Plaster Cast Of A Foot Enters Hauptmann Trial

STATE WINS MAJOR POINT ON 'LADDER'
Defense Attempts to Prove That Hauptmann Did Not Collect Ransom Money; Justice Trenchard Decides to Admit Testimony on Ladder Used in Kidnaping

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 22.—(AP)—Two more residents of the Saurland country surrounding the home of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh today identified Bruno Richard Hauptmann as a man lurking in that vicinity before the kidnaping and murder of the aviator's infant son.

Millard Whitted, a logger, with a farm next to the Lindbergh estate, testified that he saw Hauptmann on the morning of the kidnaping and that he saw him on the two occasions within a fortnight of the crime and Charles Rossiter of Maplewood, N. J., testified he saw him on a road near Hopewell four days before the baby was taken from its crib.

Before the introduction of this testimony the State succeeded finally in its fight to get the kidnaping ladder into evidence the defense later brought out the fact that a plaster cast had been made of footprints which it claimed would show Hauptmann was not the man who collected $50,000 ransom in St. Raymond's cemetery, the Bronx, April 2, 1932.

Whitted still was undergoing a grilling cross-examination when luncheon recess was decided. The defense sought to show his identification was faulty, that he had personal interests for publicity and that he first reported seeing the stranger near the Lindbergh home in order to avert suspicion from himself. He held fast to direct testimony.

Rossiter said he saw Hauptmann on the Hopewell road standing at the rear of his automobile. "I got out of my car," he said, "and walked to the rear of his car. I offered to help but he said he didn't need any help." Then from 5 to 8 minutes Rossiter testified.

"I stood looking him over," Rossiter remembered the incident was on the Saturday before the kidnaping. Whitted testified he saw Hauptmann January 8, 1932, and between February 25 and 27, 1932. The baby was kidnaped March 1, 1932.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 22.—(AP)—The defense brought testimony of a plaster cast of a foot into the trial of Bruno Hauptmann today and claimed it would show Hauptmann was not the man who collected the $50,000 ransom in St. Raymond's cemetery, the Bronx, on April 2, 1932.

Gangsters Returned To Richmond to Die in Chair

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22.—Two haggard, pasty-faced gangsters, Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, came back to Richmond today to die in the electric chair for the murder of E. N. Hubbard, Federal Reserve Bank truck driver.

Legenza, on a stretcher with both legs broken; the emaciated Mais, his right eye black, came back prisoners to the city from which several months ago they shot their way to freedom over a guard's bullet-riddled body.

Guarded by ten Federal agents armed with machine guns and tear gas, the tri-State gangsters came on the Havana Special of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad and were whisked away in an ambulance and police cars to their death cells in the State Penitentiary.

Soon—probably next month—these two gangsters, accused of a multitude of crimes in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Washington and Virginia, will die in the electric chair.

Mace, nervous and haggard, weighed twenty pounds less than he did when he shot his way to freedom. He still carried in his body six bullets that police shot into him before his trial in Richmond.

Behind him came Legenza on a stretcher. His face was pasty under the prison lights. He drew his pink and white blankets close to his chin.

WAGE FIGHT ON TAMPERING WITH DRY LAW

Cale K. Burgess Refuses to Give Out Information to Afternoon Papers

By J. C. BASKERVILL
The Reflector.
Sir Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 22.—The United Dry Forces of North Carolina are already waging a campaign against any tampering with the present State prohibition law, and Cale K. Burgess, vice-president of the dry organization, is busy sending out dry propaganda to members of the General Assembly.

Burgess was asked today by this bureau for a statement with regard to the attitude of the United Dry Forces concerning the bills so far introduced in this session of the General Assembly to modify the present dry law and permit the sale of liquor in the State. But Burgess declined to make any statement for the afternoon papers, and said that while the United Dry Forces expected to have a good many news releases in the near future, that none of these would be given to the afternoon papers because of what he considered the unfair and unfriendly attitude of the afternoon papers of the State towards the United Dry Forces and State prohibition.

Burgess declined to be quoted directly on anything he had to say to the representative of this bureau who called on him for an interview, but intimated that all the news that would hereafter be released by him for the United Dry Forces would be given out only for morning release.

When asked if he would be a candidate for Governor in 1936, running on a dry platform, Burgess avoided making a direct answer. He intimated, however, that if the people of the State wanted a good clean, dry candidate for Governor in 1936, he should insist that he be this candidate, he might decide to become a candidate. He also intimated that there was a growing demand for a good, strong, clean, dry candidate for Governor in 1936. In fact, it is currently talked among members of the present General Assembly that Burgess has already told at least one member of the Legislature that he does expect to become a candidate for Governor in 1936, running, of course, on a bone-dry platform.

In fact, as good many members of the General Assembly and political observers here are inclined to see in Burgess' present activity against any meddling with the State dry law a definite threat on the part of the United Dry Forces to the effect that if the Democratic party in the State does not continue to stand behind State prohibition, that the drys will form their own "mumwug" dry party, into which they will invite all the dry Republicans, but a candidate for Governor in the field and seek to wrest the State government from the Democrats. And if the United Drys do put a candidate for Governor in the field, it is expected, of course, that Burgess will be their candidate in response to the demand for a good, strong, dry, clean candidate for Governor.

There is general agreement in most political circles here that the one and only thing that will prevent repeal or modification of the State dry law by this session of the General Assembly is the fear that the Democratic party will form a mungwump union with the dry Republicans. It is also agreed that many warring wet Republicans are now posing as drys in order to encourage this unnatural union of the drys and the Republicans. For while a good many doubt if the dry forces could wear enough regular Democrats to make it possible for them, with the help of the Republicans, to upset the political complexion of the State, a great many admit they could cause the Democratic party a lot of trouble, especially in the more class counties in the Piedmont and western part of the State.

It is also agreed that Burgess and his drys could undoubtedly stir up an inter-party rumpus that would not do the Democrats party any good.

Two or three other actions were given consideration following selection of the new six month's grand jury and charge by Judge Barnhill. Joe Henry Vines, colored charged with breaking and entering a store at Fountain the latter part of last year was sentenced to 18 months on the roads.

Three persons, two men and a woman, of the Falkland community, charged with stealing 800 pounds of tobacco from a tenant on the farm of Henry Pittman, near Falkland, were found not guilty. The jury received the case yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock and returned a decision last night about 9:30. The defendants were Jesse Harris, Minnie Harris and Hubert Tripp. The charge was filed against them in November, 1933, and they had been at liberty under bond since the time.

With approximately one hundred cases on docket, the week is scheduled to be one of the busiest in many months. The end of the week, however, is expected to see the bulk of cases cleared from the docket. Attention is being confined mainly to jail actions during the first of the week and when these have been completed court will drive en masse into the remainder of the docket.

