DRIVE CAREFULLY TODAY

INATTENTION

If there is any place in the world where silence is really golden, it is in the driver's seat. When the tongue wags, the mind lags. Driving a car is a full-time job. It cannot safely be combined with socializing, sight-seeing, window-shopping or day-dreaming. Just remember that if you are traveling at even 30 miles an hour you will go 44 feet in that single second that your head is turned or your mind lapses.

TIGER ISLAND A New Serial by Gouverneur Morris

SYNOPSIS: Ivy Green is assisting Harry Bowers, big game hunter, who is busy taking a cargo of wild animals to Singapore.

Chapter 17 FUTURE PLANS

"Some people," said Bowers, "have subconscious memories, remembering things that happened a million years ago, maybe ten million."

"The first tiger I ever killed was a saber-toothed tiger—dream tiger. I was in an open space half way between the river and the forest where I lived. He came after me and I ran, but my legs weren't made for running and I couldn't get to the trees fast enough and besides I was carrying a heavy wooden club.

"I stopped and turned and the tiger jumped for me. His mouth was open flat like a rattlesnake's when it strikes and the two saber-teeth stuck straight out in front just like the rattlesnake's fangs, only they were as big as bayonets.

"Then I woke up, and I bet I was five pounds lighter than when I had gone to sleep.

"I took to big-game hunting for exactly the same reason that a duck takes to water: instinct. You know there's lots more to it than just the killing. You've said more than once that the hunter is armed to the teeth and takes no risks.

"The hunter takes as few risks as he can, but he can't duck out of all of them. If he keeps long enough at the hunting, some animal will get him or if it doesn't the hunt will, He risks the most dreadful hardships and fevers. And if he can confine himself to members of the cat-family, he is of good service to the community in which he hunts."

"Yes," she said, "I understand better than I did. I have for some time. But now that you have seen the other side; now that Big Ben (this was the name they had given the male tiger) comes to you of his own accord to be petted and depends on us for food and his clean cage, don't you feel different?"

"I do about Big Ben," said Bowers, and he was sincere.

"I have the hunting instinct too," said Ivy. "But I couldn't kill anything or see anything killed. I'd love to go hunting with a camera."

"If you ever decide to try it," said Bowers, "especially on the dangerous animals, you will have to have a cover-up man with a big bang-stick, and the man might as well be me.

"You know," he went on hurriedly, "that isn't a bad idea. After Singapore, let's do it. We'll plan a trip into a country that neither of us knows. I'll only kill for food and to save life. We'll take along an expert camera-man and make a movie. There might be a piece of change in it. I'll put up the capital and we'll share the profits."

"It's fun to think about," said Ivy. "It will be much more fun to do," said Bowers, "especially now. Now that we have been frank with each other and we have got everything explained and ironed out. How about it?"

"I don't suppose you know," he said, "that I like you a lot. I haven't said anything about it, but I don't suppose I have been able to keep it to myself."

"That's because I am the only woman in sight," said Ivy with some bitterness.

"Maybe that was true," he said, "just at first. But it isn't true now. Your attitude to your job and to life in general makes you a very unusual person, even if you are the only girl in sight. I have the greatest admiration and respect for you."

She made no answer.

"And on top of that," he went on, "there's the liking you a lot. I would be sorry," he said, "to like you so much if I were sure that you were never going to like me, because then I'd know that there were pain and misery ahead of me and I am not used to either."

"You have always had everything you wanted in this world, just about when you wanted it, haven't you?"

"One of the lucky ones," he admitted. "Why? Am I as spoiled as that? Does it stick out all over me?"

"You're not as spoiled as you might be," she said.

"Not by you, I'm not."

He heard the whisper of a laugh. "But you ought to reform," he said. "You have been bad to me. You just said so yourself. The best way to make up for that is to spoil me, if only a little."

Ivy quoted from the Blake poem in a cooing voice: "Tiger, tiger burning bright. . . For answer, Bowers returned an admirable imitation of a cat purring, and they both laughed.

"How old are you anyway?" asked Ivy. "Thirty-three."

"Why don't you grow up?" "I will," he said, "if you'll promise to go on that camera-hunt. It would be a great test for both of us."

"A test of what?" "Well," he said, "if we found at the end of three months or so in the jungle of Southern India we were still friends, then we'd know that we would always get on together anywhere."

"Would that be worth finding out?" "That," he said, "would depend on you. Are you interested?"

