PRESIDENT SEEKS FOUR BILLIONS FOR WORK RELIEF

Plans To Send Over 3 Million Jobless To Work

WANTS TO STOP OLD METHOD OF GIVING RELIEF

Roosevelt Will Ask Congress for Enough Money to Inaugurate "American Plan"; Budget Expected to Call For $8,000,000,000; $4,000,000,000 Desired for Ordinary Running Expenses

(Copyright by The Associated Press)

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—(AP)—President Roosevelt intends to ask Congress an authoritative source said today to provide $4,000,000,000 for what he terms the "American plan" to "quit this business relief" and put 3,500,000 unemployed to work.

This, as outlined by persons prominent on Capitol Hill, would be the work relief figures for the fiscal year beginning next July, though it will not all be spent for reviving business to absorb enough of the jobless.

For ordinary running expenses in the year, it was indicated about $4,000,000,000 more would be required and that the budget would be about $8,000,000,000.

President Roosevelt outlined to Congressional leaders last night a plan to expend about $890,000,000 to tide the relief effort over the transition period from the "goal" to jobs for all. This sum is expected to come at least in large part from funds previously appropriated.

The Congressional leaders went in to last night's important conference on the future of the New Deal only a few hours after hearing the President in his first message of the 74th Congress enumerate many tasks.

Among them were consolidation of Federal regulations over all forms of transportation; renewal or clarification of the NRA; strengthening of crime detection and prevention; abolition of the evil features of utility holding corporations; improvement in the form and methods of taxation and tapering off of emergency credit activity.

Although there was no detailed announcement of last night's discussions, one conferee who could not be quoted by name, listed these things as among those the President is considering or has definitely decided to recommend:

Old age as well as unemployment insurance.

Continuation and modification of Agricultural Adjustment Act.

Authorization of telephone and telegraph merger with the Federal Government possibly fixing rates for the monopoly.

Continuation of $516,000 in emergency "nuisance" taxes.

Making permanent the present $5,000 maximum insurance on bank deposits under the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Continuation of the leading authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Enlargement of resources of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

BIG RUSH ON FOR CITY TAGS

Order of Aldermen to Arrest Persons Without Tags Causes Rush Today

Following action of the Board of Aldermen ordering the arrest of all persons caught driving without city automobile license tags, the City Clerk reported that one of the most pronounced rushes was recorded this morning since the beginning of sales the first of the month.

Up to the noon hour it was said that 80 licenses had been sold with scores more expected to be in the possession of automobile owners by the time the license bureau closes this afternoon.

J. O. Duval, city clerk, who is in charge of the license department, said 780 licenses had been sold up to the noon hour today with five hundred to go before the goal is reached. The city sold around 1,200 last year, but with more cars in evidence it was expected sales would be heavier this year.

Chief of Police George Clark said this morning no arrests had been made since receipt of the order from the aldermen Thursday night to carry all persons without licenses to court to answer to why they did not obey the law. There may have been some violations on the outskirts of the city, he said, but it was indicated that everybody was making an effort to obtain licenses today and stay out of trouble.

To Name Four Persons in Lindbergh Case

New York, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Edward Reilly, chief defense counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, said today that next Thursday in Flemington, N. J., he would name four persons and charge them with the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby.

"There are two men and two women," Reilly said.

Reilly was here for a conference with handwriting experts. He denied published reports that the defense would attempt to prove the body of the baby found was not that of the infant son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

The attorney declined to name the persons he said engineered the kidnaping.

Asked if his client would be one of the four he would name, Reilly replied, "No."

"I felt from the beginning that Hauptmann was innocent of the crime."

PREPARE FOR ROOSEVELT BALL JAN. 30

Committees Named And Other Preparations Made For Annual Attraction

At a meeting of the Roosevelt Birthday ball committee here last night committees were appointed and other plans outlined for the annual attraction to be staged here on the night of January 30.

The fall last year was held in the campus building of East Carolina Teachers college and Dr. Meadows, president of the institution, has given permission for the staging of the dance there again this year.

The committee decided that the prices for the ball would be $1.50 for couples dancing and 50 cents for spectators. A special price of 25 cents for spectators has been arranged for the student bodies of the high school, and East Carolina Teachers college.

It was also decided that no complimentary tickets would be issued in view of the charitable cause in which it is being held and members of all committees and others taking part in the success of the affair will be required to pay the regular price of admission.

