Local Automobile Salesman Killed Instantly

BETHEL MAN DIES LATER

Thomas Johnston and E. C. Smith Killed in Wreck Near Robersonville

Thomas R. Johnston, about 26, automobile salesman for the Planagan Buggy Company here, and Edward C. Smith, about 22, of Bethel, were killed in an automobile wreck last night about 8:30 o'clock, two miles this side of Robersonville.

Johnston was instantly killed as the automobile, a Ford V-8 coupe, failed to make a curve and ran off the highway for a distance of about 90 yards, struck a telephone pole and crashed.

He had been working here for about two months, coming from Oak City. He is single.

Smith died in Pitt General hospital about midnight with a fractured skull and other injuries. He was admitted to the hospital about 9:30 o'clock. He, also is single, but is survived by his mother and two sisters.

Highway Patrolmen who investigated the wreck said no other automobile was involved in the wreck, but the two men were unable to make a curve. It was not known which one was driving the automobile.

Funeral services for Smith will be conducted tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock from the Bethel Methodist church, with Rev. J. O. Long, the pastor, assisted by Rev. Leslie Newman, Bethel Baptist minister, officiating. Burial will be conducted at the graveside at Bethel cemetery by the Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

Mr. Smith, who had been employed at Wynne's filling station, is survived by his mother, Mrs. Belle Leigh and one sister, Miss Isabel Smith.

Olmstead Charges Youth of America With Finding Way

Says "American Way" Should Avoid Old Order Policies as Well as Those of New Deal

Des Moines, Nov. 9. (AP)—George Olmstead, national chairman, charged leaders of the young Republican organization gathered for a national conference today with the responsibility of finding the "American Way" on which young Americans could unite.

"This new way, the American way," he said "should avoid the bureaucratic or political tyranny of the new deal on the left and the economic tyranny of the old order on the right."

Disclaiming any intention to write a Republican platform, Olmstead said in a keynote address prepared for delivery at the opening session of the three-day meeting listed 10 points he said were a consensus of the young Republican viewpoint of the "American way."

Monthly Highway Report Shows 19 Fatal Wrecks

Eastern Division October Figures Reveal 4 Less Killed Than in Previous Month; 138 Persons Were Injured In 195 Accidents

Nineteen persons were killed in this division during October, the monthly report of the Eastern Division of the State Highway Patrol, issued today by Lieut. Lester Jones, revealed.

The fatality list for October was four less than for the preceding month when 23 persons were killed on the highways.

A total of 138 persons were injured in the 195 wrecks investigated by the patrol.

During the 30-day period the force made 937 arrests, 119 for driving drunk. Last month 92 persons were arrested for driving while under the influence of whiskey. Lieut. Jones noted the decrease in the number of fatalities and the increase in the number arrested while driving drunk and wondered if the arrests of drunken drivers and removing them from the highways did not have something to do with

J. Hicks Corey, commander of the Pitt post of the American Legion, related plans for the Armistice Day celebration Monday and solicited the cooperation of the club in the event. The club promised to cooperate in any manner possible.

STATE LEADS IN COTTON YIELD

Indication Of 289 Pounds Per Acre In N. C.

Raleigh, Nov. 9. (AP)—North Carolina's indicated cotton yield of 289 pounds per acre with a total of 600,000 bales for 1935 placed the state in the lead in the United States in production per acre of short staple cotton, the Federal State crop reporting service said today.

The indicated yield on November 1 per acre was 23 pounds above the 10-year average and 27 per cent less than last year's near-record production of 316 pounds to the acre.

The first survey made more than a year ago by the Rural Electrification Committee appointed by Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, of which Dr. Clarence Poe was chairman, covered only 78 counties. This survey showed 22,779 potential customers for 677 lines calling for 4,496 additional miles of lines. But within the past two months or so a supplementary survey has been completed in 19 of the 22 counties not included in the original survey, as well as in 43 of the counties formerly surveyed. The results of the survey in the three remaining counties are expected any day now.

The later survey made in the 19 counties not previously visited and in the counties re-surveyed, showed 9,134 more families which want electricity, necessitating 287 more lines aggregating 1,483 miles in length.

Within the past 90 days more than 1,000 miles of rural lines have either actually been started or plans completed for their early construction. The Authority reports most of the lines are being constructed by the various power companies in the state, although a few are being built by municipally owned companies. Rural electric lines to be fed from city-owned plants have either already been built or are in process of construction in Wilson, Nash, Lenoir and several other counties.

