ROOSEVELT IN APPEAL FOR RELIEF WORK

President Calls on Nation to Support His Efforts to Bring Recovery to U. S.

Washington, D. C., April 29.—(AP)—After appealing to all Americans to help make the $4,880,000,000 work relief drive the "most efficient and cleanest example of public enterprise the world has ever seen," President Roosevelt sought today to get the vast undertaking in full swing by autumn.

Meantime Congress faced the prospect of a prolonged session extending well into the summer. The President in the "fireside chat" in which he outlined his works relief program, had called for action on such controversial issues as social security, extension of NRA and bank and utilities holding companies legislation.

His remarks on works and security legislation today were regarded as two of the most important parts of his address. Another was the note of optimism the President struck as he stood before the microphone in the oval room with a flower in the lapel of his gray suit and his aides around him.

"Never since my inauguration in March, 1933," he said, "have I felt so unmistakably the atmosphere of recovery."

"Fear is vanishing and confidence is showing on every side with renewed faith in the vast possibilities of human beings to improve their material status through the instrumentality of Democratic government. That faith is receiving its just reward."

"And for that we can be thankful to the God who watches over America."

Earlier in his address Mr. Roosevelt answered critics who have said the administration program is confused.

PWA SEEKS MORE LABOR

Reemployment Office Here Asks People on Inactive Lists to Renew Cards

Because of the expected renewal of PWA activities, Mrs. Ruby Allen, head of the local Federal Reemployment office, requested today that all persons on the inactive list renew their cards at once in order to be eligible for work in the new program.

Mrs. Allen said that although there are around one thousand persons on the active list at this time there are numbers of others who have permitted their cards to expire and have been placed in this inactive file.

With the Federal government on the verge of a new construction program throughout the nation, Mrs. Allen said persons desiring work should file immediately and be in position to take advantage of the new activity.

She also called attention to a number of positions for trained men in various sections of the state where construction projects are being contemplated. Applications for these jobs should be filed with the secretary of the Board of U. S. Civil Service Examiners, U. S. Engineering office, Asheville, Tenn., on or before May 5, in connection with work of drainage and erosion prevention and for flood control in the Tennessee and Cumberland valley.

Projects will be created in several counties in North Carolina, it was said, and expert aid as labor foreman, levee construction foreman, overseer, concrete foreman, construction supervisor, general construction overseer, and foreman are being offered.

Mrs. Allen said she had been advised to canvass her files for people capable of filling any of the above positions and instruct them to obtain application blanks from the postoffice and apply for the posts.

THIRD PARTY IS SOUGHT BY FARM AGENCY

National Holiday Association on Record For New Political Organization

Des Moines, Ia., April 29.—(AP)—The National Holiday Association was definitely on record in favor of a third party, but a minority group rejected the proposal, saying such a party would be "only another capitalistic organization."

Formation of a new national party "expressing the ideas of farmers and laborers" was advocated by the holiday group in resolutions adopted at the close yesterday of its annual convention. The action was taken in the face of a speech before the group last Saturday by Senator Long who disclaimed any intention of a third party alignment.

Guided by its militant president, Milo Reno, of Des Moines, the association asked that to bring about a new political body "all committees of program groups meet in conference at the earliest opportunity."

CITY SCHOOLS BACK AT WORK

Work Moves Off Smoothly After Over A Week off For Observance of Easter

City schools resumed work this morning following slightly over a week off for observance of the Easter holidays. Members of the faculty and student bodies apparently were in the best of spirit after taking life easy the last several days and class work moved off smoothly.

During the holidays the music club of the High School made its annual visit to Greensboro where it ran away with more honors than ever in the State-wide music contest. In fact, the school captured four first places and five second places in competition with schools from all sections of the State.

It appeared one time as if Greenville would run away with first place for the entire State, but at the last Roanoke Rapids stepped to the front and tied Greenville for the honor.

Over 75 children made the trip, leaving here Wednesday around noon and returning Saturday afternoon.

