ahead with our customary way of trade. It is not the duty of the southern farmer to produce for foreign markets so that importers can profit by it. Unless it brings the farmers a greater prosperity there is no use in growing such surplus."

RAPE CASE IS NEARING JURY

Fate of Jasper Mills Expected to be Known During The Late Afternoon

The case of Jasper Mills, 20-year-old white man of the Cox Mill community, charged with criminal assault on Miss Berth Frizzelle, 20, last August 6, was scheduled to reach the jury between 3 and 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Argument by Solicitor D. M. Clark and the charge of Judge R. Hunt Parker, of Roanoke Rapids, remained when court recessed at noon.

Testimony was completed during the morning hours. Numbers of witnesses were examined.

Miss Frizzelle is alleged to have told officers she was walking along a woods path with Mills when he suddenly attacked her, dragged her to a nearby corn field and criminally assaulted her.

When taken into custody Mills vigorously denied assaulting the young woman, who contended that she was painfully hurt by her assault.

The case consumed the major part of yesterday afternoon's session and is one of a hundred or more scheduled for consideration during the one week term of court.

FAILED TO ANCHOR BOAT. NEAR TRAGEDY RESULTS

Elizabeth City, Aug. 30.—Failure to anchor a sailboat almost cost the lives of three men, it was revealed here today by Earnes Sanders, commander of the Pasquotank River Yacht Club and one of the operators of the Elizabeth City shipyard on Riverside Drive.

The near tragedy occurred Sunday. Mr. Sanders said. Three men went out into the middle of the Pasquotank river abreast of the shipyard. They were in a sail boat.

All three jumped out for a swim and the boat sailed away. The three men shouted for help, but the 100 or so spectators on the nearby dock thought they were only playing. One young fellow aboard the Coast and Geodetic Survey boat docked at the shipyard heard the men's cries for help and rowed to their assistance in a boat. All three were brought to shore safely.

Victor Smith, of Craven county, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Miss Viola Worthington, in an automobile wreck in the Clay Root Neck section of Craven county, last week ago was found guilty by a jury in Superior court yesterday and sentenced to the roads from three to five years.

Miss Worthington, evidence revealed, was riding with Smith when he attempted to make a curve at a high rate of speed, lost control of his machine and crashed into an oak tree.

The young lady was rushed to a New Bern hospital but it was found she was dead upon arrival.

Smith was later arrested in Craven county and brought to jail here to await hearing.

Junius Brady, colored, charged with assault with a deadly weapon and carrying a concealed weapon, was sentenced to eighteen months on the roads. He was charged with attacking a colored woman.

The one week term of court opened Monday morning with Judge R. Hunt Parker of Snow Hill presiding. The docket consists of around a hundred cases. A considerable number have already been disposed of but a big dent was expected to be made in the docket by the end of the week.

HIT BY AUTO CHILD INJURED

Jack Minges Probably Seriously Hurt When Hit By Car On Dickinson Avenue

Jack Minges, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Minges, was probably seriously injured this morning when he was struck by an automobile on Dickinson Avenue, driven by L. W. Boyd, of Raleigh.

The child was rushed to the local hospital for medical aid and was declared to be suffering from cuts on the head and numerous bruises. The full extent of his injuries had not been determined, however, as he was reported to have shown signs of considerable nausea.

The wreck occurred in front of the Minges home. The child started to cross the street, saw the car and turned back directly in the path of the machine.

Mr. Minges, the father of the child, said from information reaching him the accident apparently was unavoidable and no charges were brought against Boyd.

After receiving hospital attention the child was returned home where he was reported as resting fairly comfortably, although still nauseated.

MEDIATORS ARE LOCKING TO ROOSEVELT

Hope That President Will Take Action in Last Hour Held Out; Special Wires Installed in Strike Headquarters to Leave Machines; Signs of Violence Seen

Washington, Aug. 30.—(AP)—A general strike in the cotton textile industry was called today, to become effective at 11:30 p. m. Saturday night.

Workers in the wool, silk, rayon and synthetic yarn industry were ordered to stand by for further orders. The first working day after the effective date will be Sept. 4.

