France Will Stand By Yugoslavia Laval Tells League Council Today

PLAN TO SEND ARMY TO SAAR

French Foreign Minister Declares Those Who Struck Down Alexander Were Striking at Peace of Europe

Geneva, Dec. 8.—(AP)—France dramatically resumed discussion of the Central European conflict in the League of Nations Council today with a declaration of Foreign Minister Pierre Laval that "in this grave affair France stands beside Yugoslavia." Amid an impressive silence in the council chamber Laval said in striking at King Alexander it was "peace they sought to strike."

"It was the work of Alexander they sought to destroy," he continued dramatically. "This work subsists and depends upon us as a council of the League of Nations to see that peace shall not be placed in peril."

Laval, co-operating with the great powers in Europe to prevent the Yugoslavia-Hungarian dispute from becoming a major crisis demanded that "the League of Nations justify the high confidence reposed in it." Turning to the Saar question, the French Foreign Minister alluded to what he called the sudden decision to send international forces into the area, and said this indicated that the League in neutralizing the material forces of its members was able to place obstacles before the disrupting of peace and order.

Geneva—Dec. 8.—(AP)—A secret session of the League of Nations Council formally approved the dispatch of an international army to patrol the Saar territory prior to the plebiscite January 13.

Fire Destroys Moore Residence Near This City

The home of Mrs. Cammie Moore House Station, four miles north of this city together with practically all the household effects and the family's clothing was completely destroyed by fire early last night. The loss, estimated at between $10,000 and $15,000 was partially covered by insurance.

The fire, of undetermined origin, discovered shortly after 7:30 o'clock last night quickly spread throughout the entire house. Members of the Greenville fire department were called to the scene but the flames had gained such headway that it was impossible to save the house although by hard work the firemen were able to save the nearby office and buildings of the florist establishment operated by Mrs. Moore and Mrs. J. H. Randolph.

SEEKS TO HURRY WORK ON TARBORO PROJECT

Tarboro, N. C., Dec. 8.—R. Chalmers, TWA auditor from the Richmond, Va., office, was here Thursday to look over city affairs with a view of expediting matters so that work might begin as soon as possible on this city's new $28,000 municipal water plant and municipal improvement project, for which funds have been approved.

Mr. Chalmers declined to comment on how soon work may be started here, declaring he has not gone deeply enough into the situation yet to make any statements.

Captain William Sidney Fitchett seventy-year-old tugboat master of Norfolk, Va., has docked more than 80,000 ships of all nationalities during his long service, his employers say.

DR. GRAHAM IS SPEAKER FOR SERVICE HERE

Will Deliver Memorial Address at Service For Late Dr. R. H. Wright

Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University, will deliver the memorial address at the memorial services for the late Dr. Robert H. Wright, which will be held in the Campus Building of East Carolina Teachers College on next Sunday afternoon, December 16, at 3 o'clock.

The services will be marked by simplicity and dignity, as fitting the character and life of the man himself.

The staff and students of the institution to which he devoted his life and which stands as a monument to him, the people of the community he served in many ways, and personal friends and citizens from a distance who value the great work he did for the State and for education, will gather to do honor to his memory.

The music will be furnished by the college students, two songs by the student body and one by the Glee Club.

The committee from the staff who has charge of the plans is composed of the following members: M. L. Wright, R. C. Deal, M. K. Fort, A. D. Frank, P. W. Picklesimer, H. C. Hayes, and A. C. Fornes and Misses Kate Lewis, Lorraine Hunter, Ola Ross, Gussie Kuykendall, Alice Wilson, Annie L. Morton.

Every member of the staff has served or is serving on some committee that gives one who was under the leadership of Dr. Wright an opportunity to honor his memory or carry on his work. The committee on the Wright Memorial Loan Fund is working continually on the plan for perpetuating his work for giving needy boys and girls a chance to go to college. This will be another monument to his memory.

ICY GRIP OF WINTER HITS CAROLINAS

Four Deaths Attributed to Cold Wave; Many Places Blanketed With Snow

Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 8.—(AP)—Winter lightened its icy fingers around the two Carolinas today, temperatures dipped down to the freezing point, four deaths were indirectly attributed to the cold weather and snow falls were reported overnight throughout the two States from the white-capped mountains of the west to the balmy resort country along the coast.

Throughout the eastern and coastal sectors, however, the snow fell the first of the winter, was very light. It fell last night, the harbinger of colder weather, but melted almost as soon as it touched the ground. Heavier falls were reported in the foothills and Asheville, Spartanburg, Greenville, and Anderson were reported blanketed in snow. Georgetown, along the coast, reported a trace of snow.

Snow on the windshield of the automobile of G. T. Ford, of Georgetown, blinded his vision, causing his automobile to veer into Spring Gulley Creek near Georgetown last night killing Ford and his wife and bringing serious injury to Mrs. D. T. Smith, also of Georgetown, another occupant of the car.

When the cold wave blowing out of the middle and northwest struck the North Carolina mountains yesterday, little six-year-old Virginia Jones, of Mount Airy, huddled too close to the open fire in her home and when her mother, Mrs. Core Jones, 45, looked around, the child's clothing was ablaze. The mother attempted to smother the flames and both she and the daughter were fatally burned.

SLIGHT GAINS IN ESTIMATE COTTON CROP

Year's Total Crop Will Reach 9,731,000 Bales According To Estimate

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—(AP)—This year's cotton crop was estimated today in the Department of Agriculture's final report of the session to be 9,731,000 bales of 500 pounds each as compared with an estimate of 9,634,000 bales a month ago, 13,147,000 bales produced last year and 13,001,000 bales the year before.

Cotton of this year's growth gained prior to December 1 meanwhile was reported by the Census Bureau to total 9,029,792 running bales counting 167,568 round bales as half bales, and including 9,965 bales of American-Egyptian.

The estimate of the cotton crop is based upon an indicated yield of 169.2 indicated November 1 this year, 208.5 pounds was produced last year and 169.9 was the 1923-1932 average production. The area harvested this year was 27,515,000 acres while the area in cultivation July 1 was 28,412,000 acres, making abandonment since 1 of 3.2 per cent. The acreage in cultivation July 1 last year was 40,852,000 acres, and the area picked was 29,978,000 acres, while in 1932 it was 36,542,000 acres on July 1 and 35,939,000 acres picked.

PRESENT PLAY BEFORE CLUB LAST NIGHT

Kiwanians Enjoy One Act Play Presented Under Direction of Miss Dirnberger

At the regular meeting of the Greenville Kiwanis Club Friday night, Miss Mary Dirnberger, director of dramatics art at E. C. T. C., presented a demonstration rehearsal of a one-act play entitled, "Methods of a Master Salesman." This play was taken from one of the William Hazlet Upson's one-act plays dealing with his Earthworm Tractors.