W. W. Lee, chairman of the music committee, stated that Hod Williams' orchestra of Charlotte, would furnish music for the occasion. The orchestra broadcasts three times a week from Charlotte and has played for a number of dances in this section of the state. They played for the New Year's dance in New Bern and those from Greenville who attended that dance said the music was the best they had heard in this section for some time.

In addition to the dance, there will be a floor show and as last year, the radio talk by President Roosevelt.

Local merchants, cooperating with the ball committee, will be asked to donate gifts to be given as prizes during the evening.

Invitations will be extended to every town and community in Pitt county to join Greenville in staging the ball in such a way that it will be truly representative of the great territory.

The first group of committees, which will be supplemented from time to time, follows:

The list of patrons and patronesses of the ball will be chosen from all sections of the county and will be made public in the near future.

Publicity committee: D. J. Whitchard, Daily Reflector, chairman; Mr. Thomas, New Leader; J. C. Andrews, Ayden Dispatch; G. A. Rouse, Farmville Enterprise; T. Y. Walker, Manager State and Pitt theaters; Mr. Ormond, manager Princess Theatre, Ayden.

NEGRO WOMAN FACES COURT

Louise Whichard Charged With C. C. W. After Arrest Here Last Night

Louise Whichard, who officers said was taken into custody last night while hunting her sweetheart with a pistol, was bound over to County Court following preliminary hearing in police court this morning. She was unable to give bond and was remanded to jail to await trial in County Court next Tuesday morning.

Police said the negro went to the home of a friend last night with the pistol secreted in her bosom, supposedly in search of her sweetheart who was reported to have been paying attention to some other woman.

The friends notified the police and the woman was taken into custody before any damage was done.

Mrs. E. L. Baker, charged with reckless driving, was bound over to County Court under bond of $100 as result of a wreck with a Mr. Croom driving an automobile owned by S. T. White. Croom claimed Mrs. Baker ran into him as he was crossing Five Points and Mrs. Baker claimed that Croom ran into her. So a charge of reckless driving was filed against Mrs. Baker.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

News Behind The News.

Washington By GEORGE DURNO
Venom: Receipt publicity given the bitter feud within the Building Trades and Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor has had a sobering effect on the union leaders involved. From President William Green on down they are realizing what "damaging effects" on the whole union movement a prolongation of the scrap may have.

January 29 the executive council of the A. F. of L. meets. The struggle for control of the Building Trades Department will be the big subject of debate.

Union men hope the council will be able to draw up a satisfactory peace treaty. None will venture a prediction on the outcome, however. The fight is too venomous.

Ambitious: In the meantime Dan Tobin, president of the Teamsters' Union, is striving to bring the two factions together. It is almost paradoxical to see Tobin, the fighter in the role of peacemaker but he is making a sincere effort.

The teamsters cast their lot with the carpenters, bricklayers and electrical workers against the plumbers, sheet metal workers, elevator constructors and others. This has not deterred Tobin from striving to restore harmony but he is finding plenty of discord.

Tobin is a stocky-built man of 60 with a voice that could fill the Rose Bowl. In the last few days he has been calling on one union official after another to plead in soft and dulcet tones.

The boss teamster has had a turbulent career in the union movement. It was he who chased the notorious Connie Shea out of organizing labor after that now departed gentleman had tried to turn the

Township Gatherings For Discussion of Contracts Draw Much Interest

Township meetings held for the purpose of giving farmers information as to the kind of contracts they will be able to sign for peanuts, were well attended this week.

The actual signing of contracts will begin Saturday, January 12. According to information coming from the County Agent's Office, it will be necessary for growers to measure their 1934 acreage before entering into a contract with the government. Farmers who anticipate signing a contract should make those measurements as soon as possible in order that the sign-up campaign may be completed in time for the farmer to know what his acreage will be before planting time.

The new streamlined motor bus which has been placed in service by the Norfolk Southern Railroad will begin operation between Washington and Raleigh will make its initial run tomorrow.

The bus will arrive in Greenville tomorrow morning at 8:13 o'clock and reach Raleigh at 11 a. m. It will leave Raleigh at 2:30 p. m. and arrive in Greenville at 5:16 p. m.

The bus is the latest word in transportation comfort, and attracted much interest when it arrived here several days ago for public inspection.

On account of inauguration of the bus schedule, it was said the regular train schedule had been changed effective tomorrow. No. 2, from Raleigh to Norfolk, will arrive here at 10:56 a. m.; No. 1, from Norfolk to Raleigh, 3:17 p. m.; No. 5, from Washington to Raleigh, 8:13 a. m.; and No. 6, from Raleigh to Washington, 5:16 p. m.