The strike order follows: "To all locals: Strike of all cotton textile workers will begin at 11:30 (your time) Saturday night. Put all previous instructions into effect. Full silk and rayon and synthetic membership stand by for further orders. Victory through solidarity.

"FRANCIS GORMAN, Chairman Special Strike Committee, United Textile Workers of America."

The order of the strike, the largest numerically to conflict with the Roosevelt administration, was ticked out over a telegraph key set up in the headquarters of the strike committee. It went to the local union heads' quarters over the country which in turn will transmit it to the membership.

A large group of United Textile Workers, and officials of other labor unions assembled for the occasion. In a short address to the labor cabinet Garrison said: "We have exhausted every resource in the direction of peaceful settlement."

"We have been met," he continued, "I am sorry to say, by an arrogant on the part of employers that is amazing in this day and year."

"There are, we know, many employers who disagree with the policy of the cotton textile industry almost as much as we do, but they are powerless for the present."

"This telegram will call a half-million workers to the strike line. Not all of those are now employed the street-hout which adds to machine load per worker until he can bear no more, as robbed thousands of their chance to work. But every man and woman will rally to the strike line and the great cotton industry will not move a wheel after the hour set to stop the mills."

President Roosevelt is known to be watching the situation closely, but what he will do remains to be seen. It appeared inevitable that the national strike set for Friday and due to begin on the day after Labor Day, would at least start. Many believed that some new peace move will seek to halt it to save the recovery program from a severe shock.

The strike committee of the United Textile Workers said its formal order would cripple factories from the Canadian border to the deep south.

The union executive council expected to decide today whether to call 300,000 silk, rayon and woolen workers out at the same time. If they estimate it will involve more than 2,000,000 persons, counting workers and dependents.

The manufacturers prepared to fight. Although some apparently planned to shut down mills if a strike is called, George A. Sloan, head of the Cotton Textile Institute, head of the Cotton Textile Institute, said the workers in general proposed to keep operating. Denying the workers want a strike, he said he had authoritative information.

LEGION POST CAPTURES CUP

Fine Record of Service of Local Organization Draws Honor at Greensboro

The delegation from the local Post of the American Legion returned from the State Convention at Greensboro returned home yesterday bringing with them the Silver Cup as a reward for the fine record of the local post during the past year. This cup is on display in the window of this paper. Miss Mary Rachel Teel who went to the State Convention as "Miss Greenville" returned also. Miss Teel did not win the title of "Miss North Carolina." Miss Salisbury was awarded that title, but "Miss Greenville" was one of the last five to be considered for the title.

The local delegation was an enthusiastic group working in behalf of the new State Commander, Hubert Oliver of Lexington. Terrell of Burlington withdrew at the last minute and Olive was elected unanimously. Junius H. Rose, Commander of the Pitt County Post, was convention chairman and by-laws.

Plans are already being made by the local post for the activities of the coming year. The present Legion year does not close until October 1 but the local post is planning a complete re-enrollment for the next year before this year closes.

The convention will be held at Fort Bragg and Fayetteville next year and will be held two weeks earlier in order that the opening of the tobacco market will not again interfere with the attendance of members from the eastern part of the state.

N. C. Maintains Population Mark

Washington, Aug. 30.—(AP)—North Carolina continues to maintain its position as the most populous state in the southeast.

The state population on July 1 was estimated today by the Census Bureau at 3,301,000 compared with 3,170,276 shown by the official census of April 1, 1930.

Georgia, the state's nearest rival in the southeast, fell further behind having an estimated population of 2,911,000 on August 1, compared with the official 1930 census of 2,908,506.

Until 1930, Georgia—the south's empire state—was the most populous in the southeast.

Several Bright Woolen Outfits Suggested For Campus

New York—(AP)—Smart wardrobes for college wear this fall, the experts say, will be the simpler and more durable clothes. Several bright woolen dresses are advised for campus and classroom wear, with knitted frocks—the boucles, nubby weaves and novelty mixtures—as a good choice because of their resistance to wrinkles.

