With the opening of Congress tomorrow the eyes of the nation will turn toward Washington. Just what will be the net result of this session of Congress is of course a great uncertainty, but it is reasonable to anticipate that the actions of this session will be with a view to vote getting in the coming elections.

The city today was going about its work of cleaning the snow from the city streets which certainly makes things much better for both pedestrians and motorists. During the ten days or more that our streets have been covered with snow and ice there have been many smashed fenders as well as a few personal injuries as a result of the slippery streets.

We have always been told that a snow that stays on the ground for a while in winter has a good effect on the land and makes it produce a better crop in the coming season. In view of the weather this section has had for the past two weeks crops should be exceptionally good this year.

Despite the fact that there is a belief that business is always worse in a presidential election year, Roger Babson, noted statistician and forecaster, sees a 10 per cent or better increase in business for 1936 over the year just closed. Most of us hope that Mr. Babson is correct in his forecast.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

LABOR: Frances Perkins took office at the wrong time. Whatever talents she may possess have been buried under a pile of new labor agencies which reduce her department to the status of a glorified information bureau. It's a development which few expect Miss Perkins—the fought it—have noted.

The NRA first minimized the importance of her labor and industrial contacts. Then the Social Security Board removed a vast field from her study and jurisdiction. Next the Guffey Act swiped more things that used to belong to her domain. And finally the Labor Dispute Act supplanted her as official conciliator between capital and labor. Miss Perkins is left with the job of grinding out pamphlets on the care of croupy children and Dr. Lubin's reports on payrolls and unemployment.

NEVER MIND THE LADY

NEVER MIND THE LADY by David Garth

SYNOPSIS: Terry Willett is battling fiercely for the sake of Allaire West who from him out the last time he saw her. But he has not yet seen her. He is trying to black-mail Allaire's father, lying that the man Allaire shot in a certain post-office port and died. And Allaire has been checking up on Terry's post in Cortez, Va. quite innocent of all the trouble and scandal she has caused. Allaire has just his revolver and is fighting hard to hand.

"Gosh, Mac, what hit you? Want a doc?" "Either that or some adhesive tape." "Get in, boss, get in. I know a good doc." Terry got in. He leaned back against the cushions and propped his feet up on one of the little side seats. "How are the Giants doing?" he murmured.

BRIGHT sun was flooding the room when he awoke the next day. His head felt as though it had been hit with a collection of assorted sandbags that he had been drunk last night? He pondered. No, he had been snugged with something that was right, a merry life, yea, truly; never a del. moment.

He looked at his wrist watch. Almost noon. Something was due to happen today. Oh, yea, he had to take a plane at Newark Airport for Miami and the Pan American Airways. He got up and went over to the mirror where he regarded himself critically. He wasn't exactly a picture of beauty, with a discoloration around one eye and his forehead bandaged with several strips of surgical tape, and when he took a deep breath the ribs on one side ached. Well, don't take any deep breaths.

He showered and dressed quickly. Terry Willett dressed well in an easy natural way. He presented a smart, clean-cut appearance in dark double-breasted, blue shirt, wine-colored cravat, and his thick auburn hair crisply parted. Then with his bags packed and his topcoat under arm, he paused by the table and picked up Puff Harrington's note. She'd evidently left it there right after he and Fox had gone out of the room last evening. There were two words hurriedly scrawled: "Thanks, Terry." Sic transit Puff.

You're welcome, babe. It didn't cost you anything but a cigarette case. Some detective's wife has that "evidence" now probably. He smiled slightly and tore the note into bits, letting the pieces filter through his fingers. As he closed the door behind him and turned the key in the lock, he heard his phone ring. He hesitated a moment; would he be calling him? Puff, maybe? Well, whoever it was he didn't think it worth the effort to unlock the door and go back. What was the use? He let the phone ring. Terry Willett wanted to get away from here.

He had a short breakfast and then went to the desk to pay his bill. The phone girl said there'd been a call for him; no message. The party had been very eager to locate him and the phone girl had said Mr. Willett was leaving for Newark Airport shortly. "Hope you have a nice trip, Mr. Willett," she smiled. She was very pretty and lots of men stopped by to talk about the telephone situation. It was just her luck that when one came along with whom she'd have liked to discuss the telephone situation, he wasn't interested in the telephone situation.

