ANTI-BRITISH RIOTS STAGED BY FASCISTS

Students Renew Demonstrations In Italy

WORLD VICTORY CELEBRATED

Mussolini Declares Italians Are Invincible And Unyielding In Speech Today

(By Associated Press) Students of Fascist Italy demonstrated a new against Great Britain today as Mussolini, defiant of the alliance of sanctions against him, pledged his nation victory in Ethiopia.

With the nation celebrating the anniversary of the victory of the World War with Austria Hungary bands of students paraded throughout the streets shouting Rome "Down with England."

They stripped English signs from buildings, store keepers removed British signs and goods from display windows.

To the thousands who surged about his Piazza Venezia, Mussolini shouted out:

"The Italian army 17 years ago today won victory, not only for itself."

"Today the nations are engaged in another battle, but the Italian people are in invincible and unyielding."

"Necessary again Italy will have as her prize victory."

The demonstration followed: Anti-British sentiment was in a feverish state elsewhere in the nation. In Milan crowds demonstrated against England deprecating its leadership in the sanctions war against Italy. Scenes similar to those in Rome were common.

Italian Armies March Toward Strategic Point

Italians Continue on Toward Mikale As Ethiopians Forces Offer No Resistance

On the March with the Italian Armies in Ethiopia, Nov. 4.—(AP)—An Italian army column poured through Hausien shortly after daybreak today and marched on toward Mikale, 38 miles due south.

Italian patrols had entered Hausien yesterday scouting the way in advance of the main army of infantry.

Their drive forward was met with no resistance by Ethiopians.

With the capture and occupation of Hausien the Italians had covered one-third of the 50 miles which lay between them and Mikale when they started out Saturday.

Patrols gained the mark in a great fourfold drive on Mikale entering at the head of a body of 120,000 men which is advanced undisturbed into Ethiopia.

Lint Consumption For Entire World Shows Increase

Use of American Cotton on Decline, However, Due to "Relatively High Prices" of Staple

Washington, Nov. 4.—(AP)—An increase in world consumption of foreign lint almost corresponding to the number of bales decreased in consumption of American lint was disclosed today in the agricultural department's outlook for 1935-36.

The report attributed the decline in American cotton consumption to "relatively high prices" as compared with foreign lint, but predicted an increase in use of American cotton for 1935-36 because of "somewhat more prices" and higher level of business activities.

Total consumption of American cotton in 1934-35, the report said, declined 2,200,000 bales from 1933-34.

On the other hand, consumption of foreign cotton increased approximately 2,300,000 bales last season to a new high level.

Liquor Decision Ruling Has Very Little Effect

Superior Court Judges Exceeded Authority

HIGH COURT EVADES ISSUE

Franklin County To Hold Referendum as Only Direct Result Of Decision

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Nov. 4.—John A. McRae of Charlotte, one of the four or five candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor, is personally opposed to the sales tax and would like to see it repealed if the state can find some other source of revenue with which to finance its needs and balance the budget, according to a statement he has just issued dealing with his position on the sales tax.

But unless other sources of revenue can be found with which to provide the state's needs and without putting taxes back upon real estate, he would probably be forced to consent to keep the sales tax, though he would like to have the exemptions on essential foods restored, McRae added.

While a member of the house in the 1931 general assembly, McRae was one of the group of 22 representatives who voted against the sales tax, he points out in his statement. Yet at the same time he realized that there were two arguments for the tax at that time, namely that the state needed the money and that it required every person to pay some tax.

"The Governor of the state cannot do away with this tax, however," McRae said. "All he can do is use his influence with General Assembly. This body has the final word. The sales tax was adopted as an emergency measure and should be abolished at the earliest opportunity. If I should be a member of the 1937 general assembly, I should vote to abolish the sales tax if we could balance the budget without the tax and without placing the tax which it supplanted back upon real estate and without hampering industry by destructive legislation. If I found the sales tax could not be abolished under these circumstances, then I would fight to the last ditch to take it off the necessary foodstuffs and would vote for a reduction of the tax to 2 per cent on other merchandise."

"My position as a candidate for Governor upon this question is the same as it would be were I a member of the legislature. Waste and extravagance should be cut out. But at the same time it requires a lot of taxes to carry on the essential functions of government."

Most observers here are inclined to agree that no opinion on the constitutionality of the county liquor laws is likely until after the Democratic primary in June, seven months away. Some observers think that the proximity of the primary and election may have had some slight bearing on the present opinion and the decision of the Supreme Court that it could not pass on the constitutionality of the county liquor control laws at the present time. For if the present laws had been held constitutional, it is generally agreed that the question of liquor control and state or county liquor stores would have become a much larger issue in the present gubernatorial campaign than now seems likely.

That the present opinion will greatly reduce the agitation for a special session of the General Assembly—something not at all desirable—seems likely.

South Florida Residents Prepare For Hurricane

Sudden Change in Direction Causes Alarm

STORM WARNINGS ARE DISPLAYED

All Interests in Extreme South Florida Warned Against Severe Storm

Miami, Fla., Nov. 4.—(AP)—The center of the tropical hurricane menacing the Florida east coast was passing over Miami at 1:15 p. m. (EST) today.

The barometer reading at the hour was 28.73.

The wind had diminished to 14 miles per hour, the highest previous reading had been 72 miles per hour.

There is always a lull as the center of a hurricane passes over a given spot.

Hurricane winds struck the east coast, unroofed houses, broke windows and sent water from canals overflowing on streets at Fort Lauderdale as Miami experienced a blow of 80 miles an hour in gusts.

At Jacksonville coast guard division headquarters received a radio message from the steamer Sneland, giving her position as 13 miles northeast of Hillsboro, a small settlement north of Ft. Lauderdale, was unable to maneuver in hurricane winds and the master feared the vessel would be driven aground.

The ship reported it was drifting toward the beach. Coast guard officials said they did not know what aid could be rendered. The nearest cutter was 46 miles away.

The coast guard had no record of the Sneland and were given neither the nationality or size of the vessel. A hasty examination at Ft. Lauderdale after the blow indicated the damage would not be heavy. There were no reports of deaths or injuries.

The wind abated shortly after 2 p. m. (EST).

Miami, Fla., Nov. 4.—(AP)—South Florida residents caught unawares by a sudden change in direction, today prepared for a freak hurricane moving toward the coast near Delray, between Miami and Palm Beach.