News of the success of the youngsters was received with jubilation back home, and J. H. Rose, superintendent of schools, was so elated he figuratively "walked on air" all the way from Greensboro home.

Would Abolish NRA

Washington, D. C., April 29.—(AP)—A proposal to abolish the NRA and turn a portion of its authority over to the Federal Trade Commission and the Labor Department was introduced in the Senate today by Senator King, Democrat, of Utah. The Utah Senator, one of the leading Senatorial critics of the NRA, vetoed the bill as a substitute for the administration measure to extend the recovery act for two years.

He proposed to give to the Trade Commission jurisdiction over fair trade practices and provisions over hours and wages to the Labor Department.

Authorities estimate 17,000,000 persons in the United States are "hard of hearing" in some degree and that about 45,000 are classed as deaf.

By GEORGE DURNO RESCUE: The "Mississippi Compromise" on the bonus presented by Pat Harrison is a strange political paradox. It is a friendless waf in a wicked world. Even its progenitor, the astute Mississippi Senator who heads the Senate Finance Committee, is said to regard his brainchild somewhat dubiously. Yet it is the most popular of all soldier-money bills.

The Roosevelt administration is putting up a valiant pillow - fight to stave off passage of any bonus bill. But it has refrained carefully from hitting the Harrison compromise with a direct brickbat. The veterans call Harrison's proposal "the greatest piece of chiseling of the age" and denounce Pat as a "sculptor". Nevertheless, watch the relish with which the gets wolf half a loaf. Outraged but impotent exponents of "sound government" bemoan the compromise as "abject and craven surrender"—yet they will grab it and hug it to their breasts and thank their lucky stars the inflationists did not get a foot in the door with the Patman "greenback" bonus bill.

SHARING: By easy stages the administration is weakening with the best possible grace. First, the President permitted Harrison to emerge from the White House saying the bill would get FDR's OK. At the same time, word was passed out from the "feed box" that the President's face was still set firmly against bonus. Senator Harrison's eyes twinkled merrily as he read the powerful pieces pro and con. Next, Chancellor of the Exchequer (Continued on Page Two)

'Enemy Kiss' Starts Today

Evelyn M. Winch, whose "Enemy's Kiss" is the Daily Reflector's new serial story, starting today, belongs to a new group of young English women writers whose work is attracting interest.

She has written several novels and is a regular contributor to women's magazines in England, Canada and the United States. "Enemy's Kiss" shows her ability as a writer who knows how to combine mystery and romance into a completely absorbing story.

"Enemy's Kiss" opens in an old Sussex house to which pretty Alison Reed has been summoned by what purported to be a message from her father. After Alison has contrived a way to enter the house, apparently vacant and in utter darkness, she finds that Robert Rede has failed to keep his appointment—and then begins to suspect that she has been lured to the dismal old place for some purpose she dares not imagine.

The young author lives by and for her work, an dwhn asked whether she planned to make writing her permanent career, she replied:

"Yes, I shall die with a pen in my hand."

MANY CASES HEARD HERE

Around 80 Actions Cleared From Criminal Court Docket in Two Week Sitting

The major part of the docket was completed in the two-week term of Pitt County Superior Court, for the trial of criminal cases, which ended here the latter part of last week. It was made known today by J. F. Harrington, clerk of court.

The docket, which has been quite heavy for the last several terms, contained well over a hundred cases and many of those disposed of during the two-week sitting had been hanging fire for over a year and a half.

Four or five murder cases, some of which were described as "snags," were among those cleared from the docket. Twenty or thirty jail cases occupied the major part of the first week's session, but after those were cleared away quite a dent was made in actions brought over from previous terms.

Probably the most important case considered during the term was the murder case against Allan Carson, Bethel filling station operator, who was sentenced to from 12 to 15 years in State's Prison by Judge M. V. Barnhill, of Rocky Mount, for the slaying of Ed. Simons over a year ago. The case had been set for hearing several times, but was not reached until this term because of the great number of jail actions demanding attention during previous sittings.

The final case given attention of the court was that against Ben Frank Gwaltney, charged with the slaying of Casey Cade over a year ago who was sentenced to from 10 to 15 years in State's Prison.

