Typhoon Causes Death And Suffering at Manila

Manila, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Four fishermen were reported drowned off Catanalogan on the Island of Samar in the first account of the loss of life in yesterday's devastating typhoon. Estimates placed the homeless at 20,000 in the town of Naga, a provincial capital on Luzon Island. Red Cross workers prepared to send relief on the first train tomorrow for Naga, apparently the most hard-hit city in the island. The four drowned off Catanalogan were lost when the gale overturned their launch. A fifth native was swept out into the ocean, but this fate had not been determined. Telegraphic communication between Manila and eleven provinces, mostly south of here, were disrupted by the storm the worst of the series that have visited the archipelago in the last six weeks. A few radio stations whose aeriels survived the wind furnished the only communications of the section.

COLLECT DATA IN THIS AREA

Eastern Carolina Association Busy With Facts on Resources Of Territory

The Eastern North Carolina Association has begun the compiling of facts and gathering of statistical, agricultural and industrial data covering all counties in Eastern North Carolina.

When the survey is completed it will be published in condensed directory form. A brief historical outline of each individual county, facts, resources, industries and all pertinent statistical data concerning every county will be included. The research department will compile and keep detailed records of the survey findings will be available to all local Chambers of Commerce, institutions and others seeking information about our section or any of its counties.

When the condensed survey is completed in directory form it will be given wide circulation throughout the counties in the area, enabling our own people to know Eastern North Carolina better and at the same time will be used in conjunction with the association's general publicity movement with many copies going out of State corporations and industries from whom the association is receiving inquiries about the section.

According to S. F. Dickenson, secretary of the organization, this survey will be invaluable in the movement to interest industry in locating branch plants in our area for the purpose of manufacturing, at home, the raw products now shipped to other sections, manufactured there and re-sold to our local citizens. He further pointed out that we not only fail to create local industrial pay-rolls, but also pay double freight on top of the manufacturing and distribution cost. A survey of this character is of basic importance to intelligently attack this problem, it was pointed out.

Although discussion of the closing date for the markets of this belt has been under way for some time, Mr. Cobb said this morning no decision had been reached yet. The offerings here yesterday consisted mainly of common grades and damaged leaf and this played an important part in holding down the general market average. Common grades are always in evidence at this season of the year, but it is probable the offerings are more pronounced at this time than any other part of the season.

Two of the standards on the side of the bear broke and four of the 40-foot poles rolled on Mr. Herring, crushing his body from the waist to the head. He tried to get out of the way, but the poles caught him. There were ten workmen in the crew, but Mr. Herring was the only one injured. The body was taken to Wilmington for burial.

He is survived by his mother, his widow, one child, and a sister, all of Wilmington.

Measured opinion, now that the votes have been counted, is that the House is apt to boil on occasions but the Senate will always be on hand to cool it off—exactly as the Father ordered.

Saturation: It may not reach its destination but the sales tax is headed for a ride next January. In the past Congressional members from the South and West killed every proposal of this form of revenue-raising. Proponents from the East and North always sneeringly inferred it was because too many members of Congress from opposite directions represented people.

LEAF SALES STILL SHRINK

Bad Weather Causes Smallest Offering of The Year on Local Market Yesterday

Due to cold, rainy weather Tuesday night and part of yesterday sales on the Greenville tobacco market dropped to the lowest figure of the season but were expected to pick up somewhat today with the advent of improved weather conditions.

The report of K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales, revealed that the market sold 75,902 pounds of leaf yesterday for which growers were paid $19,723.15 at an average of $25.99 per hundred pounds. The sale brought the season's total to 49,645,000 pounds for which there had been paid $15,721,468.54 at an average of $31.66 per hundred pounds.

Although discussion of the closing date for the markets of this belt has been under way for some time, Mr. Cobb said this morning no decision had been reached yet. COUNTY TAXES MOVE SWIFTLY

Pit County tax collections for the fall are double those for the same period last year, J. H. Coward, county auditor, revealed this morning. Collections for this year were given by the auditor as $306,192.30 as compared with $149,968.68 for the same period last year. Mr. Coward said that $143,576.21 of this fall's collections involved this year's taxes, the balance being paid on back years.

Mr. Coward said the average daily collections since September had been $4,500. The best day on record was $13,945.

The auditor said the goal for October was $150,000, and that the entire amount was collected. The goal for this month has been placed at $100,000, and to date $83,000 of the sum has already been collected, and the month is just half gone.

With such a fine start for November, Mr. Coward expressed belief the goal would be overshot considerably by the end of the month when the final check has been made. Total county appropriations for this fiscal year are $355,000. Mr. Coward stated, and tax collections to date lack only a matter of $49,000 reaching the figure.

Durham, N. C., Nov. 15.—W. L. Totten, of Durham, former Hillsboro agent for Ford Motors, yesterday instituted suit for libel in Superior Court against the Ford Motor Company of Dearborn, Mich., seeking to recover $100,000 damages for being accused of misappropriating for purchase price of two automobiles.

He claims that this statement, made last March by the Ford Motor Company, in connection with his agency in Hillsboro, seriously handicapped and damaged his business and reputation, and "otherwise humiliated and embarrassed him in all his relations of life."

CLARENCE E. WICKER IS HELD FOR COURT

Miller, 32-year-old taxi driver, last Friday afternoon here resulted in Miller's death soon afterward, today was bound over to Superior Court on a charge of manslaughter by Judge J. R. Patton. In default of $1,000 bond, he was remanded to jail.

Wicker originally was booked with a first-degree murder charge. Upon hearing the evidence of four State's witnesses, Judge Patton declared there was no evidence that the killing was premeditated and ordered the warrant amended to manslaughter. The defense, represented by R. O. Everett, offered no evidence.

FOUR DIE IN FIRE IN N. Y.

Seventy-Eighth Street Residents Perish in Flames That Destroy Apartment

New York, Nov. 15.—(AP)—An early morning fire in the five-story dwelling at 306 West 78th Street cost the lives of Henry Drowne, retired wool merchant, his wife and two servants—a man and woman—today. The woman, believed to have been Mrs. Drowne, screamed the first word of the fire from the top floor about 5:30. Flames already were racing up the stairs from the basement where the fire apparently started.

Firemen fought the fire for half an hour before they were able to go into the building. Drowne's body was found on the third floor and a woman's on the top floor. Residents in the adjoining house were notified by police to dress and be ready to flee if necessary.