At 9:30 a. m. (EST) the weather bureau at Jacksonville charted the storm 85 miles east northeast of Miami and moving southward.

At 9:30 a. m. warnings also included the low-lying lakes Okeechobee area where many lives have been lost in past storms. In 1928 a hurricane caused the lake to overflow its bank and over 2,000 persons were drowned.

Negro Badly Hurt As Auto Strikes Leaf Warehouse

One negro was critically wounded, another slightly hurt and a third escaped unharmed when the car in which they were riding crashed into Webb's warehouse Saturday night.

Harvey Lee Ellison is in Pitt General Hospital dangerously wounded with a fractured skull. Physicians said he probably would die.

Sam Wooten received minor injuries and John Williams was not hurt at all.

State Highway patrolmen who investigated the wreck said they had been unable to determine definitely who was driving the automobile. Wooten and Williams were arrested.

The car in which they were riding had been stolen from a negro by the name of Moore, patrolmen said.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG News Behind The News

Washington By RAY TUCKER PROSPECTS: The present fall pick-up in business and industry strikes the experts as noteworthy in two important respects. It marks the first continuous autumnal improvement since 1923. It finds almost every unit of the nation's economic machine—retail, manufacturing, construction, transportation, agricultural—showing an improved upward swing.

Thus, for the first time in seven years, the gears are beginning to mesh. Such vital industries as the automobile, steel, textile, building, railroad, lumber and electric power production are looking up, and each helps the other. The durable industries show a steady gain, and so do retail sales. Underlying forces guarantee continued advance for the last quarter of the year, but beyond January the prospects make no guesses. Not even the White House can persuade them to promise more.

If private industry can take up the slack through 1936 it means reduction of relief costs and many other emergency expenditures in re-election year. If not Mr. Roosevelt must dig down again for several billions to keep the others contented. But none of his interpreting economists can tell him whether the current improvement is a shot in the arm or a surefire thing.

The sign is repainted each year and bears only the names of members in good standing. As fast as members pay up their dues their names will be included on the list. Officials today urged that all Pitt county Legionnaires pay their annual dues so their names can be included on the sign.

Wife's Dress Lands Corporal In Jail

Paris.—(AP)—Jean Cogne was sentenced to two years in jail for dressing his wife in parachute silk.

Cogne, a private in the air corps was convicted by court martial of having stolen parachute silk from the Villacoublay air base to make lingerie for his wife. He pleaded it was impossible to clothe Mme. Cogne on his salary of one and a half cents a day.

A full military court of old braided generals, their laps piled high with exhibits from Mme. Cogne's wardrobe, ruled it "better to go naked than steal from the state."

Federal Govt. Expects Tobacco Price Levels Be Maintained In 1936

Washington, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Prospects for tobacco to maintain price levels in 1936 were said today by the Agricultural Department to be "favorable."

However, decreases in the production of flue-cure, Maryland leaf, and fire-cured tobacco were reported "advisable."

"Although it is true of many types that the carry-over continued to be larger than normal" the department 1936 crop outlook said "the situation during the last year was improved to such an extent that with a continuation production control the price outlook for the coming year may be considered favorable."

Increased domestic consumption of cigarettes and cigars was pointed to as a bright sign of recovery. A marked decrease in exports was reported for the past year. The reports said, however, the prices were made favorable for foreign sale.

With a moderate decrease in production of flue-cured next year, the report said the outlook for the cigarette type is for favorable prices.

Wallace Resident Shot In Richmond By Unknown Man

Richmond, Va., Nov. 4.—(AP)—Police still were without a clue early today to the identity of a negro shot and killed H. B. Murphy, 30, of Wallace, N. C., yesterday.

Murphy was shot as he came in the way of the negro—running from a crowd which followed him after he snatched a box of money from a street car conductor at the point of a gun.

Murphy's body was to be buried at Wallace tomorrow.

Several Arrested by Highway Patrol On License Charge

State Highway patrolmen this week-end began arresting persons driving automobiles who have not applied for their drivers license and a number already have been halted into court.

Lieut. Lester Jones, head of the eastern division of the patrol, pointed out, however, that it is not necessary at present for a driver to have his license. If he has applied for the permit he may drive with it out being subject to arrest. This is allowed since the revenue department was unable to distribute the licenses as fast as they were applied for.

Walter Holloway of Grifton was one of the first in this section to be caught under the new law. He was given a 30-day sentence suspended upon payment of the costs of the court.

J. C. Rasberry of Kinston was fined $10 and ordered to pay the costs in the case on a charge allowing his car to be driven by a person who had not applied for a license.

Lieut. Jones pointed out it was just as much against the law for a person to allow some one not having applied for a license to drive his car as it is to operate it himself.

W. J. Cannon of Greenville was arrested for operating his car without having applied for a license.

The charge against Cannon followed a wreck on Dickinson avenue. As a result of the accident, L. D. Barrow of Greenville was charged with operating a car while under the influence of whiskey. Barrow is alleged to have run his car into one driven by Cannon. Barrow was placed under $100 bond.

San Francisco Chinatown's 'Boss' Says Lottery Eclipses Other Evils

By DUDLEY ROSS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—"Boss" of San Francisco's teeming Chinatown is a big bluff Irish policeman who says his hardest task is with the Chinese lottery.

He is Inspector John J. Manion, who has watched over its destinies and kept its peace for 15 years as head of the police department's Chinatown squad.

The job is one that requires diplomacy as well as a firm hand, says the officer who is known to most of the Chinese in his district as "Sarge Manmian."

Evidence Hard To Get

"You have to use a lot of psychology," he says. "Witnesses usually won't talk, and you have to get some Chinese, who can be trusted to tip you off and then make sure no one knows who he is."

Inspector Manion asserts that Chinatown, which makes a colorful hillside district covering several blocks, is on the whole a peaceful community.

Gambling, the Chinese national problem. Tong wars, opium and the slave girl traffic no longer loom large, but it is tough to prevent a Chinese from playing lotteries.

'Clever People'

Lottery companies have been driven from the district, says Manion, but it is another thing to stop traffic in tickets.

"The companies have moved elsewhere," he explains, "and they send their agents in. They won't even have tickets, but work in code and it's tough to get legal evidence."