"I'd be a fool if I wasn't. Once this job's done, I have no place to go, no one to turn to. Those things aren't easy to live with."

"You don't have to worry about that," said Bowers. "If the worst comes to the worst, if you won't go camera-hunting with me, I'll see that you get back to America, and that there is the kind of job you want waiting for you. So although I have issued you a polite invitation, you are under no compulsion whatever to accept it."

"I can't help believing you," she said. "I think you'd do a lot for me with no strings attached."

"This trip," said Bowers, "has been fun, but now that we have decided to be friends and stop sparring, it's going to be more fun. I suppose you know that when I tell you I like you a lot, I mean a lot more. I think about you all the time. Will you believe me if I tell you that it's a new experience?"

"First you tell me," she said lightly, "that you are thirty-three years old and then you want me to believe that this is the first time you ever felt in a certain way."

"It is the first time," said Bowers, "and I give you my word, that my feelings about any young woman have been domestic. When I was cleaning my guns and you were dressmaking and we were close together and nobody saying anything I was happy."

"I liked it too," she admitted. "Being alone is no fun. I have had my fill of that."

"You don't have to be alone any more ever if you don't want to be." "Just what do you mean by that?" "That you can have me always as a companion if you'll say the word."

"I'd better tell you," she said, "I have heard that before and it didn't turn out that way."

JACK HOXIE DOWNIE CIRCUS STAR

JACK HOXIE AND SCOUT

Jack Hoxie, famous cowboy screen star, pictured above now on a personal appearance tour with Downie Bros. Circus will be here with the big show Tuesday, Sept. 11 when it comes for its scheduled matinee and night engagement.

The famous screen cowboy is bringing his entire Hollywood company of cowboys and cowgirls including Miss Dixie Starr, the little heroine of many of his western thrillers, to assist him in his reproductions of highlights from some of his outstanding screen achievements which are staged at each performance of the circus.

It will afford western picture fans an opportunity to see just how these tense moments, those thrilling stunts and the daring riding and shooting of the screen dramas are enacted and with cameras clicking amid the flow of real "Klieg lights" sound technicians catching every word and actual movies are made with B. F. Tyson's lot in the circus tent as a regular part of his performance.

There are hundreds of circusdom's celebrities in the cast of the big show and such outstanding names as the Hanneford family of bare-back riders, the Flying Brocks, Marion Shuford and her thirty dancing horses, hosts of acrobats, gymnasts, equestrians and an army of clowns headed by Minert DeOrlo, the clown cop.

The street parade over a mile in length and all new will be an added attraction which will take place at noon circus day.

Russell Bros. Circus Shows Here Today. The Winslow show grounds, idle since last year suddenly became the scene of concentrated activity yesterday morning, and by noon had been transformed into a small city of canvas. This abrupt change was occasioned by the arrival in Greenville of Russell Brothers Three Ring Circus, making its initial tour of this section to establish here the favorable reputation it has enjoyed for years in the West.

The caravan of 72 trucks, trailers and living cars which transport America's largest motorized circus started to arrive at about 8 o'clock Sunday morning, and the large group of spectators on hand the next few hours were afforded entertainment almost as varied as the circus itself. Some gathered around the huge vans in which the uncaged animals are transported, watching elephants, camels, horses and ponies alight and stretch after their 97-mile ride from Elizabeth City, the Saturday night, or perched between cracks in the covered cages to catch glimpses of lions, leopards, hyenas, bears and those surefire menagerie comedians—the monkeys. Others preferred to watch the large crew of workmen erect the various tents—the menagerie, side show, living and dressing tents, the all-important cook tent and the "big top" in which the show's main performance will be repeated at 8 o'clock tonight. Rain or shine, of course, for the management assures its patrons of dry seats under waterproof canvas.

Outstanding among 30 or more acts in the program itself are those of the Flying Lavans, casting-return aerialists and the Riding Rooneys, English bareback artists. While all of the performers rank high in their respective lines, the success of these acts is due largely to the fun provided by Bones an elongated and most comical "man on the flying trapeze" in striped tights and Ted Rooney the riding clown.

Dalbeane, Australian wonder man stars with his balancing exhibition on a wagon wheel and a staircase—an act never successfully copied. Athleta, dainty young aerialist, provides thrills with a series of sensational heel and toe catches on the high swinging trapeze. Dad Whitlark, 79 year old veteran of the white top, amazes with an aerial contortion exhibition.