FIND AUTO ABANDONED BY KARPIS

Machine Taken From Allentown Physician Yesterday Found Near Monroe

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 22.—The police revealed this morning that the automobile Alvin Karpis and his companion, Harry Campbell, took from an Allentown physician yesterday, had been found abandoned near Monroe, Mich., the motor of the car still running. Why it was abandoned had not been determined.

The car apparently had been headed toward Detroit when its occupants left it, and search for Karpis and Campbell, last members at large of the notorious Karpis gang accused of the Bremer kidnaping and other crimes, was concentrated here and in the territory between here and Monroe.

The car was taken from Dr. Hunsicker after two men who police are confident were Karpis and Campbell, abducted him near Quakertown, Pa., and forced him to drive them into the Ohio territory. Dr. Hunsicker was tied and left behind near Wadsworth, Ohio, last night while the fugitives drove on.

HEALTH BOARD REPEALS RULE ON MEAT ISSUE

Ruling of December 17 Repealed at Meeting of Department Jan. 18

Dr. N. T. Ennett, director of the Pitt County Department of Health announced today action of the Pitt County Board of Health repealing a ruling passed December 17, relative to the handling of diseased meats where such cattle are condemned by federal inspectors.

Dr. Ennett's statement follows: At a called meeting of the Pitt County Board of Health on January 18th, the following resolution was passed: "That the Pitt County Board of Health repeal ruling passed December 17, 1934, relative to diseased meat, where such cattle are condemned by Federal Inspectors and slaughtered and meat approved under regulations and Federal inspection."

This repeal was decided upon after Doctor A. A. Husman, U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry, satisfied the Board as to the regulations under which such animals are slaughtered and inspected.

In order to reassure the public as to the wholesomeness of this meat, the Board requested Doctor Husman to outline for the press, briefly the U. S. Public Health ordinance covering this question.

Dr. Husman makes the following statement: "This ordinance requires an annual inspection of all animals in the herd for tuberculosis and abortion disease under methods prescribed by the U. S. Livestock Sanitary Association and approved by the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry. In the event tuberculosis is found in a herd, a rest is made every 90 days until we are satisfied all tuberculosis animals have been removed. These animals which react to the test in any degree are instantly removed and slaughtered, and a post-mortem is held on each animal by a qualified graduate veterinarian approved by the U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry and the N. C. Department of Agriculture, under the same Meat Inspection Regulations as government meat inspections at Federally Inspected Abattoirs.

"The disposition of these carcasses is made entirely in keeping with sound rules based on scientific facts concerning the disease, and no meat is passed for human consumption in which there is any possibility of transmitting any disease to the consumer. The same procedure is followed in Contagious Abortion or Bang's disease."

INTEREST IN BALL MOUNTS

Encouraging Sale of Tickets Reported for Roosevelt Ball January 30

Tickets sales for the Roosevelt Birthday Ball to be staged here on the night of January 30 continued encouraging today with indications that this year's attractions will eclipse last year's brilliant affair.

With encouraging reports coming in from all sections of the county, Jim Joyner, chairman of the ticket sales committee at Farmville, said sales were going over in a big way there. He reported two more sales of tickets at a premium since the report of a $5 ticket sale several days ago.

The two tickets were bought by A. C. Monk, who paid $10.00, and J. Y. Monk, who paid $5.

In addition to the sale of the premium tickets, Mr. Joyner reported that regular dance tickets at $1.50 and spectators' tickets at 50 cents, were moving swiftly, with indications that Farmville be represented in a big way at the ball to be given in honor of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's birthday.

Similar balls will be given throughout the county as last year when a tremendous sum was raised for sufferers from infantile paralysis.

The ball will be held in the Cameron building at East Carolina Teachers College, and music will be provided by Hod Williams' broadcasting orchestra of Charlotte.

Elaborate preparations are being made by the ball committee, and indications are that the ball will be the most brilliant function ever held in this community.

One of the features of the ball will be a personal message from President Roosevelt over the radio in which he will express appreciation to the nation for the fine spirit shown toward his effort to carry relief to the sufferers from infantile paralysis.

The French action followed a battle of January 18, just reported to the capital, in which M. L. Bernard French chief of the Gobad regiment, sixteen native soldiers and eighty natives were slain in the Lake Abbe region.

FLOODS MOVE INTO SEVERAL PARTS NATION

Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee Gripped by Raging Flood Waters; Wisconsin Also Affected; Temperatures in Northwest 32 Below Zero; Traffic Stalled in Many Sections

(By The Associated Press)
The cold wave spread east and south today leaving behind about fifty dead.

Meanwhile, floods, sleet, rain and low temperature combined to delay traffic and endanger lives as the frigid blast from the north dipped down into Dixie threatening freezing weather as far South as central Florida by tonight.

Floods were reported in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee and the Wolf River in Wisconsin had broken through the St. Croix dam, damaging the power house.

Heavy property damage was also reported where excessive rain, tore into barges and steamboats along the Memphis harbor where the stream joins the Mississippi. The heavy crafts suffered little loss, but they did considerable damage to smaller boats into which they crashed.

Temperatures in the far northwest of the Rocky Mountain area and the western and central States where the mercury went as low as 32 degrees below, were moderating in Mississippi. They were followed by warm rain along the Pacific northwest, bringing a menace to life and property and the snow began changing into raging floods.

Traffic was stalled in Seattle and other Pacific northwest cities where waters in rivers in western Washington was reported rising.

Mrs. A. S. Everette, Robersonville Dead

Robersonville, N. C., Jan. 22.—Mrs. Andrew S. Everette of Robersonville, the former Miss Hattie Ross, daughter of the late James R. and Margaret Ross, died at her home Thursday morning, January 3.

Mrs. Everette had a host of friends and relatives who were greatly shocked and grieved at her unexpected death.

Although suffering from ill health for many years, death came when apparently her health was much improved.

She was a member of one of the oldest and most prominent families of Martin county, dearly loved and highly esteemed for her intelligence and Christian character.

Funeral services were held at the Missionary Baptist Church, of which she had long been a faithful member. Rev. E. C. Shoe, Rev. J. M. Perry of Robersonville, and Rev. W. B. Harrington of Williamston, officiated. Favorite hymns, "Face To Face," "The Old Rugged Cross," and "Asleep In Jesus" were softly sung. Friends filled the large church auditorium and accompanied the body to the local cemetery for the interment rites.

LEGISLATIVE RAMBLINGS

By C. A. PAUL

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 22.—Tom Bowie's stock comment when asked about any proposed piece of legislation is: "I'm against it if it will increase taxes." The only time he has not said that was when I asked him what he thought of a flat $5 license tag fee for automobiles. It might properly be said of Representative Bowie that he is primarily concerned with his native Ashe County and Tam Bowie.

MORE COTTON CHECKS HERE

Farm Department Notifies 300 Growers Checks Await Them

E. F. Arnold, director of the local farm department, announced today that $50,000 in cotton parity checks to farmers who co-operated with the government in the crop control movement, had been paid out by his office since Christmas.