"Yes, the Chinese are a clever people."

Take a sign innocently displayed in a store window which translates to: "New and old company goods here."

"That means lottery," Manion points out. Recently, he even found a store preparing to erect such a sign in bright lights, but he speedily put a stop to that maneuver.

A lottery ticket transaction can be a very elusive affair, Manion says.

"A Chinese may step up to a store counter, say a few words and pass over some money. There are no tickets or anything said about lottery. If he is questioned, the storekeeper says the customer was paying a bill."

'Million-To-One' Shot

The Chinese lottery is a complicated drawing, using the traditional 80 characters drawn from four bowls and permitting varied betting combinations.

As far as cheating goes, the Chinese lottery company which may operate on a capital of from $5,000 to $20,000 is no different from the numbers and policy games popular with other races, Inspector Manion says. "It is a million-to-one shot to win the ten-spot."

"Some of the agents may be holding out certain characters and banking themselves. If the company finds out, it may draw a certain character to break the agent."

Hints of trouble may cause Chinatown to be blockaded at long intervals, but long shootings have failed to mar its peace openly for many years.

Not even one shot rang out in the colorful Chinese district here in the last two great long wars, in 1922 and 1926, although one of them cost more than 20 lives.

The last indication of real trouble occurred early this year in a quarrel over the sale of a bride, and a special guard was set over Chinatown for several days. But the Chinese, who also have their own organizations to preserve the peace, vigorously protested such action as unnecessary.

Brews Puts Britons Ahead In Golfing

Johannesburg, South Africa—(AP)—British professional golfers have improved remarkably the past three years and can now be rated ahead of the Americans, in the opinion of Sid Brews, South African golfer just returned from a visit to the United States.

"It is the contrast of style of play that brought me to that conclusion," stated Brews. "The Americans, for instance, favor the upright swing which makes the stroke to much like a mallet blow to appeal to me."

"I think the methods of the newer British school of golfers are better. The rest pull the American have is that they can continually be kept at concert pitch through tournament play."

All-Star Candidate Proves Some Scorer

Pulman, Wash.—(AP)—Ed Goddard, Washington State College's candidate for the All-America title this season, gave a sample of his caliber, in the first two non-conference games when he played on a total of 36 minutes and scored four touchdowns. He also threw a touchdown pass.

In running plays Goddard carried the ball 22 times for 177 yards, an average of 8 yards each trip. He never failed to gain in the 22 smashes, and punted twice for an average of 48 yards.

There were plenty of his mates who were just itching to tag that title on Armour this year.

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington—Surface explanations offered as to why AAA is so eager to have the supreme court decide as quickly as possible on the constitutionality of the processing tax are that everyone from Chester Davis, administrator, to the cottoning farmer is wandering around in a maze of uncertainty.

AAA officials in Washington are hesitant to proceed with their future programs until the nine justices have spoken. Farmers are wary of entering into further contracts until validity of their action is determined.

Political insiders, however, have an explanation of their own for the government's desire for haste. And they advance it as the reason why Stanley Reed, solicitor general of the United States, has asked the court to take a hearing in the case for November 20 instead of December 7. The New England textile mills who the same source. In other words, October, 1934, collections alone were almost as large as the total during the three and one-half months of this fiscal year.

Meanwhile AAA must continue paying benefits to farmers for crop reduction. Since July 7, 1935, AAA expenditures have totaled $211,000,000 with only $49,000,000 in processing taxes to pay them.

Decision Vital

This marked decrease in the amount of processing taxes is due to the temporary injunctions issued against their collection until the supreme court determines their validity.

It isn't difficult, therefore, to see just how much hinges on what the supreme court decides in Hoosac Mills vs. The United States of America.

Should the decision go against the government, revenue in the form of processing taxes would be dried up, thus jeopardizing budget estimates and, according to a previous announcement of President Roosevelt, necessitating the finding of other taxes to take their place.

On the other hand, should the court uphold the constitutionality of AAA, the government would be able to recoup its losses and keep within its budget estimates. Individual industries, however, in many instances face possible ruin in this event. A great number ceased paying processing taxes when they obtained temporary injunctions. The obligation of paying back taxes probably would bankrupt some of the smaller industries.

Dr. Combs At Vesper Service. "The Christian World needs to study larger maps to get away from a tide of provincial nationalism which grips the world today and is leading to world catastrophe," was the burden of the stirring message Dr. G. R. Combs, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, delivered to the college students at their Y. W. C. A. vesper service last night.

We are now in the midst of renaissance provincialism, he believes. He cited Paul as the first cosmopolitan and held him up as an example to be followed today.

The world is indebted to generations gone by, he stated, and to all fellow creatures, so must not ignore that past narrow one's interest to his own life. He advised that students in college to mix together and learn to value and appreciate each other; so as to widen their interest through understanding of their fellow students.

Wives of Henry III.
In the one-act play in which the six "Wives of Henry VIII" are presented, Cornelia Otis Skinner appears as each wife in turn, at some crucial point of her life.

The costumes Miss Skinner wears makes her the living portrait of each, and her understanding of each one enables her to do some wonderful character work, but she does more than present characters. She makes her audience feel the presence of others and creates a whole play. She converses with thin air, addresses creatures of fancy, denounces them, entertains them and jests with them, and even does that most difficult feat of the single actor, exchanges kisses with an imaginary person.

The wives are given in the order of their historical progression. The first is Spanish Catherine of Aragon, who was to be the mother of "Bloody Mary." Miss Skinner brings out her suspicious, resentful nature, and her other hard qualities. The next is Anne Boleyn awaiting the executioner in the Tower of London, which evokes to the full the actress' emotional powers. Jane Seymour, the third of the wives, is offered as a loving and timid creature, quite naive. Into the fourth, the Dutch Anne of Cleves, Miss Skinner sketches a good deal of humor, showing Anne waiting for her husband-to-be and his running away at the first sight of her, to him, distasteful looks. Kathryn Howard, the fifth, is depicted as an amorous young woman discovered in her liaison with Thomas Culpeper, while the sixth, Katherine Parr, is disclosed as a tactful woman ministering to a feeble and diseased Henry. She is the only one who outlives the king.