Sam Underwood, as the Master Salesman, felt that he was compelled to get off his psychological sales talk, much to the disgust of the prospective buyer, Brody Ginn. The buyer had investigated the Earthworm Tractors and was ready to buy one before going to the salesman's office. Regardless of the many pleas that all he wanted was to buy a tractor, Salesman Sam could not resist the opportunity of convincing the buyer that he was really a high-pressure salesman. Listening to this line as long as he could, Ginn loaded his gun, and with the barrel poked at Sam's mid-ribs, forced the "psychology man" to sell him the tractor. A good moral of the play, too much talk, too few sales. The salesman, the buyer, and the secretary, Miss Agnes Wadlington, are to be commended.

Before presenting the play, Miss Dirnberger discussed the plans of the local Little Theater Guild and Choral Club. Jointly the two plan to present a Christmas Festival at the Austin Building on December 21. In this cast there will be some two hundred children. This festival will show how Christmas has been observed beginning back with the pioneer days and continuing over a period of more than two hundred years.

President Dink James announced that the club would continue the policy of last year, namely, each quarter some worthy boy would be invited to attend as a Junior Kiwanian.

Persia Makes Own Cigarettes Teheran.—(AP)—Persia's Minister of Finance recently advertised for bids for erecting a factory for the government tobacco monopoly which would have a capacity of 12,000,000 cigarettes and 5,000 pounds of smoking tobacco daily.

Farmers Pay Back Government Loans

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—(AP)—Georgia and Carolina farmers who have obtained short-time loans from the Production Credit Association this year have already repaid more than 93 per cent of the money, Ernest Graham, president of the Production Credit Corporation of Columbia, S. C., said here today.

Of $6,200,000 which had been loaned to about 30,000 farmers in the three States, all but $475,000 had been repaid by November 30, he said.

MORE DEATHS ON HIGHWAYS THIS COUNTY

Number of Deaths Increased in November While Drunken Driving Decreased

There were six more highway deaths in Pitt County in November than in October, according to the monthly report of the local Highway Patrol office released here today. While the report showed a decrease in the number of highway injuries and the number of arrests for drunken driving for November as compared with October. For the present month however, there has already been three highway deaths, and with the bad weather and increased travel during the Christmas season ahead indications are that this month might pass November in the number of deaths unless motorists realize the seriousness of the situation and exercise extreme caution in traveling the highways.

During November there were fifteen highway deaths in this county, while the number of deaths for October was nine. The number of injuries for November, however, was 49 compared with 72 for October, and the number of drunken drivers arrested during October was 42 compared with 49 in October. The total number of arrests on all charges during November 207, while the number of accidents investigated was 163. Of the 207 persons arrested, 109 were found guilty and ten were acquitted. Fines totaled $3,132.40 and costs were $1,202.93.

Other details of the monthly report disclose that 1,241 vehicles were inspected, 1,898 lights were corrected, and 1,861 warnings were issued. Special courtesies were extended in 386 cases, and first aid rendered in two cases.

WHITES LEAD NEGROES IN COURT HERE

Juvenile Court Record Shows 309 White And 220 Negro Cases Heard

In a survey of the Juvenile Court Records of Pitt County since 1930 it is found that 529 children have gone through the court. Of this number 309 were white, 220 colored.

White males were 201, white females were 108, colored males 159, colored females 61. 56 of the white males were charged with stealing and 52 of the colored males with the same offense. 22 of the total group classified as being charged with secret assault. The court made disposition as follows of this group:

134 or 72 white children and 62 colored were placed on probation, 91 white and 103 colored were placed in private homes, 79 were sent to corrective institutions, 20 of this group being colored, and 59 being white, 9 infants were admitted to the North Carolina Children's Home Society while thirteen adoption papers were executed.

20 of this group were ordered to pay restitution charges for damage to property and all doctor's bills.

This survey covers part of the period of the depression and many children needed the Juvenile Court supervision and guidance he have not had it.

FIRST SNOW FALLS HERE LAST NIGHT

Mercury Dropped to New Low For This Year During The Past 24 Hours

With its first snowfall of the season and with falling temperatures last night Greenville people realized more forcibly that winter was at hand. Overcast skies were the order of the day yesterday, and about 7 o'clock last night the first snow of the season made its appearance here. For more than two hours the light fall continued, but it melted almost as fast it fell, leaving no after signs of its visit except wet roofs and pavements.

B. T. Clark, local government weather observer, stated today that last night's snowfall was the first early December snow this city has had for a number of years. Official temperature reading for the 24-hour period from 8 a. m. yesterday until 8 a. m. today were given as maximum 52 and minimum 28, or four degrees below the freezing point. The low temperatures reached sometime during the early morning hours left spots of ice in unexposed places this morning.

PERMIT MORE SPEED TO COAST LINE TRAINS

Wilson, N. C., Dec. 8.—The board of aldermen at its meeting Thursday night authorized the Atlantic Coast Line to run its trains through Wilson at a speed of 25 miles an hour instead ten miles as at present.

C. C. Creech, agent for the road, asked that a speed of forty miles an hour be allowed. He stated that the ten-mile rule was all right in the old days of slow transportation, but now when the watchword of the world is "speed," it is almost impossible for trains to run at the prescribed rate. But the board decided at 25-mile speed would be more suitable.

Travel by railroad to Yellowstone National Park increased 130 per cent during the 1934 tourist season over 1933. The 1934 total was 12,335 persons.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG News Behind The News.

Washington By GEORGE DURNO

Program: President Roosevelt's brightest economists have reached the conclusion it will be 1940 before these United States are definitely out of the depression and back on an even keel.

Therefore, beginning with 1935 they have been mapping a five-year program of public spending, public works, public aid, etc.

When you listen in on Mr. Roosevelt's next "fireside chat"—or perhaps you may have to wait for the January message—you will learn that the well-advertised national pump is going to be primed with a vengeance.

For obvious reasons the idea of a definite program spanning five years will not be stressed.

RIVER AT A STANDSTILL HERE TODAY

Flood Waters Expected to Begin to Recede Late Today or Tomorrow

Reaching a crest of 18.8 feet covering thousands of acres of adjacent lowlands with its muddy waters, Tar River reached its crest early today and it was expected that before the end of the day the flood waters would begin to recede.

The river had been on the rise for several days following heavy rains along the upper sources and considerable damage has been done. At Tarboro the flood waters covered a portion of the hardsurfaced highway doing considerable damage to the dirt shoulders along the highway but the road was not undermined and traffic has not been stopped despite the water that covered the road.

The present freshet of Tar River is the greatest here in the past nine years. The all time high water mark here was reached in 1919 when the river reached the stage of 24.4 feet, the next highest mark came a few years later when the 23 foot stage was reached and the present flood of 18.4 feet is the highest since that time.

JURISTS REPORTED TO HAVE HAD CLOSE CALL

Wilson, Dec. 8.—State Patrolman Fieagle, who investigated the accident in which Federal Judge Isaac M. Meekins was shaken up and bruised Tuesday afternoon, said Friday that it seemed to him a miracle how Judge Meekins ever escaped from the mishap without being hurt more than he was.

Fieagle said that his investigation showed that the Meekins car, when it came in contact with the car of R. H. Jones of Bailey just outside that town, had completely turned over once, had then skidded about forty feet, and then turned over again leaving it upside down when it stopped. Fieagle said that Jones told him that he was coming out of a side road and that he had looked one way but had not observed the Meekins car coming fast from the other direction until it was almost upon him, when he became so frightened he jammed on his brakes and stalled his motor.