Mr. Arnold also stated that notices were being mailed out today to 300 or more growers asking them to call at his office to receive a similar number of checks involving some $3,000 or more.

The checks are all for small amounts and growers have been asked to call at the farm office immediately upon receipt of notices.

The farm director said his office was holding 300 tobacco marketing cards for correction. Owners of the cards were urged to visit the office before the first of the month and provide information for the changes.

Mr. Arnold declared that corrections not made by February 1 would cause great delay in being made to expedite this work, but that it was impossible for his department to complete the cards without cooperation from the growers involved.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG News Behind The News.

Washington
By GEORGE DURNO
RIVAL: Anti-union industrialists are quietly laying the groundwork for a national association of company unions destined to function in opposition to the American Federation of Labor. There would be a president who can make as much noise as William Green.

This subject wasn't on the agenda when the National Association of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce met jointly some weeks ago at White Sulphur Springs, but you can bet safely it was discussed thoroughly when the gentlemen there assembled got together in the informality of the evening.

A. F. of L. officials are not unaware of the movement and are laying their own plans to block it.

Insiders say one industry—steel—already has its company fostered unions pretty well grouped. They may well serve as the nucleus for the national organization.

Missionary work in the steel industry is in the hands of Arthur H. Young, vice-president of U. S. Steel in charge of personal Young Iron Industrial Relations Counselors, Inc., a Rockefeller organization, for some years. He came up from the ranks, standing life as a red-hand, leverman and time-keeper in Illinois and Colorado plants.

French Troops Ordered To Put Down Tribe War

Paris, Jan. 22.—(AP)—French troops, including camel troops and airplanes were ordered to the southwest frontier of the French Somaliland today to put down tribal war which already had cost the lives of 97 men of the French colonial administration.

The French action followed a battle of January 18, just reported to the capital, in which M. L. Bernard French chief of the Gobad regiment, sixteen native soldiers and eighty natives were slain in the Lake Abbe region.

Bernard and his men had gone to investigate a battle reported raging between the rival Aiss and the Issas tribes of nomads in the region.

HAS HAUPTMANN COUNSEL SPLIT?

Despite reports—and some indications during the courtroom proceedings—that there were beginning to be rifts in the ranks of Bruno Hauptmann's counsel, and that Hauptmann was turning away from Chief Counsel Edward J. Reilly, the camera caught the men in these attitudes indicative of a solid front. Below, Hauptmann confers earnestly with Reilly. Above are three others of the defense strategy board who are said to oppose Reilly's methods. They are left to right, C. Lloyd Fisher, Frederick A. Pope and Egbert Rosenbrans. How One Man Lost 22 Pounds

Mr. Herman Runkis of Detroit writes: "A few lines of thanks from a rheumatism sufferer—My first bottle of Kruschen Salts took all of the aches and swellings out of my joints—with my first bottle I went on a diet and lost 22 pounds and now feel like a new man."

To lose fat safely and quickly take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning—a quarter pound jar lasts 4 weeks. Get it at Pitt Drug Co., or any drug store in America.

If not joyfully satisfied after the first bottle—money back.—(Adv.)

OUR STAFF

No service organization can be better than the men and women who compose it. While we are proud of our complete funeral home and modern equipment, we realize that these would be useless without capable, conscientious assistants. Every phase of our staff is carefully selected for training, experience and integrity. Each one is absolutely trustworthy in the work to which he or she is assigned. We want our friends to feel at liberty to call when in need of services that can be properly rendered only by a lady assistant.

PROTECT PROPERTY TOO

While the legislature is going about the business of making our highways safer for travel, why not also add protection against financial loss at the hand of the reckless driver, by requiring every automobile owner to carry public liability insurance? Already a great number of automobile owners carry such insurance but too often it is the case that the accidents are caused by the irresponsible persons who have no means with which to pay for personal injury or property damage. It seems to us that the state should make this protection compulsory and add the cost of this insurance to the price of the license tags. There are of course, many who will say that this would make the cost of operating an automobile above the means of the poor man, but it is our feeling that no person who is not in position to give protection to the other fellow should be permitted to drive an automobile.

SHOULD BE ABOVE SUSPICION

We may be a back number in some of our ideas, but at the same time we have always felt that those who composed a grand jury should be men whose character and reputation was above suspicion and reproach because of the importance of the duties of this fact-finding body. In view of this feeling the writer was somewhat surprised when entering the court room yesterday as Judge Barnhill began to deliver his charge to the newly sworn grand jury, to see sitting in the jury box a man who on last Thursday night was arrested in a raid upon a poker room in this city and who in police court Saturday morning was bound over to the next sitting of county court on a charge of gambling. When the Solicitor was asked about a man under indictment sitting on the grand jury, he replied that in this case the charge against the man was a misdemeanor and was no bar to his service on the grand jury. The Solicitor's statement, so far as we know, makes it perfectly legal for the man to serve but at the same time we feel that the prestige of and respect for the courts have not been helped by permitting a man under indictment to sit on the grand jury. At a time when there is already a growing disrespect for the laws, certainly persons under indictment for violating them should not be placed on a grand jury whose duty it is to bring to the attention of the court any known violations of the law and to diligently seek the truth of any reports of violations before that body. Let Caesar's wife, members of the grand jury, and all others connected with enforcement of the laws and operations of the courts should be above suspicion if our laws and courts are to have the respect of our people.

Montana Rides Again

A RAPID-FIRE ROMANCE BY EVAN EVANS

SYNOPSIS: The Montana Kid has deserted Ruth Lavery, his bride-to-be, in order to accept a challenge to fight Jack Lascar to the death. Lascar is downed, and Montana finds himself outside the law. Fleeing south toward Mexico, he meets Mateo Rubric, the strange Mexican bandit, and Brother Pascual, Pascual saves Mateo and Montana from the pursuing posse by starting a landslide. But Montana does not know that Lascar was persuaded to challenge Montana by Rubric, who wanted Montana's help in recovering the emerald crown of Our Lady, stolen by the governor of Duraya.

Chapter 10

MONTANA CONSENTS

THIN, screaming voices came waiving through the air above the tumult of the landslide.

Brother Pascual was already hurrying down the trail, where he remounted his mule and jogged on after the other two, while behind him the boulders still skipped and danced, hurtling down the trail with force that chewed great portions out of the lip of the rock; the overflow made a cataract of thunder into the bottom of the ravine and set the echoes rolling.

The whole slope above seemed to be in motion, a river of down-flooding stone, and even when it stopped rushing, how could the men of the team climb their horses over those vast blocks which now obstructed the way?

The delight of Rubric was like that of a child. He laughed till the tears were rolling on his face.

"Where's the fool who denies the power of prayer?" he demanded. "There's Brother Pascual, as simple as a sheep, but he's sharpened his wits by arguing with the saints and gossiping with the angels till he's able to think of a trick like that. You and I can do a few little things, but it takes a man of God to move mountains, Montana!"

