Two Persons Killed In New Disorders In Saar Territory

100 INJURED IN FIGHTING ON NEW YEAR

Guns, Pitchforks and Hammers Used In Clashes Between the Nazis and Communists; Women brought into violence Preliminary to plebiscite; any Arrested.

Saarbrücken, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Two persons were killed and at least 100 injured in the New Year's Day political strife in the Saar, it was learned today.

Guns, pitchforks, hammers and iron rods were used in clashes throughout the territory between Nazis and their adversaries. Half a dozen injured received bullet wounds. Women were brought into the violent part of the strife preliminary to the January 13 plebiscite last night when nine shots were poured into the house of a leader of a Nazi organization in Buxweiler. None was injured.

Although officials of the international police force announced everything was quiet, it was learned that a fierce battle had been fought in at least five places in the territory. Reports indicated 50 persons had been arrested, but the police would not give their names.

Jeffrey Knox, Saar commissioner threatened to dismiss officials who let any news of violence leak out.

Two dead were picked up on a highway yesterday. One had been stabbed near Sarbluis and the other shot near Puetlingen. Two Nazi leaders were shot in the legs early yesterday in a street clash at Jersgersfreude when 25 communists and Nazis battled there.

TO ENLARGE LEAF HOUSE

Moore and Cannon Announce Additional Floor Space For Dixie Warehouse.

With the local tobacco market closed less than a month, plans were under way today for enlargement of one of the tremendous auction warehouses here in preparation for the handling of larger offerings next season.

Will Moore, of the firm of Moore and Cannon, operators of the New Dixie warehouse, announced today they had made arrangements for enlarging their already large structure.

The new addition will cover 21,000 square feet of floor space giving the warehouse a total floor space of 60,000 square feet, making it possible for the firm to handle an increasingly large volume of tobacco next season.

The house was built last summer and was operated last season by Moore and Cannon, who found their business so great it was necessary to provide more floor space to take care of their wide patronage next year.

Although this was the first announcement in connection with improvements expected on the local market this season, there was every indication the beginning of the new auction period would find the market with many other changes enabling it to handle more tobacco than it ever handled before. Already one of the largest markets in the bright leaf world, Greenville will be found still in the advance guard of the business next year making a greater effort than ever to pay the farmers more for their tobacco as they did this year by leading all of the large markets of the state.

Calling The Roll In Lindbergh Case

Anthony M. Hauck, Jr., prosecutor of Hunterdon county, N. J., is scheduled to play an important role in the prosecution of Bruno Hauptmann for the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby.

COURT HEADS ARE SWORN IN

Solicitor D. M. Clark, Judge Dink James and Solicitor Spain Administered Oath.

Three court officials—one from Superior court and two from County court—were sworn in prior to the convening of County court here yesterday by J. Frank Harrington, Clerk of Superior court.

They were D. M. Clark, solicitor of the Fifth Judicial district, and Judge Dink James and Solicitor Jack Spain of County court.

The induction ceremony was witnessed by a couple of hundred court attendants who had gathered for the opening of the regular session of County court following a one week holiday on account of the Christmas celebration.

Solicitor Clark was re-elected in the fast election for his third successive term, and Judge James and Solicitor Spain were re-elected for a second term.

The ceremony was of an impressive nature, and immediately following County court was convened for the hearing of a docket of 50-odd cases which had accumulated over the holiday season.

Davis, Cal.—(AP)—Nineteen years experimentation on the effects of soil and climate on wheat has led the California Agricultural College to the conclusion that the quality of wheat is greatly influenced by the nature and amount of salt absorbed by the plant during the latter stages of growth. Calcium salts are believed to have especial value while sodium salts are harmful.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG News Behind The News.

Washington By GEORGE DURNO

News: The annual battle of Capitol Hill opens tomorrow. Cold analysis of the make-up of the new Congress leads to only one conclusion: There will be lots of smoke but very little fire.