Frank Miller presents a troupe of well schooled dancing horses, Captain Smith's four educated elephants go through a finished routine, one of them giving a performance entirely unassisted by its trainer.

These and many other acts combine to provide two hours of first rate entertainment, well spiced by the buffoonery of a dozen or so clowns.

The management takes great pride in the cleanliness of the organization as in the high quality of its performance. There are no money-making games, and each employee is trained rigidly to treat patrons with courtesy.

Says Hollywood Does Not Foster Poor Fashions. By ADELAIDE KERR. Paris—(AP)—Style, or the lack of it—not sex—is Paris' complaint against the movies.

While various organizations in the United States protest against too much sex in films, one of the foremost dress designers here charges with with ruining women's chic.

"Decadence in dress" is Madame Schiaparelli's characterization of the present period, and the movies, she says, are largely to blame, at least so far as America is concerned.

"Exaggeration, elaborations—anything but simplicity—seem to be the aim of motion picture dress designers when they clothe their stars, she asserts. "Americans go to the movies, then go home and copy their favorite actresses' clothes."

"Big sleeves, trailing organdy ruffles, exaggerated collars, feather everywhere until I feel we can no longer look a bird in the face. Those are the effects we see in the movies and not the effects which create real smartness. Chic lies in simplicity, in framing the body and face, not over-elaborating them."

"Three years ago I went to America and was deeply impressed by the chic of American women. A short while ago I returned and was shocked by their lack of that same quality. They seemed to be trying to wear everything at once."

Paris is falling into the same pitfall of bad dressing, in the opinion of the dynamic Italian designer. A few dressmakers here, she says, are "copying the movies," giving their results to their clients and "too many are accepting them."

"There are still elegantly dressed women in Paris," she says, "but this summer I saw some horrors. All due to over-elaboration."

Another factor which is causing bad dressing, Madame Schiaparelli believes, is women's desire to create a dazzling effect on a reduced clothes allowance. Too few, she says, "realize that one good dress with a change of accessories is worth a dozen over-elaborate ones."

Coming back to the movies again, Madame Schiaparelli declares that she thinks motion picture dress designers in Hollywood are far from poor.

"On the contrary, I think there are very able ones among them and that they do remarkably well under the circumstances. But they work against great odds. In the first place I believe new and interesting materials inspire fashions and they have few novel ones with which to work. They must fall back on the stand-bys—satin and crepe de chine."

"In the second place, there are the star's caprices, her mother's whims, the director's desires, the scene's demands all to be considered. In the end it amazes me that they do as well as they do."

By ROBBIN COONS. Hollywood—(AP)—Hollywood never deliberately makes a poor picture, but Hollywood designers frequently make "bad" dresses—on purpose.

They also says Travis Banton, one of the noted studio designers, make some very good ones. And can Hollywood be blamed—he asks—if women who would be smart adapt the bad ones along with the good? "Hollywood," declares Banton, "has never pretended to be the Rue de la Paix. It is always well-meaning visitors who claim for Hollywood the distinction of style superiority, never any of Hollywood's designers.

But as for Madame Schiaparelli's charge that the movies are to blame largely for what she calls "decadence in dress," Banton has to smile.

"Feathers everywhere until I feel we can no longer look a bird in the face," he muses over Madame's remarks. "Well, I could take that personally, you know. I'm fond of feathers—in their place."

"The trouble is that people insist on taking film clothes out of their contexts in the film, which is as unfair as judging a book on an isolated phrase. Take the things I made for Marlene Dietrich in 'Shanghai Express.' There were some feathers, all right. No woman of taste would dress as I dressed her for train-traveling. What they forget is that Miss Dietrich in that picture portrayed a demi-mondaine, whose clothes would be flashy and gaudy. Adapted for evening wear, however, the same outfit would be suitable."

Here's another good example—the clothes I made for Carole Lombard for 'Twentieth Century.' She played a young girl from the dime store who became a famous and temperamental stage actress. I dressed her extremely flashily, as a girl of her type would dress. Miss Lombard is now making 'Now and Forever,' playing a woman of a different sort. The clothes she wears for that role, I think, will not be frowned upon by Madame."

"Just because I moved my workshop across the continent," he declares, "is no sign that I have changed my methods or my point of view. I think this applies to other Hollywood designers as well."

A badly-dressed woman, contends Banton, will be badly dressed anywhere. Rare is the movie star who insists on "something terrible," so that the studio designer eventually gives in, but she has her counterpart in the patrons of private shops—in Hollywood, New York and Paris. "Bad" clothes emerge from all three cities, along with the good ones.