Durham, N. C., Nov. 15.—J. P. Searcy, Harnett tobacco farmer, reported to police headquarters today that he was robbed of $130, after selling his tobacco at a local market and taking a couple drinks. APPROACH WITH CAUTION!

Two out of every five traffic accidents take place at street intersections. The safety department of the Carolina Motor Club has repeatedly made the assertion that "the traffic accident problem is essentially a problem of safe approach speeds at intersections." "If traffic accidents are to be reduced, they can only be reduced by forcing or persuading motorists to approach crossings cautiously."

Late News Flashes

Settlement of Saar No Longer Possible

London, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Pierre Laval, Foreign Minister, said today that the settlement of the troubled problem of the Saar basin territory by direct negotiations between France and Germany was no longer possible. "France must act within the League of Nations," he told the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Chamber of Deputies, indicating France would demand strict adherence to the terms of the Versailles treaty requiring that Germany pay for the territory if the inhabitants of the Saar vote to rejoin Germany in the plebiscite to be conducted in January.

The Foreign Minister, who formerly favored a face to face talk with Reichsfuhrer Hitler, said: "The hour of direct conversations is past." (Continued on page four)

In addition, 320,000 pounds of rice and 19,803 pounds of cheese were shipped into that State as part of the Federal relief program. Director Harry L. Hopkins announced yesterday.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—(AP)—The warden said over one hundred acres in Pactolus, Chicod and Beaver Dam Townships have been burned over the last few days with a loss of several hundred dollars. A similar number of fires a week or so ago destroyed a similar amount of property in another section of the county. King said, as he called on hunters who visit the woods from time to time to be careful with fire.

The coming of Thanksgiving will be the signal for the pilgrimage of hundreds of additional hunters to go to the woods, the warden asserted and unless they are very careful fires from carelessly handled cigarettes or cigars may result in the loss of hundreds of dollars worth of valuable timber land. In spite of the slight rainfall in this territory recently, King said vegetation is very dry, and a tiny fire can cause a great conflagration with heavy loss. King said he had warden in all parts of the county, but that they would be unable to cope with the situation without the co-operation of the public, and urged that due attention be given to the handling of fire in the woods.

Fire Warden Urges Public to be Careful With Fire While in The Woods

Four new forest fires in this county today caused R. W. King, County Fire Warden, to issue a warning to hunters to be careful with fire while in the woods. Chapter 45
FIGHT

"EXCEPTING the night I met Hamlin," Marian interposed with a wry laugh, "and of course I realized I was being watched; so I didn't try anything."

"Then you'll do this?" Silver arose and looked around the room. "Where do you keep your writing materials?"

"You should know," retorted Marian, also arising, "you went through this house thoroughly, didn't you?"

Silver flashed her a quick smile, walked across the room and into the bedroom. She returned with paper, pen and ink and motioned Marian to start writing.

But Marian didn't move.

"I'd advise you to hurry," ordered Silver in a hard, dry voice.

"And if I don't?" questioned Marian, sparring for time, trying to hear above their voices the sound of an approaching motor which didn't come.

"You will," again the hard assured voice. "You're not going to take a chance on Lon's spending years in the penitentiary while you dry up into a scrawny, freckled old woman like your mother."

Marian felt a flush of red creep up from her neck to her cheeks. "If Lon goes to the penitentiary he won't go alone," she warned, "not while I live."

"You," cried Silver, blingly, "what do you think you could do?"

"Plenty," retorted Marian. "I could go to court and prove that Lon was not drunk the night he was supposed to have raised that check, but drugged. I could put the doctor who attended him that night on the stand. I could have Murphy, the gas station man, tell of his condition when he came in to cash the check and how the three of them, Lon and your father's two henchmen, went into a huddle, so that Lon, dazed with the drug, wouldn't know when one of the henchmen changed checks on him, substituting one ready for additional figures to be made by Lon's fountain pen which he borrowed."

Silver's eyes had dilated until they looked like jet black pools. "And you think Lon, loving me, would let you do this?"

"Lon doesn't love you," replied Marian with scorn. "If he had, would he have called me at two in the morning to escape you in Nevada? Would he have come to my apartment to show me the wire you sent and beg me to come along? Would he have laughed and called you 'Miss Cherrito' and 'Miss Hopeful'?"

"Yes, but since then," Silver was angry; ridicule of her belief that Lon cared for her burned more deeply than any other factor.

"Since then," Marian continued, "he's played up to you for a purpose and forewarned me of his intentions."

"He did, did he?" Silver was trembling with anger. "And I tried to save him—"

"He doesn't need to be saved by you."

"Then you think you'll go on with your plan to ruin me and my father?"

"I will," returned Marian.

"Oh no you won't," countered Silver. She glanced toward the divan and Marian following her gaze saw the silver handle of the revolver protruding from among the cushions. "Oh, no," continued Silver, "if you're not here to testify, there won't be any wrecking of the Hon-dons and the McSwats."

"You wouldn't dare," Marian declared, "your fingerprints are on that gun."

"There are ways of removing them..." Silver was making a stealthy way towards the divan, "easy enough to make it look like suicide... reasons... disgrace of your husband."

"Silver," warned Marian, and then as the other woman made a sudden dash for the divan she screamed.

Fast on her scream came the crash of a door, a tumbling chair and Hero buried his huge body through the room, teeth bared, straight at Silver.

Paralyzed with terror, Marian watched as the dog cleared everything between them, Silver wheeling, gun in hand to meet him.

"Guard," screamed Marian, as she saw the white tusks burrow into the left arm Silver had thrown up in terror. "Guard," she repeated.

Reluctantly the dog obeyed. Panting, quivering, he straddled the prostrate form of Silver, head hung

Sundown Stories

Trying Again
By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Willy Nilly made up his mind to try the gypsy's cure for his pointed, sticking-out ears the first thing in the morning. He recited the speech he had to make first of all:

"Ears, become straight! Ears, do not point. Ears, obey the magic words told me by the old wandering gypsy woman." Then he took two feathers and held them in his right hand, as the gipsy had directed, and first rubbed them over his right ear, and then over his left ear, while at the same time he jumped on his right foot three times with his left foot. This was hard to do but he managed.

After that he attended to his house but at the very moment that the sun was setting he drank two glasses of water, holding the glass in his left hand.

Then he watched the sun setting until he saw the first evening star and he made a wish.

Oh, he was getting on famously. Before going to bed he rubbed the gipsy's special mixture on his ears and called out of his window:

"If any stranger is around I warn him to keep silence or the gipsy's spell of bad luck will be cast over him. Silence, silence, silence."