Except for the bonus, President Roosevelt should be able to control the legislators as easily in 1935 as he did in '33 and '34. A lot of the boys will do a lot of grumbling in private and then vote the straight ticket. They're afraid to do otherwise. They can't get last November election results off their minds.

There are some wild-eyes in both houses. They promise to be extremely vocal and collect many columns of exciting publicity, mostly personal. But they constitute a distance in minority and minorities don't cash in when roll is called. In the House there will be strong-arm rule to muzzle them if necessary. In the

NEW DEALERS PREPARE FOR NEW CONGRESS

High Command Considers Strategy to be Used During Opening Sessions.

Washington, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Amid silence deeper than any in recent years, the Democratic high command worked today on New Deal strategy for the momentous 74th Congress convening tomorrow.

As President Roosevelt labored on his plans no word went out about details of his recommendations for relief, public works, social security, the budget or any other major issues with which the Congress will wrestle.

After two days in which Congress will go through the opening formalities and hear the President deliver his message on the state of the nation—expected to be general rather than detailed—legislative leaders are expected to be called to the White House Friday night. There, it was believed, the 1935 New Deal plan will be discussed in detail.

Next week the Congress will go to work with the all time trouble makers—the bonus and the world court—awaiting right at the start.

On Capitol Hill today there were legislators who professed no knowledge of the President's plans. Awaiting his opening message set for Friday and his budget message Monday, each party was called for a meeting today.

HEAVY DOCKET BEFORE COURT

County Tribunal Continues Work Today After Delving Into Big Docket Tuesday.

After taking a week off for the observance of the Christmas holidays, County court resumed work here yesterday morning with a docket of forty or fifty cases of more or less interest to the people of various parts of the county.

The docket was one of the heaviest of months by reason of the number of cases accumulating over the holidays and the session was continued until today in order to complete the work. It was indicated that work would probably be completed during the late afternoon.

The cases consisted of charges of violating of prohibition and traffic laws, larceny, assault with deadly weapon and other violations of a similar nature.

Robert Willoughby of the Avond community, charged with the possession of whiskey, was fined $50.

Attacked by Father, Youth Uses Shotgun

Kinston, Jan. 2.—Roy Jarman, 22 was in jail today, charged with shooting and seriously wounding his father, Ellis Jarman, about 45 at the former's home near here Monday night.

Officers said the elder Jarman beat his wife, Roy and a sister interfered. Later Ellis approached Roy with a knife in one hand and a brick in the other, and was shot in the leg with a shotgun when he ignored his son's command to keep away, the officers stated. They said Ellis has been drinking. His wife was walking toward Kinston in a driving rain after being beaten when the shooting occurred.

Condition of the wounded man in a hospital, was described as satisfactory today.

Late News Flashes

N. C. Delegation Caucuses Washington, Jan. 2.—(AP)—North Carolina's 11-man house delegation, at its caucuses today went on record for liberalization of HOLC plans which would mean an increase in the appropriation for a home-lending agency.

The delegation announced it would work for extension of the time of applying for such loans, for which drastic curtailment recently was ordered because of the depleted funds.

The delegation voted unanimously for abolishing the house discharge rule whereby a bill may be brought to the floor by a vote of 145 representatives.

Representative Lambeth was endorsed for a place on the appropriations committee. Representative-elect Graham A. Barden was nominated for the rivers and harbors committee and Representative Weaver was placed in the running for the steering committee.

CITY CAR TAGS MOVE RAPIDLY

First of Year Found 629 Plates Sold with the Big Rush Still in Evidence.

The beginning of the New Year found Greenville citizens buying 1935 license tags rapidly with indications the latter part of the week would find the majority of them already in possession of the new license plates.

J. O. Duval, city clerk, said this morning the rush during the final days of the old year was terrific and enabled the city to forge ahead of the mark of last year. He stated that 629 licenses had been issued up to January 1 as compared with 596 for the same period last year.