CONFERENCES ARE CALLED BY BOTH FACTIONS

State Summons Several Crack Federal Agents Who Uncovered Ransom Money; Defense Calls Handwriting Experts

Flemington, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's prosecution and defense matched move for move today, calling witnesses in regular session today to reinforce the connection that he did—or did not—commit the Lindbergh murder.

Both legal staffs withdrew from Flemington for the week-end recess in Hauptmann's trial for life, the prosecution to Trenton and the defense to New York City to match wits in the game centering in the Lindbergh ransom.

The State summoned several Federal agents, the crack operatives who tracked down the Lindbergh ransom money and who will be major witnesses for examination.

Attorney Edward Reilly, chief of the defense, said:

"I am calling a conference of my handwriting experts in my office in Brooklyn. We are going to present our case with regards to the ransom notes."

The strategic moves followed three days of swiftly moving drama during which Colonel Lindbergh testified firmly to his belief that Hauptmann kidnaped his child and took his $50,000 ransom.

Hauptmann, aroused by the boyish aviator's identification of his voice as that of the ransom reaper, but strangely unmoved by the accusation of the fier, settled back in his cell.

Miss Betty Gow, olive-skinned Scotch nurse of the Lindbergh infant, was listed as the first witness the State will call when court reconvenes Monday morning for the second week of the trial. The Hopewell police chief, Harry Wolf, who arrived at the Lindbergh South Mountain estate soon after the kidnaping had been discovered, probably will follow her.

I did not kill Osborne
By VICTOR BRIDGES

SYNOPSIS: At last Nicholas Trench knows who killed John Osborne, the man Nick was acquitted of having killed, himself. It was the husband of Mrs. Gowland, and the husband who has shot himself. But still Nick, with his partner, Molly O'Brien, Jerry Howland, and Jimmy Fox, do not know where the valuable formula Osborne had stolen is hidden. Mrs. Gowland confesses that her husband shot Osborne because Osborne and she were lovers.

Chapter 44
THE FORMULA

"I DON'T know how my husband knew about Osborne and me," Mrs. Gowland went on, "unless he may have found a letter which came for me after—after Jack went away. Perhaps he had been watching us all the time."

By a desperate effort she managed to moisten her lips. "My husband went up to London—went up by the train. He was there for two days and when he came back he told me what he had done. At first I didn't believe him, but it was true—oh, my God, it was quite true! I thought he would kill me too."

"Sometimes"—once more she buried her face and sobbed brokenly—"sometimes I wish he had."

"You poor soul!" Molly bent over her and softly touched her hair. "I am so terribly sorry for you. It's dreadful to think what you must have been through."

With an impulsive gesture Mrs. Gowland caught hold of her hands. "Oh, you're good—I don't know who you are, but you're good and kind. No one has ever been kind to me—except him."

"I understand, too," I said, "and I don't blame you in the least. I am only grateful to you for telling us the truth now."

Jerry stepped forward. "You have cleared up one great injustice, Mrs. Gowland," he said, quietly, "but there's someone else you've wronged besides Mr. Trench."

She stared up at him. "Someone else?" she whispered.

He pointed to Molly. "There were some papers which belong to Miss O'Brien in Osborne's safe. He stole them from her father when he was in America. They were taken out of the house on the night that he was murdered."

"Papers!" She sat up with a quick gasp. "Yes—there were papers—a whole packet of them. He took them away to make it look like a robbery."

"What did he do with them?" Jerry rapped out the question like a pistol shot.

"He brought them back here to show me. There was blood on them—Jack's blood. He wanted me to see it."

She rose unsteadily, holding on to the back of the chair. "They're over there, in the bottom drawer of the big chest. He used to take them out every night and look at them. He was mad, I tell you, mad—mad."

Crossing the room in a couple of swift strides, Jerry gave an ineffectual tug at the two handles.

"It's locked!" he exclaimed.

"Where's the key?"

She moved slowly towards the sofa, turning back the blanket, bent down over the stiff, sprawling object beneath.

"Here it is," she said.

R & R This is a story of Scotch and a Scotchman.

Just before the Christmas holidays a man had a grand idea. He rounded up a man named Roosevelt who had been in the whiskey business before prohibition and another man named Roosevelt. The firm of Roosevelt & Roosevelt was thus formed for the purpose of importing Scotch whiskey for the holiday trade—and all subsequent trade.