A rich, warm rust is the color of the two-piece boucle suit shown here, selected for classroom wear. The draped collar and spaghetti fringe are new fall details. Starched oxfords of crushed brown knit are sturdy campus footwear, and the brown felt hat is practical and smart.

Control Raw Materials For Tires.

Complete control of raw materials and of their processing through to the finished product is necessary to perfection in tire building, according to A. N. Freeman of Standard Motor Parts Co., Dickinson Ave., local U. S. tire dealer.

The U. S. Rubber Co. is advantageously situated in respect to control of materials and manufacturing processes," Mr. Freeman said. "For example, the company owns the world's largest rubber plantations. It was the first company to develop its own plantations, and last year it produced more than three times as much rubber as all other American rubber companies combined."

In three towns in the cotton section of this country—Hogansville, Ga., Winstonsboro, S. C., and Shelbyville, Tenn.—the company operates its own cotton mills for the fabrication of its own high standard tire cord and material.

At Naugatuck, Conn., the company owns and operates extensive chemical laboratories, where rubber chemicals are produced to its own exacting specifications in large quantities for its own use. At Paterson, N. J., the company maintains one of the world's largest rubber research laboratories. It was here that tempered rubber was evolved."

"DOWN ON THE FARM" IS RENDEZVOUS THEME

Wichy—(AP)—"Down on the farm" is the decorative theme of one of the newest night clubs, where a number of smart Parisians, here for the cure, are dancing o' nights.

Well purals of "that little home in the west," of wheat fields and rambling brooks give a "back to nature effect" which has scored a success with the sophisticates.

Despite the fact that the practice is a most dangerous one for themselves and others, there are still a lot of motorists who show no regard for the stop corners at the intersection of the busy streets here. Yesterday within a short period of time, six motorists failed to obey the stop signs at just one of the intersections here and no doubt the same was going on at other stop corners throughout the city.

In making appointment to fill the vacancy on the State Industrial Commission it is our belief that Governor Ehringhaus could please the people of this section by naming Jack Edwards, of this city, to that post, and at the same time make an excellent appointment. Mr. Edwards is not only well qualified to fill the position but he also has the full endorsement of the Bar of this and some of the surrounding counties and a large number of the citizens.

The farmers should not overlook the necessity of saving all the hay and fodder possible this year. The drought in the Middle West has played havoc with the feed crops there which means that there will be a great shortage this year and what there is for sale will be at a tremendously high price. The Eastern Carolina farmer who gives attention first to making those crops for home consumption is the one who gets along best and feels the pinch of a depression least.

TIGER ISLAND A New Serial by Gouverneur Morris.

SYNOPSIS: Harry Bowers risks himself in charge of a group of animals bound for Singapore. His assistant is Ivy Green whom he and Flint the Boldero's radio man think very attractive. Neither Bowers nor Ivy know that Flint is the Boldero for the insurance.

Chapter 14 GREAT MOMENT

ROUGHLY speaking, the Boldero's course followed the east coast of Borneo. She would, in the course of time, round the north end of that vast and mountainous island and escape a south westerly course for Singapore. But reefs and islands not even noted on any of the particular charts made straight sailing out of the question.

The ocean waters, as is usual in the vicinity of coral formations, teemed with life. It was not unusual for the Boldero to snag her slow way through a gam of floating sperm whales. Porpoises abounded; there were almost incessant silver flashes of flying fish, and the air teemed with birds.

A rhesus monkey died the third day out from unknown causes and Ivy wept. When she wasn't looking, Bowers lowered the pathetic little scrunched-up body overboard. Almost instantly there was a great, strong swirling of water, and a shark took it.

At first the work of helping to look after a menagerie seemed an awful chore to Bowers, then it became interesting and then fascinating. Here and there he was beginning to make friendships.

One parrot, for instance, in a cage containing ten of the same species, would fight for his attention. The monkeys liked Jim. When ever Helen felt that she had been misunderstood by her mistress, she would run to Bowers and tell him all about it, shuffling Ivy from the vantage of his shoulder and saying in monkey-talk that she never wanted to see her or hear of her again.