After that Willy Nilly went to bed. He hoped he would see an improvement in his ears in the morning, although the gipsy said he must do all this for one week, three and three-quarters days and 17 extra minutes and two additional seconds, before his ears would be perfect! He hoped for no more interruptions.

Tomorrow—"Top Notch's Hunger" his politics too well to talk out of turn.

Mr. Roper's remarks about the need for profits and his prediction that federal emergency activities would gradually be abandoned—made just two days after election—marked the beginning of his campaign of reassurance.

Acceptance: The stock market's buoyancy following the election gave further evidence that Wall Street fully accepts the President's strengthened leadership. Investment buying from very strong sources contributed largely to the rise.

The significant increase in electrical output also goes to show that industry has decided it might as well step on the gas. The attitude of conservative leaders is typified by the remarks that there's no sense in holding back any longer for a turn to the right when that road has been washed in a sea of votes.

Both the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers—highly critical of the New Deal in the past—will make conspicuous gestures of conciliation before the year is out. This doesn't mean they've abandoned hope of amending the New Deal to suit their ideas. It does mean they've given up obstructionist tactics as a means to that end.

Inflation: The informed believe the one specific phase of the New Deal emphatically endorsed by the election was the policy of free-handed federal spending. Consequently they regard a program of broad inflation as a certainty. They don't expect anything spectacular and doubt that the currency will be touched directly—except perhaps by devaluation to 50 cents. But they do look for a gradual expansion of federal credit which would make past records for government borrowing look like a plugged nickel.

This method won't cause such a furor as doing things to the dollar but its ultimate inflationary effects will be just as great. In fact it leads to a subtle form of currency expansion which most people overlook.

It works this way. A bank loaded up with government bonds wants cash. It borrows from the Federal Reserve—using the bonds as collateral. In exchange it receives Federal Reserve notes—paper money—and these notes are backed chiefly by government bonds in the Federal Reserve's possession. It's a neat method of increasing currency in circulation as required without attracting attention.

Of course there are conservatives who see nothing but ruin at the end of the credit inflation road. They foresee Federal debts rising beyond the possibility of retirement by taxation—leaving paper money or repudiation as the only alternatives. But most New Yorkers believe the danger point is still a long way off. Even the extremists agree you might as well try to stop a typhoon with a traffic light as to argue the point now.

Defense: Insiders remark that Roy Moley is doing his unobtrusive fight against a central bank.

One of the most telling shots the bankers have scored was the statement to help financial circles in their ment by Lyman E. Wakefield—President of the Association of the Reserve City Bankers—pointing out that the banks have "lines of credit available to accredited borrowers in the huge sum of eight to ten billion dollars—but that the borrowers show no inclination to use them: It's a beautiful answer to the charge

THE BONDED WAREHOUSE SITUATION

E. G. Flanagan, operator of the bonded warehouse here referred to in this column yesterday, has called our attention to error on our part in stating that at this time the warehouse was being used entirely for private purposes and as a result cotton was being carried to warehouses in other cities. Mr. Flanagan stated that only a small portion of the warehouse was being used for private storage but that there were around 1,200 bales of cotton stored in the other portion of the warehouse taking up all the available space. We gladly correct that portion of our yesterday's editorial, but the point we wished to make clear is still the same, Greenville at this time is badly in need of sufficient bonded warehouse space to take care of the demand. With farmers storing their cotton in bonded warehouses the logical center for such activities in this county is in Greenville, but at the present time the situation is just the reverse and cotton from this city and county is going into warehouses in other places because of lack of facilities here.

One day early this week more than forty bales of cotton were carried from this city to a storage warehouse in another county because there was no place here to store it. Yesterday residents of this city who have farming interests in this county and wanted to store their cotton here were forced to carry it to warehouses in other places, and today one citizen announced that today and tomorrow he was sending 100 bales into another county because there was no place in Greenville to store it. All told probably more than 200 bales of cotton are being moved from this city to other points this week because there is no place here to store it, and it is estimated that from all over the county more than a thousand bales that would have been stored here will move into other centers.

In our editorial expressing a need for another bonded warehouse here, we had no intention of casting any reflections upon Mr. Flanagan and the house operated by him. Based upon the above stated facts we felt that this city is the logical place for all this cotton to be stored and we brought the matter to the attention of our citizens hoping that in some way the need could be taken care of. We do not care who owns or operates the warehouse so long as we can take care of these farmers who want to bring their products to Greenville and do their trading here. We would be glad to see Mr. Flanagan, if he will, or somebody, furnish our city with these facilities.

low, his hot breath playing on Silver's bare arm.

Crawling, then stumbling, Marian retrieved the gun, held it, then—"Release," she ordered. The dog looked at her. "Release," she snapped and slowly he backed away.

"Get him out of here," Silver begged, "he'll kill me. He hates me... he'll—"

"Shut up, or I won't be able to handle him," Marian ordered, "and thank your lucky stars he's police trained or I couldn't have called him off."

Backing, she called Hero to her side, ordered him into the bedroom and closed the door securely. "Now get up."

Silver sat up dazed—"I wasn't going to hurt you," she insisted, breathlessly, "just... just frighten you. Thought I could force you to write that... that note."

"I'm not a mind reader," Marian replied, "and after what your father ordered the Kanaka boy to do to the Wakis I wouldn't put anything past you."

Slowly Silver arose, went to the divan and sank into it. "Now what?" she asked in the docile manner which had followed her storm that night in Nevada.

"I don't know," Marian answered honestly. "I'm waiting for the District Attorney, he telephoned that he was coming out after me. I don't know what has detained him."

"Are you... you going to tell him that I..."

"Threatened to kill me?" asked Marian, and thought a moment. "No," she answered, "because I don't honestly believe you would have done that."

SHE sat a moment thinking, then spoke again, "Silver, now I'm going to bargain. Why don't you marry Blaine Kellay? Your beauty isn't going to last forever, right now you look forty, instead of thirty."

"Do I, Ian?" There was incredulous fright in Silver's voice.

"Go look in the mirror over the mantel and see for yourself."

"And you won't prosecute father?"

Marian looked at her sadly. "I won't, Silver, but it's out of my hands."

"What do you mean?"

"I offered your father a chance to play straight. He answered by drugging my husband and framing him with a raised check. I went to the District Attorney and told him everything I knew... so you see even had you used that gun, it wouldn't have checked an investigation."

"And now what?" asked Silver, wearily.

"I... wait, there's a car coming now, we'll both know shortly."