MANY DESIRE ELECTRICITY

More Than 31,000 People Interested In Rural Lines

Raleigh, Nov. 9.—There are 31,913 people in 97 counties of the state who are not now in reach of electricity who will wire their homes and become customers for electric power if rural electric lines will be built into their communities, tabulation of the recent survey figures from 97 of the 100 counties in the state show, it was announced at the offices of the North Carolina Rural Electrification Authority here today. This new survey shows that 964 additional lines, aggregating 5,970 miles in length, would be needed to bring electricity to the 31,913 families which desire it, and which have agreed to become customers if these lines are built.

The first survey made more than a year ago by the Rural Electrification Committee appointed by Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, of which Dr. Clarence Poe was chairman, covered only 78 counties. CITY VISITED BY FOUNTAIN

Candidate Here Today Reiterates He is Against Sales Tax

Richard T. Fountain, candidate for the United States senate seat now occupied by Sen. J. W. Bailey was in the city today and reported that he had received nothing but encouraging reports as to his campaign.

The candidates has done quite a bit of traveling during the past several weeks and he said that favorable reports had greeted him on every side.

Mr. Fountain is not a native of this county, but has some people living in Pitt, and in the last gubernatorial campaign piled up one of the biggest majorities in this county ever given a candidate for governor.

Fountain said that he was bitterly opposed to the sales tax and called attention to voting in other states showed that the levy was unpopular with the people.

The candidate will deliver an address at Plymouth Monday, at an Armistice Day celebration. He said that he had not had the chance to do much public speaking of late, but that he hoped to get down to real business of campaigning soon. He adds, however, that he has not been idle, saying that he had covered much of the state within the past recent weeks.

CLAIM JAPAN IS VIOLATING TEXTILE PLAN

Increased Shipments To Philippines Is Cause Inquiries

FEAR WAY FOUND EVADE PLAN

Use of Chinese Port For Shipping Textiles To Islands To Be Investigated

Washington, Nov. 9. (AP)—Increased shipments of Japanese textiles to the Philippine from Hongkong, British part in China, caused inquiries at the state department today about possible violation of the "Gentlemen agreement" between Japan and the United States.

Fear the Japanese exporters had found a way to get around the agreement limiting Japan to importation not exceeding 45,000,000 square meters annually to the island and has been commonly talked among textile men here.

There is nothing in the informal pact, made public October 12, limiting textiles of whatever origin shipped from China ports and the belief gained ground that the Japanese had found a loophole that would nullify voluntary restriction, giving the United States and Japan an approximate equal share of the market.

Textile interest here sought to determine if the agreement specifically prohibits shipments of Japanese goods through China in excess of the published limitation. State department officials, while declaring a formal statement, intimated that the agreement prohibits any evasion of the spirit in which it was framed.

Poor Land Produces Poor People, Crops

Having spent 25 years studying land—good and bad—James M. Gray, Regional Director of the Resettlement Administration's Land Utilization Division, is of the opinion that poor land generally produces poor folks as well as poor crops.

"Lots for farm folks think they are poor because their crops are poor," Gray said, "and that undoubtedly is correct but few of them stop to think that their crops are poor because their land is poor. Part of our job in land utilization work is to put this poor land to some good use to which it is adapted, such as forestry, and to help the people now trying unsuccessfully to scratch a living from non-productive soil to acquire better farms."

A program designed to demonstrate the best use of poorer lands is being carried out in Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia under Mr. Gray's direction. This work is part of the national program of the Resettlement Administration.

FALSE ALARM!

Crowds swarmed on the corner of Third and Evans streets, so thick traffic was jammed this afternoon when a man ran a fire alarm, according to his statement, trying to mail a letter.

Invading Forces Set Loss At Only 36 Dead and 81 Injured in Drives

(By Associated Press)

Victorious Italian forces occupying the strategic cities of Makale and Gorrahei on the northern and southern fronts "dug in" today.

Scouting bands swept the territory around the new fascist possession. Engineering corps prepared to push roads forward through the undeveloped terrain.

The invading forces counted the cost of the northern advance at 36 dead and 81 wounded, most of whom were native Eskkari.

Before the Northern army lay Rocky Donghea pass, gateway to Selicot, first point on the line of march to Amba Alaji, Ethiopian mountain stronghold. Advance guards have scouted the pass.