Demand for the plates yesterday, he said, was as great as ever and if the rush continues a few days longer practically every automobile owner of the city will have his new plates on, thereby escaping having the matter called to his attention by members of the police department.

Like the state, the city is taking drastic action to prevent the driving of automobiles without new license plates and persons caught violating the law will be called before the court to answer why.

Mr. Duval urged everybody who did not buy during the latter part of the year to get busy and do so at once and avoid the unpleasantness of having the matter called to his attention by members of the police department.

State license plates are also moving rapidly, it was said today, and it should not be long now before everybody intending to drive will have his car fitted out with the state numbers.

BRAZIL FACES GREAT STRIKE

Maritime workers Reported to Have Quit Today.

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Brazil's merchant marine units were held at anchor today in what participants called South America's biggest strike.

Syndicated maritime workers from commanders to deck swabbers said the walkout would continue until their demand for higher wages was met.

Some estimates were that 400,000 are on strike, but the government said not so many were involved.

Alleged Lindbergh Slayer on Trial

Bruno Richard Hauptmann, German carpenter, went on trial for his life in Flemington, N. J., court today charged with the slaying of the child of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, in one of the most spectacular crimes of the century. Lindbergh, noted flier, is expected to take the stand in an effort to help the state convict the former German machine gunner.

TAX FIGURES MOUNT HERE

Report of City Clerk shows Collections of Over $61,000 in past Three Months.

Tax collections in the city of Greenville for the last three months were slightly above the $61,000 mark, it was made known today by J. O. Duval, city clerk.

The largest month of the year was November which boosted the city's coffers by $26,000. Collections in October were given as $20,000. December collections of $15,000 was the smallest of the three months, although considered very good by the tax department in view of the holiday season which always results in public attention turning from taxes to things more pleasurable.

Mr. Duval said above fifty percent of the 1934 levy had been collected up to the first of the year, on the basis of records compiled this morning. He said he expected payments to be fairly rapid during the present month in view of the fact that the penalty for non-payment becomes effective February 1. The penalty adds one-half of one per cent per month to all tax bills not paid up to that date, making it quite profitable for property owners to "kick in" at the earliest possible moment.

The first week will be confined to the hearing of civil cases, and the second week to criminal.

The civil docket contains forty or fifty cases of more or less interest to the people of this section, and the majority are expected to be disposed of.

The criminal docket, always congested, will furnish the fireworks of the two weeks' sitting, although no cases of outstanding importance were on the docket.

Numbers of charges of violation of the prohibition law, assault with intent to kill and murders involving colored people were expected to be given hearing during the week. Jail cases, of course, will receive first attention of the court, and after these have been cleared up the court will turn its attention to actions left hanging fire since the last term.

The grand jury as usual will be confronted by the usual number of charges and at the end of the week will return a report on the condition of county offices and institutions.

The sitting is the first since November and hundreds of people from all sections of the county, as well as other parts of the state are expected to be on hand from day to day.

'BUNDLE DAY' HERE JAN. 12

Boy Scouts of the City to Collect Clothing and Shoes for the Indigent.

Leon Keaton, head of the local Boy Scout movement, announced today that annual "Bundle Day" conducted by the organization from year to year would be held Saturday, January 12, and called on the public to give liberally to the cause launched in behalf of the indigent population of the community.

The bundles will be turned over to K. T. Futrell, head of the local Federal Emergency Relief organization, for distribution during the winter.

The clothing Keaton said, will be placed in the city storage and women of the county home will assort and repair all garments in need of such attention so that when it actually reaches the poor it will be ready to wear.

The clothing and shoes will be distributed only to persons not receiving aid from the federal government or from other public sources.

Keaton declared the need of clothing and shoes this year was very pronounced in spite of the financial improvement enjoyed by the community during the tobacco season. He said scores of families are without sufficient clothing to keep their bodies amply warm during the cold, and urged everybody to give as freely as possible.