The firm was a little strapped for cash at the start. The Scotchman from whom they bought their whiskey demanded spot payment. Then came another struggle to raise the money to get it through customs. But finally everything was accomplished and the whiskey arrived. Alas, when opened it was discovered the Scotchman with that frugality supposedly inherent in his race had conked on the labels.

Instead of a nice wide label which would proclaim to all potential customers that the contents of the bottle was "Roosevelt & Roosevelt" whiskey, the label merely identified it as "R & R". The firm's consolation lay in the fact it was good whiskey.

New York

Retreat: Floyd Carlisle's proposal to apply the "Washington plan" to the electric subsidiaries of Consolidated Gas was a neat bit of strategy—so neat that New Yorkers who have criticized the group for clumsy public relations were amazed. Whatever the ultimate outcome Con Gas is in a far stronger position than before.

If the plan is adopted North America's experience in Washington (and St. Louis—where a modification of it is in effect) indicates that the electric companies will have nothing to fear. They are assured of a certain fixed return on invested capital before rate reductions are required. Earnings above the fixed return are shared between the power company and its consumers (in the form of lower rates). North American has found that increased consumption induced by cheaper current yield worthwhile returns from the earnings standpoint.

And if the city rejects Carlisle's offer, the burden of criticism logically shifts to the municipal administration. Con Gas can—and will—broadcast that it's doing its part to reach a reasonable understanding.

Moreover, Edison's refusal to deal with Carlisle on these lines would earn a political free-for-all. Many Democrats in the state legislature and Republicans too—would leap for the chance to combine two pleasures: taking a wallop at LaGuardia and defending the utilities on the subject of wealth.

In the past the American public has been tolerant of large fortunes. Each father hoped that he or his son would get the breaks and graduate into the heavy-money class. But in the last few years there has been disclosure after another in Congressional investigations of instances where the fat boys had succeeded in paying no taxes at all while the well-known middle class carried the load. If and when the Senate Munitions investigation resumes, the income statistics of the powder-makers and ship-builders are due for an airing.

The lads in the top brackets are in for a strafing—and possibly a

Pittsboro Man Held In Highway Death

Raleigh, Jan. 5.—A charge of manslaughter was preferred yesterday against C. L. Austin, truck driver of Pittsboro, as a hearing before Coroner L. M. Waring on the death of Frank Clark, young man of Apex, who was the 27th victim of a highway accident in Wake county during 1934.

Austin posted bond of $1,000 for his appearance in Superior Court, following the coroner's inquest into the accident, which occurred on the night of December 21, on Highway 90 a few yards from the Chatham county line.

Evidence at the inquest was that Austin, driving the truck at a high rate of speed, sideswiped a car driven by James Wilson of Apex, with Clark as a passenger. Wilson's car was thrown in the path of a second truck driven by Lucy Beal of Pittsboro, owner of both trucks. Beal was absolved of blame for the accident.

If and when the great international highway is finished it will reverse the domains of fourteen nations. The proposed route is from Fairbanks, Alaska, to Buenos Aires, Argentina.

The Soldiers' Bonus issue was conspicuous by its absence from President Roosevelt's address to Congress yesterday but maybe the President already having expressed himself as opposed to payment of the veterans, decided to let the controversial issue alone until he had to face it. Despite the administration opposition those in the know in Washington are of the opinion that the soldiers must be settled with at least in part this year and some definite understanding made as to the balance in case of only a partial settlement. In view of this sentiment it is possible that the administration is holding off the issue for the present seeking the most favorable compromise.

In his address to Congress President Roosevelt placed the matter of caring for the unemployables squarely up to the states while the federal government would endeavor to provide a work relief program to care for the temporarily unemployed. In the face of this national policy our own state legislature when it meets next week will find itself faced with a relief problem for this state in addition to its other knotty problems of restoration of school teachers' salaries and salaries of state employees together with demands for greater expenditures along all lines and at the same time demands for lower taxes. While many are hoping for a short session of the coming legislature the problems to face the lawmaking body will no doubt consume considerable time and the legislators will probably have to remain in Raleigh far beyond their sixty days.

teamsters' organization into a racket. Back in 1928 Tobin resigned as national treasurer of the A. P. of L. after failing in a strenuous fight to get the Federation to officially endorse Al Smith's presidential candidacy. He missed out on becoming Secretary of Labor in this administration by a close margin—and still has justifiable ambitions.