Marian went to the door and waited for the footsteps and voices which soon sounded in the patio. She opened the door and the first to enter was her father.

"You little idiot," was his greeting, "why didn't you send for me... what's that gun for... isn't that Silver's handgun?"

Marian looked at the gun in her hand stupidly. "I was just... just holding it in case anything—"

"What's that chair turned over for... and that end table. It looks to me like there'd been a fight in here."

"There was," Marian answered, and looked at Silver. "Hero, our dog, doesn't like Silver. I thought I had him blocked off in the kitchen and he... he evidently didn't like the idea and crashed the door and made for Silver. I grabbed this in case I couldn't call him off."

Silver smiled, then slowly she arose and faced Mr. Gordon. "Your daughter is the most accomplished liar I've ever met," she said.

"What do you mean?" began the elder Gordon.

"She told a magnificent lie to get me out of one scrape. And now this. The reason the dog crashed through after me was because I used that gun, threatening to kill her if she wouldn't do what I wanted her to do. She screamed and the dog came in. I tried to kill the dog but she grabbed my arm and the gun went wild. Then she called the dog off."

"But she didn't really mean it, Dad," Marian hastened, "she was only trying to frighten me, you won't do anything about it, will you?"

"No," answered Mr. Gordon, "if she's game enough to admit the truth, we'll let her off. Mrs. Hondon, I believe your car is down in the lower driveway; do you feel strong enough to drive on home alone?"

"Yes, why?"

"I believe your mother is going to need you."

ple who had never paid a tax before in their lives and might be touched for the first time by a general sales tax.

The answer that always shut this argument off cold was that a millionaire could eat only one plate of ham and eggs at a time. Why should the poor man be forced to pay identic tribute with the big money boys on necessities, and live luxuries, of life?

Next January there will be a much more determined drive for the sales tax than ever before. Supporting forces already are uniting their big guns and this time they figure to get support from important quarters.

Members of such organizations as the American Liberty League; by their very nature might be expected to line up behind a general excise tax. Secretary Morgenthau and the Treasury experts may come to it as a partial solution of their revenue needs—provided food and clothing are exempted. Finally, there is a restlessness among the so-called white-collar workers who fear that, as usual the bulk of any direct tax will be blanketed over their stationery salaries.

Treasury surveys conducted since early last summer indicate many existing forms of taxation have either reached the saturation point so far as the public's ability to pay is concerned, or have been dried up by reverses of the depression.

Allies: Word has been passed that the legislative committee of the American Federation of Labor is getting set to propose a tax on chain stores as a means of producing national revenue. For a while the chain-store operators were worried. Now they think the A. F. of L. mostly is trying to scare the A and P in connection with the recent Cleveland labor dispute that might spread to national proportions.

Chain-store men wouldn't object overmuch to a federal levy if it were at the rate of 10 per store or thereabouts. What they claim they couldn't survive is the idea of charging 10 for the first store in a given area, 20 for the second, and so on up into the high multiples.

Now the drugstores, grocery store, 5 and 10 and other chain men are sure the quietus is on them. They have persuaded the big oil companies that all of their filling stations would be counted as chain stores because they sell tires, accessories, etc

The home was beautifully decorated in yellow chrysanthemums and tulle. In this setting seven tables were arranged for bridge, the place of Miss Hadley, the honor guest, was marked with a shoulderette of tulle roses.

Exhibits In Library.
In keeping with the 1934 Book Week idea which emphasizes the "riding of a hobby," the teachers and pupils of the Training Memorial Library exhibits of clay modeling, wood carving, cooking, simple hand made apparatus illustrating the laws of magnetism and electricity, and collections of butterflies, beetles, etc. There is also a book of poems which have been composed by the children of this school.

This same group secured from Jesse Giles of Washington, N. C. specimens of his work, including painting, sculpture and modeling. These are his "hobbies." Mr. Giles' work is displayed in the junior room of the library also. Be sure to see the whole exhibit today.

Attention Music Lovers.
The music lovers of Greenville have a splendid opportunity to add to their knowledge of technique, singing and choir directing by becoming a member of the Choral Club, which is so ably directed by Frederick A. Allen. To accustom the musical status of Greenville he began with familiar songs and hymns so often absorbed by usage.

He is now taking more difficult numbers and the club is greatly enjoying the time spent at the Tuesday night rehearsals.

Mr. Allen is also giving wonderful instructions to the children on Tuesday afternoons at 3:30 thereby supplementing the work of the city schools.

Perkins-Dunn.
Washington, N. C., Nov. 14.—Mrs. Carleton Hughes Richardson announces the marriage of her daughter, Mrs. Mammie Latham Richardson Dunn, to J. J. Perkins of Greenville.

The ceremony was performed at 6 o'clock today at the home of the bride's mother and was witnessed by members of the two families. Rev. Ed. J. Rees, pastor of the Methodist Church, officiated.

The bride was gowned in a blue velvet dress and hat with beige accessories.

Mrs. Dunn is the only daughter of the late Carl H. Richardson and Mrs. Richardson. She received her education at Salem and St. Mary's colleges.

Mr. Perkins is engaged in the hardware and building supply business. He was educated at Mt. Washington University of Baltimore. He is the son of Dr. J. W. Perkins and the late Helen Moore Perkins of Greenville.

The couple left tonight for a trip to New York. They will make their home in Washington until January 1st.

"Uncle Remus" At Training School.
The sixth grade of the Training school at noon yesterday gave an excellent production of an "Uncle Remus play" which they themselves wrote and staged. This was presented in the Austin Auditorium of the college. A small admission fee was charged in order to defray expenses.

Miss Mary Dirnberger, director of Community Dramatics, Miss Elizabeth Hyman, teacher of the grade, and the student teachers, all had parts in the direction of the play.

The children in the grade selected the parts of the Uncle Remus stories and arranged the action, wrote the dialogue and chose the cast. There were several scenes and two sets of scenery, which they made. The costumes were suggestive rather than realistic.

The parts and actors chosen for them were: Uncle Remus, T. G. Cayton; Sis Tempy, Ann Gaskins; Little Boy, Bernice Jenkins; Wolf, Billy Combs; Rabbit, J. B. Joyner; Fox, William Dall; Mrs. Rabbit, Harris; Bear, Lloyd Evan Ellis; Two Little Rabbits, Edwin Clark and J. Hicks Cory; and Possum, Ollie Clark.

