BOTH PARTIES CONTEND WINS IN ELECTIONS

G. O. P. Wins Majority in New York State Assembly

DEMOCRATS POLL POPULAR VOTES

Farley Claims Results of Elections Victory For New Deal Government

(By The Associated Press)
While Kentucky votes were being counted both Democrats and Republican leaders expressed satisfaction with the outcome of yesterday's election in other states. Republicans hailed the election of a Republican majority to the New York state assembly as a good omen for 1936, but the Democrats said the New Deal had been vindicated by a 500,000 majority in popular votes.

Similar conflicting claims came from New Jersey, where the Republican control of the state assembly was increased, but the Democrats ran up a record majority of 137,000 for assembly candidates in Hudson county.

Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee, hailed the GOP majority as "the forerunner of what will happen next year."

"The boon-doggers, are on their way out," Fletcher said in a formal statement. "The Republican party is on its way back to power. New York, Philadelphia and Cleveland tell the story and point the way."

But in New York, James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee, defended the balloting in the state as a victory for the new deal.

"Federal administration was sustained by more than 500,000 majority which ought to be sufficient answer to the question to the continued popularity of Franklin D. Roosevelt," he said.

The outcome of Kentucky's hot gubernatorial contest depended upon the counting of the ballots today, but almost complete returns left little doubt about the outcome in other states.

Republicans elected 87 out of the 157 New York assemblymen; the Democrats won the two contests for the national house of representatives and Governor Lehman's $55,000,000 state relief bond issue was overwhelmingly approved.

Republicans also elected mayors in Philadelphia and Cleveland, but Democrats won in Hartford and New Haven, Conn.

Student Aid Fund Explanation Made Program Director

The confusion which has attended the administration of student aid funds to students in institutions below college level in this state may now be cleared by the following information according to a statement today by C. E. McIntosh.

In the first announcement of this "below college" aid program, that is the program of aid to students between 16-25 years of age in high schools or graded schools, the following regulation was in force.

The youth must have been a member of a family on relief in May, and the family must be on relief now.

This regulation was subsequently modified so that youths in families coming on relief since May could also receive aid.

A third supplementary regulation is that any needy and worthy youth may be recommended for aid by school officials, provided that those in the first and second group have received prior consideration.

It is now possible, therefore, for youths to receive aid in the following groups:

1. The first group eligible for application must belong to families on relief in May.

2. The second group need not have been on relief in May, but must be on relief at the time of application.

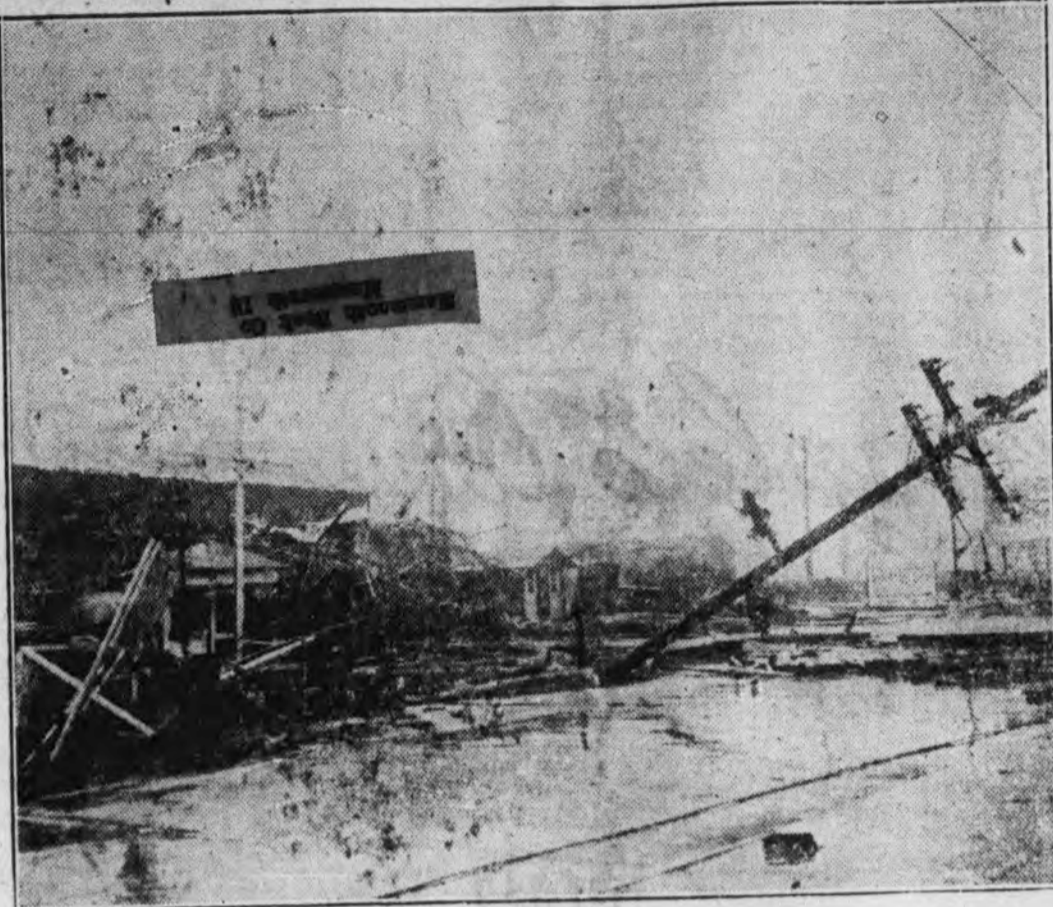

When applications from the above groups have been met, then any needy youth may apply.