Here the friar came up with them and, in response to a few words from Rubric, took the hand of Montana in hill stares across at the big church of Our Lady of Guadalupe. He told of the little Bishop Emiliano, with a head as bald as a polished stone, fringed around with silver.

He told of General Estrada, the governor—of his huge brush of a mustache and his rapacious eyes, which could only find devastation and poverty in his new province until he heard of the restoration of the emerald crown of Our Lady to the church from which it had been stolen.

He told of the fight in the church, the felling of the bishop, the savage stand of the great friar, and that despairing call for help which Brother Pascual had brought into the mountains.

"So I knew that I must make the try," he finished. "One man to enter the fort? I could never come back. Before I died, I wanted to see you once more, friend. I could not tell what I would do when I saw you. I might want to draw a knife and try for your throat, or I might see a brother in you. Well, I saw you—and I did not want to draw a knife."

He stood over the Montana Kid and smiled down at him with an unaffected admiration and fondness. He held out his hand, saying: "Then, good-bye, Montana!"

The kid failed to see the hand. He made a gesture with his cigar.

He held out his hand, saying "Good-bye, Montana."

a vast, slow, and long-continued pressure, while his doubting eyes seemed to be struggling to grapple with the soul of the Kid at the same time.

"Here's three of us that make one man," said Rubric, "and while we're together, let's see the mountain we can't fly over and the river we can't jump across."

THEY came to the verge of the Rio Grande, where the yellow currents flattened out to a shallow width that a rider could find easily. There they dismounted as Montana said: "I turn north here, Mateo. I can travel in peace, now, thanks to Brother Pascual."

"Adios, amigo," answered Rubric. "Now I look on you for the last time; and while I live I shall remember you."

"The last time?" asked Montana. "I go now on a trail from which I can never return," said Rubric, cheerfully.

"What trail is that?" asked Montana.

He noted that Brother Pascual, with a troubled face, was retreating from them.

"Our Lady calls to me," said Rubric, waving towards the horizon. "The task she asks is more than one man can do; but I must go."

Montana sat down on a rock and lighted a cigar.

"I'm ready to listen: There's no hurry," he said, looking around him at the broken steps of the canyon, at the yellow workings of the current.

Rubric made a great sound, clearing his throat and scowling, to cover his satisfaction. And he told, striding up and down, how in the town of Duraya the governor's fort on the "Wait a minute," he said. "I get things mixed up, down there in Mexico, Duraya—let's see—it's in the loop of a river, eh?"

"The river runs almost all the way around it," agreed Rubric.

"The fort has big stone walls, like those of a castle in the old days?"

"Just so!"

"And down the hill from the fort there's a cafe run by Miguel Santos—a man who looks like a caballero. But he has a wooden leg that's pulled him down to the world."

"I know the man," agreed Rubric.

"What about him?"

"Nothing about him. But there's a flash of a girl in that cafe. She keeps a red rose in the black of her hair. The men look at her and forget how their teguilla tastes. They drink it like water while she's around. Her name—her name is Rosita."

"There is such a girl," agreed Rubric.

Montana stood up, threw away his cigar. "Thank God for an eye which can remember! Mateo, I am riding to Duraya with you."

"No, my friend!" protested the Mexican. "There is danger for you, south of the river. The Rurales remember you. They would smell out your trail as if they were bloodhounds. They would be at your throat in a day."

"Mateo, I must go to Duraya. I must see that girl Rosita again. There was something about her that seemed to say, 'Come once more. I shall remember.' Besides, I want to see the mustache of General Estrada."

peacemaker in the bitter row raging in the Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L.

In the current issue of the official magazine of his union, Tobin has this to say:

"There is a serious division within the National Building Trades but it should not branch out into the Local Building Trades. In other words, local building trades groups in cities and towns should not be made to suffer because of misunderstandings existing in the National Building Trades Department. Building trades employees have been suffering from unemployment for several years and now that things begin to look a little better it would not only be an injustice but also absolute cruelty to have any such things as a dispute obtaining in the national body interfere with local groups of building trades employees. We cannot and will not stand for that stoppage of work because of this dispute."

Nevertheless, unless the atmosphere clears suddenly and unexpectedly the country may soon find itself embroiled in a series of jurisdictional strikes with rival unions refusing to work along side each other.

Tobin's efforts as a peacemaker haven't gotten very far. Officials of the 12 unions which feel they were forced out of the Building Trades Department by William Green and others look askance at Tobin's overtures. They claim he was in on the deal which forced them out, his reward being reinstatement to the Executive Council of the A. F. of L.—a job he quit in a huff in 1928 because the A. F. of L. wouldn't officially endorse Al Smith's presidential candidacy.

EMASCULATED: Wide circulation of the Raskob letter showing the DuPont origin of the American Liberty League has badly handicapped that organization. Its opinion on budget and other matters seem to have no weight in Congress.

Senator Nye has pumped shrapnel into the DuPonts in his demand for further investigation of munitions activities here and abroad. While Nye makes no headway in the move to nationalize munitions manufacture, he certainly has put a crimp in the Liberty League.

ADJUSTMENTS: The Senate hasn't much to do while waiting for bills from the House. It dragged along on the world court debate for lack of something more important. By adjourning over it can mark time. The House has the big appropriation bills to put through, besides relief and social security measures.

The Securities Commission and other agencies too sharply pruned by the House are counting on more generous treatment by the Senate. The House often cuts over deep, knowing that the Senate will add a lot of trimmings, and then in conference they strike a happy balance.

PONIES: In connection with the anti-crime drive race track officials very quietly are spurring the Department of Justice on the war against bookmakers.

The bookies have been raising hob with the profits of the track. Last year the Chicago tracks were in the red despite the World's Fair and Jockey Club officials attributed it to the fact that thousands of hand books were operating in the Loop and elsewhere.

Running down and arresting bookies is, of course, a function for local police and authorities. What the track owners want the Department of Justice to do is to break up the wire services which furnish bookies all over the country with their information. These services run in interstate commerce.

New York

By JAMES McMULLIN

LABOR: The chief point at issue between Sen. Wagner and Adviser Richberg is the question of "coercion" Wagner wants to provide legal penalties for coercion of workers by their employers. Richberg doesn't especially object to this but insists on including comparable safeguards against coercion of labor by labor.

Insiders say he has such developments in mind as the flying squadrons which were used in the textile strike to force a shut-down in mills where the employees were reluctant to stage a walkout. He is said to believe these tactics constitute a dangerous menace to future relations between industry and labor and threaten to impair the fundamental rights of workers who wish to keep on working. The majority of business men share this view.

Wagner and organized labor contend to the contrary that existing laws limit labor activities enough already without tacking on further restrictions. Richberg's proposal—if enacted—might lead to court decisions that strikes and picketing are illegal and thus deprive labor of its only effective weapons.