Local Scout Troop Takes Over-Night Camping Excursion

Troop 33, Christian Church Troop of the Greenville Boy Scouts took their first official over night Troop hike Friday under the leadership of their new Scoutmaster Ed Waldrop.

At five o'clock Friday afternoon some of the boys met at the Christian Church with their camping equipment and rode out to the overland well with Assistant Scout Executive Ralph Mozo, others rode out on their ponies. The Scoutmaster met them at the Camp site and helped some of the boys in passing their fire building and cooking test for Second Class. The boys played some games and were especially surprised how easy it was to learn the signaling, which is about the hardest part of the Second Class test. Even though there was a slight rain during the night all of the boys were well provided for with tent covering and they slept most of the night which is very unusual for a first overnight hike. Most of the boys that went on the hike are almost through with their Second Class tests in the one camping experience.

The Greenville Scouts and their leaders want to have some place near enough to town that they can hike for overnights and feel free to build their outdoor cooking stoves, camp stoves, and plant nature trails so the boys can do some out door scouting. Scouting is three fourths outing. Greenville citizens can help to give their boys the opportunity of getting this training by providing the necessary camp site.

Africa's Tough Beef Goes To Italians

Pretoria, South Africa.—(AP)—Cattle prices have boomed as a result of the war in Ethiopia, and South African farmers are shouting "Viva Italia" and "Hall Selassie."

The thousands of head offered for sale at high prices include thin, underfed animals of doubtful value.

Even natives, ordinarily most reluctant to sell cattle, sense the situation and are sorting out the "oldest resident" of their herds for the Italian troops.

Farmers admit an increasing respect for the Italian army.

"Any army which can fight on North transvaal scrub cattle must be tough," is a current wise-crack.

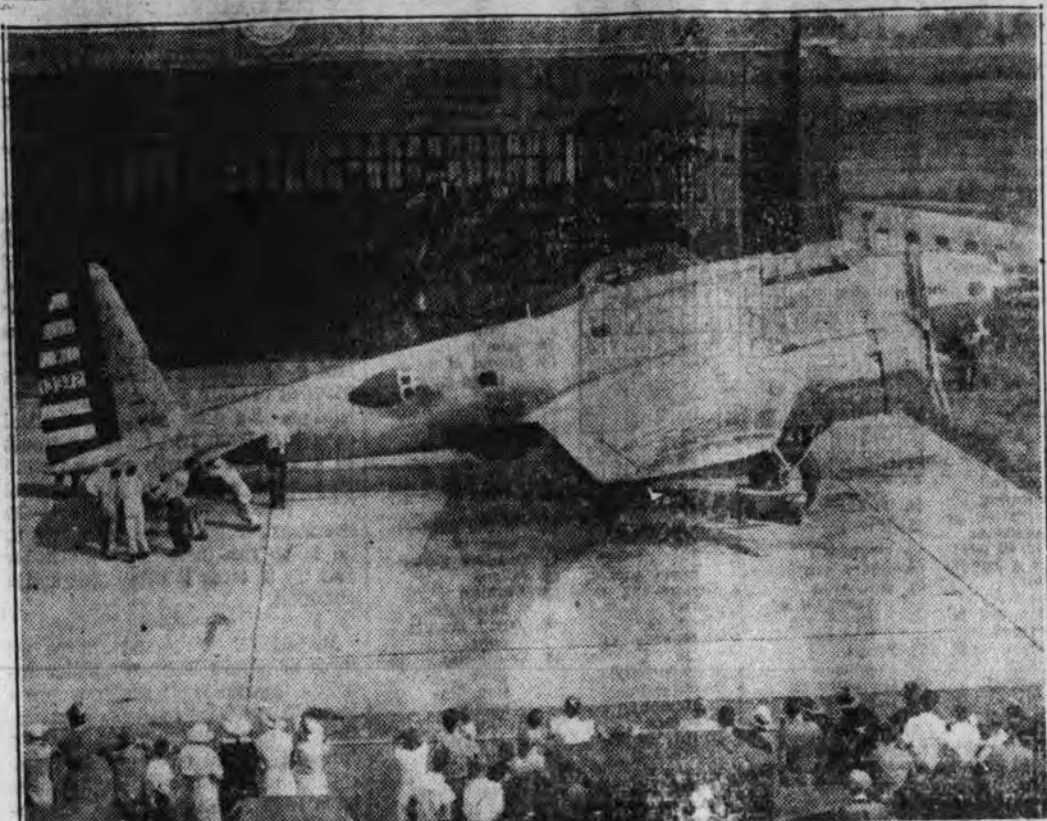

Mexico Wars On Horn Drivers.

Mexico, D. F.—(AP)—"Use your brakes at corners instead of your horn" is the slogan which has been adopted by leaders of an anti-noise campaign in this city. The capital's 50,000 drivers generally speed up when hearing a crossing and lean on the horn.

Hungary Stern With Smugglers.

Budapest.—(AP)—Hungary, waging a relentless drive on smuggling, sentenced a Vienna merchant to 30 days in jail and fined him $122,000 for smuggling an automobile load of saccharine and matches. If he doesn't pay the fine he must serve 30 years in prison.

EDUCATION IN PRISONS

Compulsory Education for Inmates Favored By Pitts

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Nov. 4.—One of the most urgent needs of the North Carolina prison system is compulsory education for illiterate prisoners, according to Oscar T. Pitts, acting director of the prisoner division of the State Highway and Public Works Commission.

He is convinced that morale would be greatly improved and the prisoners would become better citizens if they could be given instruction in the fundamentals of learning while they are in prison. He is hoping that some plan can be worked out in the near future by which some systematic instruction may be given to at least the more illiterate prisoners in the state prison system.

"Most of the larger states have compulsory prison school systems and find that these schools help greatly both in raising morale and in fitting the prisoners to return to society," Pitts said. "But most of these states also have almost unlimited funds with which to do this work. Our trouble here in North Carolina is that our funds are limited and so far we have not been able to set up an educational system within the prison because of lack of funds."

"Some of the other prison systems which likewise have limited funds for prison expansion have worked out plans in which they use their better educated prisoners as teachers, and are finding this plan quite satisfactory. As a result, we are going to try to work out a plan under which we can use our better educated prisoners as instructors."