"The Auto Biography of a Soul"
The auto biography of a Soul" was the subject, last night, of Dr. Robert H. Miles' talk at the special service being held by the Y. W. C. A. of East Carolina Teachers College. He based his theme on the Book of Ecclesiastes, which to him he said is "the auto biography of a Soul seeking for the greatest good and final satisfaction in life." The Soul in Ecclesiastes tried to attain the true meaning in life in several ways. He sought it through wisdom, pleasure, working and business affairs, but none of these things in themselves, gave complete satisfaction. After much searching he found that if one feared God and kept His Commandments he would get real joy in living.

He stated that today if one will in his youth remember God, learn to reverence Him by having a reverent attitude toward life, and keep his commandments, he will then have attained the fullest satisfaction in life.

Christmas Festival
Plans for a Christmas Festival will be made tonight by members of the Little Theatre Guild at a rehearsal meeting to be held at eight o'clock in Sheppard Memorial Library. The Greenville Choral Club may join with the Little Theatre in staging what will be the first public performance for both groups. Several members from the Choral Club will be in attendance at the meeting tonight.

Mrs. Rose will present an outline of suggestions compiled by members of a special Festival committee. The several parts of the program will be discussed and then given over to the various members for further elaboration and study. Rehearsals will probably begin next week.

Membership in the Guild is open to the public. There are no dues, interest in the theatre being the only requirement.

Miss Dirnberger, who is carrying on this work as part of a Project in Community Drama, stressed the fact that people of many abilities were needed to put over such a Festival. "Staging a production of this kind, will require a union of all the acts of the Theatre—music, dancery, costumes, lighting effects, as well as acting," she said. "Yet the Festival will be so written as to allow for the many natural limitations of an amateur producing organization. There will be ample opportunity for people of little or no stage experience to take an active part."

All present members of the Little Theatre Guild and those contemplating joining are urged to come to the meeting this evening at Sheppard Memorial Library.

Round Table Club.
Mrs. J. E. Nobles was hostess to the Round Table Club Tuesday afternoon. Upon arrival the members were invited into the dining room. Amid the soft glow of lighted candles, a profusion of autumn flowers and the cheerful glow of a brightly burning fire, the club members spent a delightful half-hour over the tea cups. At a beautifully appointed table Mrs. J. B. Smith poured tea. Sandwiches, nuts, mints and cakes were served by Mrs. Nobles, assisted by Mrs. E. W. Griffin and little Miss Lucy Nobles. Miss Harland of Roanoke, Va., was a welcome guest.

Mrs. J. H. Rose presided over the business session. Mrs. Herbert Re Barker acted as secretary pro tem. The program for the afternoon was the third paper in the series on the general theme "Woman Through the Centuries." Mrs. E. B. Higgs gave a most illuminating paper on the period 1853-1863. The general scope of the paper, as well as the splendid treatment of the subject, evoked a wide range of reading and a sympathetic interpretation of this war-torn period.

Historians speak of these years as a period of great expansion. Growth in population was amazing, wealth prodigious. These years produced the finest editorial writers, Horace Greely, James B. Raymond, James Gordon Bennett, Samuel Bowles and William Cullen Bryant. It was a period of great political speeches—the Lincoln-Douglas debate and Lincoln presidential address.

Margaret Fuller, Emerson, Whitier, Thoreau and Whitman did their best work at this time. Susan B. Anthony, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Dorothea Dix and Clara Barton stood as pioneers in their individual fields of activity. But in 1861 the rising thunder of the Civil War drowned out all other pleas. The decade covering 1853-1863 may well be called America's great emotional orgy. Bitter jealousies were fanned by fanatics in the North and in the South, into the burning flames of civil war. James Adams in his "Epic of America," says "The North was dominated by industrialism, the South's interests were agricultural. The tremendous political and economic issues at stake were obscured by the problem of domestic slavery."

And so the North and the South went out to battle. After 47 years Frances Adams reflects sadly "Every one was right, no one was wrong."

But what agonies, what fears that conflict brought—though through it all shines the devotion of thousands of men and women and the splendid figures of the inimitable Lee and Jackson.

Mrs. Guy Smith gave as our outstanding event in the world of music news, a sketch of the great opera singer Geraldine Farrar, who has recently come to the Metropolitan Opera Company as an announcer and interpreter of the Grand Opera broadcasts.

This brought to a close one of the most delightful meetings of the year.—Reported.

A polar bear in the London Zoo collected walking sticks and umbrellas by placing a fish on a ledge near the bars and pretending he could not reach it. When onlookers offered to push the food toward him, he would grab the umbrellas or canes.

Sans Souci Club.
The members of the Sans Souci Book Club were delightfully entertained on Tuesday, November 13th by Mrs. Will Hooker in her lovely home on East Fifth street. Profusions of chrysanthemums and a cheerful fire in the open fireplace made a cozy setting for the informal program which followed.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Sam White, and after a short business session, Dr. Ryan of the Eighth Street Christian Church, was presented to the club and spoke on the subject: "Reflections on the End of an Era," a book by Reinhold Niebuhr, of Union Theological Seminary, New York City.

The reviewer gave as a preface to his remarks a biographical sketch of the author, tracing his work from Detroit pastorate to his work at Union Theological Seminary, closing with the writing of his latest book. He outlined the development of Dr. Niebuhr's thought as evidenced in the writing of such books as "Leaves From the Note-book of a Famed Cynic," "The Contributions of Religion to Social Work," "Does Civilization Need Religion?" "Moral Man and Immoral Society" and "Reflections on the End of an Era."

In these productions Dr. Niebuhr shows an ever-increasing impatience with the complacency of the church in thinking that the mere preaching of age-old doctrines and the observance of traditional forms and ceremonies will either save humanity, spiritually, or lift it ethically and morally.

Stating that it was an almost impossible task to make any adequate or comprehensive review of such a book as "Reflections on the End of an Era," the reviewer presented what he said he felt to be the main thesis of the book as follows: Man faces two systems of values which might be represented by two straight lines. A vertical line representing the Absolute Values as found only in Deity—pure truth, unselfishness, forgiveness, altruism, service, and other attributes ascribed to God, and a horizontal line representing human values as expressed in the aspirations, powers, attributes and so on as found in the historical records of human society of the past and as observed in present-day life.