"It is hoped," concluded Director McIntosh, "that this broadened scope will allow any needy youth to receive aid. A city or county unit which has not awarded these scholarships by the end of the second payroll period will be deprived of the unassigned portion of Federal funds. If a county or city unit cannot use these funds, the scholarships should be transferred where they are needed."

Florida Again Braces Self For A Second Hurricane

Seven Deaths Left By Heavy Storm Monday

WEATHER MAN WARNS SHIPPING

"Fairly Certain" That Storm Will Pass Over Florida Again Within 24 Hours

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 6.—(AP)—Floridians braced today for a return visit of a freak hurricane which left more than $2,000,000 damages and seven deaths from the Miami area to Cape Sable Monday.

The storm hammered 25 miles out into the Gulf of Mexico, then slowed down and began to curve northward.

The New Orleans weather bureau issued the following storm warning at 2 a. m.:

"Advisory: Storm disturbance central about 250 miles west, northwest of Key West, Florida, apparently moving northwestward about 10 miles per hour, attended by dangerous gales and winds of hurricane force over small area near center. Caution advised vessels in Northwest and Northcentral Gulf of Mexico. Small craft from Louisiana coast to Cedar Keys, Fla., should not venture far into the Gulf."

Grady Norton, Jacksonville weather bureau meteorologist, said it was "fairly certain" the disturbance will pass over Florida again within 24 hours, this time somewhere north of Tampa.

He expected it to gain slightly in intensity of a northeastward course the "proper" direction for the average hurricane.

The storm howled in from the Atlantic Monday, swept past Miami and into the everglades, leaving a trail of sunken boats, smashed homes and uprooted crops.

VANDENBURG URGES PLANK

Michigan Republican Favors "Lincoln Liberalism"

Chicago, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Sen. A. M. Vandenberg of Michigan, today urged the application of a "Lincoln Liberalism" platform for the 1936 Republican campaign.

The senator, frequently mentioned as a presidential candidate, in an address for delivery before the Hamilton club of Chicago said the Republicans could win in 1936 if they were ready with "affirmative plans" for the nation's troubles.

"We must—and shall—produce a definite and specific program out of next June's Republican convention. I venture to believe that when the time comes the Republicans will speak plainly, constructively, progressively and victoriously."

An attack on everything that the Republican administration has done will not succeed, the senator warned, adding that Republican votes "including my own have supported some of the new deal legislation."

News Behind The News

Washington

By RAY TUCKER

BATTLE: Washington hears the public utility generalizations as squabbling among themselves in inner councils. As the hour for regulation of holding companies approaches they haven't decided whether to comply or hold out.

The topnotchers recently held a staff conference to discuss policies. The so-called progressives, represented by Wendell Wilkie of Commonwealth and Southern and Henry I. Harriman of the New England pool, urged cooperation in an attempt to make the law work.

The U. G. I. crowd of Philadelphia insisted on no compromise or quarter. Their spokesmen were Robert McCarter of New Jersey, Philip H. Gadsden and John E. Zimmerman.

G. I. president

John W. Davis, legal spearhead of the anti-New Deal maneuver, led with the U. G. I.-ers. He advocated against registration because it might strengthen their case in court. For the present the "Old Guard" seems to be running the show. But there is no assurance the industry will stage a mass onslaught when December 1 rolls around. The penalties for non-registration are (pretty stiff) and they will be applied.

POLICE SEEK TWO NEGROES

Brothers Sought On Charge Of Robbing Carrier Boys

Greenville officers said today that they had not been able to apprehend two negroes in their teens, Harrison Atkinson and John Atkinson, brothers, who, police say, have been robbing newspaper carrier boys for some time.

The identity of the pair was definitely established only last Saturday. The two accused Spencer Carroll, II, pulled his sweater over his head so he could not see them and robbed the youngster of about 70 cents of his collections for papers. Spencer said he did not have much money in his pockets at the time as he had recently been by his home and left most of it.

A colored man by the name of Harrison Sumrell happened along as the boys were in the act of robbing the carrier boy and rescued young Carroll, but only after he had received several scratches and bruises. The negro man then went with the boy to telephone officers.

Sumrell said he knew the negro boys and gave their names to officers.

As the Sumrell was leaving after aiding young Carroll in notifying police he was struck by the two negro boys. In addition to charges of stealing money, the pair, consequently will face charges of assault.