"We are convinced, however, that there should be a responsible head of this prison school work who should be an employee of the state prison division and be under the general control of the prison administration. We do not think it advisable to have any more relief teachers or any outsiders attempting to carry on any educational work, since it is necessary for those in this work to have an understanding of prison conditions and the psychology of the prisoners."

LICENSE LAW IS EXPLAINED

Captain Farmer Says He Will Enforce Provisions

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Nov. 4.—The new drivers' license law, which went into effect November 1, is now being enforced and will continue to be from now on in cases of accidents or other violations which make mandatory either the suspension or revocation of drivers' permits, Captain Charles D. Farmer of the State Highway Patrol said today.

"While drivers will not be arrested for not having their licenses in their possession if they have already made application for them until after November 15 or until all the licenses have been mailed out, those drivers arrested for serious violations will have their licenses suspended, whether they have them in their possession or not."

"We are not going to bother the drivers who drive safely and legally until the driving permits have been sent to all those who have applied for them," Captain Farmer said. "But if a driver is arrested for a serious violation, such as manslaughter resulting from negligent driving, or for driving while drunk or under the effect of narcotics, for failure to stop and render aid in the case of an accident to another car, or for a felony in the commission of which an automobile was used, his driver's license will be immediately suspended. And if he is convicted, his license will be revoked for a period of from six months to a year. If he does not have his license in his possession, it will be withheld."

"If a driver is involved in an accident resulting in the death, serious injury of a person, or serious property damage in which the driver or was obviously to blame, his license can be immediately suspended and will be, regardless of whether he has his permit actually in his possession or not. If he has not yet applied for it, an additional penalty will be imposed."

"So every person who drives a car, whether he has already received his driving permit or not, should be more careful than ever, now that this new law is in effect," Captain Farmer said.

HIGH COURAGE
by Jeanne Bowman

SYNOPSIS: Anne Farnsworth has learned that her former fiance, Luke Crocker, is cheating the Farnsworth Fisheries of which he is general manager, by surreptitiously carrying three of the fish traps old Luke Farnsworth had deeded Anne has, apparently, been left out of Luke's will; she finds also she is not even his adopted daughter. Her "relatives" have turned her out, and she is living on a small allowance among the disgruntled Finnish fishermen who save the Farnsworth Canneries.

Chapter 27
FIRST STEP

Anne thought of her foster uncle, Luke Farnsworth. She went back in memory to her earliest recognition of him as part of her world. She had never known him to do an unfair, unjust act. She had never known him to be unkind. His only fault had been his good-natured, easy going disposition.

But he had stood by her that one time. He had defied Charlotte, at what must have been considerable cost to his peace of mind. Perhaps if he realized what was going on he would fight to see that Luke's wishes were carried out.

"How can I reach him, without revealing my whereabouts," she pondered. "I don't want to risk seeing him, though I would if it were necessary."

And then she decided she could write to Judge Kellogg, who, having read the will, could approach him on the ground of the canneries' failure to obey the terms. It would save her writing direct, for she wasn't sure the letter wouldn't be waylaid so she would never receive it.

Satisfied with her decision, she looked up. John was standing near, watching her. "Feel better?" he asked.

Anne nodded and just then a call came from George. It was time to haul in the catch and John sprang into action. Even Milna, who had been curled up on the galley bench asleep, stood by.

Anne watched entranced as the net was hauled in, the steady glare of the boat's searchlight playing on the fish as they came flipping over the side. A giant chinook flopped out of the net and Orvi uttered a cry of triumph. A good omen for the boat, it was all of thirty pounds.

George tossed a flat flounder back into the water. "Plap!" it went and Anne laughed as she imagined it cutting the lower waters like a blade in its rush to reach the shadowy security of the bottom. There was a sturgeon, too, to be taken home and baked by Tecla.

It was a good haul; a good omen. Satisfied, she put back to town, nosed into a wharf from where Anne, huddled in John's coat, could see the Farnsworth Fisheries, the silver letters of the sign gleaming out beneath the wharf lights.

She thought of another time when she had looked up at the long green buildings. So much had happened in the short span of time between; so many things which Luke had given the best of his life to perfect were being undone. And she was helpless to interfere, her hands literally tied by the will Luke had left.

And yet, Anne felt that there was something yet to come, some crisis for her to meet. Standing in the prow of the boat, her face lifted to the cool, night wind, she wondered if she would have the courage, the high courage, to meet it.

THAT night she lay in her narrow bed and thought of the things John had told her. Somehow she could not doubt him. It clarified the mystery of Luke's actions, it explained Rob's reaction to her loss of the estate.

And she thought of John's concern over some possible danger to her. Foolish that, but pleasing. He had asked her to trust him. She did, though she wondered how she could trust anyone after the way her implicit faith in Rob had been shattered.

Anne awakened the next morning with the realization that she had been at the Sorkis an entire week, and that she was that morning to unpack the things sent down from Portland.

After hurrying through breakfast and the housework, she and Milna rushed up to the cottage where John had left the boxes, barrels and trunks, opened and ready for them. Anne had one moment of panic as she saw the crowded room and realized that here were things which would definitely tie her to memories of the past.

There was the great cedar chest with its neatly packed boxes of linen to Paris, which is secretly friendly to Italy, but was overriden.

The Commission's decision was doubtful until Great Britain preferred Baron Alois, Italy's spokesman at Geneva, submitting his country's case against Ethiopia to the United States. The incident emphasized radio's importance in times of crisis. Besides giving France an ear-connection with America the Commission has ordered an investigation of British censorship of Baron Alois.

est and sympathetic" in its administration of New Deal measures. That was a gesture of appreciation for a miraculously by the Commission—the miracle of convincing investment bankers that they really could carry on legitimate business under the law.

Still more surprising, the Association's committee on public service securities turned in a report which—while it vigorously condemned the holding company law as unfair and destructive—went so far as to intimate that regulation of utilities might properly fall within the federal government's sphere if it were founded on fair and intelligent legislation. Insiders say this radical departure from IBA tradition traces to a gradual growth of conviction that some sort of utility control from Washington is inevitable—so the smart thing for conservatives to do is to recognize its inevitability and try to steer it into constructive channels.

BALANCE: Financial sharps see signs of a new Treasury policy towards international currency problems. They claim that the administration evidently intends to help defend the gold bloc against depreciation of the pound sterling. We have in a sense identified our international monetary interests with those of France.