One day Ivy called to him from the front of the tiger cage. He was not yet on terms with the tigers, but he had hopes. On this occasion the male, as he often did, was pressing his head against the bars of the cage so that he could be conveniently scratched between the ears, and Ivy was scratching him when Bowers came up.

"See if he will let you do it," she said, "and get your hand away quick if he won't." Bowers was not in the least anxious to scratch that particular tiger or any other between the ears. Nevertheless he did as he was told. The tiger instantly recognized the changed technique and growled. The tip of his tail twitched, but otherwise he did not move.

Bowers scratched more strongly, and dug his balls of his fingers into the thick loose scalp. Again the tiger growled, but more softly. It may have been a purr. Bowers scratched and massaged the tiger's scalp until his fingers ached.

By that time the great cat was asleep, and the big-game hunter found himself in a confused and puzzled state of mind. He had made the first definite step toward friendship and understanding with a tiger, and for the first time in his life he had an inkling that striking wild things suddenly dead is not all that it is cracked up to be.

The next day he went by himself to the tiger cage and spoke to the king of the Far Eastern jungle in casual and friendly tones. The female backed into a corner of the cage, flattened her ears and showed her teeth at him; but the male after hesitation came forward, and after one short open-mouthed roar to show what he could do if he chose, bowed down his great head and pressed it against the bars.

Bowers remembered his first real tiger, a striped shadow in the night; the crash and jerk of a heavy express-rifle, then the crash and jerk of the second barrel. He had fired from a platform in a tree, where he was as safe as money in the Bank of England.

He knew that he had hit the tiger twice. He had seen the striped shadow lift and twist and thrash like a newly landed fish, and lie still. But he was not sure that it was dead, and he dared not go down from his platform until the day broke. The day had revealed a medium-sized rather mangy female tiger dead as a stone.

He had not, it is true, had himself photographed re-aring on his trusty rifle and with one foot planted on the tiger's neck to show the superiority of man over the beasts; nevertheless the killing of that first tiger had been one of the great moments of his life. A boyhood dream come true!

Well, here he was massaging the scalp of a live tiger, a tiger which trusting him, had come to him of its own accord and literally asked to have its head scratched! When you came to think of it, it was another great moment. It was really a greater moment than the first, and far more promising of future thrills.

You can only kill one tiger once, but you can scratch a live tiger once, and a dozen times a day if you feel like it, and he will let you.

One of the crew had made a fine medicine ball out of cotton wool and to begin the day Bowers and Flint threw this at each other, caught it, and threw it back until both were in a lather.

Flint was wiry and tough, but Bowers had real power and enjoyed using it. He propelled the medicine ball with great force, and the fact that Flint could not return it with equal force rankled in the wireless man's breast.

Flint had fallen head over ears in love with Ivy and was not able to hide his feelings. If he did not pester her with his attentions, it was because the opportunities were lacking. During most of the daylight hours the menagerie kept her engrossed.

When she rested, it was in one of the lounge chairs, and Bowers was nearly always to be found in the other one.

INDEED, wherever Ivy was to be found at a given time, Bowers was seldom far off. Flint could not make love to her at mealtimes or over the bridge table, and later when Ivy changed to pyjamas and went forward to her sleeping place in the bows, followed by Bowers at a short interval and sometimes accompanied by him, the wireless operator suffered with the intensity of a jealous child.

Observation taught him that the animal trainer was not in love with the big-game hunter, but told was no proof that the charm and intelligence of the older man would win her in the long run. If Bowers was in earnest, as Flint was beginning to think, it did not seem credible that any young woman could hold out against him forever.

Flint had never been in love before. The passion bewildered and baffled him. At times he would feel murderous, at times suicidal, at times bereaved and aching with melancholy. He began to suffer from a form of insomnia. He would prow about the ship for hours of the night. If only he could have changed places with Bowers.