The big question is where FDR stands on this issue. Under the present setup any piece of legislation that war's White House endorsement must theoretically bear Richberg's O. K.—and lack of White House enthusiasm killed the previous Wagner bill along the same lines. Industrial opposition to the Wagner proposal will be minimized if the Richberg reservations is included—which indicates that labor apprehensions have some foundation. Betting is that the President continue to back his coordinator.

TACTICS: Business and the unions are jockeying for position in other directions as their major contest approaches. Labor will probably soon be offered a heavily sugared but potent pill. The sugar will be recognition of the principle of majority rule—the union's primary objective at the moment. The pill will be something very like the compulsory arbitration of labor disputes—which would sharply curtail the right to strike. This proposal will have the private backing of many industrial leaders—who would be glad to concede majority rule under those conditions. It's smooth dose but the chances are that labor will see through the coating.

Meanwhile labor is pushing a slick idea of its own. If it can induce the Steel Labor Board to order abandonment of employe representation under company auspices in the Carnegie Steel plants—which the Amalgamated contends is a travesty on collective bargaining—all company unions will be on the spot. If such an order is issued it will of course be contested in the courts. Labor leaders know that but have decided the only way they can get a showdown on this company union business is to force one.

SECURITIES: New York learns that Chairman Kennedy got his Securities and Exchange Commission's appropriation restored to its budget bureau figure by predicting that hundreds of corporations would withdraw their exchange listings and allow their securities to be handled over the counter—thereby evading control—unless funds were provided to make supervision of unlisted dealers possible. The actual grant is too small to permit Kennedy to do a thorough job. But he can make a beginning with the help of the Investment Bankers' Association.

The commission is about to clamp down on the private sale of issues to groups of 25 or less investors without registration. There have been too many complaints that this system gives big investors all the breaks against the little fellows by depriving the latter of a chance to buy certain high-grade stuff.

ISSUES: There's no pleasing some people. Now that the SEC has amended registration requirements to make financing easier Wall Street revives the squawk that the legal liabilities in the Securities Act are still too stiff. Many insiders admit that this objection has been overplayed. Financial leaders believe the law could be changed to advantage. "But if Republic Steel can register without undue qualms there's no reason why any other legitimate corporation can't."

New York Central had hoped to float another bond issue this spring to pay off some more bank loans but the chances aren't so hot. The main selling point of last year's flotation—the privilege of cash at $40 a share—doesn't seem much of a bargain now.

ROTES HOSTS TO THE LADIES

Annual Entertainment Marked by Interesting Program Last Evening

By WYATT BROWN

The ladies had their night when they convened with the Rotary Club last night at the Rotary building on Rotary Avenue. First, Mrs. Effie Winslow, who was presiding, appointed a Rotary-Ann to be secretary, Mrs. Claude Gaskins, and a reporter, Mrs. Wiley Brown. Like a new broom, the new presiding officer wishing to sweep clean in the first blush of her office, appointed Mrs. Sam White and Mrs. Kinchen Cobb as House-Cleaning Committee—no, no more official shake-ups, but this time picture straightening-up. The Clean-up Committee was directed to straighten pictures that graced the walls.

But the mad rush was soon stopped, and the eloquent, redoubtable Fordy Harding arose to the occasion. Long since to thinking males, it has been clear why they held that little lead they did over the woman—Blarney and laying it on thick.

Fordy was told by Mrs. Winslow that he might welcome the ladies—"but," she added, "ladies watch what he says and see if he is sincere when you are through his right down."

"Rotary Anns, Sally Anns, and Rotarians, I am sadly embarrassed. I am expected to welcome this bevy of beautiful ladies, but with explicit instructions from Carl Adams not to refer to their heavenly qualities and charms, or smiles—but to stick to facts," Fordy began. But summoning the shades of Jim Fleming and Harry Whedbee and exhorting the period when knighthood was in flower, Fordy Fordy said he believed the ladies liked to be flattered. So with forthright and eloquent manner, Fordy uttered eulogiums of praise to the role of woman and her expanding activities in public life: "Every Rotary Ann keeping abreast of the Rotarians, joining hands to make this a better world where we can achieve more and achievements count greater. We love you still, for you are not only our half, but our better half."

Mrs. Herbert ReBarker gave the women's response, elaborating on the four points that Rotarians believe in to achieve their purpose of Fellowship and Rotary. She did not merely suggest a superficial intent toward the ideal, but how thoroughly and successfully the Rotarians' program is calculated to achieve its goal.

Following the ladies' response, Mrs. Herbert Waldrop sang in her sumptuous way, in full sweet voice, the ballad "Carissima." Following that, she rendered the "Indian Love Call." She introduced it with a responsive note in her whole audience last night. The applause was ready evidence of that, and thanks to Hayward's taste—even if he was not here, and now has Mrs. Waldrop searching high and low about letting her down after making a special request.

Next on the program was a brief talk by Miss Kate Lewis on American painters and their paintings, with typical examples of their work. She first told of America's first "national painter," Winslow Homer who convinced the critics that there was a national American art. He interested himself in seafaring fold and the sea.

First he painted the seafaring fold with the sea as background. Later he turned to doing the sea in all its mystery and moods. To get into the atmosphere and spirit of his chosen subjects, he went into seclusion in a Maine sea coast village. He avoided his city acquaintances. He lived in a house that looked out over the sea. He became to be known as the greatest painter of marine subjects and the folks following the sea life.

Bowing to a request of the program committee, Miss Lewis next presented some examples and the outstanding individual in the creation of art about the Indians. Remington, the first American artist to choose the Indian for a subject, represented in painting his subject primarily as a warrior and on the warpath. But the greatest of the artists to use the Indian for his subject to E. Irving Couse. It is he who has shown the greatest inspiration and got the best results of the many artists who have done the Indian type of things.

Following the program, Mrs. K. W. Cobb facilitated a lot drawing feature, and each lady got a gift. Dr. Adams was ordered to help Mrs. Cobb by a lady, and he said since he was used to taking orders from a woman, he would have to acquiesce this time, though it was supposed to be a nothing-but-ladies event.

There was one visiting Rotarian, L. P. Surles, of Dunn.

provides a fine of not more than $50, or 30 days in jail.

Two years ago another Mecklenburg Representative tried in vain to get the Legislature to legalize the use of bottles holding one-third of a quart for milk-dispensing purposes. In this he failed. It is indeed a peculiar situation when milkmen must, stick to the regulation measures while bootleggers distribute hard liquor in 8- and 10-ounce "pint" bottles.

Some time ago I bought at a filling station in Monroe a bottle of chocolate milk in a one-third quart bottle. When I asked the attendant why the dairy had escaped punishment, he offered the reasonable theory that they were not molested because it was sold for five cents, the same price as is usually asked for half-pints. That, too, was one of the reasons for outlawing the odd-sized containers: it offered a way to fool the public by variations in bottle sizes.