Cuts: Despite President Roosevelt's statement in opposition to cash payment of the bonus, reports continue to pour in from every section that there is a pronounced sentiment for it.

Travelers back from north, south and west say they found a general feeling to the effect "everybody else is getting a cut out of the treasury, so why not pay the bonus, too?"

Once the federal purse-strings are loosened it is difficult to tell them again. FDR may expect to run into an increasing amount of the why-not-me-too sentiment during this session of Congress.

flush amongst the undergrowth, and at the same moment Jerry fired. In the low ceilinged room the noise of the report was deafening.

"Did you see him, Nick? It was that swine from the Milan."

Springing towards the hearth, I grabbed up Gowland's gun and jerked open the breech. There was an unused cartridge in the left barrel.

"Are you sure?" I demanded.

"Quite. I'd know him again anywhere."

I stared out into the shrubbery. "Pity you missed him," I said. "He is off now to tell the others. We shall have the whole gang here in a minute."

"Looks that way," Jerry glanced round calmly, and then walking up to the table, stuffed the remaining papers into his pocket. "Only one thing to do," he continued. "We must make a run for the boat, and trust to luck."

Molly stepped forward. "Can't we take Mrs. Gowland with us?"

The white-faced woman shook her head.

"I shall stay here," she said stonily.

Jerry held out the still smoking revolver. "You take this, Nick, and give me the gun. It's no use to you with that shoulder of yours." He flung open the door. "Come along, children—time we were off."

With Molly between us, we hurried along the dark passage and out into the narrow porch. It was only a short distance to the beginning of the path and, clicking forward the catch of his gun, Jerry, who had paused one moment for a quick look up and down, led the way forward across the gravel.

If I live to be a hundred I shall never forget that stretch of moonlit path, or our stumbling run through the muddy and silent farmyard.

All my senses were keyed up to their highest pitch by the deadly and imminent danger that surrounded us; but at the same time, as I gripped my revolver and peered anxiously into the shadows, a wild and uncontrollable elation was throbbing through my heart.

At last the truth was out—at last the black cloud which had hung over me so long was shattered and dispersed. I was free now—free to look the world in the face—free to marry Molly and take up my life and work where it had been broken off.

The thought sang through my mind like music, and the striking of the wind as it whistled across the desolate marsh made a brave and fitting accompaniment.

"We can't rush the last bit—not in this light," Jerry had pulled up again in front of the stile. I'll go first because I know the path. Keep an eye behind you, Nick, and if you see any trouble coming, sing out at once."

Ten or twelve yards in the rear, and with frequent backward glances over my shoulder, I followed them along the uneven track. I had a haunting feeling that at any moment half a dozen figures might come bursting through the hedge in hot-foot pursuit, but in the faint moonlight that filtered down through a veil of driving cloud, the long line of black bushes remained silent and unbroken.

All the same I was thankful enough when I at last scrambled up the gorse-clad slope and found myself looking down on the friendly little Seagull as she lay bobbing about at her anchor.

With the wind blowing strongly against the incoming tide the peaceful-looking estuary we had left now presented a very different appearance. What met my eyes was a tossing sea of broken water stretching away to the entrance, where a long, curving swell of white-capped breakers smashed sullenly against the half-submerged bar.

It was not too encouraging a prospect, and with an uneasy doubt as to how long it would be before we could get away, I hurried down to the dinghy, in which Molly and Jimmy had already taken their places.

"What do you make of it, Jerry?" I asked.

"Not too bad," was the reply. "We can't start just yet, but there'll be plenty of water in another hour." He jerked his head towards the boat. "Tumble in and I'll shove her off. We can get as far as the Seagull, at any rate."

WE WATCHED breathlessly while Jerry wrenched open the drawer. For a moment he knelt there, fumbling amongst its contents; then, suddenly jumping to his feet, he swung round towards us.

In his hand was a loosely wrapped brown paper packet.

"Take a look through these, Molly," he said quietly.

He slipped off the covering, as he spoke, and half a dozen stained and crumpled documents tumbled out on to the table. The largest and most conspicuous of them consisted of two sheets of blue paper fastened together by a brass clip, and with a quick movement Molly snatched it up from amongst the others.

"This is it! This is the formula! Father described it to me. He said..."

A low, startled cry rang out through the room, and we all three turned sharply towards the sofa. Mrs. Gowland was standing there, pale and rigid—one hand stretched out towards the open window.

"A face!" she gasped, "out there in the bushes! Look—look!"