Definite Progress Made In Bargain Over Fleet In Mediterranean Area

LEAF AVERAGE CONTINUES UP

Official Average For Season Shows Daily Increase Here

With over 2,000,000 pounds of tobacco already sold on the Greenville market this year, offerings are failing to show any appreciable let up, sales yesterday totalling 1,019,516 pounds.

The official average for Tuesday's sales was $22.45 per hundredweight. Farmers received a total of $228,850.72 for their weed.

Figures for the season show that 52,557,796 pounds have been sold for an average of $21.38. For the entire season farmers have been paid a total of $1,127,110.37.

Daily sales on the market are increasing the season's average, average prices at the close of business yesterday surpassing those of Monday by a few cents.

Although the government made the statement after the season opened that parity was less than the 21 cent price the farmers had considered parity, the average for the season has surpassed that mark and is being increased daily.

Ten Italians and two Ethiopians were killed the communique said. Four Italians were taken prisoners, it added.

Il Duce Uneasy Over British Ships In Waters

ITALY PROMISES WITHDRAW MEN

Mussolini Agrees To Remove His Troops From Libya, Bordering Egypt

Paris, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The Mediterranean problem was reported in diplomatic circles today to be "settled," leaving Premier Laval a freed hand to discuss the settlement of the Italian-Ethiopian war with Rome and London.

It was stated in League circles that the British are expected to take some of the warships out of the Mediterranean in exchange for further withdrawals of Italian troops from Libya, but no announcement is expected until after the British election, November 14.

(By Associated Press)

Mussolini, uneasy over the vast British fleet in the Mediterranean bargained for its reduction with London today.

Definite progress was being made, informed persons said, toward allaying the tense situation between Italy and England—a situation marked by frequent anti-British demonstrations in the fascist nation.

If an agreement is reached between the two powers it would probably be on this basis:

Il Duce would withdraw the bulk of his fascist legion from Libya, his province bordering Egypt on the west. In return Great Britain would reduce its Mediterranean fleet to a point more approximating normal strength.

In Paris informed circles said Mussolini went further than promising heavy withdrawals from Libya. That he promised England its interests in Emedera—the "lifeline of the empire"—would be respected.

Premier Pierre Laval resumed his diplomatic conversations seeking a means of settling the East African crisis on a basis satisfactory to both the League and Ethiopia.

He conferred with the British and Italian ambassadors.

Glass And Eccles Breach Appears To Be Widening

(Special To The Reflector) By RAY TUCKER

Washington, Nov. 6.—President Roosevelt's tentative plan to appoint Marriner S. Eccles as chairman of the reorganized Federal Reserve Board forebodes immediate renewal of the conflict between this aggressive New Deal banker and the acknowledged "father of the Reserve System"—Senator Carter T. Glass of Virginia. The prime minister of finance on Capitol Hill may unleash a surprise attack when he delivers the principal address before the national convention of the American Bankers Association.

The Old Dominion statesman detects many recent governmental reforms, but his special abhorrence happens to be the young, western financier's conception of the function of the federal banking system. Although the controversy swirls around technical problems of personnel and authority of the Reserve Board, it actually deals with the basic structure and purpose of the national banking system. It hinges on questions more fundamental than those raised by many other Rooseveltian experiments, for men and governments live by banks as well as bread. It involves money—its nature, its backing, its amount, its use, its availability. Now, as always, money is as basic a problem as hunger.

In an exclusive interview with the writer, Mr. Glass emphasized in his peculiarly picturesque style that the differences between himself and the President's choice for head of the far-flung Reserve System are irreconcilable.

In setting forth his views of the place which the Federal Reserve System should occupy, and in combating contrary theories, Mr. Glass repudiated many notions which have been current for years. He branded as "damn nonsense" the much-publicized contention that open market operations serve to widen or narrow the channels of credit—to make money plentiful and cheaper. He explained why, in his opinion, credit rates and supply should be determined solely by the needs of business and not by the theories of "planners at Washington." He emphasized the necessity for a sectional rather than a national banking system in so far as operation is concerned. In short, he hacked at many myths which have dominated popular and political thinking on the Reserve System's functions and responsibilities.

Mr. Eccles, on the other hand, seems to believe that changing conditions necessitate lodging complete banking control in the central board at Washington. He maintains that this federal agency should enjoy sufficient supervision of banking resources—through control of open market operations, reserves and discount rates—to determine the flow and cost of money at any given time or place. He would utilize these powers to reinforce economic planning.

The Senator contends that the Reserve System was designed to respond automatically to the needs of industry, commerce and agriculture and that it will fulfill this function if properly administered. In his opinion, vesting too much power in the Reserve Board will break down this delicate arrangement. Worse still, he thinks it will inevitably subject to political perversion and domination. "The Reserve System can serve no higher, or nobler purpose, than to guarantee the free supply and flow of credit whenever and wherever commercial activity opens the sluiceways."