HEN COOP TOUTED, THEN IT'S LOOTED

While she explained the sturdy construction of the coop somebody pried it open and stole eight well-housed hens.

LEAF MARKET CLOSES WITH FINE RECORD

Over Four and a Quarter Million Dollars More Paid Out Than Last Season

The Greenville tobacco market closed for the season yesterday with one of the most brilliant records in history to its credit.

The official reports of sales issued today by K. W. Cobb, market supervisor, revealed that more money was paid out on the local market this season than in 1919—which prior to this season was the peak year of the market.

Mr. Cobb reported the total amount of money paid out here this season was $16,077,582.78, as compared with $15,867,518.83 for 1919, nearly a quarter million more than the former season.

Although the market sold more tobacco last year than it did during the season just closed, the supervisor pointed out that farmers received over four and a quarter million dollars more for their crop this year.

The total amount of tobacco sold this season was given as 51,158,394 lbs. as compared with 70,218,690 last year.

The price average between the two seasons also furnishes a splendid indication of the way the leaf sold last year. The average this year was $31.41 per hundred pounds against $16.70 of the previous year, nearly double that of 1933.

With the crop cut considerably below that of last year because of the crop control campaign, the market closed nearly a month ahead of previous years.

The Greenville average is of especial pride to the tobacco men here not only because it is far ahead of last season, but because it has eclipsed that of any of all other leading markets of the bright leaf belt.

The tremendous sums of money released by the market from day to day played a tremendous part in revival of business and merchants throughout the territory reported the best trade in years, certainly since the awful days of the depression.

Many of the peak days this season saw the market pay out over $400,000 a day. During the last several days, however, sales consisted mainly of scrap tobacco, and only a small amount of money was paid out.

Tobaccoists expressed gratification over the success of the season, and C. W. Howard, president of the Tobacco Board of Trade, in announcing the closing date of the market several days ago, commended farmers for their splendid spirit of co-operation.

Two Huge Stills Are Captured In Pactolus Section

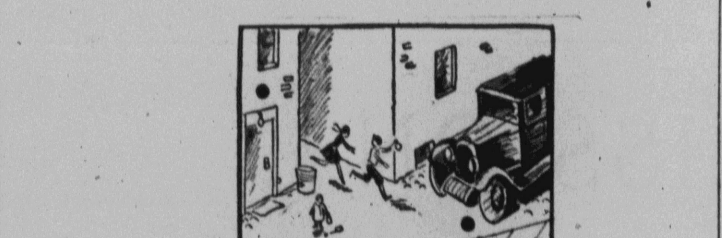

C. W. Evans, constable of Chicod township, reported here yesterday afternoon the capture of two stills in Pactolus township.

Both of the plants, the constable said, were operated by steam, one being of three hundred gallons capacity and the other two hundred gallons.

Three hundred gallons of mash and one gallon of whiskey were also taken along with the plants.

The larger still was in operation, he said, but the distillers were warned by outposts in time to escape.

Wedding—And Separation

Jean, whose only previous trip to the divorce mill was in 1927 when she got her decree from William F. McDrew, II, announced her separation from Hal Rosson on the memorable afternoon of May 6—memorable to Hollywood because Jean, a bride's maid for Carmelita Geraghty's wedding to Carey Wilson, announced her own marital wreck just after her friend's wedding ceremony.

That was more than six months ago, and Jean has waited almost as long to institute divorce proceedings as her romance with her cameraman-husband lasted. They eloped to Yuma, Ariz., Hollywood's Gretna Green, in a romantic midnight flight September 17 a year ago, eight months before the Geraghty-Wilson wedding.

Mary Holds 'Record'

Hollywood's pioneer "platinum blonde" might have filed suit, ere now, she says, but Rosson's attack of infantile paralysis moved her to delay action, and then he went abroad to recuperate, only to remain and work for a British film concern.

She thought she wouldn't file suit until Rosson returned, but not having heard from him, she intends to proceed "in the near future."

The championship in "slow divorcing" however, still belongs to Mary Pickford, whose suit against Douglas Fairbanks still is on record but shows no immediate signs of getting anywhere in particular. Mrs. Pickford and Fairbanks, interrogated on the subject from one end of the country to the other, so far have evaded successfully the possibility of lending any assistance whatsoever to those who would guess the outcome.

BOY FATALLY INJURED WHEN STRUCK BY CAR

Fayetteville, N. C., Dec. 8.—Funeral services were held from Salem Methodist Church yesterday afternoon for George P. Holmes, Jr., nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Holmes, prominent residents of Eastover Township, who was fatally injured when struck by an automobile driven by F. A. Barber, or Erwin, on the Dunn highway Wednesday afternoon.

The accident occurred in front of the Holmes' residence seven miles north of Fayetteville. Mr. Barber and H. M. McDonald, who was accompanying him, stated that the Holmes child and a playmate ran across the road from behind a truck. The other youngsters go across the road safely, but little George ran into the front fender of Barber's car.

A Washington Day Book

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington, D. C.—On the eve of the first anniversary of the repeal rumors in the capital had it that the Federal alcohol control administration might spring a surprise.

It was expected to take the form of more drastic regulations for liquor advertising. Proposed changes were discussed at a hearing before the FACA here and promulgation of new regulations was expected shortly.

Liquor advertising of every sort may be affected by the new regulations. Advertising that hints at a curative or food value for beverages is reported to be FACA's special target.

Insiders say that the purpose of the new regulations will be primarily to clarify existing regulations. The only mandatory requirement at present on liquor advertisers is that they give their name and address. There are, however, several conditional requirements.

Protecting the Public

An advertisement of a particular brand or lot of liquor must state the class and, if distilled spirits or wine, the type. Statement of price involves statement of net contents and, if distilled spirits, the alcoholic content.

Statement of age means compliance with the labeling regulations in that respect.

There are restrictions on boosting the medicinal, curative or therapeutic qualities of one's own products as well as disparaging that of a competitor.

There must be nothing that misleads the public into thinking a domestic product is imported, that misrepresents the place of origin, or that leads to confusion when the advertisement refers to more than one brand of lot.

Interested Parties Appear

Whether various demands made by interested parties at the hearing before FACA will find expression in the expected new regulations is not known.

The brewers were represented as wanting their own advertising regulations.

A spokesman for the importers favored strict advertising regulations plus a required mention of the origin of a product. He said importers had found that 82 per cent of a certain brand of liquor sold by State monopolies was a "bogus article."

On the other hand, the contention was made that censorship of liquor advertising or more drastic regulation lay not in FACA's province; that it should be left to private agencies. How far FACA will go in the matter of stricter regulation will be made seems certain.

DIVERSION OF FUNDS TO AID SCHOOLS URGED

Durham, Dec. 8.—Santford Martin, editor of the Winston-Salem Journal, speaking at the Central high school last night, advocated the diversion of part of the $12,000,000 surplus in the highway fund to take care of the $700,000 current deficit in the State education fund.