Black eye and bandaged brow, but that warlike-looking young man was a real gem, thought the telephone girl. Willett arrived at the airport and the big tri-motored ship was already waiting, the sun shining on its silver body with a flood of gleaming reflections. The Miami plane! Coming, Corriann. With his foot on the step, he heard his name called. "Terry!" He turned to see Allaire coming toward him swiftly. She seemed breathless and there was a touch of high color in her face. She reached his side and put a hand on his arm. "You're not going, Terry? Not back to South America?" He looked at her curiously. "Why, of course." "You might have come around to say good-bye." He laughed shortly. "I said good-bye last night—words and music." "Let's get out of here," said Allaire, as a portly passenger waited impatiently to get aboard. "Five minutes, sir," said the plane steward to Willett.

HEADS OF ENGLISH CITIES FIND POSTS EXPENSIVE

London, Jan. 2.—(AP)—Sir Percy Vincent, newly elected lord mayor of London, receives more than $50,000 a year, twice the salary of a British prime minister, but it has been calculated that he will have to spend as much more from his own pocket. And in every city in England the mayor, when his term of office ends next November, will look ruefully at his bank balance and discover (as previous mayors have all discovered) that the official allowance never is nearly enough to cover his expenses. In fact, many mayors complain that the gold chain of their office is the only gold with which they come in contact during twelve ruinous months as first citizen. "You have to be pretty fit to face all the tasks that fall on an English mayor," said George Henry Bull, mayor of Islington (one of London's largest boroughs with a population of 321,712) as he handed over the mayoral chain to his successor with a sigh of relief. "It is a terrible strain mentally, physically and financially. Perhaps your hardest task during the year will be to evade too much eating and drinking."

UNCLAIMED BANK FORTUNE MAY BE SEIZED BY STATE
Madison, Wis. (AP)—There's a fortune of more than a million dollars hidden away in banks of Wisconsin and if the rightful owners don't claim it soon the state will.

The commonwealth, through the office of the secretary of state, already has notified all banks that they must report on accounts 20 years old or older within the next month.

After that it is planned to bring suit which will transfer the money to the state coffers to swell the special school aid fund.

Accounts so affected are known as "dead" accounts, which, in most cases, the banks holding them have been unable to trace.

Tamed Coyotes

Singer of Psalms Reviews History Stringed Music

Before Noah built the ark, one Jubal is said to be the father of all such as handle the harp and the pipe. The former was a stringed instrument, and the latter a wind instrument. From these two classes, all stringed and wind instruments are descended.

It may be that a hunter discovered one day that there was a musical twang when he let his arrow fly from his tightly drawn bow. He found that it sounded louder when one end rested on a hollow log. He discovered also that a higher pitch was produced by a tighter string, and a lower pitch by a loose string. When two bows were sounded at the same time, the result may have been pleasing to him. Then he began to think. He added strings and more strings. As the centuries passed, other hunters made further discoveries. The twisted grass string gave way to the more durable gut strings. The hollow log resonator gave way to a skin stretched across a wooden frame. Eventually, our present family of stringed instruments were evolved.

Jesse Phillips Robertson, with his program of Psalm singing and interpretation, will be heard Sunday night at the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church. The congregations of the different churches of the city will meet there that evening, inasmuch as the bringing of the famed Singer of Psalms to Greenville is for the benefit of the whole community. A silver offering will be received to defray the expenses to which the Ministerial Association will have been put to bring Mr. Robertson to the city.

DOG DAYS ENDED; NAZI TAXES PLUS BABIES CUT POPULATION

BERLIN (AP)—Chalk up to the Nazi account a heavy decline in the number of dogs owned by Germans. Increased taxes are partly responsible, but just as important is a Nazi-inspired rise in the birth rate. In halcyon 1928 the 3,700,000 dogs—about 5.8 to every 100 persons—brought 56,000,000 marks in taxes. The latest census shows that 3,900,000 marks were paid for 2,600,000 dogs, or 3.9 to every 100 population. The Nazi publication "Neues Volk" finds a relationship between marriage and canine ownership.

"For a long time," it said, "it seemed as if the one-child marriage were to be replaced by the one-dog marriage."

"Now, it is hoped, both are ended."

The Silhouette Is Streamline

Patou likes flowered crepes for spring evening wear. For this dinner frock he chooses a black mouseline splashed with bold white flowers and green leaves and accented by applications of green velvet leaves. Short puffed sleeves and a girdle which ties in the back are the only breaks in a streamline silhouette. The decollete, though high, is cut out below in front.

CRYPTIC NEWSPAPER ADS STIR VIENNA SECRET POLICE

VIENNA (AP)—Austrian police, always alert to detect illegal political activity, suspect that some citizens are committing treason by code.