He particularly called attention to shoes of all sizes in view of the widespread need reported by the relief departments in all sections of the county.

All gifts should be bundled up and placed on front porches in order to speed up the canvass of the Scouts which will be conducted as rapidly as possible.

KING ZOG IS HURT BY BOMB

Albanian Monarch Is Painfully Injured In Uprising Reported to be in Progress.

Athens, Greece, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Reports from the island of Corfu today said a bomb had been hurled into the palace of Tirana, wounding King Zog of Albania. Immediate confirmation of the report was not forthcoming.

The Corfu sources said a general mobilization of Mohammedan forces had been ordered. Christians were exempted.

London, Jan. 2.—(AP)—The Albanian legation called reports from Corfu today that King Zog had been wounded "just another Greek rumor." A spokesman said the legation would have been notified immediately had such an event occurred.

Hundred Die From Cold And New Year Jubilees

More than 100 deaths were attributed today to the observance of New Year and the cold wave that swept across the northern half of the nation from the Rockies to New England.

Automobile accidents accounted for more than sixty of the fatalities, while fires, gun play and other mishaps swelled the total to at least 115.

Among the dead was the three-month-old daughter of a Waukesha, Wis., couple who was suffo-

DIFFICULTY IS ENCOUNTERED PICKING JURY

Four Veniremen Fail to Qualify as Court Begins Work in Noted Case; Col. Lindbergh Sits Few Feet of Alleged Slayer, Watching Progress of Trial.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 2.—(AP)—Selection of a complete panel before the day is over to try Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the kidnaping and murder of baby Lindbergh looked possible shortly after opening of the first afternoon session of the trial.

The seventh juror was chosen shortly after 2:30 as attorneys moved with unexpected speed toward completion of the panel.

Juror No. 7 is Robert Cravatt, A. C. C. education advisor of High Bridge, N. J.

A fifth juror was selected and sworn after the opening of the afternoon session. She was Ethel Strocton, wife of another venireman.

Four jurors were selected from 22 persons questioned before the trial adjourned for lunch. They are Charles Snyder, a farmer; Mrs. Rosie Pill, a widow; Mrs. Verna Snyder, housewife, and Charles Walton, a machinist.

Hauptmann back in his chair between two uniformed state troopers, resumed his steady dull staring ahead.

Lindbergh, head resting on his arm, studied the prospective jurors with interest. Col. Schwarzkopf seated beside him, frequently whispered to him as the examination proceeded.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 2.—(AP)—Difficulties in the picking of a jury to consider the guilt or innocence of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, accused as the murderer of the Lindbergh baby, was manifest today in the first hour of his trial as four veniremen failed to qualify.

Hauptmann went under the ordeal of his trial for his life at 10:09 a. m. He was brought into the courtroom a moment after Supreme Court Justice Thomas Trenchard ascended the bench.

CITY SCHOOLS BACK AT WORK

Larger Enrollment Is Indicated as Institutions Resume Work After Holidays.

City schools, figuratively speaking, flung wide their doors today to receive the several hundred children of the city who two weeks ago abandoned studies for celebration of the Christmas holidays.

Although it was a foregone conclusion that attendance would be increased considerably during the last half of the term, figures were not available during the morning hours and probably will not be made public before tomorrow.

The faces beaming after receiving a very fruitful visit from Santa Nicholas, many of the children apparently were eager for resumption of work this morning while others failed to display much enthusiasm over the hard grind intervening between now and that important period when scores will be advanced and others placed on the list of graduates. But regardless of attitude, the grind got under way on per schedule, and the faculty was looking forward to maintaining (Continued on Page Four)

YOU AND YOUR MONEY

One night this week a lady attending the picture show here lost her pocketbook containing more than a thousand dollars in cash. Fortunately for her the management of the theatre located the purse where it had been dropped in the building and yesterday it was returned to the owner. This lady was indeed fortunate that she lost the purse inside the theatre instead of on the street, for certainly the chances for recovery were much better.