I spun round in a flash, but I was just too late. There was a quiver of branches, followed by a scuffling seriously about Governor Al M. Landon as a Republican Presidential possibility for 1936. Landon has survived two Democratic landslides, which is something in his favor.

General sentiment also was found among Kansas Republicans for a liberalization of the G. O. P. Many agree with Senator Borah that Henry P. Fletcher should step out as National Chairman. This is significant when one remembers it comes from the home state of the late Dave Milvane, for years a wine-horse of the vanishing-Old Guard.

Finally, our Kansas scout reports dissatisfaction in that section over waste relief expenditures. Every other person he had a new tale of raw and indefensible squandering. By the case method these have been gathered and documented for months past. You'll see a neat and tidy issue built out of them without Shower For Miss White.

On Friday afternoon, at her home on East Fifth street, Mrs. J. B. James was a gracious hostess at one of the loveliest parties of the holiday season, honoring Miss Dorothy White who will be married on January 16th.

The home throughout was beautifully decorated in poinsettias, berries, silver and red bells, carrying out the new year and wedding idea. In this attractive setting twelve tables were placed for bridge. At the conclusion of the game a delicious salad course was served.

Tables were removed and a chorus composed of Mrs. Herbert Waldrop, Mrs. J. Knott Proctor, Mrs. R. A. Tyson and Miss Lucy James, with a wish of happiness to the bride-to-be, sang "O Day of Golden Promise."

The lights were then turned off and quickly there appeared before the living and music rooms a veritable forest of snow laden pines and fir trees. In one corner stood a little old elf man holding a lantern on his arm and bending over with a huge pack of presents on his back.

Under one of the large fir trees a beautiful snowball burst open and a lovely little fairy "Lois Waldrop" touched the bride with her sparkling wand and said: "Will a little Doll I see, please come into the bride with me?" and directed the bride to the elf man who with his lantern lighted the snow scene and display of exquisite gifts.

For high score a pot of blooming hyacinths wrapped in red and white, tied with white satin ribbon, was awarded to Mrs. Norman Warren, and Miss Anna Long was given a bottle of perfume for second high score. Mrs. James' gift to Miss White was a bride's book.

Mrs. J. L. Kilgo, Mrs. R. M. Garrett, Mrs. G. J. Woodward and Mrs. J. L. Fleming were tea guests. Miss White wore a striking ensemble of blue and silver.

The Lost Man

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER WHEN Rip had gone off for his scamper in the snow he had felt so full of strength and good spirits that he had covered a great distance before he realized how real was the storm.

"I've gone too far," Rip said, "so now I'd better make my way home as quickly as I can or I'll be lost."

He started to turn back but as he ran along he was so confused by the thick snow and the different look of the scenery that he was not quite sure whether he was on the right track.

"I can't smell anything which would help me," he thought to himself. The snow lay heavily every where.

"I'll just stop for a moment and think." But as he stopped and thought he became more confused than ever. Now he did not know which way he was going when he had first started for home. It would be dreadful if he should be going in quite the opposite direction. He saw a small rocky ledge over which was a big pine tree. There would be as much shelter there as anywhere. He started over toward it when he heard moans.

Rip's little heart beat furiously. He was cold, trembling and miserable. The moans evidently came from beyond the big pine tree.

Bravely, though with heart beating so it seemed as if it would bounce right out of his body, he followed the sound of the moans.

And there, almost completely covered by snow, was a man. Rip sniffed at the man and licked his cold face with his tongue.

"I've broken my leg," the man moaned.

Fire Slightly State Damages State Theatre Booth

Fire of undetermined origin early last night destroyed two reels of films and did minor damage to the booth at State Theater.

One of the reels destroyed was of a feature picture, "Peck's Bad Boy," which was to have been shown during the evening, and it was necessary to use the picture scheduled for today when excitement was dissipated and the show was resumed.

T. Y. Walker, manager of the theater, said today the cause of the fire was a mystery in view of the fact that it started in a reel not on the machine. The blazing reels were controlled with extinguishers which are kept in the booth all the time for protective purposes.

Both the booth and equipment were damaged slightly, but the show was able to continue without change of machines.

The blaze caused some excitement in their seats in the main auditorium until they were asked to go out until the fire could be controlled. This action, Mr. Walker said, was taken purely as a precautionary measure.

No estimate of the damage had been made today.