Speaking on the subject, "The Present Emergency in Public Education in North Carolina," Mr. Martin said that State legislation should be passed to encourage instead of discourage the progressive building of the public school system in the State.

"The public school system as it is run today with a starvation budget is unfair to both teachers and pupils," Mr. Martin asserted. "In advocating the use of highway money for teachers salaries, I don't want you to think I'm not for good highways. But it's not fair to starve teachers and crowd classrooms to have those highways."

It has been estimated that 70,000,000 people of our 130,000,000 population carry life insurance policies.

Social and Personal

Mark H. Worthington and Miss Clyde Rae Worthington left this morning for Richmond, Va.

Mrs. W. W. Morgan has returned from Memphis, Tenn., where she has been for the past several weeks with her mother, who is ill.

Miss Mary Whitehurst is at home from Fremont for the week-end.

Mrs. J. L. Winstead, Mrs. Curtis Perkins, Mrs. Reid Perkins, Mrs. Howard Moye and Miss Jane Hadley went to Raleigh today to see Lenore Ulrich in the "Pagan Lady."

Mrs. Ross Club Hostess.
Mrs. L. E. Ross delightfully entertained members of her bridge club at the Yum Yum yesterday afternoon.

An attractive arrangement of fall flowers and potted plants was in the room where the bridge tables were placed.

Following the game, Mrs. John Murphy was given an Angel food cake for high score; Mrs. Leslie Briley a hand painted vase for second high, and Mrs. B. D. Johnson a dainty handkerchief for low score. Late in the afternoon a delicious barbecue supper was served.

Mrs. Patterson Entertains.
Mrs. James Patterson was hostess this week at a series of lovely parties at her home on Library street.

The first of these was a bridge luncheon Wednesday morning.

Mrs. J. S. Picklen, scoring high, was given a baking dish.

Mrs. W. L. Harrington assisted the hostess in serving a delectable lunch.

On Wednesday afternoon Mrs. J. T. Cheatham was awarded a flower print for high score, and Mrs. Howard Moye, a recent bride, was remembered with a perfume bottle.

The last of the series was on Thursday afternoon. At this time Mrs. Reid Perkins was awarded a flower print for high score.

Mrs. Harrington assisted in serving a tempting salad course with coffee at both afternoon parties. A yellow and orange color note was emphasized in the decorations.

Presbyterian Circles.
The circles of the Presbyterian Woman's Auxiliary will meet Monday afternoon as follows:

Circle No. 1 with Mrs. R. C. Deal, Circle No. 2 with Mrs. B. W. Moseley.

Circle No. 3 with Mrs. L. A. Brock.

A. A. U. W. To Meet.
The American Association of University Women will meet with Mrs. A. D. Frank, 513 East 8th Street, at 8 o'clock Monday evening, December 10th, instead of the third Monday evening, as is the regular custom. Miss Emma Hooper will give the paper of the evening.

Immanuel Baptist Society To Meet.
The Woman's Missionary Society of Immanuel Baptist Church will meet Monday afternoon at 3:30 in the church. Every member is especially urged to attend as new officers will be installed and plans for the year's work will be discussed.

Those who failed to turn in their Little Moon envelopes will be given a last chance at this meeting.

The Sunbeams will meet at the church at the same hour.

Young Matrons To Meet.
The Young Matrons Society of Eighth Street Christian Church will meet Monday afternoon at 3:30 with Mrs. Reid Perkins. Mrs. Leo Burks will be assisting hostess.

Card of Thanks.
I wish to express my sincere thanks to my many friends for courtesies shown me during the time I was in the hospital in Syracuse, N. Y., and since I returned home.

MRS. W. J. WYATT,
Winterville, N. C.

Memorial Baptist Society.
The Woman's Missionary Society of Memorial Baptist Church will meet at three o'clock Monday afternoon for their regular monthly missionary program.

A. and D. Teams Take Win.
Coach Woods' high school basketball team went into action yesterday as the A. and D. teams took wins from the B. and C. teams. The A team won over the B team 23-13, the D team won over the C team 12-3.

The players are as follows, according to rank: Centers: Ed Wells, D. Simpson, Cox and Oakley; forwards: Pierce and Swartz, Ellers and G. Lautares; Wilkerson and J. Simpson; Johnston and J. Lautares; guards: Carroll and Hatem, Dees and J. Wells; Gaylor and Hamilton, Herring and Tucker.

Carroll and Hatem are looking good at guard and Ed Wells is improving each day, and should make the team a good center by the first game. Coach Woods is delaying the cutting until Jan. 2, so as to give each boy a chance to show his own.—Reported.

Methodist Missionary Society.
The Woman's Missionary Society of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church will present a little play, "Gather Us In," by Marguerite Harmon Bro., in connection with the Annual Harvest Day program. This meeting will be held in the church Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. All women of the church and friends are invited to be present.

Christmas greens and red berries decorated the home.

Beano and heart's dice were played. At the end of each game the winner was given an all-day sucker.

Miss Dorothy Harris was given a box of powder for winner in a contest, and Miss Pauline Abeyounis a sucker for the consolation.

A tempting ice course was served.

Returns From Wilson.
Mrs. J. L. Fleming has returned from Wilson, where she attended a reception given Thursday afternoon by the United Daughters of the Confederacy, honoring Mrs. J. Ed Woodard, retiring state president.

Fancy Sale.
The ladies of St. Paul's Episcopal Church will have fancy novelties and articles suitable for Christmas gifts for sale in their parish house on Wednesday, December 12th, beginning at 11 o'clock. Come and let us help you select your Christmas gifts.—(Adv.)

Christmas Pageant.
Sunday evening at 7:30 in the First Presbyterian Church there will be given the Christmas pageant, "Gifts For the King." The practices for the pageant have been under the direction of Miss Ruth Hillhouse, director of religious education, with the final rehearsal being scheduled for tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

A significant feature of this year's pageant will be the number of participants. Sixty-two people, not including the choir members who will assist, are included in the scenes. This number includes participants from the children, young people and adult divisions of the church school.

The pageant is in three parts: a Ministerial Relief playlet; a tableaux, and a White Gift service. Characters in the playlet will be taken by Mrs. A. E. Bloxton, J. N. Harrison, Billy Horne, Frances Clark, Eustace Conway, Margaret and Edith Nisbet.

Special music for the occasion will be given by the choir, under the direction of Miss Ona Shindler. Mrs. G. V. Smith will render an organ number.

Mrs. Herbert Waldrop and Jack Humphrey will each render solos. Vocal numbers will also be given by a trio composed of Mrs. Walter Scott, Mrs. E. W. Harvey and Mrs. Lindsay Savage and by a duet composed of Mrs. J. Knott Proctor and Miss Agnes Fullilove.

Following the presentation of the Christmas Story in tableaux, and before the dedication of the White Gifts, which concludes the service, an offering will be taken for the 537 Presbyterian families on the roll of ministerial relief.

Dr. Frank Speaks At College.
A discussion of honor and honesty from the viewpoint of teacher and student, was the program of the chapel assembly period of the college yesterday.