For the life of us we can't see why people will continue to be so foolish as to keep large amounts of money on their person or their premises. During the past few months much money has been lost in this section or has been taken from the pockets of its owners by nimble-fingered artists and yet many of our people will still carry large amounts of money around with them thinking that by so doing they are secure and will have it on hand when needed. Persons who carry money in large amounts with them are not only inviting financial loss but bodily injury as well for there are still a lot of people who wouldn't hesitate to inflict injury upon a person in order to rob them.

There are banks in which you can place your money for safekeeping and where you are insured by the government against loss, and there are likewise the post-offices where your money can be placed in a Postal Savings account and be safe until you need it. In view of this there is no reason why any person should find it necessary to keep large amounts of cash on their persons or concealed about their premises and certainly to do so is the height of folly.

Executive order declares it at an end. And obviously the day of restored normalcy is not just round the corner.

Hope: One new angle has developed in connection with the soldiers' bonus, which has been a political football ever since the close of the World War. Even now, when it appears to be on the one-yard-line and needs only a slight push for a touchdown, it never has been so deeply mired in politics. Practical politicians among the Democratic high command want to give it just one more kick for old-time's sake. The crew of political fundamentalists who used federal-relief funds so successfully as a campaign war chest last fall would like to hold out at least half of what's coming to the vets in 1935.

SYNOPSIS: Nick Trench and Molly O'Brien just have been leased by Jimmy Fox from a locked room, under which are tons of explosives to which a lighted fuse has been attached by Peter Orloff, a spy, is searching for the same valuable formula that Molly and Nick, with Jerry Bordent and Jimmy, are trailing. It had been found by John Osborne. Before Osborne was murdered he had lived with the Goodlands, and Jerry is trying to get some information from Mrs. Goodland.

Chapter 41 EXPLOSION

QUICK as an eel Jimmy twisted himself around, and thrusting Molly in front of me, I followed them down the passage. By the time I gained the main corridor, Jimmy had already crossed the hall.

He flung open the door exactly as Molly reached it, and in another moment the firm ground was beneath our feet, and we were all three running for the iron gate. I was just thanking my stars that I hadn't locked it when with appalling suddenness the end came.

There was a rumbling roar behind us, something struck me violently between the shoulder blades, and half paralyzed by a sickening stab of pain, I pitched forward full length on the rough gravel.

"Gawd! Gawd!" Jimmy's gasped-out exclamation was the first thing to penetrate into my numbed brain, and struggling up on to my hands and knees, I stared vacantly about me.

The whole causeway was littered with pieces of broken masonry. One huge block, just to my right, had half embedded itself in the grass, and stretched out beside it, white and inert, lay the prostrate figure of Molly.

With a horrible fear clutching at my heart I crawled painfully towards her.

"Molly!" I cried. "Molly, darling!" At the sound of my voice she opened her eyes. For a moment she still seemed utterly dazed; then as I slid my arm round her and lifted her gently up, she and consciousness ebbed back into her face.

"What's happened, Nick?" she faltered. "I—I thought we'd all been killed."

"It's a miracle we weren't. The whole place has been blown to smithereens. I dragged out my handkerchief, and very tenderly wiped the dust and mud from her cheeks.

"Are you hurt?" I asked. "Did any of that stuff hit you?"

"No, I don't think so. I just heard a roar, and then I don't remember anything else. I guess I must have fainted or something silly like that." She drew in a quick breath. "And you, Nick?"

"Nothing to grumble about," I replied. "I stopped a brickbat or something with my shoulder, but it doesn't seem to have done me any particular harm."

I looked round for Jimmy and discovered him almost at my elbow. Like both of us he was covered from head to foot with white dust, and a thin trickle of blood was oozing from his nose.

"What's up, sir?" he demanded breathlessly. "The young lady ain't copped it—as she?"

"We're both intact, Jimmy," I assured him. "How about you?"