CLUB MAKES FINE RECORD

Kiwanians Sponsor Number of Important Movements During Past Year

The Greenville Kiwanis Club finished 1934 with all debts paid and a comfortable sum in the treasury. It was reported last night by Secretary Dave Moore, at the regular meeting of the organization at the Woman's Club.

In addition to assuring the Kiwanians that they had had a successful year as far as finances are concerned, the secretary turned his attention to some of the achievements during the year, of which there were many of importance not only to the club, but the entire community.

In addition to hearing the report of the secretary, the Kiwanians inducted new officers and discussed other matters of interest for the new year.

Probably one of the most important movements launched by the club during the year, the report of the secretary showed, was that in behalf of Sheppard Memorial Library in which scores of books, especially for children, were provided. The movement also resulted in helpful contributions from the county commissioners, the board of aldermen of Greenville and other agencies. The campaign was in charge of Dr. G. R. Combs, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

Other far-reaching campaigns were launched in behalf of better health facilities for the local health department, reorganization of the Boy Scout troops, improved law enforcement, better farming, larger tobacco market, and the fostering of a keen spirit of rivalry between the various public school athletic departments of the county.

Each issue was taken up at various meetings of the year and every member had some active part in putting the movements over in a big way.

Dink James, who has been filling the unexpired term of Dr. R. S. McGeehy for the past several months, was inducted as president, along with J. C. Galloway, who had been serving as vice-president since the elevation of Mr. James to the higher post. R. C. Deal was in charge of the induction ceremony.

Directors for the year are: Dr. J. M. Barrett, J. H. Pitts, Charles Flye, D. H. Conley, Dr. G. R. Combs, J. H. Moore, R. C. Deal and Joe Taft. G. V. Smith is immediate past president of the organization, having held the place for three years by reason of the fact that two former presidents resigned to take up work in other parts of the state.

D. C. Moore announced that Past District Governor Ralph C. Barker and wife would be guests of the club at the annual celebration of Ladies' Night, Friday, February 1.

He also read letters from the Boys Training School at Rocky Mount, thanking the club for the contribution to the Christmas party, and from the local Choral Club for assistance in the putting over of the music festival held here recently.

President James announced that the list of new committees had not been completed but that this would be done within the next several days.

Charles Parsons filed a supplementary report for the library committee.

Discussing the membership, it was shown the club had made an increase of eight during the past year with a determination to improve upon this work, during the new year.

High Point Trims Teacher Quint Here

High Point College used two full teams in effective fashion to roll up a 43 to 12 victory here last night over the East Carolina Teachers College quint.

Culler, ace of the Panthers, tallied a dozen points in his 20 minutes in action. Runner-up was Interieri, Panther guard. He made 10 points.

Johnson, guard, accounted for three of the four field goals made by the Teachers. The visitors exhibited a strong defense and kept possession of the ball during most of the game.

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened barely steady, four to seven points decline on lower Liverpool cables and under liquidation and foreign selling. The volume of business tapered after the call with the market holding fairly steady at a decline of six to seven points at the end of the first half hour.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Stocks, backed and filled rather listlessly in today's brief market session and most of the leaders were unable to get out of the narrow fraction range. Improvement was shown by some of the traction and specialty issues. The close was steady.

Transfers were 500,000 shares. After overnight study of the message of President Roosevelt to Congress, speculative forces seemingly were convinced that the program was about in line with expectations and concluded that little could be considered as an immediate market stimulus.

Commodities were somewhat dull. Grains held to a restricted path and were a-trifle lower. Bonds were quiet and mixed.

Gold currencies continued to remain in terms of the dollar.

U. N. C. Faces Four Games Next Week

Chapel Hill, Jan. 5.—Carolina's White Phantoms, who were to open the defense of their state championship with Davidson in Charlotte tonight, will meet Wake Forest in another Big Five contest here next Tuesday night, following which they will sally forth on a three-game invasion of Virginia.

The Virginia trip, which will open Carolina's Southern Conference campaign, will send the Tar Heels against Washington and Lee at Lynchburg Thursday night, V. M. I. at Lexington Friday night, and V. P. I. at Blacksburg Saturday night. Washington and Lee, their first Conference opponent, won the championship at the annual Tournament last year.

The varsity and freshman boxing teams will also swing into action next week, opening with V. P. I. at Blacksburg Saturday. Likewise the freshman basketball team, which entertains Wake Forest Tuesday and Raleigh High Saturday. However, the first meet for the wrestlers does not come until the following week.