"I tell you," he proclaimed during his exposition of the System's purpose and place in the banking structure, "that the real motive behind these proposals for centralized control is sinister. They are intended to make it easier to finance our huge federal deficit. And what the people don't realize is that the deficit is actually nearer $50,000,000,000 than $30,000,000,000. The government's guarantee of numerous federal agencies' securities brings it to the higher figure."

The Senator believes that the Reserve System as originally designed provided an almost perfect mechanism for financing the honest, everyday needs of business, industry, agriculture, although he concedes grudgingly that it is not "foolproof." Indeed, he declared that the only amendment really needed since establishment of the Reserve System in 1913 was that which divorced commercial banks and their investment affiliates. All the rest he grows, was "just tinkering and dangerous tinkering, too."

"It was always intended," he says, "that the Reserve System should operate on a regional instead of a national basis. The Board was supposed to serve only as a central and supervisory body. Its members were to act as overseers to see that banks obeyed the laws to impose penalties if they did not, and to collect fees for their services. They were not expected to have any direct influence on the banks, which were not obliged to have any contact with the Board or Reserve Banks except when they found it necessary to borrow from the reserves."

"So it is silly to talk of giving the Board the authority to fix uniform discount rates, as Mr. Eccles did. The forty-eight states have different laws on discount rates, ranging from 5 to 12 per cent. The idea of establishing a uniform rate in a dual banking system—with three times as many states as there are national banks—is preposterous. That was the worst vice of the old ing machinery that are placed in Washington's, the center. "The Reserve System," he continued, "was established to provide control of credit by the bankers and by the government. During the Fugate investigation Senator Glass brought out the names of men—the elder Morgan, the elder Baker and others—who controlled the country's credit as they pleased. Banks tried to ship their surplus funds to New York, where they were used chiefly for speculative purposes. They were picked up and needed credit to carry on their operations, the forwarding banks could not get their money back. We got out to clear this evil and we did. But in removing New York's heavy hand from the credit levers, we certainly did not mean to substitute Washington's. "As to directing the flow of credit which would have been accomplished under another Eccles proposal, that is damnable. It would have meant that the government could have destroyed any business which it held to be inefficient or not worthy of survival. For instance, if there were three newspapers in a certain city, and only one was making money, the Reserve Board could have required that credit be extended only to the successful concern. We threw that out without even reading it."

Mr. Glass assailed the orthodox belief that operations of the open market committee constitute the cornerstone of the Reserve System. In almost all public thinking, and certainly in all Congressional debates, this body has been described as the supreme arbiter of credit, as the agency which can decide whether the money shall be loose or tight. Whether New Dealers or bankers should dominate its councils was perhaps the most provocative issue in the discussion of the 1935 banking bill. Mr. Glass held out for and obtained banker-representation and full publicity for purchases of federal securities, largely because he feared that it might be used as a medium to choke Reserve Bank portfolios with "governments."

Therefore his explanation of its original purpose is amazing: "The open market committee cannot affect the supply of credit and it was never intended to. Recent experience has demonstrated that credit facilities cannot be determined by the amount of bonds which the committee sells or buys. It has bought more than $2,000,000,000 worth in a short period without stimulating a penny of bank loans. "Conditions existing when we framed the Federal Reserve act show that the open market provision was never meant to be an important factor in our banking system. There was then a public debt of slightly over $1,000,000,000, of which nearly $750,000,000 was owned by the banks as a basis of bank note circulation and therefore not held by estates not for sale, the supply of federal securities available for purchase could obviously have little appreciable effect on credit. "This, of course, was before the World War, and we did not expect that we would see any increase in the public debt. In fact, we anticipated that the debt and the national bank circulation would soon be wiped out. We had provided for the substitution of Federal Reserve notes to be issued on the basis of business, industrial and agricultural transactions. The increase or decrease of these new notes was to be automatic, responding to seasonal or cyclical demands. The Reserve System was to be just what the name implies—a vast reservoir of funds which would rise and fall with the economy's demand for them. "The only purpose of the market provision was to enable each Federal Reserve Bank to enforce its discount rate by going into the market and buying or selling securities or paper. It was a psychological threat."

Although Mr. Glass has inspired some people by appearing at different moments in the roles of critic and champion of bankers, he has a definite and simple philosophy of bankers' duties and obligations. It has motivated both his denunciations—and nobody deprecated banker practices more severely than he did during the speculative era—and his defenses.

Ed Stallings At College.
The special incidental music for the program of Cornelia Otis Skinner will be furnished by Ed Stallings, violin teacher of Wilson, and his ensemble composed of two violins, a cello and the piano.

While Miss Skinner is herself the one actress in her plays, she uses as accessories music, costuming and lighting. Her experience as an actress in plays with others gives her that rare power of making pauses which she seems to be listening to others and she makes her audience feel their presence. The music helps create the illusion of the theatre.

Tickets for this event will be on sale each afternoon from two to five-thirty, beginning Saturday and continuing through Wednesday. Special low rates will be given to the Greenville high school students, but tickets must be purchased at the high school. The time and place for the sale of these will be announced.