According to Dr. Niebuhr, man is so limited by the circumstances and conditions of his humanity that it is impossible for him to do more than remotely approximate the values of the Absolute nor to use to any marked degree these values. Hence the creation of an ideal society on earth becomes impossible. The only thing man can do is to use to the fullest of his powers the purposes of God, always remembering that he is by his nature and the nature of the world in which he lives and labors, confined to a program which will never reach the ideal of performance. We must accept society as we find it, seek to improve it as best we may, being forced in some measure even to use its methods, although these may not always be in harmony with the values of the Absolute. There is no easy victory of spirit over nature. While, for example, the Absolute values might demand non-resistance, yet in this world resistance is often found not only difficult to avoid but obligatory if civilization is to remain intact and civil curbed.

Dr. Niebuhr finds the way out of our difficulties, not in the creation of an ideal society to be built up on earth but in a realization of the values of the Absolute beyond this life. This is to be realized, not through our work or merit, but solely by the Grace of God who is willing to remember our limitations and to extend Grace because of His Divine nature.

The reviewer stated that while he disagreed with Dr. Niebuhr both in the premises upon which he built many of his arguments and the conclusions which he reached, he honored him for his outstanding ability and for the intellectual honesty which manifests itself in all that he does and says. He stated that Dr. Niebuhr is one of the most stimulating teachers he had ever had, with a sweep of vision, a keenness of intellect, and a variety of interests seldom found among our theologians of today. He recommended that the members of the club become familiar with the writer through the reading of his books.

The hostess, assisted by Mrs. W. I. Wooten, served a delicious salad course with coffee, after which the guests turned homeward warmed by the friendship they had enjoyed together.—Reported.

Achievement Day.
The annual Achievement program for Home Demonstration clubs was given at the Woman's Club building in Greenville November 13, with an unusually large number of members and visitors present. After singing the invocation and repeating the collect, the minutes of last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. J. R. Lewis. There were numerous items of new business brought up before the meeting and explained by Miss Nice, Home Demonstration Agent. One phase of work that requires mention is the selling of cook books made by the club. Farmville club led in this sale.

We were pleased to have Mr. Underwood explain to us the Red Cross drive, which is now on. There is no organization that does a greater work than the Red Cross, and every citizen should feel it a privilege to have a part in this great work.

Reports from local clubs were given, those rating 100 per cent received a lighted candle, also the 4-H Club. With our president, Mrs. Tucker, we say, "The lights are brightly burning, let us keep them shining through 1935."

For the past year we have had the pleasure of having as our president, Mrs. J. Brooks Tucker. In June Mrs. Tucker was made state president of the Federation of Home Demonstration Women, therefore we had to give her up. We rejoice that this great honor is bestowed upon her, but grieve at our loss. Mrs. B. L. Tyson was unanimously elected to succeed Mrs. Tucker.

Dr. L. R. Meadows was our speaker for the day. He took as his subject "Problems of Eastern North Carolina." Under this head he discussed the following topics: 1. Education—he stated there are many things in life, such as luxuries, that can be put off, but there is an opportune time for educating the child.

2. Thrift—He emphasized the fact that it is not what we have, but how we use it that brings success in making a livelihood. This may be applied to both substance and time.

3. Beautifying and Conventencing Our Home—If we are thrifty, using common sense in the disposal of our money, we will have the means to give us the necessities and comforts for the pleasures of life.

4. Tenant System—He briefly touched on this topic, stating that by the means of education we hoped to improve upon the present situation of this problem.

5. Making Ourselves Independent—He says we can make a successful career if we put ourselves to the wheel and push, depending upon self to furnish supporting needs rather than the other fellow.

Dr. Meadows' talk was plain, interesting, helpful and to the point. We realize that these are our problems and it is up to us to help combat them.

At noon a picnic lunch was served. Entertainment was furnished during the lunch hour by a dance given by Miss Carolyn Hamric. Mrs. E. W. Harvey gave an interesting talk on our native trees and shrubs as a means of beautifying lawns.

Miss Mary Dirnberger, director of dramatics of Pitt county through PERA, presented a play which was enjoyed by all. Mrs. Milton Tucker of the Simpson Club, gave an enjoyable reading.

In the afternoon we enjoyed an hour of recreation directed by Mrs. B. L. Tyson.

Achievement Day comes but once a year, but if all were as pleasant as this one, we wish they came more often.—Reported.

First Church of Christ, Scientist.
"Adam and Fallen Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all churches and societies of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, November 11, 1934.

The Golden Text was from John 3:1: "He that cometh from above is above all: he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth."

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "All flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto dust." (Job 34:15)

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Adam represented in the Scriptures as formed from dust, is an object-lesson for the human mind. The material senses, like Adam, originate in matter and return to dust—are proved non-intelligent. They go out as they came in, for they are still the error, not the truth of being. When it is learned that the spiritual sense, and not the material, conveys the impressions of mind to man, then will be understood and found to be harmonious." (Page 214)

3. Beautifying and Conventencing Our Home—If we are thrifty, using common sense in the disposal of our money, we will have the means to give us the necessities and comforts for the pleasures of life.

4. Tenant System—He briefly touched on this topic, stating that by the means of education we hoped to improve upon the present situation of this problem.

5. Making Ourselves Independent—He says we can make a successful career if we put ourselves to the wheel and push, depending upon self to furnish supporting needs rather than the other fellow.

Dr. Meadows' talk was plain, interesting, helpful and to the point. We realize that these are our problems and it is up to us to help combat them.

At noon a picnic lunch was served. Entertainment was furnished during the lunch hour by a dance given by Miss Carolyn Hamric. Mrs. E. W. Harvey gave an interesting talk on our native trees and shrubs as a means of beautifying lawns.

Miss Mary Dirnberger, director of dramatics of Pitt county through PERA, presented a play which was enjoyed by all. Mrs. Milton Tucker of the Simpson Club, gave an enjoyable reading.

In the afternoon we enjoyed an hour of recreation directed by Mrs. B. L. Tyson.

Achievement Day comes but once a year, but if all were as pleasant as this one, we wish they came more often.—Reported.

First Church of Christ, Scientist.
"Adam and Fallen Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all churches and societies of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, November 11, 1934.

The Golden Text was from John 3:1: "He that cometh from above is above all: he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth."

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "All flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto dust." (Job 34:15)

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Adam represented in the Scriptures as formed from dust, is an object-lesson for the human mind. The material senses, like Adam, originate in matter and return to dust—are proved non-intelligent. They go out as they came in, for they are still the error, not the truth of being. When it is learned that the spiritual sense, and not the material, conveys the impressions of mind to man, then will be understood and found to be harmonious." (Page 214)

More than $20,000,000 in foreign State park of the thousand square mile geological field in which have been found important animal and plant remains and fossils.