This tends to achieve our object of de facto stabilization—since forthright stabilization is out of the question at present. The pound is the only major currency now susceptible to wide fluctuations. With the British working to keep it from rising and ourselves and the French working to keep it from falling it is likely to stay pretty much in balance with other moneys.

ROY C. FLANAGAN

The large attendance at the funeral of Mayor Roy C. Flanagan and the tremendous floral tribute bespoke the love and esteem in which he was held and we will not attempt to write an additional tribute to him, for tributes could be written and then the words would be sufficient to pay a proper tribute to Greenville's deceased mayor and prominent citizen. On every hand there have been expressions of regret at the great loss this community has suffered the death of Mayor Flanagan.

We reprint below one tribute to Mr. Flanagan we have received from a party living in another county as being typical of the many tributes that have been paid him. This tribute was received from A. C. Owens, Wilson:

I saw Lee, yesterday. Had a time seeing him because Farley found out, by some hook or crook, that I was in the outer office and insisted upon attending to Lee's business for him. Farley looks pretty displeased. He needs a Luke to keep him straight.

However, eventually I bearded the lion in his den; not the lion, he was like a lamb. Poor Lee, his complaint and grievance committee will exonerate the legal critics at the hearing scheduled for November 17 in Columbus, Ohio.

For a while administration lawyers toyed with the idea of hauling the 58 before the bar themselves. But they abandoned the scheme for fear it would result in a clean bill of health for the lawyers and a black eye for the administration. Now they are wondering whether they should send representatives to denounce the unofficial jury as in "contempt of the Supreme Court."

Anti-New Deal lawyers are beginning to regret their zeal in rushing into court against the administration. They are afraid they may have overplayed their hand. It is understood the public utilities will drop their Baltimore attack on the holding company act, if possible, and advance another act.

In the Baltimore case "Tommy" Corcoran and Judge Burns of the Securities Exchange Commission pictured John W. Davis and his clients as "ambulance chasing lawyers." They will repeat these arguments if the case reaches the Supreme Court and they may smear certain reputations.

DIVISION: The two Harrys—Morgenthau and Hopkins—are staging a silent battle behind the budgetary scenes over federal spending. It looks as if the Secretary of the Treasury will win.

Although sympathetic to almost all Rooseveltian experiments Mr. Morgenthau takes the financier's viewpoint. He favors a sharp cut in federal expenditures for the '37 fiscal year, and believes that economic conditions justify a real reduction. As federal almoner Mr. Hopkins feels that he should have sufficient funds to care for the need. It is a conflict between Tax Collector Morgenthau and Money Spender Hopkins.

Mr. Morgenthau seems to have won the first round. He allowed it to leak out that ordinary budget expenditures would remain fairly stationary, and that increases would result from the cost of emergency activities. That puts it right up to Hopkins et al to justify their requests for more money.

PLEASURE: Herbert Hoover rarely contributes any gaiety of spirit when he meets with colleagues on the board of the New York Life Insurance Company. He sits with his chin in his palm, silent, glum, expressionless.

But at a recent meeting an insurance associate named A. Fred Emanuel Smith brought job to Mr. Hoover's face and heart. "Well, Mister Hoover," rasped his 1924 opponent, "I see that our friend, Frank has just stepped into another tub of mud." Al referred to a Rooseveltian move which seemed at the moment to be a blunder.

The former President's lips expanded into a full sized grin. A light leaped into his eyes. He actually chuckled. Then the meeting was called to order.

SETTLEMENT: New Yorkers in close touch with London say that British policy in recent weeks has been guided to a surprising degree by England's interpretation of the American attitude toward war developments. British belligerence informed sources look for no material change in the international situation until after the British election on November 14. They prophesy that on that date the "save-the-Empire" slogan will save the Conservative Party. Thereafter they expect a speedy settlement of African controversies among Britain, France and Italy (Ethiopia present but not voting). Italy will certainly get territory and probably credit. England will get safeguards in Egypt and the Mediterranean. Haile Selassie will get a kick in the slats from his British pal and protector if he tries to balk.

IDEAL: The Securities Exchange Commission's summons to Wall Streeter Mike Meehan to appear for a hearing on his alleged manipulation of Bellanca stock may wind up in a test of the Commission's constitutionality. Mike is said to be thinking of just not showing up—the ground that the Commission lacks legal jurisdiction. That would throw the whole thing into the lap of the courts.

Wall Street opinion has been divided all along as to the advisability of forcing a legal showdown on the Commission's authority. The heads of the New York Stock and Curb Exchanges have been officially opposed to a gesture that could only be interpreted as hostile.

But plenty of conservative financial men disagree and in theory would be glad of a test. The only hitch is they would rather have someone else besides Meehan in their corner. His reputation as a speculator is not asset from the public relations standpoint. On the other hand, you hear it said that in one sense Meehan is an ideal laboratory specimen. He certainly belongs to the professional crowd whose past activities spurred the public demand for Exchange regulation. "If he isn't to be regulated—who is?"

CONSTRUCTIVE: The recent Investment Bankers Association convention was a sounding board—as you might expect—for conservative pleas in favor of economy, a balanced budget and less regimentation. But it also offered a couple of significance sops to the New Deal Cerberus.

It tossed bouquets at the Securities Exchange Commission—which was characterized as "sincere, honconsider it one of the greatest privileges of my life to have known one of the noblest characters that has lived in our day. From the time I first knew him until this hour, I loved and thought of him as being blessed with the characteristics of the essential elements of an ideal Christian gentleman. I can sincerely say that I have never known a sweeter or a more lovable man than he. While I have never had the opportunity of living in his own home, I have, however, kept in close touch with him and all his good friends. How can any man stand for other ideals than that of Christlike character? He knew so well how to entertain strangers and make them feel only love him, but the good city which he lived.

Probably no man was ever so deeply enamored in the hearts of the ones who knew him as R. C. Flanagan. Nor was it a mistaken confidence and love. He deserved it. He deserved it by his character, the tenor, tone, and spirit of his life. He was just, benevolent, simple, sincere, plain, honest, truthful, and kind. His perceptions were quick and clear, his judgments calm and accurate, purposes good and beyond all question. Always kind everywhere, he aimed both to be right and to do right. His integrity was all-prevailing, all-controlling, and incorruptible. As the chief magistrate of his city, he rose to the dignity and momentousness of the occasion. He saw his duty, and he determined to do his whole duty, seeking the guidance and blessing upon the arm of Him who is written: "He giveth power to the faint, and to them that have no might, he increaseth their strength."