Dr. A. D. Frank, of the History department, who represented the teacher's viewpoint, gave honesty as the most admirable trait of a human being. He said that in order to be happy, contented, and really prosperous, one must place honesty above everything else. In citing examples, he told of a high school boy who on a Latin examination, tried to bribe a classmate to conjugate a Latin verb, which constituted half of the examination. The same boy, three years later, was put in jail for forging a check, and several of his former classmates stood by his bond. In closing Dr. Frank expressed the desire that the students of this college would develop an attitude that no student would engage in cheating or any other dishonest act.

Mr. Ryan Speaks Last Night.
That this is a changing age in a deeper sense than any other ever was, that the older generation is responsible tacitly if not openly for the world as it is, that youth will have its desires, and that by giving up without conflict institutions and ideas not duly vital and fundamental—these were the contentions of Rev. W. A. Ryan in his talk before an attentive audience in the High School library last night.

All ages, the speaker reminded the group, have been changing ages; but others changed by general transition, this one by sudden upheaval. Other revolutions were revolts of a class, a group, or a nation, and were directed at some one goal, political, social, economic; this one reaches every in the phases of life it touches. It has changed ideas of government and the price of flour, the content of the school curriculum and the borrowing and lending of money.

And this world in revolution is the product of the older generation. They produced it or tolerated conditions which did. With their tacit sanction industry got to the place where labor received so small a share of profits that it was unable to buy its own products, and graft and corruption in public office flourished. It is impossible, said Dr. Ryan, to judge one generation by the standards and values of another; then pointing out that older people seldom see young people as they are, he mentioned the four types into which

FASHION OK'S CHEAPER FUR

Fashion is using new and less expensive furs to accent many winter costumes. The three-quarter-length coat of this henna wool ensemble is lined with hamster (rat dyed soft brown), while the collar is fashioned of beaver. The blouse is of henna and beige-striped wool, the slouch hat of beige felt finished with a brown ribbon. Design by Philippe et Gaston.

adults now generally classify youth:

- (1) The group of "publicity hounds, who insist like the tree sitters on being the center of attention; (2) those with no respect for anybody or anything—no reverence, no morals; (3) the "Smart Acks" who know it all; (4) or the fine, clean, ready-to-learn, earnest kid. None are truly youth, though all are a part of it."

What does youth want? queried the speaker. In this age it is going to get it whether it is right or wrong. It wants freedom—freedom to say frankly what it thinks and to act as it wishes.

It wants peace. It demands a world without war, and will have it if millions must face the recruiting squad and refuse to fight under any circumstances.

It has no patriotism; as the last generation knew patriotism; it is interested not in a nation but a world; not in national constitutions; but it is a bill of rights for humanity.

Youth is demanding peace in religion. It has no sectarianism and no use for arguments over forms and creeds. It is indifferent whether it is baptized by nine drops or nine tons of water, and whether it repeats the Apostles' Creed, the Nicene Creed, or no creed.

Youth in this age will get what it demands, said the speaker, but how? It will take peaceably what it can get that way, and by force what can not be gained otherwise.

Of action on the heels of the present. Thus on older people falls the responsibility of averting a revolution. They can meet their responsibility only by evaluating again the institutions and standards they made or preserved, and giving up readily all those attacked by youth which are not embodiments of fundamental principles and eternal verities.

Miss Frances Wahl, A. A. U. W. Education Chairman, presided at the meeting. The speaker was presented by Mrs. J. H. Rose.—Reported.

Tips on CONTRACTS

Stopping a Squeeze

There can be no real squeeze partnership have means of communication, or, in other words, unless there is an entry from the squeezing hand, ordinarily the declarer, to the dummy. One quick way to prevent a squeeze, therefore, is to knock out dummy's entry if there is only one.

From a hand in which Mrs. Daisy Wisdom made a squeeze at the Algonquin Club, New York, will be pointed the moral of how it could have been defeated:

SOUTH

East bid a diamond and South two clubs. Having two five-card majors. West tried to find a fit with East and first offered two spades. North passed and East bid three diamonds. South persisted with clubs and West bid four hearts. North doubled and South went to five clubs, which East doubled.

Obviously two spades and a diamond can be taken by the defense immediately. But West thought the bidding indicated a void in diamonds by South. Since East had passed four hearts, he evidently preferred hearts to spades and was short in spades, so West led the fourth best spade.

East took the trick with the ace and returned the seven, which went to West's king. Even if West's theory that South was void of diamonds had been correct, the lead of a heart, knocking out North's ace, would have prevented the squeeze that developed. Instead, West led a spade, leading to get one of dummy's trumps out.

The spade was ruffed with the jack of clubs in the North hand and the squeeze process was started forthwith. After two rounds of trumps the good jack of spades was played from the South hand. Then all the clubs were run.

West had to make six discards on clubs and East had to make five on clubs and one on the jack of spades. West shed the last spade on the spade jack and then began throwing away hearts. On the jack of spades East discarded a diamond and when he saw West throwing away hearts he discarded all his diamonds.

With two cards left in each hand Mrs. Wisdom pulled the queen of diamonds out of her hand and discarded the jack of hearts North on it. The ace of hearts, reached via South's deuce, provided the last trick.

There ensued arguments between East and West. East contended that West's discarding of hearts obligated him to protect hearts and that West first should have shed diamonds, in which case East would have held a diamond to the bitter end.

East had the better of the argument. If West had discarded both his diamonds right away, East could have held for his last two cards the ace of diamonds and the queen of hearts. The heart queen would have protected the West hand from a finesse against the heart king.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 7.—(AP)— An airway map of the Charlotte, N. C. area is ready for "flight checking," and when this is done will be ready for the lithographer.

The map, one of the 87 required to show the United States will be 40 by 20 inches in size and cover an area about 325 miles from east to west and 150 miles from north to west and 150 miles from north to south.

It will be named the Charlotte map in keeping with the custom of the Bureau of Air Commerce to name the maps after the largest city appearing on them.

ALIENS SUPPORT ARMIES IN TAX-RIDDEN AUSTRIA
Vienna.—(AP)—Americans, like other foreigners living in Austria, contribute toward maintenance of the "private armies, the Catholic storm-troops and the 'heimwehr,' that kept by the chancellor an dthe vice-chancellor.

This comes from a "security tax," amounting to twelve and a half percent of the income tax.

But tax returns have declined steadily for a year and financial experts predict that the dissolution of the private armies is only a matter of time as their maintenance has played havoc with the country's budget.

The tobacco season closed here yesterday with more money being paid out this season than ever before in the history of the market, even surpassing the banner year of 1919.

Highway deaths in this county during November were six greater than during October and with three deaths already having occurred this month and with the bad weather and holiday season with its increased traffic ahead this month might even show a greater death toll unless our people show some judgment and common sense.

Here is a record of which the white race of Pitt County should be ashamed, and about which something should be done. While our white population is only slightly above that of the negro race, the number of cases in our Juvenile Court over a period of four years shows that approximately twice as many white children have been before the court than have the negro children.

I did not kill Osborne

By VICTOR BRIDGES

SYNOPSIS: Nicholas Trench to hearing from Sir William A von the story of that chemical engineer's dealings with John Osborne, the man Nicholas just has been acquitted of having murdered.

and massive, like an expressionless stone Buddha, his keen eyes alone betraying the intense interest with which he was following my narrative.