Two or three other murder cases centering around deaths in automobile accidents were given hearing during the term, the defendants in virtually every instance finding their way to State's Prison.

Miss Marie Bouillon of Brussels shot Henri Fouches because he was "such a poor dancer that he made her ridiculous."

SIMON TELLS BRITISH ABOUT GERMAN SUBS

Foreign Secretary Informs House of Commons of Building of 12 U-Boats

London, April 29.—(AP)—Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary told the House of Commons today:

"The German government has intimated that orders have been given for the construction of twelve submarines of 250 tons each. This matter is now under consideration."

Although Sir John did not amplify his statement, it was definitely stated in other quarters that the German construction was understood to have been under way for some time.

The Foreign Secretary said the government was considering the "legality" of the German submarine disclosures, but had not determined whether "it was proposed to go with the naval conversations between Great Britain and Germany."

"I ought not to be pressed to give further answers today," said Sir John under questioning.

One of the questions was whether the government would take immediate steps to bring notice of this further violation of the Versailles treaty to the League of Nations.

Sir John revealed that the other information regarding the twelve submarines was dated April 25. He said the type of information contained no intimation regarding the reopening of the submarine school at Kiel as reported in some political quarters here.

TWO HELD IN LIQUOR CASE

Third Man Held in Seizure of Two Colored Persons, Car And Case of Rum

Robert Atkins and Lizzie Cox, colored, were given preliminary hearing on a charge of transporting liquor in this morning session of police court, and were bound over to the next sitting of county court.

They were captured along with an automobile and a case of liquor which, officers said, was being brought to town for sale.

Alfred Williams, said to have been a third member of the party, jumped out of the car and fled. Officers picked him up this morning and he was also held for county court.

Chief of Police George Clark said the trio had just been out in the country and obtained the liquor and were returning to town when they were taken into custody. Williams was said to have been at the wheel when he was seized by the idea that he could make better time by using his feet.

They were transferred from the city jail to the county jail to await trial.

TO DISCUSS HOUSING ACT

Meeting to be Held at Courthouse Wednesday Night to Talk Applications

A meeting has been called at the courthouse in Greenville Wednesday night May 1 at 8 p. m. to explain mortgage application for loan under title two of the National Housing Act.

A number of parties are interested in building a home under this plan and the officials are interested in building a home under this plan and the officials in charge think it best to call this meeting so that the plans can be discussed and explained to a group in order to save time. W. H. Woolard and J. H. Waldrop of the Guaranty Banking and Trust Company have stated that they will be present at the meeting. The bank has qualified to make loans under the housing act.

R. L. Powell, chairman of the Better Housing Program for Greenville, has requested that the State office send several men to this meeting to explain in detail the amount of the monthly payment to be made and how this amount is derived. Those interested in making a loan are urged to be present and ask any question pertaining to a loan.

Late News Flashes

Congress Pushed Emergency Work Washington, April 29.—(AP)—Urged by President Roosevelt to enact his "full reconstruction" program, congressional leaders strove mightily today to break the legislative jam that is holding back NRA, social securities and other big administration measures in the senate.

The senate Democratic steering committee was summoned into executive meeting to canvass the possible strength behind efforts to sidetrack the controversial anti-lynching bill.

This has caused the present stall. Southern senators warned of a summer-long filibuster if necessary to defeat the measure.

Meanwhile the house began debate on the omnibus bank legislation named by Mr. Roosevelt last night as legislation he wants enacted this session.

NYE FAVORING VANDENBURG AS PRESIDENT

Republican From N. D. Would Vote For Roosevelt in Preference to Some Others

Washington, D. C., April 29.—(AP)—A Republican from North Dakota, said today he would prefer to vote for President Roosevelt in 1936 if the Republicans nominate a Hoover, a Mills, a Fletcher, or anyone of that type.

The man who is directing the Senate Munitions Committee investigation gave his thoughts today in an interview.

"Which of the available Republicans would you support?" he was asked.

