Price: Five Cents

Thirty Per Cent Cut In Flue-Cured Tobacco Advised By Officials

Flue Cured Advisory Committee Makes Recommendation

ASKS REDUCTION BASE CONTRACT

Weed Growers Advised to Put Themselves in Position to Take Advantage

Washington, Jan. 29.—(AP)—A voluntary 30 per cent acreage reduction below 1935 flue cured contracts was recommended today by the flue cured tobacco advisory committee.

The committee expressed the opinion the Supreme Court decision invalidating the agricultural adjustment act also did away with the Kerr-Smith tobacco program.

Claude T. Hall of Wooddale, N. C., said present indications were for a 800,000,000 pound crop in 1936, whereas the committee believes that only 640,000,000 can be sold at reasonable prices.

The committee made the following recommendations:

- 1. That flue cured tobacco growers reduce their individual planting in 1936 30 per cent below their base under the 1935 contract.
2. That all production credit agencies including warehousemen, fertilizer dealers and governmental foreexercise extreme caution in extending credit for tobacco production this spring.
3. That all tobacco growers attend the program planting and discussion group meetings now being conducted in their counties and put themselves into position to take advantage of the program soil conservation program or any other program offered by the federal government.
4. That as soon as Congress enacts farm legislation the grower will be notified of its provisions and what will be necessary for them to do to qualify for benefits.

Start Decorating For Birthday Ball In City Tomorrow

Dance and Floor Show Starting at 9:30 o'Clock to Be Held in Campus Building at College

The spacious Campus building at Teachers College here, where the 10-1 Birthday ball will be held tomorrow night, was being decorated today, final touches being made for the floor show and everything in general stirred much interest in the approaching event.

Sale of tickets was reported to be gratifying to members of the committee staging the dance and show honoring the President's birthday and providing funds to aid crippled children.

Of the total net receipts, 70 per cent will be kept in the community to aid indigent crippled children.

Dancing will start at 9:30 with an elaborate floor show under the direction of Miss Ramona Staples of the Ramona school of dancing slated to start at 10 o'clock.

All activities will be brought to a halt promptly at 11 o'clock when President Roosevelt will address this and similar balls throughout the country.

Republican Says Secretary Ought To Be Impeached

Washington, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Representative Treadway (R-Mass) told the House today that Secretary Wallace "ought to be impeached" for his criticism of the Supreme court's decision refunding imponded processing taxes.

Treadway attacked particularly Wallace's comment that the court order to return the processing taxes was "the greatest legalized steal in history."

"Any public official who makes a statement which calls a Supreme Court decision a legalized steal ought to be impeached," Treadway said.

The Massachusetts Republican said Wallace "should take a sprint from the cabinet—a walk would be too slow."

"The President ought to begin cleaning out the cabinet from Wallace up or down," Treadway concluded amidst Republican applause. There was no immediate reply from the Democratic side.

SENATE GETS SUB FOR AAA

Grave Doubt Expressed As to Constitutionality

Washington, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Burdened with constitutional doubt and threatened with inflationary attacks the revised administration conservation subsidy plan for replacing the AAA was ordered reported to the senate today by its agriculture committee. The vote was 15 to 2.

Chairman Smith (D. S. C.) expressed "grave doubt" as to the measures constitutionally and "and several others of the 15 on the affirmative side voted merely "to report" instead of "favorably" reporting it.

He and Senator Bankhead (D-Ala) who introduced the bill declared however, that a majority of those voting wanted a "favorable report."

Senator McNary, of Oregon, the Representative leader and Norbeck (R. SD) voted against the bill which goes to the floor without material change.

Smith said the committee would meet tomorrow to decide whether to include in the report but not in the bill argument by Senator Thomas (D. Okla) for more and cheaper money to keep up farm prices.

Although Secretary Wallace and Solicitor Stanley Reed had expressed opinion the bill is constitutional, several committee members still considered it outside the bounds of the supreme court decision invalidating the AAA.

RICHARD LOEB DEBT SETTLED

Pays with His Life's Blood in Grim Penitentiary

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 29.—(AP)—A coroner's jury sitting on Richard Loeb's slaying in Statesville penitentiary yesterday, returned a verdict today accusing James Day, 29-year-old fellow convict of "homicide."

The jury recommended that Day who refused to tell his own story as the first official investigation was launched, be held for the Will County grand jury.

Authorities said the verdict was the usual one in case of murder but its report found that Loeb, partner of Nathan Leopold, Jr. in the murder of Bobby Franks, died in a fight with the younger co-vict.

Simultaneously an official statement was issued asto what preceded yesterday afternoon's bloody fight in a prison bathroom from which Loeb staggered out to die of 56 razor wounds.

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 29.—(AP)—Richard Loeb's debt to society contracted by the murder of Bobby Franks was stamped paid today in his own life's blood.

Firemen Answer Three Fire Calls So Far This Week

No Damage Reported From Any of Blazes; Fire Last Night at Negro House on Third Street

Greenville's fire department last night answered the third call this week but no damage was reported from any of the co-flagrations.