At the conclusion he very deliberately lighted a cigar.

"Thank you, Mr. Trench," he said, pushing across the box. "I am glad you've had the good sense to take me into your confidence. It's an extraordinary affair and I congratulate you on the admirable way in which you have kept your head."

"What do you make of it all?" I inquired. "Do you suppose those chaps Stelman and Dimitri followed Miss O'Brien from New Orleans?"

"The latter undoubtedly did. From your description I should think that the other was probably a German—some well known international crook whom Dimitri may have picked up over here. He would need help in a business like this; it's not the type of job that an American gunman could handle by himself."

"But even then we are not much further on," I observed. "No matter who they are they certainly didn't kill Osborne. Somebody knocked him on the head, however, and somebody opened the safe and went off with the papers."

"That seems to be the logical conclusion," he puffed meditatively at his cigar. "How do you propose to act in the matter?" he inquired suddenly. "If you are afraid of these people, there's nothing to prevent you from going round to Scotland Yard and telling them your story."

I shook my head. "I've had quite enough of Scotland Yard," I said. "You can do as you please, but as far as Jerry and I are concerned, we've made up our minds to tackle the thing ourselves."

"You have?" He nodded slowly. "A very sensible decision! The less the police are brought into this better for all of us. Whatever else they might do, they would certainly destroy any chance we have of recovering the formula."

"You think there is a chance then?"

"It's not impossible. It depends to a certain extent upon whether the man who stole it is aware of its value. He may have been an ordinary thief who was interrupted just as he had opened the safe. In that case his first instinct would probably be to grab what he could and bolt from the house."

"Sounds a bit thin to me," I objected. "Burglars don't usually risk their necks unless they know that there's something worth taking."

"I agree with you. It's considerably more probable that whoever broke into the place came to steal the formula. After all we have no proof that Dimitri was the only person in the secret. Osborne may have had a second confederate whom he let down as well."

"There's another idea that struck me," I remarked. "If this invention is as important as you say, there must be several big firms here and in America who..." I hesitated—"well, who wouldn't be too squeamish about how they got hold of it."

He shrugged his shoulders. "We have some fairly unscrupulous competitors, but I doubt whether any of them would go as far as murder. I am more inclined to regard it as a private enterprise, and for that very reason I take a less hopeless view of the situation than I otherwise should."

"Sooner or later, provided nothing happens to alarm him, our unknown friend will attempt to dispose of his plunder."

"He may have done so already."

"I think not. The metal market is a sensitive concern, and I make it my business to keep closely in touch with all its principal centres. I am convinced that up to now nothing has happened. If there are developments elsewhere we are almost certain to hear of them, but my own belief is that the first approaches, when they are made, will probably be in our direction. I should not be surprised if something of the kind were to occur at any moment."

"And supposing it does?" I said bluntly. "Are you prepared to do business with a murderer?"

"Quite," was the prompt answer. "As I told you before, I regard the acquisition of this process as a national duty. If it is offered to me I shall not hesitate to buy it, but you may rest assured that Miss O'Brien's claims will receive the fullest and fairest consideration."

Secretary Morgenthau's skill in sensing the financial situation is a great comfort to FDR, and he has said so. The Treasury head sees no difficulty in financing the revised program—provided it is not violently revised upward by Congress by passing the bonus and enlarging relief appropriations.

Problem: A consolidation of the multiple agencies engaged in public construction work is in the cards. It already has been announced that Chief Coordinator Donald Richberg was looking into the situation and much streets was laid on the fact over 50 bureaus are now letting contracts of one sort or another.

There has been some talk of a new cabinet post. This is not a new idea but it has been brushed off and brought up to date by Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins. It would be called the Department of Public Welfare and would take in public workers, relief, veterans' administration, public health, education, etc.

As New Deal program is now shaping up these functions of government very easily could be put under one roof.

The big question mark is personal ambition. Already, some of the undercover pullings and haulings between FDR's chief aides for a most favored place in the spotlight have been bared to the public eye. Creation of a new cabinet job easily could start such a bitter internecine row for the honor as to definitely upset the "happy family" idea. Also, the Republicans would cry, "Bureaucracy!"

A consolidated "emergency" setup is more in the cards. When one considers unemployment insurance, the recession that federal aid has become a chronic problem, and the ever-widening scope of public works the "emergency" agency undoubtedly will become permanent sooner or later.

Harmony: Even though most of the observers think President Roosevelt is headed leftward again when he next goes definitely on record, some of the political old-liners are getting a bit of consolation out of the current "truce" between the New Deal and big business.

They say a person can be a Conservative around Washington nowadays and not be completely ostracized. Dulcet tones and bashful modulation are the only requirements of the day.

Cynics are anticipating an outburst of heavy baritone very shortly.

Naval: The friends of Federal Housing Administrator James Moffett are grooming him to be Secretary of the Navy. This is predicted primarily on the ill health of Claude Swanson, who now holds the bridge, and a belief he soon will want to retire.

Some of these rumors have been traced back to shipping circles. Others appear to have been inspired by government press agents who are NOT press-agents for the Federal Housing Administration.

One thing is certain. There is no unanimity among the shipbuilders. Should Secretary Swanson ever relinquish the reins a lot of the yard and dock men would carry the banner for Assistant Secretary Henry Roosevelt.

Rush: One thing is very certain. Congress is going to have to act very fast after it gets here next month on the question of federal relief.

As of Nov. 15, Relief Administrator Hopkins had $350,000,000 in sight. This included all the money President Roosevelt could divert to him from RFC and elsewhere.

Expenditures are progressing at the rate of nearly $135,000,000 a month. Along about February 1 a million for doles, work relief and bread lines will be exhausted.

New York By JAMES McMULLIN

Violators: The law that government employees shall receive no remuneration from other sources is more honored in the breach than the observance. Informed New Yorkers say there are literally hundreds of federal workers—especially on the staffs of NRA and various commissions—who are collecting both from Uncle Sam and their regular employes. Mostly they've been lent by corporations who still pay their salaries because the government can't support them in their accustomed style. Technically they gave their time—but in many cases they collect expense money from the Treasury which brings them within the scope of the law.

Keen observers predict a Roman holiday when Congress catches on. They shudder to think what would panies by 157 per cent tobacco by 166 per cent mines and metal by 360 per cent. Thirteen steel companies converted a deficit of $41,700,000 in a profit of $12,900,000.

The utilities stand in lonely and unenvied grandeur with an earning loss of 11 per cent in the same period.

That, it is added, would mean a real, rather than an artificial, business boom.

In the end, the debate narrows down largely to a direct question of fact: Is private business now willing and able to take over the bulk of the recovery burden?

That is what Mr. Roosevelt and his advisers, in their recent conferences, have been trying to find out.

The really interesting feature of the current administration effort to restructure business lies in the fact that the most sweeping gestures of conciliation have come after, rather than before, the election.

No one was surprised when the closing weeks of the campaign saw Democratic leaders making obvious overtures toward the right wing.