Far to the East of Makale a flank advance was reported pushing into the mountains toward Lake Tana, important British power site.

King George, in London, approved of economic sanction against Italy at a session of the Privy Council.

At Rome spokesmen for three nations continued their debate toward a definite Anglo-Italian understanding. Official announcement of results was withheld after the conference between Premier Mussolini, Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador, and Count Charles De Chambrun, French ambassador.

The Italian campaign to quit anti-sanction demonstrations was taken over by vigilance committees. Press attacks against sanction boycotting countries were halted by government's order.

One Negro Taken For Robbing Boys Carrying Papers

Local Police Arrest Harris Atkinson For Stealing Receipts of Carrier Boys

Chief George Clark of the Greenville police department said today he had arrested one of the two negro brothers who are alleged to have carried on a series of robberies on newspaper carriers during the past few months.

Harris Atkinson was the one caught and officers said they expected to arrest the other soon. Officers took the negro boy yesterday following a "tip" that the two were on a county road. Officers went to the scene and caught Harris, but the other out-ran officers and made his escape.

The two boys are charged with robbing newspaper carriers boys of their collections. Their identity was not known until last week when a negro man recognized them as they were robbing Spencer Carroll, although known to police, the two had been successful in evading officers until yesterday.

Monday is Armistice Day and if it so that you cannot take the time off to join in the exercises of the American Legion in celebration of the day, at least every person in this city is urged to pause for a brief moment at 11 o'clock Monday morning in memory of those who lost their lives in the great world conflict and say a prayer that such a conflict should not again blight the nations of the earth. ters. Unlike Mr. Mullin, they have escaped public favor or otherwise.
POWER: The only one who isn't happy over the situation is Secretary Morgenthau and he can't say anything publicly. He figures his Treasury is losing gobs of revenue through this method. Never a believer in compromise—he regularly rejects bootleggers' offers—he wishes the A. G. would give Uncle Sam a chance to fight.
But Morgenthau's hands are tied behind his back, though you wouldn't think so to see him rage. Formerly no income tax case could be compromised unless both the No. 1 financial man and the No. 1 legal man saw eye to eye. That system permitted all actions to be considered from the standpoint of both departments. One served as a check on the other. If they differed, the government went to bat.
But full authority over handling these problems was conferred on the A. G. by President Roosevelt's executive order of June 10, 1933. The late "Willie" Woodin, then Treasury Secretary, was too tied up with bank reorganization to bother with tax troubles. Issued in the New Deal's feverish days, the order's significance escaped public notice. It made Mr. Cummings a czar in many unsuspected ways. It authorizes him to "decide whether and in what manner to prosecute, or to defend, or to compromise, or to appeal, or to abandon prosecution or defense." The synopsis issued to the press at the time did not even hint at this grant of power.

HIGH COURAGE

SYNOPSIS: Anne Farnsworth knows that she is the truest friend of the colored folk of Tom Farley, Rob Crocker and his crew of wreckers. The Farleys crowd to work for the Farnsworth cannery business, a fitter having somehow sucked Anne out of her interest in it. Now the Farleys are beginning to cast their eyes on the Farnsworths. Anne is nearly frantic. How can she save her home from the hands of John Newman? Anne is nearly frantic. How can she save her home from the hands of John Newman?

SUMMONS TO DUTY

ANNE scarcely left the window that day. She had promised to wait until John's return before trying to do anything herself. And she waited, curled up on the window seat, looking west.

Below her Union Town seemed flung down hill like a tattered quilt, houses of grey and red and bright blue for blocks, roadways for stitching and for a border the square river front hotels and dark red canneries.

She looked beyond these, her gaze moving like a brush across the seven mile stretch of water at the bar from the dull blue of North Head to the wind whipped expanse of Young's Bay.

"See her yet?" came in moderately interested tones from Liza who, in from the new job she had taken, was seated in her chair reading.

"Not yet," Anne reported. She strained her eyes for the first glimpse of the ship carrying John. She wanted to see him and yet, she wondered.

"Listen to this," came derisively from Liza as she read from her book, "a cold wind blew from the north, cutting through Elaine's furs, but at Bill's touch she was warm. Ice fringed the edge of her parka, what a parka!"

"Fur hood of a coat."
"Humph! the ice fringed edge of her parka, but when his lips touched hers—"
"There he is!" Anne jumped to her feet.