"Well, if they keep on persecuting Bronson Cutting about his Senatorial election down in Mexico they'll force him into the front position. I am an admirer of his," Nye said.

"And I like Vandenberg, said the Junior Senator from Michigan; in fact, I think I'd vote for him over Mr. Roosevelt."

DIME A DRINK TIGER TAKEN

Negro Woman Arrested Here Saturday Night on Charge of Selling Whiskey

One of the "dime a drink" blind tigers, which have become quite numerous in this section since the advent of beer and legalized liquor from other States, fell into the toils of the law here Saturday night when officers raided the home of Louise Whickard, colored, and allegedly seized a small amount of contraband beverage.

She was given preliminary hearing in police court this morning and bound over to the next sitting of County Court.

Police said the woman had been selling drinks at the usual price charged in this section, when they walked in and took her into custody. Although a complete search was made of the premises, it was said that only a small amount of beverage was discovered.

She was taken into custody and charged with illegal possession of whiskey for the purpose of sale.

Officers said the "dime a drink" places are flourishing in all sections of the community in spite of everything they can do. Numbers of persons are arrested from time to time on charges of handling the illicit beverage, but it was said that for everyone captured another takes its place.

LEGISLATIVE RAMBLINGS

The anti-diversionists, who have opposed the further diversion of highway funds to the general funds have both lost and won. For while they lost their fight the further diversion of from $630,000 to $790,000 a year from the highway fund to the general fund, in addition to the $1,000,000 diverted in the revenue bill as it passed the House, they did win some important concessions from the conference committee. For as the section calling for the diversion of the additional amount was re-written by the committee, provision was made for the following:

CABINET BODY BEGINS STUDY COTTON ISSUE

Maine Delegation Asks For Immediate Consideration as Conference Opens

Washington, D. C., April 29.—(AP)—The President's Cabinet committee studying the cotton textile situation today heard a Maine appeal for immediate assistance.

Headed by Governor Lewis J. Brann and the entire Maine Congressional delegation, a group of mayors, manufacturers and State officials advocated quotas on Japanese imports as a substitute for the processing tax in equalizing wages between the North and the South. Secretaries Hull, Wallace, Roper and Perkins were present. Also attending was Chairman Robert Lincoln O'Brien of the Tariff Commission and experts of the NRA and other agencies. Brann said the textile industry in Maine was steadily losing ground.

"Every cotton textile mill in Maine is now operating at a loss," he said, "and the continuity of the industry depends on its immediate establishment on a basis of comparable operation."

"Shutdown of mills in Maine would be a major calamity," Brann continued, "and the thousands of mill men and women workers of the industry if thrown out of work would not know where to turn except to the relief rolls."

FEW CASES IN POLICE COURT

Two Edenton Young Men Released on Payment of Cost for Trespass at College

Lennie Burch and Paul Perry, young men giving their home as Edenton, were given preliminary hearing in police court this morning on charges of being drunk and trespassing on college property last night, and were released on payment of cost.

They were arrested last night about 2 o'clock after officers had been notified that two men were on the campus, attempting to attract the attention of young women on the inside of the building.

They were taken into custody and placed in jail to face trial in court this morning.

Johnnie Pierce was given preliminary hearing on a charge of driving drunk, and was bound over to the next sitting of county court under bond of $100.

There were two or three charges of handling whiskey and the defendants in each case were bound over to the next sitting of county court.

In the absence of Mayor R. C. Flanagan, mayor pro-tem Herman Duncan presided over the court.

 quer Morgenthau, flanked by a dozen aids, marched up Capitol Hill to warn the boys that enactment of any bonus legislation so far proposed meant new taxes. Morgenthau might as well have said "boo" because Congressional inquires elicited the information that the self-contained Treasury Secretary would suggest graduated inheritance taxes modeled along the lines and carrying the same rates and surtaxes as the present income tax law.
 This was the tip-off to the lads on Capitol Hill. They discerned the white flag in the administration quarter deck. For it meant to them that the New Dealers, after canvassing revenue sources, had picked on the famous cripple—the rich. Since there are fewer millionaires than any other class in this country an inheritance tax would meet with the least possible resistance. In fact Huey Long may be expected to embrace Morgenthau as a convert to that insidious "share-the-wealth" plan.