It was from that quarter the chief attack was coming. Mr. Roosevelt was being pictured to big and little business men as a dangerous character, a spendthrift and a radical of the worst type. It was only natural that the accusation should be denied, and some tangible evidence offered that the denial was bona fide.

When the election resulted in the complete rout of this right wing opposition, however, there were many who expected the era of mollification to end. The President was seen as having received a clear mandate from the voters to go on and on, spending, experimenting, riding roughshod over the old conceptions of economics.

What actually happened, however, represents almost the exact reverse of that rather general expectation.

Significant Conferences

Instead of proclaiming a great victory for liberalism, Mr. Roosevelt says nothing about the election but begins a series of significant conferences with business men.

Instead of announcing a sweeping program of social legislation, he asks for unemployment insurance only.

Instead of intensifying government spending, he drops repeated hints that it is time to curtail.

Instead of bringing forward some new breath-taking proposal which might frighten capital, he cements a sort of entente with both banking and industry, leaving organized labor puzzled and wondering.

In short, the developments at Washington since the election have represented a continuation and acceleration of the trend which became so apparent a month before election day.

That circumstance is not lost on business leaders. They are not so prone now, as they were before the votes were in, to discount, on the possible ground of urgent political expediency, the conciliatory words spoken by Washington.

Business On 'Inside'

In assessing the real significance of the new era of better feeling between business and the administration, it is worth remembering that hard-headed industrialists do not usually map a course of action on the basis of surface indications only.

Whatever he has done publicly to placate the right wing, Mr. Roosevelt also has talked very privately with various important financial figures.

So have his aides, particularly Dr. Ray Moley, who has been busy in New York. Under the new regime NRA has repealed the goldfish bowl philosophy of General Johnson, and the other school of thought re-hidden its intentions in secrecy.

To a larger degree than ever before in this administration, business now is in a position to have inside information. It is interesting that, on this basis, important elements in the business community affirm their willingness to go along with the President.

The whole set of circumstances might easily be interpreted to mean that the new entente is real and sincere, on both sides; and that, if true, will be history-making news.

Averting War

"If women had the power, they would avert war," said the idealist. "Would they?" innocently inquired Miss Cayenne.

"Then why was the Trojan War not averted? All that would have been necessary was for Helen to put on an ugly make-up."

Sundown Stories

Santa Claus By MARY GRAHAM BONNER "Hello, Santa Claus!" shouted Willy Nilly.

"Quack, quack, hello Santa Claus," quacked Mr. and Mrs. Quack o Duck and the ducklings.

"Cock-a-doodle-do," crowed Top Notch. "As one of Puddle Muddle's leading citizens I'm glad indeed to welcome you."

Rip was jumping up and down right by the visitor and barking with delight, his tail wagging furiously.

"Hello, hello everyone in Puddle Muddle. Hello, Willy Nilly, Rip, Top Notch, Ducks, Christopher," called Santa Claus, and his voice sounded as fine as ever, so clear and strong and jolly.

His cheeks were as red as could be, his beard and hair as white as the snow, his eyes twinkling and laughing.

"I feel it's going to be a wonderful Christmas and a fine year to come and I have a plan which I want to take up with Willy Nilly," Santa said.

"A plan?" asked Willy Nilly. "Do tell it to us."

"Of course," commenced Santa Claus. "I have my workshop way up north and you should see it now! Packed full of toys and books and games and candy and nuts and raisins. And there are lots of planes and skates and sleds and all sorts of things I haven't finished as yet."

"The letters keep piling in. But this plan I have in mind has something to do with Puddle Muddle. I do hope you'll agree to it!"

The Puddle Muddlers were beside themselves with excitement.

"Tell us the plan. I'm sure we'll agree to it. I can hardly wait to hear it!" exclaimed Willy Nilly.

"My plan is this," said Santa Claus, as he pulled some sugar out of one of his huge pockets and gave it to the reindeer.

"Instead of going far up north every evening, after I've been around to shops leaving toys so children who see them can tell me what they want, I'll just go up there every few days so as to read my mail and finish up my work there. I've so much room up north that it's the best workshop for me in all the world."

"But I could make very good use of a workshop here. I could build one in no time. In fact, hoping you'd all agree, I brought down some wood with me in my sleigh. It would save me a lot of traveling so that I would have more time for making toys."

Santa looked at all the Puddle Muddlers, and then at Willy Nilly. One look at the little man's face was all that was needed to know the answer to Santa's request.

"We'd be so honored and happy and delighted and overjoyed and pleased and glad to have you here we couldn't possibly express it all," shouted Willy Nilly.

"Then I'll get right to work," said Santa Claus, and with a speed that was almost unbelievable he started building a long, low wooden workshop. But in the midst of the work the air became filled with the sounds of many voices.

"Santa mustn't be interrupted," shouted Willy Nilly. "He picked out Puddle Muddle because he thought it was far enough away from places so that he could work here, and yet near enough so he could go anywhere he wanted in double-quick time."

Santa Claus was putting on the roof of the building and couldn't hear Willy Nilly, but he could hear all the voices and he called down from his ladder:

"Were you expecting guests?" "No," Willy Nilly called back, "and I'll tell anyone who comes here that we're busy with secrets."

But Willy Nilly did not have a chance to finish his sentence before the air was filled with birds, and jumping from tree to tree were any number of squirrels.

"Oh," said Santa Claus, "I don't mind having the birds watch me at my work. I simply didn't want the children to know my secrets, and all I was doing, until Christmas day."

"Twt, twt, chirp, chirp," sang the birds, "we followed your sleigh and we've come to sing to you while you work. You've always been too far north for us before. And, if we're very good, could we make little stockings out of some of our feathers and hang them on the twigs for you to fill, Santa?"

"And," chattered the squirrels, their eyes as bright as could be, "if we ran errands for you and were very, very good and didn't scold or gossip or anything, do you suppose we could have a Christmas treat, too?"

Santa Claus had finished his workshop in Puddle Muddle. He had carried many tools from his sleigh into the workshop and Rip, the dog, Christopher Columbus Crow, the ducks, Top Notch, the rooster, and the little man, Willy Nilly, had helped him.

"Of course," thought Willy Nilly. "I'll never get at my sticking-out, pointed ears until after Christmas now, but who bothers about any thing before Christmas except Christmas itself!"

Willy Nilly had taken an old stove from his house and had put it in Santa's shop, and the smoke now curled up cheerily through the chimney Santa had made.

Santa didn't have to finish asking for something he wanted before one of the Puddle Muddlers was off to get it for him. It was amazing how much the ducks and Christopher and Top Notch could carry under their wings; and Rip could carry things in his mouth. The birds and squirrels were not needed as yet for any assistance but they sang and chattered so cheerily that Santa said:

"It makes me work ever so quickly to be in the midst of so much activity."

The sun had gone down and Santa had gone over to Willy Nilly's for supper. Bread crumbs and suet had been put out for the birds and a special Saturday night treat of nuts for the squirrels.

Suddenly the squirrels saw something that made them almost stop breathing.

Oh, what a terrible moment this was! What should they do? They must act quickly!