God raised him up for a great and glorious mission. He furnished him for his work, and aided him in its accomplishment. He gave him strength of mind, honesty of heart, and purity and pertinacity of purpose. In addition to these He gave him also a calm and abiding confidence in an overruling Providence, and in the ultimate triumph of both and righteousness through the power and blessings of God.

As a citizen, his place will be hard to fill.

We shall not think of him as dead. He is only sleeping as a rest from his day's work.

I pause in silent prayer, that somehow the windows of Heaven may stand ajar and that Mrs. Flanagan and the entire family may be allowed to look through the dark clouds and catch a glimpse of the happy home where our friend is now resting—my heart goes out in sympathy to each of you.

Jimmy Walker, Master Showman, Comes Home To Find "Big Top" Housing A Different Circus

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK (AP)—Jimmy Walker, erstwhile ringmaster of New York's political circus, returns from his three year period of voluntary exile to find a different New York. Jimmy's personal version of "Return of the Native" is being played under the "big top" that once was his, but it is now so changed that he scarcely can recognize it.

In the star's dressing-room, where Jimmy's own spaniels hung, is Fiorenzo LaGuardia, whom Jimmy defeated in 1929 by 497,165 votes. Al Smith, always his idol, is no longer actively in politics. John F. Curry, Tammany Boss, has been stripped of power. Grover Whalen, Jimmy's pal and favorite "Front Man," is pursuing private enterprises. And Hector Fuller, scroll writer, is dead, a suicide.

He returns, now that the government is no longer interested in what (as mayor) he did with his private income, to take up the private practice of law which politics interrupted 25 years ago. In 1910, when the 29-year-old son of a Tammany district leader was elected to the assembly. Two years later he was married to Janet Allen and at the ceremony was the first witness of Jimmy's chronic tardiness which was to help make him famous as "The Late Mayor Walker." Jimmy arrived for the wedding an hour late.

The Walker Wit

Three years after this the young Irishman from Greenwich village was elected to the senate, and then one day he turned to a newspaperman and flipped:

"If you've got cracked lips don't listen. They tell me I'm going to be the next mayor." Three years later he was.

Startlingly boyish in appearance his quick wit and sympathetic appeal quickly earned him the plaudits of people everywhere. He was, politically, what betting men call a "natural," a smart showman whose urbane manner and innate cheerfulness helped him to become a vote-getting sensation.

An example of Jimmy's characteristic self is the occasion of his address to a group of British advertising men. "The Prince of Wales may be your Prince," cried Jimmy, "but he's our pal." This remark, it is alleged, caused Albert H. Wiggin, then head of the Board of the Chase National Bank, to observe: "As mayor, Jimmy is worth $1,000,000 a year to New York City."

A Storm Broke

At the height of his power, James Walker was probably the most popular public official in America. Loyalty sought him as a companion; five major powers conferred citations upon him. Abroad, as at home, his official and social enterprises were attended by the glamor and excitement of a really important first night. The most casual announcement that Jimmy would appear here or there was sufficient to bring out, like butterflies emerging from their cocoons, a grand parade of "big names."

Few public officials ever enjoyed such popularity as Jimmy Walker during his years as Mayor of New York. That much of that popularity continues in certain circles is indicated by the shouts being raised along Broadway and in some political quarters over his homecoming. In the center is Jimmy as New York knew him at the top of that popularity.

At left, he is seen on his fiftieth birthday in 1931, laying the cornerstone of the Queens General City hospital. At right above he is seen inaugurating the 1929 baseball season at the Polo grounds opener between Philadelphia and the Giants. Below is a recent picture of Walker and Mrs. Walker, the former actress, Betty Compton, whom he married in Europe.

The legislative storm that finally forced Walker to abdicate got under way in 1931. A committee made a thorough investigation of all contracts issued by the Walker administration. The blow-up, however, left Walker's name unmentioned until, months later, it was charged the mayor had earned a huge profit from an oil venture in which he had invested nothing.

Samuel Seabury, handling the investigation, then brought out huge sums involving a partnership between Jimmy and Paul Block, the newspaper publisher. A campaign to secure Walker's removal was set in motion, and he was hailed before Governor Roosevelt at Albany.

Married Betty Compton

Charging "biased and unfair" tactics, Jimmy, in ill health, resigned from office and left almost immediately for Europe. Shortly afterward the first Mrs. Walker won a divorce and Jimmy quietly married Betty Compton, stage star who, with her mother, had accompanied him abroad.

The succeeding two years Jimmy spent in England, writing columns for London newspapers, entertaining guests from America, and working, it is said, on the biography which he brought with him out of exile.

NO OPPONENT IS DESIRED

Pressure Brought To Prevent Erwin Opposition

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Nov. 4.—Strong pressure is being brought to bear by the North Carolina Education Association and friends of State Superintendent A. Erwin to prevent any candidate from running against Erwin for the nomination in the Democratic primary next June, it was learned here today.

As a result, some of those who so far have been confident that Erwin would have opposition in the primary are now beginning to doubt if this opposition will materialize. Despite the admitted fact that a large number of teachers have been and still are very much opposed to Erwin.

There are still several prospective candidates against Erwin being mentioned, among them being Superintendent R. W. Carver of the Hickory Public Schools, who was mentioned as a possible candidate for the post several years ago and considered one of the ablest school men in the state; Superintendent Guy B. Phillips of the Greensboro city schools and at present president of the North Carolina Education Association; Frank A. Edmondson, county superintendent in Beaufort county and former county superintendent in Mecklenburg, and several others. Of these, indications are that those opposed to Erwin have been centering on Guy Phillips and it is known that some very strong pressure has been brought to bear on him to make the race.

Most of the officers and more influential figures in the North Carolina Education Association, however, are Erwin backers—he is a past president of the association—and these are known to be trying to persuade Phillips and the other potential candidates not to run. It is being pointed out by the Erwin supporters that since most of the Superintendents are going to back Erwin, most of the teachers will hence be forced to support him or else run the risk of not being re-elected next year, since it is conceded that the failure of any superintendent to recommend a teacher for reelection to his faculty usually means that she loses her job. But the opponents of Erwin maintain this is not the case and that many superintendents and thousands of teachers will not vote for him if he has opposition.