"Me, sir? Oh, I'm fine. Bumped me nose a bit when I come down but that ain't nothing."

He wiped away the blood with his hand and cast a slightly awed glance at the smoking ruin behind us. "Made a decent job of it, 'aven't they, sir? Never seen a better bust-up, not even in the pictures."

IN A sobering flash, the danger of our position suddenly came home to me.

"We mustn't stay here," I said hastily. "That devil Orloff can't be far away, and if he sees that we've escaped..."

I broke off. "We must get down under the bank and make for the boat," I added. "Do you think you can manage it, Molly?"

With the aid of my hand she scrambled shakily to her feet.

"Yes, I'm all right, Nick. It's Jerry I'm thinking of. Oughtn't we..."

"He knows what happened," I interrupted. "If he's alive he's on his way back now. Our best chance is to lie up under those gorse bushes and wait for him there."

She raised no further opposition, and disregarding the unpleasant pain that was gnawing at my right shoulder, I led the way forward to the gate.

From here to the beach the distance was not more than fifty yards. The low-lying ground between was protected from the tide by a rough sea wall, and under cover of this bank we crept along in single file until we reached the little patch of higher ground where we had brought the dinghy ashore.

To my intense relief it was still there.

"One of us must look out for Jerry," I said. "You'd better do that, Molly, while we get the boat launched. Keep behind those bushes, and don't show yourself unless you see him."

Nodding her head silently she moved towards the gorse, and without further delay Jimmy and I set about our task. It took us some time, for I could only make use of my left arm.

Jimmy, however, performed his share of the work manfully, and after several pauses for rest, we succeeded in tugging our craft to the water's edge, from which position she could be pushed off at a moment's notice.

This done, we crawled back to where Molly was lying, and dropped down alongside of her.

"There's no sign of him, Nick," she whispered. "I'm beginning to feel frightened."

"You needn't worry yet," I replied. "He's got that pistol of Dawson's with him, and if there's any trouble he won't stick at using it. All we can do is to wait here until he chooses to show up."

SHE glanced round at us both. "You're the most wonderful boy in the world, Jimmy," she said in a low voice. "How did you know that we were locked in, and how did you manage to get ashore?"

He scratched his head. "It was like this, miss. I was sitting up on deck 'aving a look at the place when all of a sudden I see a bloke comin' sneakin' out of the front door."

"Soon as I clapped my eyes on 'im I knew who 'e was. 'Gosh, I says to meself, 'if it ain't that blinkin' doctor!' and before the words, as you might say, was 'ardly out of me mouth, 'e'd nipped off round the corner and was legging it away up the road."

"Well, it didn't take me long to guess that 'e'd done the dirty on you, so I off with me boots and shirt and drops in over the side. The tide was running a bit strong like, but I ain't what you might call a bad 'un and at swimming—got a prize for it at the Battersea baths last year, I did."

"It was that bloomin' door that was the real trouble. The perisher 'ad shut 'im 'ind 'im when 'e come out, and seeing as there weren't no time to waste, I just picks up a bit o' wood, and bashes in the window. 'Lucky I did, too, or we wouldn't 'ave been in a mess now."

We both stared at him for a moment without speaking.

"James," I said slowly, "as Miss O'Brien has remarked, you're a bloody marvel. If we ever get out of this..."

"Look, Nick, look! There he is—straight in front of us."

Molly, who had turned round again, was pointing through the bushes, and, jumping to my feet, I caught sight of the distant figure of Jerry just emerging through a gap in the hedge that bounded the lane.

He was heading in the direction of the factory.

"Shall I give 'im a whistle, sir?" inquired Jimmy.

"Not a bad idea," I agreed.

He inserted two grimy fingers into the corners of his mouth and emitted a shrill blast. Jerry pulled up sharply.

For a moment he stood gazing about him, and then as a second and still more penetrating summons echoed across the marsh, he wheeled round and came hurrying towards us.