To watch over her and protect her was his idea of heaven. Often the jealousy in his heart drew him forward. Sometimes Ivy and Bowers would be awake, and he would hear the sounds of their voices, casual and even humorous. The bows were a black triangle against the night. It was a blackness into which no eye however straining could pierce. Flint strained his eyes and stretched his ears, but something withheld him from going close enough to overhear what was being said. If he could have overheard the usual talk, he could perhaps have gone back to his mattress outside the wireless room and slept. He might have heard some such conversation as this:

Bowers perhaps is awake and thinks that it would be much pleasanter if Ivy were awake too. Perhaps she is. He will find out. He remarks in a voice that is neither loud nor a whisper:

"It's hotter than hell."

Ivy responds with:

"Don't interrupt me. I'm counting."

"Counting what?"

"Sheep."

Against the dark velvet of the night, sprinkled with stars, the black triangle of the bows rises and falls with a kind of slow cosmic indifference. One tiger whines. The other answers, and Bowers remarks:

"Seems funny to think that there are men who actually hunt powerless tigers and murder them!"

"Shush!"

"I'd say more than that to you. You like me more than you do."

Tomorrow, some truths come out of a nocturnal chat.

Texas position on capitol hill at present is an object of envy. An even half-dozen committee chairmanships in the house, two in the senate, to say nothing of the vice presidency, is the Lone Star State's share in the present administration. To add to this commanding position in national affairs, the speaker-ship, considered by many as second only to the presidency itself, is something to worry all politicians.

Yet it has happened before — on an even larger scale.

Christópher Awakens Them

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER "I'll caw, caw, caw in my loudest voice," said Christopher. "Top Notch will bark, the bears will growl, Rip will bark, and all the rest of you will shout to them to get up."

"That's a good idea," smiled Willy Nilly, and the farmers and the children agreed to shout, too. Now that the farmers had looked more thoroughly over the place they believed that their animals had merely eaten a great deal and were now too lazy to get up.

Yes, they were anxious to get away while Willy Nilly was too weary to say anything to them.

So they all started to shout, and Rip barked and Top Notch growled. Then Christopher flew down to the pond and told the Puddle Muddle ducks to quack-quack so as to awaken the visiting ducks.

The ducks were the first to awaken and came waddling up the hill to Puddle Muddle. They thought the noise-making was such fun that they joined in, too.

In fact Puddle Muddle was a riot of sound. Dat Christopher Columbus Crow's voice rose above all the others. "Caw, caw, caw, caw, caw," he shouted. "Get up. It's time to leave."

At last the sleeping ones awoke, and drowsily stretched and then started with their owners for home. Willy Nilly and the Puddle Muddlers watched the procession of departing guests go down the hill. At last, at last, Puddle Muddle belonged to them again!

PREFERS PRISON LIFE TO HIGHWAY ACTIVITY

Durham, Aug. 30.—Found guilty of breaking into a Norfolk and Western refrigerator car here, Isaac Spann was given by Judge N. A. Sinclair the choice of a two-year road sentence or a three-year prison sentence. Spann chose the latter.

When Judge Sinclair passed the road sentence in Superior court here

Spahn objected. He preferred two years in state's prison. Judge Sinclair raised it to three years, but that didn't matter to Spann. He said the benefits of prison life would offset the extra twelve months.

Kinston Wins Opening Game Of Post Series

The second game of the post series of the Coastal Plain league will be played here this afternoon and the largest crowd ever to witness a game on the local diamond was expected to be on hand to help boost the Greens to victory.

The curtain was wrung up on the championship series in Kinston yesterday with Bunn Hearne's boys walking away with an 11 to 1 victory.

The contest was witnessed by a crowd of nearly two thousand people, numbers of them from Greenville and other towns comprising the league. The game at the outset held promise of a real battle, but Greenville weakened and a murderous batting attack by the Hearnmen in the fourth stanza chalked up six runs and put the game on ice.

Greenville scored their only run in the second frame and after that "Lefty" Rogers had the visitors virtually eating out of his hand the most of the route. He allowed only three hits.

Traylor was rapped freely by the Hearnmen. He allowed a total of ten hits, all of which figured largely in the scoring. Greenville was credited with five bobbles which also prove costly.

Sensational fielding by Zaiser and Love of Kinston and Bostle of Greenville marked the contest.