Another brother, Dr. E. M. Wilson, headmaster of one of the leading private schools of boys near Philadelphia, was unable to be present at the celebration of his mother's birthday because the school was holding a celebration in his honor. First Church of Christ, Scientist.
"Everlasting Punishment" was the subject of the lesson sermon in all churches and societies of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, Nov. 3.

The golden text was from Psalms 51:10. "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson sermon was the following from the Bible: "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels." (Rev. 3:5).

The lesson sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Sorrow for wrong doing is but one step towards reform and the very easiest step. The next and great step required by wisdom is the test of our sincerity—namely, reformation. To this end we are placed under the stress of circumstances. Temptation bids us repeat the offense, and we come in return for what is done. So it will ever be, till we learn that there is no discount in the law of justice and that we must pay 'the uttermost farthing.' The measure ye mete 'shall be measured to you again,' and it will be full 'and running over'."

Notice, Red Men.
On Friday evening, Nov. 8, it is expected that a number of Palefaces will be present and adopted into the Tribe. The Palefaces should be properly impressed and should be given the opportunity to form the acquaintance of every member of the Tribe, so that they may venture on the fraternal road with added zeal and confidence.

We are confident that this friendly appeal will find you sufficiently interested that you will surely be in attendance when you realize how urgently necessary is your presence at the meeting.

head of the extension division of N. C. State College, said today. If a student will follow an outlined plan in this home-study method Ruggles explained, he will be able to continue his education after completing high school and will be able to save approximately one year's time when attending college later.

Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea are featured in "Barbary Coast" at the Pitt today and Thursday.

The cost of the sources is very small per three-hour course. The student is allowed to register for two courses at one time, and is not allowed to finish a course in less than one month.

Over 40 courses covering freshman, sophomore, and higher work are now available and more will be added to the correspondence curriculum as the demand for them increases.

Among the courses which may be taken are many that are required by State College in history, economics, modern languages, sociology, geography, geology, drawing, and field crops.

Information concerning this proposed home-study plan and other courses may be secured from the Extension Division at State College.

SEED COURSE IS PROBABLE

University May Establish Training in Seed Analysts

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel. Raleigh, Nov. 6.—A course of training for seed analysts will probably be established in the University of North Carolina, probably at the State College unit in Raleigh, as the result of a letter written recently by Commissioner of Agriculture William A. Graham, to the University's president, Dr. Frank Porter Graham, at Chapel Hill, it was disclosed today.

Commissioner Graham announced receipt of a letter from Dr. Graham, in which the latter said: "I referred your letter with regard to the seed analyst to Dr. W. C. Coker, head of the Department of Botany. He agrees with you that we should put in a course in seed analysis either at the State College or here. It seems to me that the State College would be the logical place for it. I am going to take this up with the botany people and State College."

THE QUESTION OF TRAFFIC LIGHTS

On several occasions we have mentioned the apparent necessity of some traffic lights in this city and whether or not any definite investigation in this direction has been made by the city authorities we do not know. Of course we have stop corners and other markings on our streets that should be sufficient to cause motorists to exercise caution in their driving about the city, but a great many of them pay little or no attention to these signs. Statistics throughout the country show that motorists of all types pay more attention to traffic lights or officers at intersections, than any other form of traffic signals so it seems to us that our city should begin to take steps to provide the means to make our city streets safer for motorists and pedestrians by either installing traffic lights or placing traffic cops at our busy intersections and then see to it that not only the motorists obey the traffic signals but that pedestrians be made to do likewise and cut out their jay-walking.

A DANGEROUS PASTIME

Taking a chance of going to jail or worse still, getting shot, is certainly a dangerous pastime, and yet that is just what three teen age Greenville boys got into Sunday night with the result that one of them spent the night in jail and the other two did not simply because their pal would not tell on them. The police received a call that somebody was prowling about a residence peeping into windows, and immediately went to the scene. The boys, all said to be members of Greenville's younger set, fled the scene, but one of them was taken by the officers as he returned to get his car. This boy was placed in the city jail for the night but refused to tell the names of his companions in the escapade. The boy arrested was later released after residents of the home where the Peeping Tom act took place failed to present formal charges, but he was warned by the police that any further such escapades would land him and his companions in jail for a much longer term if they were fortunate enough to escape being shot while doing their Peeping Tom act. It is regrettable to learn that some of the local boys have gone in for this low form of amusement, but it is to be hoped that the warning

HIGH COURAGE

by Jeanne Bowman

SYNOPSIS: Anne Farnsworth
now calls herself Nikki Nielsen, for want of a better name. She knows she is not the daughter of the late Luke and Lucinda Farnsworth, and that unless she can learn more of her real and of Luke's intentions, she cannot inherit his large fortune. She is living in the Finnish saloon at Union Town, beloved of her neighbors and deserted by her "relatives" and even by Rob Crocker, her former but John Neuman, with whom she is now in a niche, has proved helpful and kind.