"He?" Liza was on her feet rushing towards the window, "what, who, where, what are you talking about?"
"The . . . the boat. I mean the 'Star of Lapland.' See the tug's going out."

"I wonder if Milna will come live with me," came the irrelevant response from Liza.

"Milna—"
"When a sensible girl like you, Nikki Nielsen, calls a boat 'he,' then it's time for her room-mate to look for another one. Now let me get back to that book and see if Bill melts the ice on the parka."

Anne wasn't listening. She had drawn as close to the window as was physically possible. She felt as if a thin line were stretched between her and the ship out there.

She watched the miniature tug wallowing in a grotesque attempt to reach the ship; watched the ship. Liza closed the book with a bang of disgust and stalked to the kitchen. And then just as the sun, hidden behind a grey expanse of clouds, sent a thin band of yellow light along the horizon, the "Star of Lapland" swung up-channel, out of the Pacific into the Columbia river.

"She's across!" cried Anne.
"Did I hear you say she?" inquired Liza. "Then maybe we can eat. Here, I found one of those pesky avocado things for you in town; do you eat the rind or gnaw on the seed?"

ANNE left the window reluctantly. She went into the breakfast nook, curled up on the window seat, and obediently dipped a spoon into the green boat of the avocado because Liza had troubled to buy it for her. Aside from that, she could force only black coffee past the lump in her throat.

Surely, she mused, returning to her post, she had never felt like this about Rob's coming. She was like a lamp, a drab, prosaic thing until it was lighted. John was coming and she felt like a living lamp.

The storm which had been hovering over the ocean struck. The rain fell against the pane in crystal drops, turned to sleet and gold by reflection of the open fire Liza had started.

Below her houses burst into radiance. In the Eskola kitchen the high white light revealed Mrs. Eskola rushing around, putting fresh coffee in the big pot, stirring the fire in the kitchen stove, stirring the pot of stew.

Perhaps some day, thought Anne, she would do this for John. Now his mother and Molly would be hurrying about, preparing for him and his father. John would go home first. She pressed her face to the window watching for figures to emerge from troupe—from Italy. It would require fantastic stretching of neuropathic legislation to classify these products as "implements of war," which is the nearest approach to a ban on such supplies.

But Munition Board experts will find a way if the White House desires to enlist in the movement to cripple Italy. They can conceivably hold that cotton is gun powder in a raw state, that iron is unforged cannon, that coal and oil propel naval and aerial fleets. By scrutinizing invoices of shipments to Italy they may be able to learn whether these goods are destined for peacelitical banners are flying from every official rooftop if you know the signal code.

Chairman Farley recently named a Curly man to the Boston post-mastership, a sweet federal plum. He passed over a distinguished soldier—Brigadier General Cole—to reward the Curlyite. Cole was Curley's unsuccessful opponent in the last gubernatorial primary, and spoke for the New Deal. It wasn't so long ago that the Massachusetts Governor was shouldered off the federal lot. He was denied an ambassadorship to Italy. He couldn't chisel a cent out of Harold Ickes. But now the eloquent Irishman is a "grand guy."

Mr. Ickes has released impounded funds for PWA projects in Louisiana. Senator Joe Guffey of Pennsylvania has gone to work as chairman of the Senatorial Campaign Committee. The political machines in Philadelphia, Kansas City and Chicago have been well greased. Several patronage misunderstandings which irk ballot-box patriots are in the process of settlement. Jim is writing letters again. He's pulling all the tricks out of his bag.

ANOTHER VANDERBILT DIVORCE?

Reports going the rounds in New York have it that the third marriage of Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., may end just as the others did—in the divorce courts. He and wife No. 3, whom he married recently, are shown at the top during their honeymoon. At the lower left is No. 1 and beside her is No. 2. (Associated Press Photos)

But the best-posted New Yorkers doubt that FDR has any such immediate objective in mind. They figure rather that he will use the Berry conferences as a foil for discussions of his with business leaders at which the latter will be assured that no resurrection of NRA will be attempted in '36.

BUDGET: Financial men expect the next federal budget to be framed in terms which will appeal to conservatives. They look for the regular budget to be hiked down to $3,000,000,000. Revenue estimates will probably run over $4,000,000,000. Even with emergency relief expenditures still in the picture to the tune of $2,000,000,000 or more—probably more—the deficit would look much less menacing to right-wingers than it has in the past two years.