SABOL LEADS STATE SQUAD

Colleg Station, Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 6.—Steve Sabol, N. C. State's All-Southern and All-State center, led all members of the Wolfpack in number of minutes played this fall with 279 out of a possible 540.

Sabol also led the team in 1933, playing 525 consecutive minutes, breaking the consecutive minute record of Red Espey, State's center and captain of the 1932 team who played 485 consecutive minutes that year.

Pushing Sabol for top honors this year was Raymond Redding, right end, who played 478 minutes. Carl Isaacs, left tackle, was third with 445. Isaacs was recently declared the most valuable member of the 1934 team by vote of team members.

Clifton Daugherty, big 205 pound right tackle, and Barnes Worth, right guard, were the only other member of the team playing 400 minutes or more. Daugherty turned in a card of 428 and Worth had one of 401 minutes.

Others playing 60 or more minutes and their times were: Kenneth Stephens, end, 369; Lawrence McCulley, quarter, 366; John Stanko, guard, 352; Ray Rex, back, 317; Howard Bards, back, 309; Venice Farrar, back, 278; Roscoe Roy, back, 226; Nick Hayden, back, 219; Willie Dusty, quarter, 177; Dominic Cara, end, 159; Alex Regdon, guard, 151; Al Edwards, tackle, 109; Joe Ryneska, back, 98; Herb Kirschner, guard, 85; Carl Goode, tackle, 82; Roger Mass, end, 63; Carl Bernhardt, guard, 62; Odell Smothers, center, 62; and Jack Gattis, back, 60.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

If it's true that the Secretary of the Treasury really is worrying about balancing the budget, I would refer him to the military and naval academies, where twenty-two young men in football togs are making more money each Saturday afternoon than the mint.

The Notre Dame-Army game drew 81,000 persons at $4.40 each. To Col. Jake Ruppert who owns the Yankee Stadium they paid $35,000. And if you are good at mathematics you can easily figure that this is a pretty fair sum of cash.

When the Army and Navy played at Philadelphia, the crowd was estimated at 80,000 plus, and the lowest price here was also $4.40.

It seems there really is "Something about a soldier," for wherever the cadets or tars are playing, there also is a crowd. The exception of this, of course, is when the cadets play at West Point, where the seating capacity is not great.

If the Army and Navy had played a full schedule of "big-time" opponents this year, they probably would have broken all attendance records in the East.

Just why Army should play such a schedule as they did this year is not quite clear. They opened with Washburn, they played Davidson, Drake and Sewanee before meeting Yale in the first test of the season.

In the first four games, they scored 128 points while their opponents went scoreless.

And while speaking of schedules, Notre Dame is not particularly pleased about the Navy's decision to play the Irish in Baltimore next year. In almost any other large city in the country, the two teams could draw 60,000 persons, but they will

JUST BEFORE ULM TOOK OFF

Here is one of the last pictures made of Flight Lieutenant C. T. P. Ulm, who with two companions, was forced down in the Pacific near Hawaii on an attempted flight from California to Australia. Amelia Earhart Putnam, noted flier who herself spanned the Atlantic, is shown bidding Ulm goodbye in front of his plane, "Star of Australia," just before the takeoff. be able to draw no better than half that many because of the limited seating capacity of the Baltimore stadium.

Both Army and Navy team this year served to prove that a mediocre team can be raised into the championship class by one good back. The Army has carried on for two years on the play of Jack Buckler, who succeeded Christian Keener Cagle as the punch of the Cadets' attack.

This year, Fred Borries swung the Navy into the front rank of the nation's team. A fine, courageous back, with more poise than a politician, Borries supplied the spark that blasted the sailors to victories over Notre Dame and Columbia, two teams which obviously had more power.

No less than eleven times this season, Borries prevented touchdowns from being scored against his side by cutting down a runner in the open field when he was the only man between the runner and the goal. Three times alone in the Columbia game he did this when the man carrying the ball was Al Barabas, one of the finest backs in the country. And it doesn't take a student of football to know that the ball-carrier has a two-to-one advantage over the safety man when he has only the safety man to dodge.

Former Senator Smoot, of Utah, dean of the Senate before the Roosevelt landslide of 1932 swept him out of office, constantly was chided because there were so many people from Utah on both Republican patronage and civil service lists.

Lamneck is disturbed over what he describes as the "inequitable" distribution of civil service jobs. There have been many such complaints in the past—so many, in fact, that usually scant attention is given them.

Encouraged by the McKellar "rider" (it was only recently upheld by the Comptroller-General) Lamneck has served notice that patronage henceforth must be distributed under provisions of the State apportionment rule.

"Some States," he says, "have three or four times as many jobs as they are entitled to, while others have none."

Then, people had to be hired in a rush. There were more jobs than applicants. Jobs had to be filled regardless of where people came from.

Since then, the Commission says, it has refused to certify eligibles from States in excess when there were persons on hand from States still shy of their quotas.

Regardless of that, however, Lamneck is insistent that something be done. "Somebody's going to catch the devil" is the way he expresses it.

With the McKellar "rider" as a precedent he might make it embarrassing for the Democratic patronage dispensers—even the chief dispenser himself, "Big Jim" Fattley.

Wilson, N. C., Dec. 8.—Two years ago a negro conjure doctor bored a small hole in an oak tree in the front yard of Duncan Hargrove's house on Carolina Street with a gimlet. As the conjure doctor bled mumbled unintelligible words. After he had finished he informed Duncan that when the outside wood had again grown over the hole he had made Duncan's heart would run dry.

Ever since then Duncan has been listening to the beatings of his "emptying" heart and watching that bak growing over and around that gimlet hole. Duncan is 55 and he wants to live, but he is fearful of the matter with Duncan's heart.

Called Johnson's Successor Another blue blood high in the councils of the "new deal" is W. Averill Harriman, the wealthy young chairman of the board of the Union Pacific Railroad. Harriman's rise to power in NRA has been little short of sensational.

As a matter of fact, there are those in Washington who say that he now holds the place in that organization once occupied by General Hugh Johnson. He is the real administrative officer of NRA.

When NRA was re-organized and a nine-man board supposedly took over the work of General Johnson, Colonel George A. Lynch was retained as administrative officer. Shortly thereafter, however, Lynch quietly stepped out and just as quietly young Harriman took over his duties.

Almost immediately the job took on a new importance. The administrative officer began to discuss policy matters at NRA code hearings. The board began to fade into the background and Harriman pushed to the fore.

Sister Champions Consumers In the same organization with Harriman is his sister, Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey, chairman of NRA's consumers' advisory board.

Mrs. Rumsey has had a place in NRA since the very beginning. She pioneered for the rights of the consumers during the formulation of the various codes for industry and has the matter with Duncan's heart.

Washington, D. C.—One of the first signs of what the Democrats may be in for on a wholesale basis for a while has made its appearance.

It comes from Ohio (the State which elected "Honest Vic" Donakay to take the Senate seat of Simeon Lamneck, a Democrat, re-elected for his third term.

Lamneck is disturbed over what he describes as the "inequitable" distribution of civil service jobs. There have been many such complaints in the past—so many, in fact, that usually scant attention is given them.