CASH: So, with passage of the compromise—perhaps in more liberal form—virtually assured, the veterans are ready to forsake their pet measure and cut themselves a piece of cake. Just how the rank and file will accept the compromise is a problem. Of course they can take everything possible this session and be back Oliver Twisting for another bowl of porridge in 1936 if current Congress chisels to their just off the face value of their adjusted service certificates.
 Frank Belgrano, national commander of the American Legion, has warned the Senate Finance Committee that veterans won't be satisfied with less than 100 cents on the dollar. James Van Zandt, commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, advised this same body that the only way to get rid of a vexatious issue was to pay the veterans in full—and now. All this because the value of adjusted service certificates as of 1945 is printed on their face. Veterans in the hustings—and out of them—believe that is what the government still owes them, and all the federal figuring in the world won't dissuade them.

For instance, the average veteran holds an adjusted service certificate as a $1,000 promissory note payable in 1945. About 85 per cent of the World War enrollees already have exercised the privilege of borrowing 50 per cent of that face value, on which they are paying compound interest. The average veteran expects to collect the other $500. But under the Harrison compromise he will receive only about $200. And will he yell? But how effectively remains to be seen. After all, Harrison is offering a turn-in value as of today, less interest on past loans and premiums on future holdings.

PREDICTION: Frank C. Walker, who has been picked for a key position in President Roosevelt's intimate entourage for expending that $4,880,000,000 in work-relief, should be remembered as one of the original "F. R. B. C." men, meaning he helped organize the Roosevelt landslide before the 1932 Chicago conventions.
 Walker comes back into the spotlight, particularly in his old job as director of the National Emergency Council, with reluctance. He has always worked best without publicity—a fact, has done so ex-officio for nearly a year. His specialties are under-cover coordination and political finance-raising, neither of which bloom very well, in his measured opinion. If too much Washington newspaper spotlight and conjecture is placed upon them, he returned to formal New Deal service only because the commanding general urged him to get back into harness.
 And may this writer take a modest bow for having predicted some time ago that Walker reluctantly would be back in a key position for the expenditure of that $4,880,000,000.

The Detroit Challenge Cup, an added $25,000 race, has been listed on this year's turf program, and plans are being made to enter Cavalade, Anuger and Discovery,

Chapter 40
 GLORY

LESLIE shrank back into the convenient closet among the dust pans and mops as she heard a swish of skirts coming along the corridor. "Right in here, ma'am. He's waiting for you. I'll have him here in two minutes." Leslie heard her knight errant say.

Jane was in the cloak room . . . at last . . . at last. The boy scout fled. Jane turned round to see the door close behind her, heard the key turn in the lock. She rattled the door knob, pounded on the dirty panel. "What does this mean? Who's out there?" Jane cried frantically.

"The key was removed. It means," Leslie all but hissed through the roomy key hole, "that you are going to stay where you are until James makes his speech. You can kick and scream and howl if you like. No one can hear you. I'm on guard . . . to see that no one comes near. It won't be long. I advise you to sit down and make yourself comfortable. But you're not going to ruin James a second time. I won't let you."

"Ruin James! How ridiculous! Is that Leslie Harris? Of all the absurd melodramatic . . . let me out of here at once. You shew-ill!" Leslie leaned against the door shaking and trembling. Could anything be more undignified, more degrading than for James' ex-wife and his future wife to spend the most momentous half hour of James' life hissing insults at each other through a key hole? If James knew . . . if James guessed . . .

Abruptly Leslie began to laugh hysterically; laughed and laughed. Jane was again pounding on the door. Was threatening arrest, scandal, disgrace . . . Leslie did not listen. She had caught the sound of applause from above.

Then silence . . . a shout of laughter . . . more silence . . . more applause . . . quiet . . . a long, long quiet. And suddenly cheers, a mounting crescendo . . . cheer upon cheer . . . on and on and on . . .