The Carolina quint won its initial contest from Elon 34-21. The Phantoms looked good in the first half, running up a 27-8 lead. However, the reserves showed little strength when Coach Bo Shepard gave them their chance, and the regulars played poorly and without fire when sent back into the game.

"Jason" Glace, lanky center, led the scorers with 12 points. He set something of a record when he rang eight fouls in as many tries in the first half. Captain "Snooks" Aitken, speedy little forward, and Jim McCachren, All-Southern guard, who also did some excellent passing and floor play, are the other two regulars back from Carolina's flashy 1934 quint.

Coach Crayton Rowe has a nucleus of five lettermen with whom to work in boxing. The veterans and their weights are Ernest Estler, 125; Captain Sam Giddins, 155; Morty Ellsberg, 165; Marvin Ray, 175; and Jim Carruth, unlimited.

Announce New Price List For Oldsmobile Cars

List prices of the new Oldsmobile sixes and eights for 1935 were announced today by Bob Greene of Pitt Oldsmobile Co., Inc., 415 Grand avenue. The new six, according to Mr. Greene, continues in the low price field, even though the car is larger, more powerful, more economical, and incorporates all the most modern features. The new straight eight, leader in sales in the lower medium price field in 1934, has been reduced in price for 1935. The new eight, according to Mr. Greene, also has more size, power and economy, coupled with all the features which Oldsmobile engineers believe the public wants in 1935 cars.

"In all my experience in the automobile business," said Mr. Greene, "I have never seen a better demonstration of real value giving than in the new Oldsmobiles for 1935. In the face of generally rising prices throughout the industry, Oldsmobile is holding the delivered price of the 6-cylinder, 4-door sedan, for example, in Greenville, to less than $750 above the delivered price here of the same body type, with comparable equipment in 1934. The delivered price of the new eight-cylinder four door sedan is better than $25 less than the delivered price of the same model with the same equipment last year."

First showing of the 1935 Oldsmobiles anywhere in the country opens today at the New York Automobile Show.

Pitt Oldsmobile Co., Inc. has a 1935 Oldsmobile available for inspection and demonstration.

"The new Oldsmobile line for 1935," said Mr. Greene, "is representative of Oldsmobile's belief that the public is entitled to all that is new and better. Rather than remove from its products feature that have proven their worth and desirability in millions of miles of service, Oldsmobile has elected to keep these features, and add all the latest important engineering advancements."

"For example," Mr. Greene continued, "Oldsmobile is retaining such features as knee-action wheels, super-hydraulic brakes, ride stabilizer, center control steering, and all silent synchro-mesh gear shifting."

"In addition to these and many other time proved fundamentals of design the 1935 Oldsmobiles offer the purchaser that greatest of all body advancements since the introduction of the closed car. This is the new solid steel 'turret-top' body by Fisher, with steel above, steel below, and steel all around for the extra safety of driver and passengers."

"It is important too, to the buyer seeking the maximum for his money that the new Oldsmobile sixes and eights are larger, more powerful and even more economical. The wheel-base of the six has been increased to 115 inches. The eight is increased to 121 inches. An idea of the roominess may be gained from the fact that the front seat in the six is now three inches wider than that in last year's eight."

"Horsepower has been stepped up in the six from 84 to 90, and in the eight from 90 to 100. At the same time economy has been still further improved. The six now delivers 18 miles to the gallon at 50 miles per hour, and the eight 15 miles to the gallon at the same speed. This is considered remarkable mileage for cars of such size and power."

"Considering all these facts," said Mr. Greene, "I am certain that Oldsmobile will again double its sales record as it did in 1934. The new car for 1935 is certainly 'the car that has everything.' Most of all, I am enthusiastic because the prices are so low in proportion to the size, quality and completeness of the new cars.

Fifteen Days Grace Asked for Car Owners

Wilmington, N. C., Jan. 5.—Representative Thomas E. Cooper wired Governor Ehringhaus yesterday urging him to halt the campaign against motorists who have not secured their 1935 tags.

The wire read: "At a moment when insurance companies are petitioning for increased rates because of mounting toll of highway fatalities in North Carolina, may I not urgently request that you withdraw the State patrol from enforcing this license tag law for a period of fifteen days and permit them to devote their efforts toward the protection of life and property."

A few days ago Mr. Cooper announced he intends to introduce a bill as soon as the Legislature meets which would give motor vehicle owners thirty days of grace for the purchase of license tags.

Wednesday he was among the first to be arrested for operating his car without a 1935 license plate.