LIQUOR DECISION RULING HAS VERY LITTLE EFFECT

(Continued from page one) sired by most of the Democratic leaders, especially on the eve of a primary—is now being conceded. If the Supreme Court had held the county liquor control laws constitutional, there would at once have been a very strong demand from the 50 or so counties which now would like to have legal liquor and county or state liquor stores, for a special session to enact either a state-wide liquor law or additional county liquor laws, it is agreed. But since the Supreme Court refused to pass upon the constitutionality of the present county liquor laws in effect in 17 counties and left the door open for a new attack on their constitutionality, the demand for a special session is not expected to be very great. For the legislature, if called back, would still not know what kind of a liquor control law it could pass that would be constitutional.

As a result, it is now expected that the state will continue to rock along with 7 legally wet counties in which liquor will continue to be legally sold in county liquor stores until Franklin county becomes the 18th, while the other 82 counties continue to be illegally wet under the "North Carolina Plan," the name given the wide-open bootleg system in effect in most of the "dry" counties.

Upward Trend In 1936 Farm Income Predicted By U. S.

Agricultural Department in Annual Report Says Present Increase to Continue

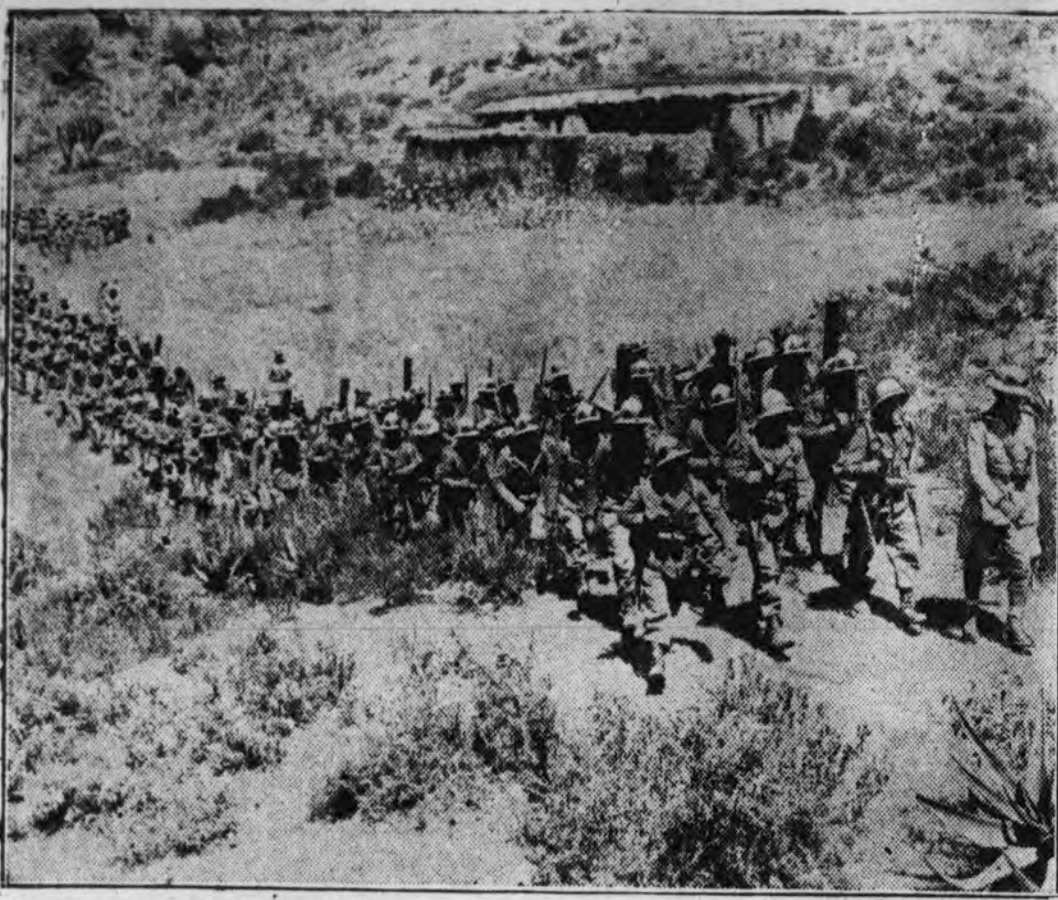

Washington, Nov. 4.—(AP)—The Agricultural Department predicted today that the present "upward trend" in farm income will continue in 1936.

"The demand for farm products in 1936" the department said in its annual outlook report "is likely to be greater than in 1935. Consumer buying power in the United States is likely to be increased in 1936; buying power of consumers in many foreign countries also is likely to increase."

The report was prepared by the bureau of agricultural economics after a week of conferences by field representatives from all parts of the country, in prospect for more than 50 farm products.

Cheap Baths For Japan's Taxpayers.—(AP)—Barbers and bathhouse keepers cut their rates in half when the Japanese navy put into Tokyo Bay recently at the conclusion of two and a half months of maneuvers in the northwest Pacific. Some 40,000 bluejackets came ashore.

ITALIAN TROOPS PUSH DEEP INTO ETHIOPIA

While Italy's envoys talked peace at Geneva, her soldiers fought their way further toward the heart of Ethiopia in their war to wrest a vast empire from primitive black men. This picture, made at the front by Joseph Caneva, Associated Press Staff photographer from New York, shows a long column of Italian infantrymen marching over rough country to help fortify newly won territory between Adigrat and Makale.—(Associated Press Photo).

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 4.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened barely steady one higher to one lower, with steady Liverpool cables offset by absence of predicted frost in western belt. The market at the end of first hour was quiet and about net unchanged on winter and spring positions, while July and October were a point or two below Saturday's quotations.

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Nov. 4.—(AP)—With demand for scattered steels, rails, oils, mines and specialties kept today's market generally pointed upward despite profit taking in some leaders.

The motors backfired from the start and a few utilities and "blue chips" staged a more or less orderly retreat, the new picture was little changed. The hesitancy of various issues was attributed to technical factors.

The market turned dull and developed a slightly irregular trend. Shares approximated 1,650,000.