Reports from local clubs were given, those rating 100 per cent received a lighted candle, also the 4-H Club. With our president, Mrs. Tucker, we say, "The lights are brightly burning, let us keep them shining through 1935."

For the past year we have had the pleasure of having as our president, Mrs. J. Brooks Tucker. In June Mrs. Tucker was made state president of the Federation of Home Demonstration Women, therefore we had to give her up. We rejoice that this great honor is bestowed upon her, but grieve at our loss. Mrs. B. L. Tyson was unanimously elected to succeed Mrs. Tucker.

Dr. L. R. Meadows was our speaker for the day. He took as his subject "Problems of Eastern North Carolina." Under this head he discussed the following topics: 1. Education—he stated there are many things in life, such as luxuries, that can be put off, but there is an opportune time for educating the child.

2. Thrift—He emphasized the fact that it is not what we have, but how we use it that brings success in making a livelihood. This may be applied to both substance and time.

3. Beautifying and Conventencing Our Home—If we are thrifty, using common sense in the disposal of our money, we will have the means to give us the necessities and comforts for the pleasures of life.

4. Tenant System—He briefly touched on this topic, stating that by the means of education we hoped to improve upon the present situation of this problem.

Built Up Strength By Taking Cardui

Here's her own account of how Mrs. T. W. Hardin, of Greer, S. C., was benefited by taking Cardui: "I suffered a great deal from weakness in my back and pains in my side and felt so miserable," she writes. "I read of Cardui and decided to try it. I felt better after I took my first bottle, so kept on taking it as I felt such a need of strength, and it helped me so much."

Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened fairly steady, one to five points lower with steady Liverpool cables offset by liquidation and Southern selling.

The early selling which included further liquidation and some Southern hedging was absorbed by buying on the real firm showing of Liverpool and houses with Liverpool connections were good buyers on the difference. This steadied the market after the call and prices worked back to about yesterday's closing quotations with business moderately active at the end of the first half-hour.

At midday December was selling around 12.24 and March 12.38, or about net unchanged to two points higher.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Stock markets sentiment took a turn for the better and the trading activity extended on the advance.

Although new commitments were somewhat selective grains reacted to around two points were scattered over a wide front.

News from Washington and industrial sectors was considered constructively. Grains, cotton and most of the other commodities were only moderately higher.

United States government bonds were firm. Foreign exchanges did little. The utilities generally held to a narrow range despite the recent rate attack and the bias by the Federal Trade commission charging that a propaganda campaign had been engineered by the power companies.

Forenoon advances of fractions to around two points were shaded in the late trading by profit taking transfers were 1,600,000 shares.

Late News Flashes

(Continued from page one) Talk Morehead Terminal. Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 15.—(AP)—The Morehead City Port Commission and city officials of Morehead City and city officials of Governor Ehringhaus today in a long conference on the "genera situation" affecting the proposed construction of port terminals at Morehead with the aid of PWA funds.

Governor Ehringhaus said the discussion was taking in all "possible angles" of the matter, including lease and operation of the State-owned Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad by some interest as well as the problem directly involving the proposed terminal and harbor development.

Britain Fits It Up to Japan. London, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Great Britain let it be known today that if Japan rejects her proposal for formal equality principle she will not grant Japan equality in the actual tonnage of her fighting craft.

This indication from an authoritative source was contained in a statement that Great Britain still seeks a method of approaching a compromise on the difficult questions of a new naval treaty but that she will not go beyond the recognition of equality in principle for Japan.

The decision was made independently by Great Britain sometime ago and has nothing to do with conversations her diplomats engaged in, in the present naval parity or have engaged in with the United States or Japan.

Both British and Americans here for the conversations said officially the reports that Britain and the United States were considering an agreement were entirely false. Both delegations said they wished the question was near agreement stage but that actually the three powers were just as far from an agreement as they have ever been.

Appeal For World Peace. New Bern, Nov. 15.—(AP)—Appeals for world peace, economic security, racial co-operation, moral development better movies, temperance and prohibition were sounded this morning in a special program of social service and civic righteousness at the One hundred and fourth annual convention of the North Carolina State Baptist Association here.

By recommendation of a special committee Asheville was selected as the 1935 convention city with Rev. Richard Redwine of Hickory as the preacher and Rev. J. B. Williams of Hamlet as organist.

In a comprehensive report read by Dr. L. M. Freeman of Raleigh, chairman of morals, including gambling, divines and violation of the Sabbath.

Only extreme vigilance can prevent the repeal of the Tarlington act by the next legislature, Dr. Freeman said declaring that bootlegging and drinking were common even among women.

Carolina Playmakers Monday. A new type of scenery will surround the three one-act plays to be presented by the Carolina Playmakers when they appear at East Carolina Teachers College on next Monday night, Nov. 19.

This kind of scenery was developed by Prof. Samuel Seldon, ingenious and gifted technical director of the organization. This new type of scenery was developed by Mr. Seldon primarily as a means of reducing the cost of scene construction during the depression, but it has proved so popular and successful that it has been adopted by the Playmakers as one of the standard forms of scenery used in mounting their various productions, wherever light scenery, capable of being quickly and easily handled, is needed.

This new kind of scenery has been variously called outline scenery, vignette scenery, cutout scenery, and a host of other terms. Mr. Seldon, however, prefers to call it suggestive scenery, and explains his reason for the preference. "An artist," he says, "when he wishes to paint a picture, picks out the significant features of the scene he desires to paint. A sculptor likewise chooses the dominant characteristics of his subject and emboldens them to prominence. An architect, in designing a building, suggests through the main structural elements of his design the use of the building itself. So in our suggestive scenery, we pick out the important features of the room or place where the scene is laid and show only those in structural features. Sometimes a wall will be cut away down to the chair rail, with only a portion of the wall showing above it. This small section of wall will perhaps be covered with a plaster or wall paper design, suggesting the decorations of the room. At the doors and around the windows only the door facing will be left, the rest being eliminated. Thus with a minimum of actual scenery the whole character and atmosphere of the play is suggested, without showing it all in detail. These suggestive settings are placed in front of a black cyclorama curtain, which forms a pleasant neutral background for them."

Mr. Seldon is nationally known as an authority on scenery, and is co-author with Hunton Sellman of a textbook on production "Stage Scenery and Lighting" which is widely used in colleges and universities throughout the country, and as a handbook by numerous little theatre groups. "Stage Scenery and Lighting" has been reviewed as "the most practical and complete manual of production which has yet been written." Mr. Seldon is also the author of an authoritative textbook on Acting, "The Player's Handbook" which he published last spring. It met with universal praise from the reviewers and has been indorsed by teachers and directors as the finest and clearest work ever written on this fascinating subject.