Irwing of Kinston accounted for the only extra base hit of the game.

Play will be continued in Greenville and Kinston each day until four out of seven games have been won. Rated to win, Kinston was said to be trying to finish the contest in four straight games, but Greenville promised more competition during the remainder of the play especially on the home lot today and Saturday.

Washington, (AP)—Legislation by the seventy-third congress which had importance beyond the borders of the United States included:

The granting of political independence to the Philippine islands; ratification of a treaty with Cuba which struck out the Platt amendment under which the United States was obligated to intervene in island affairs for the perpetuation of peace; enactment of the Johnson bill prohibiting loans to debtor countries in default to the United States; authorization of 26 additional war craft to the American fleet; and an embargo on the shipment of arms to belligerents in the Gran Chaco.

NO HARD FEELINGS OVER SCHOOL DECISION

Kinston, Aug. 30—There will be no hard feelings between the Contentnea community, in Lenoir county, and the Grifton community, in Pitt county because members of the State School Commission have decided there should be no annexation of a part of the Contentnea school district to the Grifton district. Residents of Grifton proposed the annexation "for reasons of economy."

The Contentnea consolidated school is the one imposing building in that community. The building is a model, and the grounds are beautiful. Patrons are proud of the school's high rating. They boast it is the best rural school in eastern North Carolina. When any improvements to the building or grounds is necessary the entire community turns out and goes to work. The school would have lost three teachers had the movement started at Grifton been successful.

ALLEGED GANGSTER IS TAKEN TO GEORGIA

TEETH THE MEAL TICKET

First, the solo performance of "Rubber," a female elephant of the herd with this show. Of course, the members of the circus company know and admire the unusual intelligence of Rubber because they see much more of her conduct than does the public. However, the one big thing "Rubber" does before the public is sufficient to entitle her to attention from the most popular of magazine writers.

After appropriate costume is adjusted to her, Rubber is unchained in her place in the menagerie and without any trainer to guide or to prompt her, going absolutely alone and unattended, she enters the big circus tent, goes around the hippodrome track doing her comic march changing her steps frequently and keeping time with the band. Rubber does not falter or hesitate, but marches steadily along until she has completed the circle. Then, still unattended, she faces the center ring and goes down on her front knees and raises her trunk in salute to the audience. Rubber is positively the only elephant in the world so perfectly trained and dependable.

The other animal which proved unusually attractive to the magazine editor was "Topsy," a young chimpanzee. Topsy is the household pet of the owners of the show. They do not exhibit her and she is not trained. She is treated as any human child and has her own way most of the time, same as any spoiled child. One needs only to be with Topsy ten minutes to discover that she has the mind of a human and in fact is more sensible at her age of one year and a half, than most children at six or seven years.

Topsy is not on exhibition, but the owners have to take her with them on the summer's tour, for there is no one with whom they could trust her at winter quarters. However, the main reason for bringing her along in the summer is that she is so attached to the owners and so affectionate with them and craves their attention and affection so much, that to separate her from them would mean her death in a few weeks. More than one chimpanzee has died in captivity when separated from the one person to whom they had become accustomed.

Russell Bros. Circus has become one of the largest of the country and on this, the first trip of this show to the eastern half of the country, it has thoroughly established itself and will be remembered on account of its clean character and scores of unusual incidents connected with it—just as these mentioned here regarding Rubber, the elephant and Topsy, and when the Russell Bros. Circus exhibits in Greenville next Monday, Sept. 3rd it will doubtless win thousands of more admirers who will be glad to welcome it on a return trip.

DURHAM OFFICERS SEIZE MONSTER LIQUOR STILL

Durham, Aug. 30—What is believed to be the largest still ever to be seized by officers in Durham county was destroyed last night in the Lebanon township, most notorious blockading center in the county. The mammoth plant was conservatively estimated to be of 500 gallons capacity. Fifty-five hundred gallons of beer were discovered stored in vats, ready to be "run" into well-known and aged Lebanon township corn liquor. Fifty-five cases of half gallon fruit jars were also confiscated.