Also the emergency budget can be minimized by a little judicious jockeying of relief appropriations already made but unspent. The President need only ask authority to transfer funds, from one allocation to another. Of course any savings from this sort of switching would be hypothetical—but they would make the total figures look closer to a balance.

Another reason for anticipating a conservative budget is the virtual certainty that Congress will authorize immediate cash payment of the veterans' bonus. However that money is raised, the more other expenses are trimmed the less alarming the outlay will appear.

BLOW: A pretty little inside battle is in prospect at the American Bankers' Association convention in New Orleans. The big bone of contention is the second vice presidency. Doesn't sound like much of a prize—but the second vice president becomes president two years later—so it does matter.

The original candidate was E. G. Bennett—manager of Marriner Eccles' chain of banks in Utah. Although a Republican, anti-New Dealers and unit (as against group) bankers took strong exception to his selection. The informed say that Mr. Bennett was ready to withdraw in the interest of harmony until the opposition put up O. W. Adams of the Utah State National Bank—a unit banker and no admirer of Eccles. Then he decided to make a scrap of it.

Later peace-lovers offered a compromise candidate in Frank F. Brooks of the First National Bank of Pittsburgh—who attracted attention no long ago by urging bankers to fight criticisms aggressively. New York bankers are backing Brooks—on the private case that an Easterner is preferable to a Westerner "at the present time."

The only hitch is that he represents a national bank and this year is supposed to be the state bankers' turn. Brooks should win—but there's enough uncertainty in the situation to keep the boys in a witter. He and Adams might split the anti-Eccles vote and let Bennett in—which would be a terrible blow to confirmed right wingers.

EMBARGO: New York hears that Italy's cautious sounding of the United States on the question of trading under the Hull reciprocity deal gets nowhere. Such trade would conflict with the President's policy of discouraging all shipments during the war period. Although all exports are not yet under embargo, the President will probably ask Congress to enlarge the scope of the embargo as soon as Congress meets. Then a tug-of-war will ensue, unless cotton, oil, coal, steel, copper and other interests have lost their punch.

Despite the strong sentiment against war trade, on the theory that it leads to war, a powerful element in Congress stands for unrestricted exports of non-war materials on the ground that belligerents have no right to interfere with peaceful commerce. A total embargo against belligerents would have no walkover in Congress. An embargo directed solely against Italy would have still harder sledding.

Politicians See Neat Strategy In AAA Program

Officials See a Powerful Weapon In Large Number of Signed Contracts In Hand

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington, Nov. 9.—Political insiders sense a neat bit of strategy in the move of AAA officials offering four-year production contracts to farmers before the supreme court rules on the legality of the processing tax.

Refusal of the court to hear arguments on the Hoosac Mills case until December 9 makes it highly improbable that a decision will be had on the present method of collecting processing taxes until in January, 1936, at the earliest.

Meanwhile four-year contracts, subject to certain rights of termination, are being offered wheat and rye farmers. Tobacco farmers have been or will be offered similar contracts. Like proposals will be submitted to cotton and corn-hog farmers under present plans.

In all AAA officials would like to see some 3,000,000 individual farmers sign on the dotted line as quickly as possible, agreeing to gauge their production of various crops to the control program.

A Powerful Weapon

The reason, say those on the inside, is that AAA officials figure with this many signed contracts in hand they will have a powerful weapon with which to deal with congress in the event the supreme court decides the processing taxes are unconstitutional.

The administration has insisted all along that should the court rule against the government in the Hoosac Mills case, congress would have to find new taxes to replace the commitments already made by the government to the cotton, corn-hog, wheat, rye, tobacco, peanut, and sugar farmers.

The huge favorable majority rolled up by corn-hog farmers for extension of contracts has encouraged AAA officials to push forward with their plans.

Budget Preparations

Refusal of the supreme court to grant the request of the government for hearing arguments on the Hoosac Mills case on November 20 promises to make the job of preparing the budget for the coming fiscal year one of considerable doubt and uncertainty.

It is customary for the president to submit his budget message to congress immediately after he delivers his message on the state of the union. In all probability, this budget message will be in the hands of congress before the supreme court acts on the processing taxes.

The Bible

Is it the Word of God?
Is it unerring?
Is it the sole rule of Faith?