"You'd better tell him, Nick," said Molly. "No good our both trying to talk."

Picking his way from one firm tuft to another until he reached the path, Jerry broke once more into a steady run.

Even if we had escaped observation till then, any further attempt at hiding ourselves was obviously futile, so parting the bushes I stepped forward into the open. Without a word Molly slipped through after me.

"You can take it easy," I called out. "We're quite safe, all three of us."

Muddy and dishevelled, his old waterproof smeared with dark stains, Jerry stumbled hurriedly up the slope. There was a queer look in his eyes, which I had never exactly seen before, a look of overwhelming relief, coupled with a kind of suppressed excitement.

of the times to note how many people are supporting it enthusiastically. Over 6,000,000 people have been recruited into clubs to push the idea of giving every person over 60 years of age $200 a month, the same to be totally expended in each 30-day period and the many millions necessary to make such generous payments to be raised by a general 2 per cent sales tax.

By way of example, one of the latest adherents to the Townsend movement is Edgar Witt, retiring Lieutenant Governor of Texas who has been regarded generally in his state as a sane, well-balanced politician.

New York Help: New York leaders have gone in for watchful waiting. There's a tendency to hold everything until it becomes clear whether the new Congress is going to obey its master's voice or run away on tangents of its own.

Future relations of business to government hinge largely on this question. If the Congressional team is reasonably tractable it's a fair bet the conservative passengers will continue to harass the driver with back-seat advice. But if the steeds get to ferry for the passengers' comfort—or even safety—you are likely to see them swarm to the driver's assistance with fresh pledges of cooperation and actual concessions along New Deal lines.

This attitude ties in with the wide spread belief in business circles that the threat of radicalism has been overplayed. That impression has been a potent factor in stiffening business resistance to FDR's policies. Richberg's outspoken warning against "internal disension" was designed to offset such complacency. But it will take a Congressional insurrection to carry conviction to unbelieving right-wingers.

Some highly-placed observers call this business of stalling until the Washington picture unfolds myopic. They doubt FDR will be nearly as grateful for help given under duress as he would have been if it had come sooner and voluntarily—no as keen to defend conservative interests from ravening legislators.

Banks: Keep an eye on the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. It's warning up to its unpublicized function of easing non-member state banks into the Federal Reserve System. That was the real point to its order that put Senator Clegg in a lather—the command to non-member banks to cut their interest on time deposits in conformity with Federal Reserve practice. It's a long step on the road to centralization when a federal agency can issue orders to state banks—and get away with it. It was all done in an assured and offhanded manner—in the hope that the state bank champions in Congress wouldn't notice. The Virginia Senator scotched that idea. Not that he loves non-member banks—but he sure does dislike these little irregularities.

Now that he's blown the trumpet, watch Huey Long and other defenders of the creek-side institutions swing into action. The fact that both Federal Reserve chairman Eccles and FDIC chairman Crowley hastened to defend their order indicates a determined effort to head off Congressional criticism before it spills the beans.

The most vulnerable chunk in FDIC's armor is its cost. The overhead runs about $8,500 a day—which would be chowder for cantankerous solons. A plan is in preparation which would effect economies by a much closer tie-up with the Federal Reserve Board. This would also serve the more subtle purpose of get to thinking that all is lost there's always Senator Fletcher to cheer them up. Just as they were working up a fresh case of nerves about let-wing pressure for monetary and banking legislation the top of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency comes out with a categorical statement that there will be no inflation, no central bank—in fact no radical legislation at all.

Comfort from such a faithful party wheelhorse is comfort indeed. The boys only pray he can deliver on his prophecies. They believe he can—but they're keeping their fingers crossed for luck.

Gesture: Insiders frankly rate Consolidated Gas' dividend cut from 50c to 25c a quarter a grandstand play to get the stockholders excited. There was nothing in the company's financial position to compel such a reduction. Of course its earnings have shrunk under pressure of higher costs and taxes and its prospects are less than dazzling—but it's a mighty long way from the poorthouse.