Cale Burgess' stenographer is a very, very busy woman. Cale, as you darned well know, is charge d'affaires of the United Dry Forces and is preparing to wage a hot campaign for retention of the Turlington Act. He will, of course, train his heavy artillery on members of the General Assembly. You can take it from me, or the legislators themselves, that they won't appreciate the deluge of dry letters which will be added to their already onerous task of letter-opening. And that's what Cale's stenog is doing. At Cale's direction, of course.

The State administration is very friendly to the press. For which, I, for one, am very thankful. It simplifies to a very great extent the task of news-gathering. Anything that makes for simplification, even of newspapermen's tasks and mental workings, if any, is great stuff.

I believe I mentioned it once before, but there's only one Zeb Vance in the Legislature—Senator Z. V. Morgan, of Richmond County. I wonder how many John Christoph Bluchers there will be in future Legislatures. If indeed we haven't gone Hitler before the J. C. B.'s grow up. Within the next few years you'll probably be seeing some Woodrow Wilsons in your General Assembly. They're getting old enough to run. But maybe they don't want to.

There is as yet no pro-anti University talk. I speak as you know, of the Chapel Hill unit, a term not at all dear to the hearts of old grads. Recently, here and there, there was some discussion of the number of out-of-State students at Chapel Hill, and some persons put themselves on record as being opposed to North Carolina paying anything toward the education of "them furnurers." But no such talk has reached Raleigh. At least no where newsmen could hear it. A prize piece of satire was that put over by someone in Thomasville a while back. The "information" was put out that a movement was afoot to sell Chapel Hill to certain tobacco magnates. (This Thomasville correspondent of a Greensboro paper took it seriously and sent the story to the paper. Later I saw an article by the same correspondent in the Lexington Dispatch. It was evident that it was no joke. Not to him, at least.

One member of the Legislature thinks that car owners should pay a license tax equal to 1 per cent of the original cost of the car. That fellow won't get very far in politics. He hasn't enough regard for the T. model vote.

Things are lovely here. The sun is shining, glad-handers are still glad-handing. But be not misled. This is only that deadly calm before the storm. The storm? You don't mean to tell me you never heard of the sales tax!

FIGHT BREWS OVER LOWER SALES TAX

Reduction of Rates Rather Than Repeal Faces Legislators at Raleigh

J. C. BASKERVILLE
Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 22.—The big fight in this session of the General Assembly is not going to be over the retention or repeal of the sales tax, but over the reduction of the rate of tax from 3 per cent to 2 per cent, according to many members of both Houses and to outside observers. Not that the anti-sales taxers have decided not to put up a fight for the repeal of the tax both in the Finance Committees and on the floor of both Houses. They are going to fight and fight to the last ditch. They are even going to present other taxation plans by which an equal or a larger amount of revenue can be raised.

But the bulk of opinion among the more conservative members is that there is at present a fair working majority in both Houses for the enactment of largely because there does not seem to be any other way to raise the amount of revenue needed by the State for the next two years. It is expected, of course, that Dr. Ralph McDonald, Representative of Forsyth and regarded as a spokesman for the anti-sales tax forces in both Houses, will offer a plan to substitute a graduated franchise tax that will get a great deal more money for the large foreign corporations. There are also indications that he will offer a new income tax law that will remove most of the present income to exemption and tighten it up so that it will yield considerably more than at present, even with the constitutional limitations of only 6 per cent.

Most of the older members, however, as well as many of the new members of both Houses, already admit they doubt if either the Finance Committees or the General Assembly will find Dr. McDonald's plan any better or any less painful or distasteful than the present sales tax are not very hopeful of its adoption. They know that the income tax rate cannot be increased without a constitutional amendment and that from even if the people would vote for it. They also know that North Carolina now has the highest franchise tax rates of almost any other State and that if the franchise tax is boosted much higher, or even any higher, that many of the larger corporations will either close down or move into another State.

So for the time being, at least, a great many members are convinced that the sales tax cannot be removed from the Revenue Bill at this time and that it will be retained for another two years, at least. But there is a growing sentiment to the effect that if the exemptions are removed, as has been recommended by the Governor and Budget Advisory Commission, that the rate of the tax should be reduced from 3 per cent to 2 per cent.

This reduction in the rate, however, would mean a reduction of about $3,000,000 a year in revenue, or about the same amount of new revenue it was hoped would be raised by removing the exemptions and leaving the rate at 3 per cent. But in order to provide more revenue, even with a reduction in the tax rate, several members are advocating a "broadening" of the tax to include restaurants, cafes and possibly even professional services, so that the public would not only pay 2 per cent tax on all retail sales, but on checks for meals at restaurants and hotels, on service bills at garages, possibly even on doctors' bills and lawyers' fees. It is pointed out that in many of the other States that do now have the sales tax, it is applied to many more things than more retail sales.

Any move to broaden the sales tax, however, and bring more than retail sales under it is expected to meet with vigorous opposition. But since this General Assembly admittedly must find from $3,000,000 to $6,000,000 in new revenue with which to increase teachers' salaries and boost appropriations for other objects, there is a possibility that the need for this revenue may overbalance the opposition and that the tax may be broadened out any way. There is no doubt but that a majority legislative fight will develop over these phases of the sales tax, most observers agree.

Local All Stars Lick Beaulahville To Tune 31 to 30

By R. O. MOYE

The Greenville All-Star basketball quint defeated the Beaulahville All-Star team here last night at the high school gymnasium by the score of 31-30. The game was featured by the fine floor work of Troy Burnette and Jack Barrett, who each tallied 11 points. Charles King, playing guard, showed best for the locals on defensive work and broke up many a throw that would have headed through the basket.

The Greenville team led the visitors all through the game and at the end of the half was leading by the score of 12-7. Led by the firing attack of E. Thomas and W. Thigpen in the final period, who together tallied 19 of the visitors' points, the visitors sank 7 field goals in rapid succession but they were never able to overcome the lead already gained by the home towns.

The game scheduled by the All-Stars for Wednesday night here with Washington, has been postponed until a later date due to examinations in progress at the high school. The boys instead will journey down to Washington and play the game there.

to boys coming here from other towns.

These fans that have followed the boys for a number of years will still have a chance of seeing them in action; several of them have organized a town team and will be playing a number of games at the High School gym. A team composed of Runt, Barrett, Troy Burnett, King, Hicks, Mathis, Waldrop, Dunn and others should round into a very strong team. The question of condition, of course, always proves to be a problem for such a team. There seems to be more in interest throughout the country in basketball, more teams are being organized all of the time. Madison Square Garden finds this the best attraction that they can muster up at the present time.

Reflecting Sports

By Wm. WATSON MORGAN

WILLIAM WATSON MORGAN

The king isn't dead, but is badly shaken up and bruised. Saturday night marked the first defeat for the fast team of girls representing E. C. T. C. After the second defeat of the Wingate sextet last season by the local girls' team the Wingate girls swore by that was good and holy that they would take them for a ride. A number of the girls have offered a variety of excuses for their defeat, ranging from alighting members on the team down to the age and steadiness of the gym. How to keep a bunch of stars in the right frame of mind is the big worry of most coaches. Many times the players get the idea in their heads that they are good and it takes a good licking to put them right again. During the football season just passed, Henry Mehre lost many nights of sleep with such a set-up. After Carolina and other teams carried his bunch for a ride they realized that to win they must play ball rather than rest on their laurels.