To Our non-Catholic friends who read the Bible, meditate on its sublime mysteries and base their faith on its sacred messages, we wish to explain the Catholic's relation to his Bible today and through the ages past by means of the few questions and answers given below.

Is the Bible the word of God?—Yes. The Catholic Church teaches that the Holy Ghost inspired the sacred writers—made them his instruments, so that they could rightly conceive only those things that He, Himself, bade them conceive.

Is the Bible unerring? The Bible, as original written, is God's word. Therefore, it cannot contain error. But copyists, translators and printers were not inspired, so errors can and did creep in. Also in some versions deliberate omissions and alterations were made which logically made such versions incomplete and unreliable. The Catholic Church safeguards her members by approving the versions of the Bible which she wishes them to use. The Biblical Commission is ever vigilant in seeking out omissions, errors, either typographical or due to faulty translations and from time to time reports of such findings are published.

Is the Bible the sole rule of Faith? Not how could it be? The New Testament was not completed until at least sixty years after the Resurrection. The Bible, as we know it today, was not compiled until the Fourth Century, when from the mass of early writings then extant, the Church infallibly chose those which were divinely inspired, and thus gave to posterity the sacred writings we now call the Bible. Therefore, before there was a Bible at all, the pagan world was largely converted to Christianity. In fact it was not until the invention of the printing press in the Fifteenth Century that the Bible had any appreciable circulation among the people.

Bear in mind also, that if the Bible contained all truths, it could not omit the all-important truth—i. e., that it contains all truth. Nowhere in the Bible can we find such a statement. On the contrary St. John plainly denies this in the very last words of his Gospel when he says: "And there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written."

Therefore to the Catholic of today, as to the Catholic of the Fourth Century, the Bible in its original completeness and purity is but a divinely inspired confession of many important parts of the total Deposit of Faith given by Christ to His Church to guard and infallibly interpret.

There is much more to tell about the Bible than this little pamphlet will accommodate. If you care for further information, we shall be glad to supply it on request.

'Last Days of Pompeii' At Pitt.
The mighty spectacle "Last Days of Pompeii" opened at the Pitt today. One of the important scenes in this picture is the great arena where human life was sacrificed to provide a Roman holiday. The arena served a many-sided purpose in the barbaric days in which the story is laid. It provided entertainment of the most virile sort, a road to riches for those who cared to risk their lives as gladiators, and an engine of destruction for slaves and captives. In fact it was the great brutal heart of Pompeii.

Vegetables
Irish Potatoes—Storage conditions such as moisture and air similar to apples and pears. Temperature around 35 to 40 degrees F. Late harvested potatoes will keep best. Potatoes free from cuts, bruises, and damage caused by insects and diseases keep best. Place in slatted crates or bins. One cubic foot of space will store around 40 pounds of potatoes.

Fruits
Apples and Pears—Keep best in cool, moist air which has good circulation. They can be kept at temperatures close to freezing. Apples and pears picked when fully ripe will keep better than when picked green. Leave pears on trees until green color has turned to a lemon yellow, then store in slatted crates or slatted bins.

Onions and Sweet Potatoes
Should be well matured and thoroughly dried before storing. Imperfect onion bulks will not keep well, neither will bulbs which have produced seed stalks. Handle carefully. Store in slatted crates in the attic where the atmosphere is dry and temperature is around 50 degrees F. A basement or cellar is not a good place to store.

Dried Beans and Peas
Treat seed after harvest for weevils with carbon bisulphide. Use three teaspoonfuls of this fumigant for each cubic foot of space. Put peas and beans in container, pour fumigant into a shallow dish which is placed on top of beans. Repeat treatment in about 10 days. Leave beans and peas under each treatment for 48 hours.

Root Crops—Same as for potatoes, place root crops in piles or in boxes or bins. Sprinkle them occasionally with water to prevent shriveling. Short leaf stems should be left on beets. Outside shallow pits may be used. Dig a hole 6 inches deep. Place a layer of straw on ground, pile in the roots and

Dame Fashion Turns A Modest Back On Trunks-And-Brassiere Swim Suits

With the winter season in Florida in the offing, Dame Fashion has turned attention to the new beach modes. Swim Suits, according to the latest decree, will abandon that style of trunks-and-brassiere that used to meet for one-piece suits such as those worn by these Miami maidens.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Miami's modestly turned a low-cut back on the trunks-and-brassiere that fell to meet type of bathing suit if she's to be in style on Miami's beaches this winter.