Leslie inserted the key in the lock, turned it quickly and ran. They were still cheering when Leslie stumbled up the stairs and to a dark and deserted corner of the wings. There she collapsed in a heap and cried and cried.

TO the extreme disappointment of New Concord James and Leslie decided to be married very quietly. Only their immediate families, a few intimate friends and Leslie's youngest dancing class were invited.

The wedding ceremony took place out of doors under a tree in the Harris' back yard in the warm sunshine of an April afternoon. The tree was a gnarled old apple in full pink and white bloom. The sunshine crept softly down between the blossoms and spread a glory of golden light about the little group of friends gathered there that this man might be married to the woman he had chosen by himself and of his own free will.

To James the golden light was like a benediction. Leslie was a gift of God as truly as the sun itself. She was in white, but wore no veil and her pale blonde hair seemed to her lover to glow about her head like a halo.

When Doctor Brown, the Congregational minister, said the fateful words that made them man and wife, James drew a deep breath and waited. He wanted Leslie to turn to him, to hold out her hands, to smile up at him.

Instead she just stood there meekly, her head drooping a little, patiently waiting his pleasure. Seized with a sudden panic lest she might shrink from him, might already have repented, might not want him as he wanted her, James forgot that anyone else was present and took her face in both his hands and lifted it up.

What he saw in her eyes must have satisfied him for he drew her into his arms and kissed her a dozen times. This seemed the signal for everyone present to burst into tears. Even Leslie cried a little.

James, however, was far from crying. He was instead joyously, readily happy and showed it. Nor did Nappy, who had been invited to open the front door for the guests and who was looking on from the back porch, add to the solemnity of the occasion.

ENEMY'S KISS by Evelyn M. Winch

CHAPTER ONE
 THE HAIRLESS SKULL

ALISON REDE, brushing her teeth in very cold water, raised her head from the basin to listen. Night, in an empty house, is always liable to produce strange and alarming sounds, but surely that had been a footstep? It must be her father at last!

Her mouth was full of pink soap flavored with arca nut, so she could not call out, but the flooding sense of sheer relief was wonderful; never had she been through such a nerve shaking experience.

For her father, usually so careful of her comfort, to change his plans by telegram at the last minute was bad enough. True he had written to her that he was leaving London and was looking for a country place, yet it was totally unlike him to ask Alison to meet him at this lonely house at eleven at night, still more so to add "If I am late, wait there for me"; for Robert Rede was the most precise and punctual of men, and he had always come to fetch her at Dover.

But if the telegram seemed odd, her arrival at this new home had been worse. The hired car which had brought her here from Warley Station was already halfway down the road before Alison had realized that the bell produced no answer. Gropping her way to the back she had grasped at last that the whole place was dark and empty.

Tired, cold, very wet and rather frightened, her first instinct had been to try and find some cottage near by. But it was later, no friendly light showed anywhere along the dark road; her father's telegram had been explicit—"wait there for me"—and if she went exploring she might miss him when he arrived.

At ten minutes to eleven on a pouring wet autumn night, it seemed silly to attempt to walk a matter of six miles back to the station. Soaked and shivering, she had waited for ten minutes in an open porch that gave her no protection from the driving rain. Then with the aid of her pocket torch she had managed a find a window ajar and with some difficulty got herself and her small attache case through it into the pantry.

But thankful as she was to be under shelter, a hurried search of the house had failed to discover the main switch of the electric light. By the pale beam of her small torch the empty house seemed strange and eerie. Waiting, expecting every moment to hear her father's car arrive, she had tried to keep her spirits up and to pretend that the whole affair was a vast joke.

To fill in time, she had unpacked her brush and sponge bag and had started to wash off some of the clinging dirt of Swiss and French trains. But now, raising her mouth, she could afford to admit that she had been scared!

CREAK . . .
 With the glass still in her hand, Alison stiffened. The muscles of her throat grew tight as she stood motionless, listening.