Newspapers recently appeared with advertisements in which the figure "88" was prominent. A master mind of the political police determined that since "H" is the eighth letter of the alphabet, 88 might mean "Heil Hitler," which is a terrible expression in Austria.

Code advertising, and conveying illegal messages by cryptic phrases published in newspapers, is no novelty in Europe. While the World War was in progress the Austrian fugitive, Thomas C. Massaryk, retired president of Czechoslovakia, communicated with Eduard Benes, his recent successor, through advertisements in Swiss newspapers.

MISSION CHILDREN TRAVEL TO SCHOOL BY AIRPLANE

Chungking, China (AP)—Missionary children who in former years spent nine days reaching the missionary school at Chengtu by primitive transportation now make the trip in two hours. Chengtu is the site of the only large missionary school in Szechuan province. American, Canadian and English children, living here formerly made a 300-mile journey by sedan chair to reach the school at the beginning of each term. Often they were delayed by handits. With recent inauguration of airplane service between Shungking and Chengtu nearly all the children now travel to boarding school by air. The cost is about the same as by chair.

BENSON IS ALLY TO SHIPSTEAD

Successor to Senator Schall Farmer-Laborite

By HERBERT PLUMMER
WASHINGTON—With the appointment of Elmer A. Benson to the senate succeeding the late Thomas D. Schall of Minnesota, Henrik Shipstead emerges from his slotary grandeur as a one-man party in that body.

Benson is a member of the Farmer-Labor party, like Shipstead. For 14 years now the rugged senior senator from Minnesota has served here and for most of that time he has gone it all alone, without benefit of a single partisan ally. He has a bloc now, small though it is with Benson's seating.

The selection of the former banker to occupy the place of Schall, a Republican, likewise has created an unusual and a nice balance within the entire Minnesota congressional delegation. There now are five Republicans, five Farmer-Laborites and a lone Democrat. The balance of power, however, lies definitely with the Farmer-Laborites, through their control of both senate seats.

Benson's appointment brought about some interesting speculation, incidentally, by Washington observers as to what might have happened had Walter H. Newton not left his Minnesota house seat to serve Herbert Hoover as secretary after the election of 1928. Some believed Newton was pointing toward an eventual try at the senate.

Once closely identified with Mr. Hoover and an influential figure, he now has dropped almost out of sight politically. Under a sort of gentleman's agreement he was appointed by President Roosevelt to a one-year position in the government, but at the expiration of his year was dropped.

Had he remained in the house, he might now occupy a commanding place among Minnesota Republicans.

Senator Borah's decision to speak in New York means that he plans to carry his fight for a "liberal" Republican presidential nominee—not necessary himself—right into the stronghold of the enemy. The Republican conservatives usually are figured as more numerous in the east than in the west. It is that element of the party that the Idaho veteran is trying to sweep out of control.

The engagement also is viewed by many as much closer to formal announcement for president than Borah's essentially passive previous expressions that he had no objection to having his name put up in the Wisconsin primaries. The speech is likely to be awaited eagerly by all factions—not forgetting the Republican old guard. What the Senator says conceivably could shape the whole movement in his campaign for a "liberal."

LESSONS IN LAW-MAKING

5. 'Aye' and 'No'
Many bills in congress are passed by unanimous consent. On the more controversial subjects the house employs four methods of voting and the senate usually two.

There are only 96 senators, so as a rule votes are taken either via voice or by roll call. With a membership of 435 in the house, a roll call is employed only when absolutely necessary.

Ordinarily the Speaker puts the question and those in favor say "Aye," then those opposed say "No." If there is doubt as to the result, any member may ask for a division. Those voting in the affirmative stand up and are counted, then those opposed do the same. The Speaker does the counting and announces the result.

If there is still doubt, or if demand is made by one-fifth of a quorum, tellers are ordered. The speaker appoints one member on each side of the question to make the count. The tellers take their places at the head of the center aisle and count the members favoring the proposition as they walk through. Then those opposed do likewise. This vote settles most of the questions.

A roll call may be demanded, however, by anyone on any question in the house, and if supported by one fifth of those present, it is ordered. This privilege is guaranteed by the constitution.

The clerk calls the names of the entire membership, and as his or her name is called the member answers "Aye" or "No." The names of those not voting the first time are called again, thus insuring that all members in corridors, cloak-rooms, committee rooms, or offices who have been notified of a roll call by signal bells may have the opportunity to vote.