Though still scanty of material and revealing of line, this season's advance bathing attire eliminated the once modish expanse of bare skin over the diaphragm.

A distinct departure from the brilliantly brief Tahitian costume introduced here last year, the new styles, featuring pastel colors, point to an energetic program in south Florida waters during the winter months.

Still brief, but depending chiefly on form-fitting lines and intricate weaves for their novelty, the new suits feature one-piece models with backs bared to the waist and tiny ropes and woven cords as shoulder straps.

Noticeably absent are trunks-and-bandana models. In the few shown there is a close fit between the halter top and the trunks.

Many of the new models are developed in wools of pastel shades. New colors include a brilliant Ba-hama blue, dusty rose, and deep plum, while the popular raspberry red, hunter's green and white are also being used.

Suits highly utilitarian and presenting lines of well-bred simplicity, hardly distinguishable from the straight, slim silhouettes of the masculine suits get the feminine accent with short, smart capes that become skirts on occasion and low backs which correspond to the mode fashionable in evening frocks this year.

Accessories include nickel jewelry in marine designs, fishnet beachshoes, broad brimmed hats, cover with straw and then a layer of dirt.

Cabbage—Same as for potatoes and fruits—store in basement and outdoor pits. When storing in basement remove roots but do not remove outer leaves. Place on shelves with cut stem up. For outside storage in pits same as for root crops. Leave stem and outer leaves attached. Pile with stems up and two or three layers deep.

Pumpkins and Squashes—Store in warm dry room at a temperature of 50 degrees F. Pick with stems attached and before a hard frost. Specimens should be fully matured and hard for best storage.

GETS SUPPORT IN WILL CASE

Reynolds Case Lawyers Cooperating With State

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Nov. 9.—The State Department of Revenue has had the finest sort of cooperation from the attorneys representing all interests in the litigation over the estate of the late C. Smith Reynolds in North Carolina and in connection with the provision under which this state is to receive $2,000,000 in inheritance taxes when the litigation is finally ended, according to a statement made today by Commissioner of Revenue A. J. Maxwell, in which he disagreed with a statement made several days ago by Director George G. Scott of the Division of Accounts.

Director Scott said he did not expect the payment of the $2,000,000 in taxes any time soon due to the fact that the case would now have to go through both the New York and Maryland courts and perhaps even to the United States Supreme Court before final settlement is arrived at.

Director Scott did not criticize any of the lawyers handling the case in North Carolina, but did express the opinion that the lawyers in the various states through which the litigation must pass would not be inclined to agree to a compromise until they had kept it in court as long as possible. But this was not a criticism of the lawyers handling the case in North Carolina since the case has already gone as far as it can here and has been acted on by the Supreme Court.

"I deeply regret the interview quoting Director Scott as criticizing attorneys in the inheritance tax case of the late C. Smith Reynolds for delay in settlement of the case, and imputing selfish motives for the delay," Commissioner Maxwell said. "The fact is that the Department has had complete cooperation from attorneys representing all interests in that proceeding, that they have waived numerous technical questions in admitting the tax liability and that they have at all times shown a genuine interest in reaching a final settlement of it at the earliest possible moment."

Resolutions of Respect and Affection for Roy C. Flanagan, Mayor of the City of Greenville, Adopted by the Board of Aldermen of the City of Greenville, North Carolina.

Thursday, October 31st, 1935, Roy C. Flanagan, the honored and much beloved Mayor of the City of Greenville, finished the official duties of his office, and went to his home on Fifth Street for rest and refreshment; and during the early hours of the succeeding morning he heard the call of his Master, laid down forever the working tools of life and quietly passed to his reward.

His memory will long be cherished by all who knew him. He was a broad-minded citizen, an able official, a courageous thinker, a wise counsellor, a churchman, and a Mason. He was gentle but firm and courageous. He was truly a Christian gentleman.

For more than five years his official service as Mayor of Greenville was marked by a high degree of efficiency. He was at the time of his death Vice-President of the North Carolina League of Municipalities. He had a high conception of civic righteousness and was planning a program of civic beauty. His ideal and plan was to make Greenville a beautiful place in which to live. He lived a life of service to his fellow man.

Therefore Be It Resolved by the Board of Aldermen of the City of Greenville, North Carolina, in special meeting assembled:

First: That Roy C. Flanagan, as Mayor of the City of Greenville, and as Vice-President of the North Carolina League of Municipalities and in all of his public career was endowed with an exceptionally high sense of duty and official responsibility.