Someone was coming up the stairs outside the bathroom, but—that was not her father's brisk, short, rather jerky tread—

Slow steps, stealthy, with a marked pause between each as though the person outside was afraid of being heard . . .
CREAK! Then a rattle and a faint, sharp squeak.

The girl stared into the looking-glass above the basin, stared across her own shoulder, unable to move, paralyzed with fear.

The door was opening! Then she saw.
 Her mouth stretched wide to scream, as she spun round, but no sound came but a dull click far back in her throat. At the same instant she flung herself bodily against the door.

There was no key; she herself had seen all the house-keys hanging, tied with strings, on a hook in the pantry; left hanging there, no doubt, by the last tenants. There was no furniture in the small tiled bathroom except a light stool and Alison, although tall, was very slight.

She was shaking so much that the door rattled as she pushed herself against it and she felt appallingly sick. She found herself wondering whether she could go on holding it against that thing which was trying to force the door open.

ville Thursday afternoon, at which time J. T. Thorne of Farmville was re-nominated as director of the second district. Mr. Thorne is one of the leading farmers of Pitt county and has been a director of the Association for the past several years. Many leading farmers from the different counties were present at this meeting and they adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas we, as delegates of the North Carolina Cotton Growers Cooperative Association representing more than three thousand cotton farmers from Beaufort, Pitt, Martin, Washington, Tarrell, Hyde, Craven, Pamlico and Carter counties, realizing the great benefit of the processing tax to the cotton growers and believing that it means dividual counties and which have been held in the committee files for several weeks have been reported favorably. Originally the elections committee had reported six such measures unfavorably. However, the bills now reported favorably have been amended so that they apply only to primary elections and only to local officials in the counties concerned. Under that arrangement State Senators and State officials can still be voted for via the absentee ballot route.

Seniors Return From Washington
The group of Seniors from the College who visited Washington City this week-end report a delightful trip. The party which included thirty-eight students and seven outsiders went in private cars. Miss Katherine Holtzclaw, of the faculty was the official chaperon.

They left Thursday afternoon and returned Sunday night spending most of these two days in traveling. Friday and Saturday were full days spent in sight seeing in Washington City. Beginning with a bird's eye view from the top of Washington's monument, they went from place to place in the first day taking in the National Museum and the Capitol, and the second day the White House, Mount Vernon and the Zoo, with other high spots of interest filling in between.

A number of students report that the Folger Shakespeare Library as perhaps the most interesting building visited.

The party stopped at the George Mason Hotel, in Alexandria, Va. Among those who took the trip were, Misses Edith Marsden, Prudence Batemore, Alma Tyndall, Mildred Harrison, Verona Lee Joyner, Isa Coxe Grant, Malene Grant, Mary E. Singletary, Margarette Peeling, Eugenia Parrish, Mildred Pearson, Mildred Gibson, Elizabeth Davis, Myrtle Holliday, Elizabeth Warren, Aubrey McLean, Lou Pitts, Geneva Hyatt, Lucy Le Roy, Eloise Camp, Annie Rosemond Horne, Catherine Hinson, Thelma Peck, Jackie Strickland, Evelyn Turlington, Lucy Barlow, Ruth Mangum, Edith Bowman, Mary Jenkins, and Daniel Jordan.

Paul Fitzgerald, Outsiders, who went on the trip were Billy Nisbet, Mrs. Dall Loughlinhouse, Mrs. C. O. Armstrong and four of the students' relatives.

Celebration of the 73rd Birthday
It has been a custom of the children of Mrs. Cornelia Hemby to gather in some home and have a feast for their mother each anniversary. The home selected this party. Numerous guests from Greenville accompanied the bride elect to this city Friday to attend Mrs. Winslow's party which was given at the Patrician Inn.

The guests were received at the Inn entrance by Mrs. Winslow, who presented the honoree and her mother, Mrs. J. E. Winslow.

Dutch iris, yellow in color, pink and yellow tulips, roses, snow balls and other garden flowers arranged in artistic bouquets decorated both the living room and the front dining room providing an especially inviting setting. Five card tables were set in each of the rooms.