Compliments

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER. "Yes," continued the first of the two men who had come to see Willy Nilly, the little knome-like man, and his animal friends in Puddle Muddle, "you have a very fine collection of animals here."

"You have such a good assortment. Now some people only have a dog and maybe a cat, or perhaps a few barnyard animals, too."

"But you have such a variety. For example, there is your dog and he seems to be a splendid dog."

"Indeed my Rip is a beautiful, devoted dog," agreed Willy Nilly, "and I'm devoted to him."

Rip looked at Willy Nilly with his soft, mild eyes, and wagged his tail, and then nudged up very close to Willy Nilly and put his head in the little man's lap.

Willy Nilly stroked Rip's silky ears and wondered what the man would say next.

"You have a handsome crow, too," and Christopher Columbus Crow cawed proudly at this praise.

"You have beautiful ducks as well," said the second man, and Mr. and Mrs. Quacko Duck quacked happily to hear this.

Mrs. Quacko even decided she must soon go over and tell Mrs. Quacker of Quackerville about this compliment. That would make the snobbish Mrs. Quacker sit up and take a little duck notice!

"Your rooster's white feathers and his red comb give him a very grand appearance," continued the second man.

Top Notch, the rooster, took out his little mirror and looked at himself admiringly.

But Willy Nilly was puzzled by these two strange men and their talk.

Greenville Leads Kinston 3 To 2 In Post Series Tilt

TODAY'S GAME MAY SETTLE FLAG SCRAP

After knocking all prognostications of the sports kingdom into a cocked hat, the Greenville baseball club today gripped the Coastal Plain league flag a little tighter and entered the final stretch of the post series with Kinston firmly determined to keep the banner on the local lot another year.

By taking three of the five championship contests from Kinston, Greenville has not only made a number of oracular sports writers feel rather foolish, but has placed herself in position where this afternoon's game will either give them the title for the second time in two years or force the series into another game to settle the dispute.

Entering the race last week as what numbers of sports writers termed "the underdog" Greenville prepared to go into the game this afternoon a favorite with only one game necessary to clinch the title in what has been one of the most spectacular championship series ever witnessed in this part of the country.

Last year's champions showed something of their old time skill in the field and at bat Friday, Saturday and Sunday and made the crack Kinston club look just like any other ball club, although they had been winning consistently the most of the season behind splendid pitching.

The slim wrist of David Smith, Whiteville high school boy, Friday turned the tide of what appeared to be sure defeat for the locals into a determined march to victory.

Saturday Kinston came to Greenville to chalk up their third victory of the series. They felt sure of accomplishing the feat because Lefty Dean was to be pitted against their beloved Lefty Rogers.

Dean has been suffering from a bad arm all season and had met lots of reverses, but he did what sports writers and Kinston fans said was impossible by turning the visitors back with only one run while his teammates were registering two. It was not only Dean, last year's master of the mound at work, but it was the rejuvenated "Chubby" whose fight back to form and his final victory won the admiration not only of the ball club but all those who knew of the disadvantage under which he had been working all season.

The Greenville southpaw not only beat Rogers, who was credited with twenty victories and one loss this season, but capped the climax when he fanned the hard-hitting Kinston hurler in the final frame with runners on the paths.

Yesterday Traylor, who lost to the Hearmen in the first game of the series, demonstrated his ability to hold the cocky Kinstonians in check while his teammates were lambasting Bolger, another crack Kinston hurler, for fourteen safe blows and six runs. The score was Greenville six, Kinston two.

The game was witnessed by around two thousand people, and its outcome made Kinston stock fall perceptibly. Prior to the game, bets had ranged two to one in favor of Kinston, and the first of the week as high as ten to two.

Dean made five Kinstonians whiff the air in a futile attempt to connect with his offerings Saturday afternoon and allowed eight well scattered hits. He also hit two singles to aid in Greenville scoring.

Kinston's single tally came in the fourth when Lambreth threw wild to first on Weathers grounder. Hayworth doubled after Irwin had sacrificed and Weathers scored.

Pandemonium broke loose in the eighth frame when a double by Bostic singled by Lambreth and a perfect bunt by May enabled Bostic to score. Harrington singled to left and Lambreth raced home with the winning run.

Kinston apparently meant to do some more scoring in the ninth, but the threat proved a water haul as Dean fanned Rogers after a single and two outs.