Speaking of revenge, reminds me of the remarks made by members of the fast University of South Carolina quint last year in Raleigh just after going to N. C. State. On the elevator going up to their rooms they were heard to remark: "Next year we will come back here and show this bunch how to play ball." Saturday night the sweet revenge that they have been thinking about so long was partially realized when N. C. State was defeated by a score of 42-25.

Doc Mathis seems to be having a tough time whipping his E. C. T. C. team into a smooth outfit. He has very little material to work with, and no one expects the former Davidson Star to produce a winning team with only fair material. When Clifford Runt-Bostic, Troy Burnett, Barrett and some of the other local stars failed to return to the school a big, gaping hole was left. It seems that the "powers to be" over at the local college insist on giving the few worth-while jobs to boys from other towns rather than to give them to the above-mentioned stars. These fellows have reached the age that they feel a hesitancy of depending upon their parents longer, so they must get some means of support. The fact that they live here is no reason for expecting them to willingly see the new jobs given

Bobby Jones, still the emperor of golfdom to many wisely enough does not feel that "a king can do no wrong." He realized perhaps better than anyone, the mistake he made last spring when he took on the field in the Masters' Tournament at the Augusta (Ga.) National Golf Club without sufficient tuning up.

Jones is not going to be caught napping again this year, if he can help it. He'll profit by that unpleasant experience, be sure of that.

He discovered that playing friendly practice matches did not remove the rust acquired in the absence from tournament play.

Having learned his lesson, he has embarked on an exhibition tour, playing real matches of the stiffest competition available, which he hopes will bring him to the second edition of the Masters' in April ready to give a better account of himself.

Coming Close Doesn't Count

Bobby played fine golf in the tournament last year, finishing ahead of many leading professionals and being tied with Denny Shute, who was the British open champion at the time. But the only sort of golf sat-

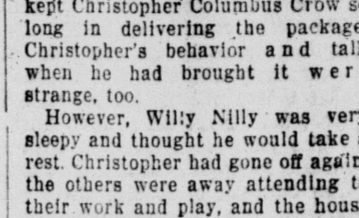

Loud Knocking

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

WILLY NILLY at last had the adhesive tape to fasten back his sticking-out ears. Later he would see what he could do about making them less pointed.

But the more he thought about it the more he wondered what had kept Christopher Columbus Crow so long in delivering the package. Christopher's behavior and talk when he had brought it were strange, too.

However, Willy Nilly was very sleepy and thought he would take a rest. Christopher had gone off again, the others were away attending to their work and play, and the house was very quiet.

It was such a comfort to feel that he had the adhesive tape and could get at his ears now any time he wished.

Willy Nilly curled up for sleep and soon was dreaming pleasantly. He did not sleep for very long. A sudden and loud knocking awoke him.

"Who is there?" cried Willy Nilly. An angry voice answered: "Let me in."

"But who are you?" repeated Willy Nilly. "I don't know whether I know you or not."

"You know me all right," answered the voice. "And if you don't let me in I'll batter down your door."

Willy Nilly opened the door and a very angry little old man stood before him. Willy Nilly wondered when he had seen the face before—and then he remembered it had been at Christopher Columbus Crow's trial in the summer. Had Christopher something to do with the man's anger? Willy Nilly felt uneasy.

"YOUR crow has stolen my wig!" He stole it while I was asleep, the scoundrel, the rascal, the wretch," shouted the little old man.

Now Willy Nilly fully remembered how Christopher had played a prank like this on the old man at the trial, so that everyone had laughed. The man was cross and irritable by nature and that had not improved his temper.

It had made him vote against Christopher.

"How do you know he did?" asked Willy Nilly nervously.

"Because it is gone, and he is the only one who would have done such a thing," the man replied furiously.

"But you do not know that he took it?" asked Willy Nilly, feeling some relief.

"No one else could have done it. I wear it to bed these chilly nights so my head won't feel cold, and I awoke shivering. It's a wonder I didn't catch cold."

"I'm very glad you didn't," said Willy Nilly politely. "But here you come and accuse my crow of stealing your wig and you do not know he took it at all. You're accusing him without knowing anything."

It was hard for Willy Nilly to talk because in his heart he, too, felt sure it had been Christopher's work. Christopher was having his revenge and was enjoying the prank.

And it explained, too, why Christopher had taken so long in coming back with the package.

"Well, know he took it, and I want it—now! I can wear my old fur hat out-of-doors but I can't go into houses with a hat on."

"I have an idea!" cried Willy Nilly.

Tomorrow—Willy Nilly's Idea

isfactory to Jones in winning golf. His golfing skill is as sound as ever so the flock of stiff matches should help him regain the renowned "Jones" touch if it is at all possible. On any occasion when his putter is functioning Jones is still the most dangerous shot-maker in the game.

Unless he can come mighty close to his former peak he can hardly hope for complete revenge. This year's Masters' tourney promises to rival the national open in strength and brilliance.

A group of Europe's outstanding club swingers will be on hand along with the elite of our native golfers. A cast of seventy-five will be invited to battle it out for the fifteen prizes worth $5,000.

Henry Cotton Heads Invaders

Heading the foreign invaders will be Hendy Cotton, holder of the British open championship. Cotton had hoped to make the trip to these shores as a member of the British Ryder Cup team. His affiliation and residence at a Brussels, Belgium, club, however, made him ineligible so his quest for glory and gold will be of an entirely personal nature.

Additional bits of international flavor will be added in Auguste Boyer, Swiss open champion, and Alf Padgham, reputed to be one of England's finest professionals and winner of the German open. Aubrey Boomer, of St. Cloud, will also be there.

Horton Smith can look for a difficult time in trying to repeat the triumph he registered in an inaugu-among the stars honored with invitations. Lawson Little will be in there doing his best for the amateur championships, respectively, will be cause.

HUNT FOR NEW REVENUE MAY LEGALIZE RUM

Search for New Sources of Revenue to Replace Sales Tax Holds Attention

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 22.—The hunt for new sources of revenue to replace the State sales tax may lead to legal whiskey in North Carolina, say some members of the Legislature now in session here.

Such a move would, of course, ally the anti-sales tax group with the repeal forces. Together they might array a formidable force against proponents of the stringent Burlington Act. With several members frankly on the fence on both the sales tax and the liquor problem a coup may be effected by which such an alignment could not across a legal whiskey plan. Advocates of a whiskey-control plan, similar to that in effect in Virginia, state that the minimum amount of new revenue to be expected from such a plan in North Carolina during its first year would be $3,000,000. That amount when properly dangled before the eyes of the anti-sales tax group, would be a great incentive to vote for legal whiskey.