The attractive bride and bridegroom tables, the one outer cover framing a fetching looking couple, were laid on the tables, the guests' names being written just under the oval center opening. Each guest found a garden boutonniere, made of blue flowers centered with a pink rose and tied with silver ribbons, beside her place card tally.

Pivot rubbers were inaugurated with honor in hand floating prizes provided for each of the rooms. The prizes went to Greenville visitors, Miss Jessie Moye receiving the top score award. Mrs. William Taft and Miss Frances Morton received the floating prize gifts. The honoree's remembrance was Madeira linens.

A delicious course consisting of chicken a la king, congealed salad fixed on lettuce and garnished with tomatoes, cucumbers and radish flowers, was served following the gift presentations. Hot rolls, sweets and iced tea accompanied the course.

The Greenville guests were: Miss Louise Winslow, Mrs. J. E. Winslow, Mrs. E. H. Taft, Patsy Davenport, Jessie Moye, Mrs. W. H. Brasher, Mrs. George Hadley, Mrs. J. D. Simpson, Mary Lou White, Frances Morton, Mrs. T. Y. Walker, Mrs. Marvin Blount, Mrs. William Taft, Mrs. M. B. Massey, Mrs. Herbert Waldrop.

year was with her daughter, Mrs. Maud Summerell in Greenville with whom she lives.

In the early morning the guests began arriving. This continued until the hour of twelve—every one happy to see mother and grandmother in such splendid health and happy spirits. And what a feast indeed, each one bringing a heavily laden basket with good things, ranging from Carolina Sweets, a whole barbecued pig, chicken, ham, salad deviled eggs, sandwiches, chess, pies, ice drinks, and several varieties of cakes.

About one o'clock, Mrs. Herbert Nichols, of Arthur, a daughter, came in with her jolly disposition and announced dinner was served and invited all in the long dining room where twin tables fairly groaned with the material blessings. The center piece being the huge birthday cake with 73 on it.

Dr. Joe Smith of Greenville took the guest of honor in and returned thanks. Dinner was served in buffet style. After dinner we enjoyed opening the presents which were all useful, dresses, collar and cuff sets, purses, handkerchiefs, hair pins, fruits, money and expressions of love and health.

About forty, including her brother Charlie Nichols, and her sister, Mrs. Tena Joyner, enjoyed the day with Mrs. Hemby. The invited guests present were her family physician, Dr. Joe Smith of Greenville and wife, Mrs. Butler, Mrs. James Vandford, all of Greenville, Miss McGlohon, of Williamston, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dall and Mrs. Varinda V. Cobb, of Farmville.

prepared by the students of the college. These exhibits will be of interest to all people since they will be actually demonstrated by students who prepared them. There will be guides to show the visitors through the building. On the first floor will be displayed the Biological sciences, including nature study, hygiene, zoology, botany, physiology and bacteriology. On the second floor physics and chemistry will be displayed. The aim of each of the exhibits is to show the practical uses of the various sciences to the farmer, merchant, teacher and all other classes of people.

The museum will also be open to guests and it is thought that the museum will be of great interest to the public. The museum contains a large number of animals, including fish, crabs, snakes, insects, sharks, etc. There is also a collection of chicken embryos showing the development of the chick from the first day to the last on display. One of the most interesting displays in the museum is the collection of minerals from each county of North Carolina. The Science club, which will sponsor the Open House, is one of the most active clubs on the campus. The club is affiliated with the Student Science Club of America and carries out a very interesting program. There are certain definite requirements set up for those who join the club. The first requirement is that each member must have had at least six hours of Science before he joins the club and also a scholastic record of at least three.

Of the many activities of the Science Club this will be the most interesting and helpful of its entire history. The exhibits will be very practical, easy to interpret, and spectacular since the entire Science Dept. has spent a great deal of time getting everything in shape. The Science Club of East Carolina Teachers College extends to the people of Greenville a most cordial invitation to attend "Science Open House," Thursday evening,

May 2, from 7 until 10 o'clock, in the Science building.