Yesterday Traylor held the Hearmen to seven well scattered hits while Greenville was hammering out fourteen to win the fifth game of the series. Traylor held Kinston's "touted murderers row" hitless and made big Jim Tatum biff the ozone three times.

Kinston did its scoring in the first when Irwin singled. Zaiser walked Hayworth doubled after the two runners had stolen a base each.

Late News Flashes

sult of the general strike call in the industry and union flying squadrons were reported ready to force additional shutdowns.
Around 75,000 workers paid no heed to the strike call.
Conflicting claims as to how many walked out of mills which continued to operate made it impossible to determine the status of all the more than 150,000 workers in the two states.
Not all of the idle workers could be called as participating in the strike. Out of the 200 mills known to be closed only about 100 were actually forced down by pickets. The status of the others remained doubtful. These were picketed but had announced they would not open until after Labor Day, thereby delaying a test of union strength.
Approximately 20,000 of today's idle were in Gaston county where only 8 of the 104 plants attempted to operate. These were running with some reduced force.
On the other side of the picture 220 mills were known to operating, many of them without molestation. Some were picketed quietly with more efforts on the part of the unionists scheduled for a time when later shifts will seek to enter. There are more than 700 mills in the two states.

Ruth Hits Homer
New York, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Babe Ruth hit his second home run in three days and his 21st of the season today when he parked one of Bill Dietrich's deliveries in the right field bleachers in the first inning of the first game of the Yankee-Athletic double bill.
The drive gave the Yanks a lead of 1 to 0.

To Call Troops in S. C. Strike
Columbia, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Governor Ibra Blackwood issued a statement here today saying he had requested Adjutant General James C. Dozier to have national guards ready to make quick mobilization and to send militia to such places as may be serious trouble.
The governor said no troops had been mobilized nor dispatched to any place except those which had already been sent to the Lonsdale strike area at Seneca.
National guards will not be ordered out the governor said until serious trouble is already apparent.

Askev Given Bond
Goldboro, Sept. 3.—(AP)—The Rev. R. H. Askev, 23 year old "four square gospel" evangelist charged with attempted extortion for the kidnapping hoax that officers said he confessed perpetrating last month was free today under $5,000 bond.
Askev was jailed August 20 after confessing officers said, the left Goldboro voluntarily and himself wrote notes to his wife and Almee Temple McPherson head of the four square gospel movement, demanding $25,000 ransom for his return.
Bond for the minister was signed Saturday by his wife, M. L. Jones, J. C. Hinson, Jesse James and Mrs. W. L. Pearce. He is to receive preliminary hearing September 7.

Rain Ends Cuban Strike Battle
Havana, Sept. 3.—(AP)—A terrific electrical and rain storm struck Havana at 1:40 today ending a lively battle between strikers and guards around the Cuban telegraph company building.
Previous to the rain all Havana was tense as students disorders spread all over the Capitol city and the strike movement gained momentum.
The latest disturbance broke out in front of the high school in central park where soldiers and police fired into the air to disperse groups of students who stood in streets and fired pistols at the trolley wires and telephone cables in an effort to disrupt electrical service.
Meantime the strikers committee was successful in persuading government workers to join the 24 hour strike called yesterday.

Mills Hum In S. C.
Greenville, S. C., Sept. 3.—(AP)—Mill machinery hummed a widespread retort to the strike call today at southern headquarters of the general textile strike here although hundreds of pickets offered passive resistance through this decision and at Seneca one mill flaunted red bunting.
The score of high-walled plants rode like ships through the first crisis of the industrial storm at 7 a. m., the hour most day shifts reported to work. No general disorders were reported.

SAYS FOUNTAIN MILL UNION FAVORS STRIKE

Tarboro, Sept. 3.—Fountain mill local United Textile Workers, voted to strike when called said Elmer Rogers, president of the union, this afternoon. "The statement in this morning's News and Observer that the local voted against a strike was a mistake. Hart mill voted against the strike but we voted for it."

ager of the mill, said the plant would close at noon today.
Kannapolis—The strike threat failed to materialize in Kannapolis and 5,000 workers in the world's largest towel mill and other plants went to work this morning as usual.
High Point—Except for Labor Day holiday observed in several plants, cotton, silk and hosiery mills of High Point and Thomasville operated without incident.

Salisbury—One local textile plant Klumac mill, had a 100 per cent walkout this morning and another Cannon Mill No. 7 had 33 employees including overseers, out of about 450 who reported for work.