Checked in her flight by a barrier of hazel bushes, she pushed their branches back with her hands and slipped through to a tiny dell, carpeted by short grass and cut through by a small stream which trickled along over moss-grown rocks.

Chapter 28
NEW FUTURE
"TOMORROW I sail," John said at length.

"And how long will you be away?"
Anne asked.

"About three months,"
"That means you'll return early in August?"

"Yes," He was silent a moment, then he turned to Anne and looked at her anxiously. "You'll be careful while I'm away?"

"Careful?" she repeated and laughed. "Goodness, John, you make me think there are goblins 'bout to git me."

"There may be," he retorted
"Things have been quiet lately because there's been no fishing, but did you notice the water as we crossed the channel? The season opens soon and the fish are running in hordes."

He picked up a flat round pebble and skimmed it across the water watching it skip along as though that were the most important thing in life. Anne watched him, not realizing the tenderness in her smile.
She wanted to ruffle the glinting strands of his hair, to smooth the opened collar of his shirt.

"You know you're very precious to me, Nikki," he said as the rock dropped with a plop.

"I... why, thank you."
"Going away I had to tell you. You might not be here when I get back.
You're the one I told you about that day I came back from Crescent City.
I've known it since the first moment
I saw you. I'll never forget that, Nikki, that football game. I was feeling pretty good, had some fine luck on the field that afternoon and folks were treating me grand. I staged it to the dance, just as I always did, because I could never find a girl to suit me."

"DUKE LANSING and I were standing in the door, when you came in. You were looking very serious. I liked that, I was tired of giggles. You came on up the steps, you remember that short flight, and then you smiled at Duke. It was like the sun rising."

"There you were, everything I'd dreamed about in one girl. And Duke knew you. He introduced us, and wangled the dance for me, forced your escort to give it up. I won that dance and those three encores with my touchdown that afternoon. I'd have made a dozen, Nikki, if I'd thought there was such a prize waiting."

"After I'd given you back to that chap who brought you, I sailed over to Duke to ask who you were, where I could meet you. Oh, I remembered your name all right, I just hadn't associated it with the fisheries. But when Lansing said you were Luke Farnsworth's daughter that finished it."

"But why?"
"Nikki, don't you see the difference it made, me a fisherman, and your father the cannery owner? Oh, I know this is America and there is only democracy and the char-woman's daughter marries the merchant prince... in stories."
Anne looked at him in growing wonder. She was the girl who gave life a meaning to him. And she'd never suspected it. But hadn't she?
Hadn't she known that that peculiar magnetic attraction he had for her couldn't have existed unless it was mutual?

"And now?" The words left her lips of their own volition.

"Now?" he looked at her. "Now I'm just where I was when you jumped from the Ah! that day. I couldn't believe my eyes when I saw it was you, and that I'd been privileged to hold you in my arms for that brief moment."
"Then John—"
"I'm still afraid, Nikki. You don't know yet, who you are, Nikki!"
he cried, for Anne had jumped to her feet and after one quick intake of her breath, had fled into the shelter of the woods.

committee's hands, alleges that the yers could not render an unbiased opinion on New Deal laws. Most of them, the accusers point out, had previously accepted huge retainers for having prejudged the New Deal adversely. What many miss is that the game is to discredit, if possible, certain lawyers who will argue against Rooseveltian experiments before the Supreme Court through the winter. Lawyers, as a class, are to be "put on the spot."

DIPLMACY: Benito Mussolini
may wake up some day to discover that his Ethiopian venture has inflicted losses which are now invisible. Uncle Sam has been whittling away quietly at his markets.

Within a few months our reciprocal trade treaty with Sweden has boosted exports of American fruits and vegetables — canned and fresh — to that country. Sweden's purchases here compete directly with Italian products. Meantime Cordell Hull is prodding Paris to close a similar bargain while Mussolini is looking toward Addis Ababa.
France offers another market for our goods that will displace Italian produce. In return, sharp French traders may get larger quotas for wines and liquors that Italy would otherwise sell us.

The sanctions which European nations slap on Italian goods may mean sales for Uncle Sam. That's a form of dollar diplomacy which FDR discussed with friends when he was Governor of New York.

SUSPICIOUS: When the holding company bill was finally enacted last summer most utility leaders privately expected to register with the Securities Exchange Commission when the time came. They figured—from the Commission's attitude then—that they could expect a reasonably broad interpretation of Section Eleven (the death sentence substitute), so why not strin-ge along and see what would happen?
This impression was strengthened at the first session between the Commission and a group of utility chiefs. But in the past month there has been a subtle change in the power people's attitude and it now appears probable that very few of the topflight companies will register.

This change traces to a newly-awakened mistrust of the Commission's intentions — which in turn derives from two recent developments. One is that Commissioner Matthews publicly and Chairman Landis privately have expressed ideas about the interpretation of Section Eleven which virtually kill off hope that any big holding group would be permitted to survive no matter how provably free from abuses. Utility men are a bit puzzled that Landis and Matthews should have sounded off along this line when they are plainly so eager to ring up as many registrations as possible.