Second: That in business, professional, and official life he met every responsibility and performed every duty so that, when he had ended each of them, he had lifted the level of human ideals and achievements a little higher than he found them.

Third: That we cherish and emulate the high ideals of his official administration.

Fourth: That the Clerk of the Board of Aldermen of the City of Greenville cause this Resolution to be inscribed in the public records of this City; that a copy be forwarded to the press and a copy be conveyed to the family of our beloved Mayor.

Echoes Of Armistice Din Fading Away As Drums Recall Old World To Arms

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
Washington, Nov. 9.—(AP)—The World war will end this morning at 6 o'clock Washington time, 11 o'clock Paris time.

Seventeen years ago Monday that simple but highly dramatic Associated Press bulletin touched off a great, nation-wide outburst of joy and thanksgiving for the "triumphant ending of the war to end all wars" and for the "victory of democracy over autocracy."

At 1 minute to 11, the big silence more startling than the thunder of the guns, came to the western front. The Kaiser was hiding in Brussels (AP)—A torchbearer from the Belgian Congo will participate for the first time this year in the Armistice Day ceremony of rekindling of the sacred flame here.

From all parts of Belgium, from Paris and from the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, ex-servicemen will bring torches to the Warriors' Tomb in Brussels.

The torches are passed from village to village, timed to arrive at dusk when the veteran organizations meet to commemorate the end of the world war.

The Congolese torchbearer set out on his long journey weeks ago. He will be accompanied to Brussels by the designated torchbearer from Antwerp.

Holland, a republic "of and for the people" was being set up in Berlin, and leading American citizens hailed the day as the most momentous of the century, a turning point in history.

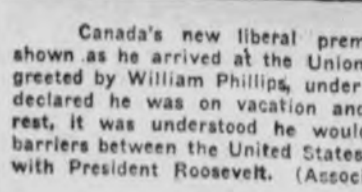

Anxious Eyes on Europe

Today thousands of the American communities, which on November 11, 1918 staged, an unparalleled demonstration at the coming of peace, will observe the anniversary with apprehensive eyes turned again to war clouds over Europe and the rest of the world.

This anniversary of the "great peace" finds the American nation apparently more determined than ever to keep out of war.

By mandate of congress and by declarations of President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull, the government is committed to a policy of neutrality much more rigid than that which obtained before Canada's new liberal premier, Mackenzie King (left), is shown as he arrived at the Union station in Washington and was greeted by William Phillips, under secretary of state. Although he declared he was on vacation and visited the capital merely for rest, it was understood he would discuss the removal of trade barriers between the United States and Canada during a conference with President Roosevelt. By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 11, 2:48 A. M.—The world war will end this morning at 6 o'clock, Washington time, 11 o'clock Paris time.

The armistice was signed by the German representatives at midnight.

This announcement Department at 2:50 o'clock.

November 11, 1918, "over there," these American doughboys came tumbling out of their front line duty to hail "the big silence" while hours earlier The Associated Press bulletin that the war had ended touched off a frenzy of rejoicing through the nation. Today America observes a rigid neutrality in the Italian-Ethiopian conflict and prays that war in Africa may not engulf the world in conflict.

This country was drawn into the war in 1916.

Although President Wilson's reelection in 1916 was ascribed largely to the slogan, "he kept us out of war," commercial ties, widespread sympathy for Belgium, France and Britain and German submarine warfare involving the deaths of non-combatants, led finally to American participation in 1917.

In the current European crisis, however, government officials already have indicated that American who trade with the belligerent nations do so at their own risk.

President Roosevelt has also warned all United States citizens against traveling on Italian or Ethiopian ships.

Furthermore, general public sentiment seems to be that virtually nothing short of invasion of American shores would justify plunging the nation into war.

Thousands today recall the scenes of wild enthusiasm with which the nation from New York to the tiniest hamlets hailed peace and victory on that bright November morning 17 years ago. Giant sirens, bells and horns awakening the citizens, women with coats donned hastily, over nightrobes rushing through the streets beating skiflets and shrieking to their neighbors, "the war is over!"

There will be recollections also of the full-page newspaper lists of casualties which ran for weeks after the signing of the armistice and of headlines which told of surgeons making "new faces" for war-maimed boys.