On the desks of legislators today there was a mimeographed piece of propaganda from the United Dry Forces. It was mailed from the office of Cale K. Burgeon, vice-president of that organization. "We do not believe," says the form letter, "that another referendum on this within several years. . . . In the 1933 (prohibition) issue can be justified election 415,533 votes were cast; and we submit that this is a representative expression of the will of North Carolina. . . ."

Critics of the dry forces pointed out that the vote fell about 300,000 short of being representative, inasmuch as more than 700,000 votes were cast in the primaries. They cited as unlikely and unprovable, in view of the lack of any statistics, the statement, contained in the form letter that there are in North Carolina "at least 50,000 people" who would vote for national repeal, but not for State repeal.

The dry circular with the argument that a referendum would be too expensive, a plea for the school teachers, and "asked" that each legislator at once assure the Dry Forces that he will vote against any change in the dry law.

ONLY WOMAN SOLON BACKS DRY BATTLE

Mrs. Charles Hutchins Committed to Dry Fight in N. C. Legislature

By C. A. PAUL
Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 22.—North Carolina's only woman legislator came to Raleigh with few preconceived notions about legislation. After all it really doesn't matter, because she would doubtless exercise woman's age-old prerogative of changing her mind. The General Assembly's sole feminine touch is Mrs. Charles Hutchins, House member from Yancey County.

Rather dashing, well-dressed, much younger in appearance than you would expect, she somehow reminds one of the national capital's Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor. Perhaps it's because of the way she wears her hats, or maybe it is because she's too interested in social work. For several years she has been active in Yancey County and Western North Carolina in work of that character. In recognition of her services in that field she was given the chairmanship of the House Committee on Public Welfare.

Mrs. Hutchins' hobbies are hiking and fishing. Many readers will doubtless recall that she broke the world's record for cross-country hiking in 1927 when she walked from Burnsville to Asheville, a distance of forty miles, in seven hours and thirty-eight minutes, the old record having been eight hours flat.

She is also an ardent fisherwoman. The trout in her favorite, and those familiar with Yancey County are free with their praises of her fishing ability. She also wields a mean tennis racquet. Western North Carolina tennis players term her play "outstanding."

Mrs. Hutchins was elected last November by the largest majority ever given a candidate for the Legislature in Yancey County; but as proof of the fact Yancey contains didn't let their chivalry get the better of their political judgment it is pointed out that Mrs. Hutchins that she has since girlhood taken an interest in political matters. For four years she held the office of vice-chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee. Nor must one overlook Mr. Hutchins, who has sat through three sessions of the General Assembly. He served his first term in 1913, when he was the Legislature's youngest member. He was also a member of the Assemblies of 1929 and 1933. During the latter sessions Mrs. Hutchins stayed with him and she learned about Legislatures from him. Back in those days she sat around the lobby of the Sir Walter Hotel while Mr. Hutchins discussed things political. Now the situation if reversed, for Mr. Hutchins stays here with his wife, but she's the one who sits in the lobby while she talks politics.

Officially Representative Hutchins is committed to but one cause, retention of the State's dry law, but she told this reporter that she will likely support the Governor's social program, including ratification of the child labor amendment. Such support is only to be expected in view of her welfare and social service record. It is understood that welfare organizations were well-pleased with her committee chairmanship.

One is surprised after seeing Mrs. Hutchins to learn that she is the mother of a grown daughter, Mrs. Hubert Justice, of Canton, and a son, Edwin, a student at Brevard College. Mrs. Hutchins was educated at Yanceyville Collegiate Institute.

She has no false notions about her importance in this session. I came with an open mind on most subjects," she said, "and do not intend to introduce any bills except some of a purely local nature, which will affect only Yancey County. I came rather to assist in any way I can. My aim is not to be demurring, but helpful."

Local bills.

The House added its power to pass the Johnson bill to enable the State Highway and Public Works Commission to acquire a right of way for the national scenic parkway in North Carolina, and also to pass Rep. O. Berry's bill to make the workmen's compensation act applicable to school teachers. The teachers and parkway bills become law on ratification, it already having passed the Senate.

Finance committee meeting action was taken to raise taxes levied on telephone companies of the state. The joint groups named sub-committees to study the taxes on express companies with the possibility that a levy will be imposed on motor truck operations of such firms.

The joint conference committee on the bonus bill introduced by Rep. Con Johnson of Ireland, stood four to one for a joint resolution asking Congress to pass appropriate legislation for immediate payment of the adjusted compensation certificates but as one of the Senate members did not vote a report was impossible. Finance and appropriations committee continued deliberation this afternoon.

New York, Jan. 22.—(AP)—The stock market ticker tape stuttered incoherently today and prices milled about in an irregular trend during the greater part of an exceptionally dull session.

While securities forces were not too apprehensive over the gold payment issue now before the Supreme Court, most commission house commentators were of the opinion the mixed and halting movement could be extended until the jurists hand down their decision.

News of a speculative nature was scarce enough although indications of further economic recovery was still in the ascendant. Grains were a bit heavy.

Bonds displayed an indecisive trend.

Leading gold exchanges were mixed in terms of the dollar.

This, he testified, was on a road leading to the Lindbergh home. Attorney-General David Wientz also submitted the contention the State proved the ladder was in the condition in which it was found the night of the kidnapping.

Fred Pope, of the defense counsel, argued in vain against the evidence.

"I feel constrained to admit it," said Justice Trenchard.

A New Jersey State trooper, Lewis J. Bronham, was recalled to the stand for the purpose of getting the ladder in. He repeated the testimony of several days ago in identifying the ladder.

During his cross-examination the Attorney-General indicated that without interruption the State would soon rest. He said he understood the defense chief, Edward Kelly, wanted to further cross-examine Federal agents, Sisk, and added: "This would be a good move after the State rests."

TO BANISH TIREDNESS QUICKLY... GET A LIFT WITH A CAMEL!

"WHEN I WENT TO COLLEGE nearly all the girls smoked Camels. I soon found out why. Smoking a Camel when you are tired makes you feel fresher, more alert." (Signed) MARGUERITE OSUM

"A FACTORY SUPERINTENDENT has a strenuous job. But a Camel gives me new pep when I'm feeling tired—new interest in my work. I'm a steady smoker." (Signed) GEORGE WEBBER

"AS A MASTER BUILDER, I have learned that any real work that requires 'push' just naturally calls for Camels. I smoke them all the time. Camels give me new energy and enthusiasm when I'm feeling tired and listless. They never get on my nerves." (Signed) FRAZIER FORMAN PETERS

"ANY ONE WHO GOES IN FOR SPEED SKATING needs an abundant supply of stamina and energy. Camels restore my 'pep' when I've used up my energy. And Camels taste so good, too. For sheer pleasure, there's nothing like a Camel." (Signed) JACK SHEA

MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCO IN CAMELS...

"Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCO—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand."

Camel's Costlier Tobaccos never get on your Nerves!