The second moth in the molasses is the government's attitude on the Baltimore est suit. All along the Commission has insisted it welcomes a constitutional showdown.
In the Baltimore case it has openly charged collusion between plaintiff and defendant to have the holding company act outlawed and complains it has had no opportunity to defend the law directly. Utility leaders insist this is absolute bunk.
They claim that if the government really wants to stop the alleged collusion and get the kind of test, it says it desires, it can become a party to a suit whenever it cares to on five minutes' notice. Yet it has made no effort to do so—and this makes them suspicious of the Commission's sincerity.

Voters Of Greenville

Our Board of Aldermen has postponed election of a Mayor for a few days. Several persons have been suggested for the office, one of whom is H. H. Duncan, who is now acting as Mayor of our city and who for several years has been Mayor Pro-tem. We believe he has faithfully performed his duties. Now in all fairness don't you believe Duncan should be named Mayor for the remainder of this term that our city may in a measure compensate him for the time has has given the city with practically no pay? See your Alderman and ask him or her to support Duncan.

(This space contributed by the friends of Herman H.
Duncan, who believe that our Aldermen acted wisely when they chose him as Mayor Pro-Tem of the City of Greenville.)

Farm Colonization Plan Movement Gets Underway

Program Would Place 15,000 Families On Farm Land

PROJECT TO BE IN NEW HANOVER

Resettlement Administration Officials Attend Meeting At Goldsboro

He pointed out that there are today scores of happy, prosperous farm families not only making good livings but actually becoming wealthy on farms of only ten acres. Many of these farmers had no money and no previous experience at farming before coming to these farm colonies near Wilmington. One of these farmers is today worth $100,000 or more and others have been making good livings for years.

"What these farmers have done on their 10 acres farms in New Hanover county can also be done by thousands of other farmers who face failure and even starvation on their present farms and under the old methods of farming," MacRae said. "Their only hope of ever attaining economic independence is to leave their present farms, stop trying to grow tobacco and cotton and learn this new type of farming which has made our present farm colonies in New Hanover county such a success. If they try to keep on growing cotton and tobacco and adhere to the old methods of farming they are bound to fail and become more and more of a problem."

The people of Wilmington and New Hanover county are already convinced that such a farm colony as is proposed by MacRae can be made a success in New Hanover county or in almost any county in eastern North Carolina. It was pointed out by State Senator Harris Newman of Wilmington, because they have seen the various colonies started by MacRae over 30 years ago win through to success. But other sections of the state, and especially the Federal government, are still skeptical and must still be convinced that farm colonies of this type are practical and workable. Both Newman and MacRae urged the newspapers to help them convince both other sections of the state and officials in Washington that what they are proposing is something entirely practical and workable and not merely an idyllic dream. MacRae is so certain the plan is workable that he has offered to make the Government a present of the 25,000 acres if the farm colony experiment does not succeed and if the colonists do not find it possible to make good livings and also enough extra to pay for their land.

The Resettlement Administration is now developing an experimental farm colony at Penderlea in this same section, largely through the efforts of Mr. MacRae, but he believes this larger and more ambitious plan, to provide for as many as 15,000 farm families, is needed and should be undertaken at once and that the Federal government can be persuaded to finance it if the powers that be in Washington can only be convinced that such a farm colony can be made to succeed, or that the farmers in it can succeed.

Homer H. B. Mask, regional director of the Resettlement Administration, and James M. Gray, head of the land utilization division of the Resettlement Administration, were present at the meeting and explained what their agency was trying to accomplish. They indicated that MacRae's proposal was directly in line with what the Resettlement Administration is trying to do in aiding farm families to leave worn out farms and get on farms where they can make a better living.

Pellagra Sufferers Within Pitt County Get Red Cross Aid

Pellagra sufferers in Pitt County have benefited from Red Cross donated dry yeast for over a year now, K. T. Futrell, head of the Pitt County Welfare Department, said today.

Futrell, who has supervision over all such sufferers, distributes the yeast for the local Chapter of the Red Cross to whom the yeast is sent by National Red Cross free of charge to be given away in Pitt County.

"I am glad to have the opportunity to tell the people of Pitt County how grateful the pellagra sufferers are for the Red Cross yeast. With the indigent back on the County, his free yeast is a great help to the County, too. Some of the cases have found relief since I have been able to give it to them first from Federal Relief funds and now the Red Cross yeast.

"We have something like forty or fifty cases active in the County now," he said in answer to the query of the extent of pellagra in the county. "We keep records on each case. The Red Cross seems very interested in the relief of these poor people because they not only send the yeast but ask for records of each case. They say they want to keep up the yeast until everyone is relieved; it is the best known thing for pellagra, this yeast."

man said that on looking up about the Red Cross yeast he found it started being sent in due to an enquiry instigated at National Headquarters. It seems, he went on, the Red Cross is carrying on the fight against pellagra all over the United States where sufferers are found. They know pretty well which areas it is most common in and get the local chapters to distribute it in some places where there is a year around executive secretary the chapter does the actual distribution in the direction of the County authorities.