The informed doubt that the gesture will prove much. Even if the stockholders get unanimously agitated there's little they can do. Comment runs that they don't swing enough political weight to knock an alderman loose from his moorings—let alone the combined forces of federal and city administrations.

Rates: The yardstick method is gradually getting results on power rates. Quite a few companies have quietly given ground.

A utility concern operating near New York charge only 2c a kilowatt hour to domestic consumers for more than 120 hours a month. This doesn't mean a thing to the ordinary householder with average consumption around 50 hours—but it's a move in the direction that Washington points. Rates from 2 to 3 1/2c per K. W. H. for large users of domestic current are beginning to stud the whole map.

One power expert says that all utilities would be glad to grant a 2c rate even to small consumers—if they were allowed to make a service charge of 1/4 a month per customer. But that "if" comes under the heading of pipe dreams.

Police Investigate Robbery at Wilson

Wilson, Jan. 24—Police are investigating the burglary of Will Hawkins' house at Nash and Pine streets on Christmas night. According to the authorities it is one of the few burglaries that have occurred here in recent years. An overcoat belonging to James Harrison, and $85 of Claude Watson's money was stolen sometime during the night.

Harrison was spending the night there as a guest, and Watson is a roomer there. Ninety cents was also taken from the room of Hawkins' son. The thefts occurred while everyone in the house was asleep, according to investigations by the police, and because of the crime's late report to the police no clues or fingerprints could be found by detectives.

Carolina Sales Corporation

The Carolina Kelvinator Co., was originally organized for the purpose of distributing Kelvinator products through parts of North and South Carolina. Since that time our activities have been enlarged to include other products which constitute more than fifty percent of our gross sales.

It can be therefore easily determined that our old company name is not entirely applicable and that for the best interest of our company it was desirable to adopt a new company name more suitable to our general activities.

The Carolina Sales Corporation has succeeded the Carolina Kelvinator Co. Inc., in its entirety, accepting and absorbing all of the assets and liabilities of the prior company on the effective date. There has been no change in financial structure, management, personnel, policies or products handled. This change is primarily a change in name only.

We wish to express to you our appreciation for your fine patronage, and trust that this company under its new name may enjoy its continuation.

Miss Nellie Denny entertained "The Round Table" at her home on Eighth street on New Year's Day at 3:30 in the afternoon.

Mrs. Wiley Brown presented the paper of the afternoon discussing the period of 1873 to 1883 as it related to the life of such women of prominence as Anna Howard Shaw, Linda Roberts and Frances Willard.

"The history baffles one who would segment it into precise periods," as Mrs. Brown succinctly stated, yet this decade under discussion was clearly a point of definite economic, political and social change in each of which women played major roles.

Following the panic of 1873 there came a period of inflation. Big business became a thoroughly entrenched reality through the Vanderbilt's enlarged railroad activities and Rockefeller's oil monopoly. The South at this time was yet struggling with reconstruction problems, which still remained grimly realistic.

Since the opening of the crib at twelve midnight on Christmas Eve, many out of town folks have made a visit to the crib. The crib presents a beautiful sight at night to the passing motorist. Did you ever notice... in a roomful of people... the difference between one cigarette and another... and wonder why Chesterfields have such a pleasing aroma

Many things have to do with the aroma of a cigarette... the kind of tobaccos they are made of... the way the tobaccos are blended... the quality of the cigarette paper.

IT takes good things to make good things. Someone said that to get the right aroma in a cigarette, you must have the right quantity of Turkish tobacco—and that's right.

But it is also true that you get a pleasing aroma from the home-grown tobaccos... tobaccos filled with Southern Sunshine, sweet and ripe.

When these tobaccos are all blended and cross-blended the Chesterfield way, balanced one against the other, you get a flavor and fragrance that's different from other cigarettes.