Those who have seen "Fixin's" and "Quare Medicine," the two plays that have been presented here before, will be interested in seeing them with this new type of scenery.

SIXTY YEARS MARRIED AND WAS NEVER KISSED.

Knoxville, Nov. 15.—Imagine a woman married sixty years and never kissing a husband!

Such a woman is Mrs. Nancy Mary Ann Trammell West of Athens, Tenn. Almost a century old, Mrs. West has spent most of her life in the North Carolina mountains and recently saw her first movie. The comedy she liked, but the picture with love scenes did not appeal to her at all. "Queer doins," she called that.

Mrs. West is the mother of fourteen children, but the depletion of emotional life on the screen scandalized her. "Land sakes," she declared, "my husband, Cal, and me, never kissed and we were married nigh onto sixty years! Ain't it a sight the things folks think up nowadays—never kissin' and huggin' like that!"

THINKS SNIPES' DEATH WAS DUE TO ACCIDENT

Wilson, N. C., Nov. 14.—Coroner Martin has completed his investigation into the recent sudden death of Sydney Snipes, young Wilson County farmer, and announced on Tuesday he was satisfied the death was due to accidental causes and not to suicidal intent, as at first reported. Snipes was found in a corn-crib on his place last Friday with a shot-gun wound in his breast from which he soon afterward died in a local hospital. The gun with which he had been fatally wounded was found outside the corn-crib and some distance away. The coroner's inquires disclosed, he said, that Snipes had been shooting blackbirds prior to his death and that when he later entered the crib he may have slipped on the steps, causing the gun to discharge and kill him.

Menu For Lean Swine. Raleigh, N. C.—(AP)—Tests conducted by livestock experts at North Carolina State College show 340 pounds of feed will add 100 pounds to the average 75-pound pig within ten weeks. The menu consisted of 30 pounds of fish meal, 120 pounds of corn meal, 20 pounds of wheat shorts, and 170 pounds of shelled corn.

Reflecting Sports

By Wm. WATSON MORGAN

"We did not win the game with Washington, but we did bring back the meat," was a remark made by one of the high school boys. At the half, three guineas, two hens and one turkey were turned loose. Two of the guineas, the turkey and one hen were caught by Greenville people.

Two former Greenville coaches pitted their teams against each other last week-end. Andy Hewlett's Morganton team defeated "Soup" Porter's Lenoir high team by the score of 28 to 0. The fact that Lenoir had several men ruled ineligible because of scholastic troubles accounted for the large score. Last year Soup's team defeated Morganton for the first time in several years.

The Morganton team under the tutelage of Andy has won every game played this year. They have held their opponents scoreless while registering 127 points themselves. The team has been playing before very large crowds, ranging from two to three thousand people. The school has equipped the playing field with lights, and most of his games are played at night; this, no doubt, adds to the attendance.

Ken Beatty will continue as coach of athletes for the remainder of the football season at least. Beatty is a strong believer in the fundamentals of the game; after he gets the boys to blocking and tackling better, then he no doubt will turn his attention to the offense. In Washington the team looked very weak on ground plays. The opposition seemed to know exactly where each play was to go. The poor showing of the backfield may be partially accounted for when we consider the powerful Pam-Pack line. The Greenvilles found it difficult to gain through those 200 pound tackles.

Many powerful backfield combinations have been unable to show their usual brilliancy when forced to play behind a weak line. Cotton Warburton, of the University of Southern California, is finding it difficult to continue the rear field that he established last year for no other reason than he hasn't that powerful line of last year to clear the way for him. Against a very strong opponent Knute-Rockne once sent the famous Four Horsemen to carry on behind a third-string line. He left this line in the game long enough for the "cooky" backfield to realize that even though they were good, their best was not sufficient without the seven mules playing before them.

Harry Kipke has an article in a national magazine dealing with the "do or die" spirit of football and the present-day psychology on handling players. He states in this article that "one of the most valuable of the incidental moral builders lies in the presence of a funny man. . . . this funny man would break up tension and be a wonderful balance wheel."

During the chapel period Tuesday Supt. Junius Rose certainly employed some of the above-mentioned psychology. In referring to Monday's game with Washington his humorous remarks kept the student body and players in an uproar. This certainly helped to break the tension or spell that the players were struggling under.

In this talk he told the students that the football team represented the high school, and that we should give them our best support. There is no doubt but that in this remark one may find plenty to think about. The team is doing just about as good as it can; the fact is, I think that the team is doing a splendid job when we realize that so many of the regular linemen graduated last year. The very least that we can do is support them. Now is the time that they need our support. Friday's game with Williamston was a tough one. Let the players know that you still have confidence in them. The ideal school spirit is "support," lose or win.

At the present it seems that the general topic and interest throughout North Carolina and the South for that matter, is who will win the battle between Duke and Carolina next Saturday. If they can't predict the correct score, they are sure of one thing, and that one thing is, that all roads lead to Chapel Hill. A battle royal is promised every fan that attends the game. I can't see anything but a Duke victory. Many people insist that the two teams are evenly matched. This may be so, but I figure Carolina will be keyed to such a high pitch that old "over anxiety" will get them. It looks to me like Duke by at least seven points.

Menu For Lean Swine. Raleigh, N. C.—(AP)—Tests conducted by livestock experts at North Carolina State College show 340 pounds of feed will add 100 pounds to the average 75-pound pig within ten weeks. The menu consisted of 30 pounds of fish meal, 120 pounds of corn meal, 20 pounds of wheat shorts, and 170 pounds of shelled corn.

William & Mary To Play E. C. T. C. Here Tomorrow

Coach Tommie Scott and his William and Mary team have arrived 30 strong for their game here tomorrow. Many of his players are former Norfolk high school players. Earlier in the season this team was defeated by Louisburg, 45 to 0, but they were greatly handicapped by injuries.

The Teachers are in fine shape; only a few minor injuries were received in the game Monday. There will probably be a few changes in tomorrow's line-up. Johnnie Johnson, who has been playing fullback for the past few games is very likely to play at tackle and will be called back to do the punting. Mickey Northcutt, Cary youth, who showed up well in the game Monday, is very likely to see action. Epstein, half-back, will be ready to go after being unable to play since the first of the season because of injuries. This game promises to be one of the best of the season, so come out and give the Teachers your support. The game will be called at 2:30 o'clock and will be played at the college field.