Mr. Ryan said today that the Greenville District of the Boy Scouts had volunteered to cooperate in every way they can to help in the noble aims secured by Red Cross.

Farm Folk Take Up Studies.
Raleigh, N. C.—(AP)—Farm folk feel the need of a broader type of education, says Dr. C. Horace Hamilton, rural sociologist at the University of North Carolina, who finds they are becoming interested in economics, sociology, civics, child psychology and history, as well as in technical agriculture and home-making.

By J. C. BASKERVILL
Raleigh, Nov. 6.—A movement to secure Federal aid in the establishment of a huge farm colonization undertaking in New Hanover county which would place 15,000 families on 25,000 acres of land thereon which they might not only become self-supporting but actually, was launched at a meeting of eastern North Carolina newspaper publishers, editors and business men at a meeting in Goldsboro Monday night.

The support of the newspaper men present was voiced in the adoption of a resolution in which they pledged their support to the movement. A committee was appointed which will strive to interest all the newspapers in the state, as well as the others in eastern North Carolina not represented in this meeting, in backing this project.

One of the principal speakers at this meeting was Hugh MacRae of Wilmington who pointed out that this proposal for a huge colonization project was not in the least impossible or idealistic, since smaller farm colonies established there under his direction during the past 35 years have proved entirely successful.

HOEY SHOWS MORE ACTION

Candidate For Governor Gets Down to Campaigning

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, Nov. 6.—Clyde R. Hoey Shelby is becoming more active in his campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor, according to reports reaching here from various sections of the state. In addition to making more and more speeches, he has just sent out a campaign letter to most of the commercial travelling men in the state asking their support. It is estimated that between 4,000 and 5,000 of these letters have been sent out, since virtually every travelling man in the state seems to have received one of them.

In this letter Hoey continues to avoid any mention of either the sales tax or the liquor question, but does stress the need for additional support for the schools of the state and asks for a greater degree of cooperation between the various classes of people, from the farmers and business men to labor.

"I am tremendously interested in the future welfare of the public schools, of agriculture, industry and labor," one sentence in the letter states. "I urge the citizenship of the state to courageously advance."

"We need to cultivate a spirit of cooperation between the farmers, business men, the professions, industry and labor and to recognize the mutual rights of each."

Mr. Hoey indicated that in the course of the campaign he would discuss all of the issues, though without mentioning any of them, in the paragraph in which he says: "During the campaign I shall discuss fully all of the issues and state fully and frankly my position on all vital questions."

Reports heard here within the last few days indicates that Mr. Hoey already realizes the progress which Dr. Ralph W. McDonald of Winston-Salem has been making in his campaign and that as a result he may open his own campaign earlier than he had planned.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady 4 to 8 points higher on better Liverpool cable and freezing weather in the southwest.

After showing net advances of about 7 to 13 points after the call, with December rising to 11.03 and May to 10.98, prices reached a new high, but the market steadied at about three points net higher at the end of the first hour.

The market became quieter later with the demand from abroad tapering off after the close of Liverpool. The tone however held steady and after a series of 10 to 18 points were within two or three of the best at midday. December sold up to 11.08 and May to 10.96.

Negro Scout Troop Presented To P. T. A. Which Is Its Sponsor

The Boy Scout Charter for Troop 63 of the Pitt County Training School (colored) was presented to the P. T. A., which is the sponsoring institution for that Troop Tuesday night.

Troop 63 is the seventeenth colored Troop in the East Carolina Council and the second in Pitt county. According to the interest manifest by the members of the P. T. A. and those of the Troop Committee it is destined to be one of the best troops in the Council. To achieve success the boys must feel that they have the interest of the parents and the support of their leading citizens. In spite of the heavy rain in the early part of the evening the meeting was well attended.

The chairman of the Troop Committee is C. Jones. The other members are G. W. Wright, and E. C. Setzer, principal of the Pitt County Training School, in Grimesland. The Scoutmaster is Ollen A. Dupree teacher of the Pitt County Training School. The Charter was presented in behalf of the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America by Ralph H. Mozo, Asst. Scout Executive of the East Carolina Council.

N. Y. Stock Market
New York, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Bullish forces romped away with the honors in today's market.
Traders came back from the holiday with a buying urge that centered on a wide variety. The ticker tape dropped two minutes behind floor transactions in the first two hours. Many issues pushed into new highs.
There was subsequent realizing on the upturn and extreme advances were pared or shaded. After a resting spell, however, the forward trek was resumed at a barely orderly pace and the leaders climbed back to extend the levels.
The late stock tone was strong. The volume approached 3,000,000 shares.

Mild and yet they Satisfy
—how do you do that?

Well, to start with, we take tobacco from our own Southland—mild ripe tobacco with lots of natural flavor but no harshness or bitterness.