The fire last night at a negro house, was on Third street at the Atlantic Coast Line railroad crossing. The blaze was started by an oil burning stove in the home of Richard Teel.

Sunday morning firemen answered a call to extinguish a fire in the woodshed at the home of W. J. Turnage. Firemen said the fire was started by some children playing in the old shed.

Sunday afternoon the firemen were called to a house next to the colored school on Fleming street. There was no fire at the place, residents having become alarmed at smoke blowing back down the chimney and coming out into the room.

PROFITS SHOW STEADY DRIVE FOR RECOVERY

Industry Achieved the Greatest Gains Last Quarter

LEADERS REPORT LARGER EARNING

Automotive, Steel and Railroad Corporations Show Larger Increases in Profits

New York, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Industry's steady push toward recovery last year achieved its greatest momentum in the final quarter as evidenced by the impressive showing of industrial and railroad earnings' statements released during the last few days.

General Motors Corp. giant leader of the automobile industry, reported the largest December quarter earnings in the 28 years of its existence and for the entire year 1935 the best profits since 1929.

United States Steel Corporation, likewise the leader of its field, ended a long succession of deficits with the first December quarter profits after deferred profit stock dividends in several years.

Steel concerns, in spite of low rate of operation in the first half, finished the year with net earnings of $1,984,917 compared with net losses of more than $21,600,500 in 1934.

Most of the important railroads were able in December to raise by a good margin in the limits of their gains shown in the immediately preceding months. And in contrast with December, 1934 the improvements in their revenues was considerable.

Systems serving the important industrial areas were among those showing substantial gains. Some of these were shown to feel the effect of business recovery starting early in the summer of 1935 but in the final months of the year their revenues were lifted sharply.

So called Granger roads generally have experienced equal improvements.

Mr. Smith is considered not only a great Christian worker but a most interesting public speaker.

FORCES UNITED AFTER LOSSES

Attempts Reassemble Scattered Ethiopian Warriors

(By The Associated Press)

Delayed accounts from the Southern Italian front told today of desperate efforts of Ras Desta Denu, Ethiopian chieftain, to reassemble his scattered forces after fascist victories along the Gennale Dorya river.

The pursuing forces of General Graziani found the retreating defenders had fired one large supply magazine but the invaders captured a second with guns and munitions and supplies.

The Italians moved to cut the possible Ethiopian supply source from the British Kenya colony as the scattered Ethiopian soldiers left water holes in the hands of the swiftly moving blackshirts.

Two planes flying across the Kenya border were reported by the Italian high command to be signalling "goop" movements to the Ethiopians.

Inspection of the Italian lines along the Northern Takkala front by an associated press correspondent disclosed a new consolidated position indicating the invaders intended to hold the line during the coming rainy season.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

News Behind The News

WASHINGTON

By Ray Tucker

JOBLESS: Washington's official reports show that while unemployment figures for 1935 were more than 10,000,000, the actual unemployment figures show that the best available figures show more than 7,000,000. Best evidence that these are not political blarney is the fact that they will never be published.

HEALTHY: A breakdown in Mr. Green's analysis reveals where the economic machinery squeaks. It confirms in startling form the contention of private economists that industry is not the big bad wolf of the depression.

Unemployment in manufacturing amounts to only 16 per cent of the 1929 average of jobholders if salary on the farm now than in boom times.

Additional Auto Drunks Are Sentenced In Court

AN APPEAL

There are two hundred children in the Greenville City Schools who are cold because of lack of clothing to keep them warm. The Federal Government is no longer furnishing any clothing to the children who need it. It, therefore, now becomes the responsibility of the Greenville people to take care of their own folks.

Stored away in old trunks and closets of hundreds of homes in Greenville are large quantities of old clothes and shoes; old sweaters, underwear, stockings.

Will you not take the time to collect these old garments? If you will, and then if you will go to the telephone, call Number 69, the office of the Superintendent of Schools, some one will call for the articles. JUNIUS H. ROSE, Supt.

Many Prisoners Moved to Raleigh From Local Jail

Two Long-Termers Taken to State's Prison in Raleigh Today Following Conviction Last Week

With the removal of two prisoners from the Pitt county jail to State's prison in Raleigh today, 15 persons convicted at the recent term of Superior court have been removed to the central prison.

John Cannon, white man convicted of having Carnal knowledge of a minor, was taken to Raleigh today to begin serving a five to seven year sentence.

Bill Brown, negro, was taken to serve a term of 15 to 20 years for murder.

Less than a dozen prisoners remain in the county prison now, and two of this number are trustees. A county court session yesterday cleaned out some of the inmates, leaving the lock-up practically clear of persons awaiting trial.

The jail probably soon will start filling up again, however it was indicated.

Smith Challenges Roosevelt Answer Address to League

Former Presidential Nominee Says "There is Only One Man Who Should Try to Answer"

New York, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Alfred E. Smith declared today "there is only one man who should try to answer" his American Liberty League address—an open challenge to President Roosevelt issued after Senator Joseph T. Robinson's reply to the Liberty League address.

The former senator and bitter critic of the new deal defended his course of action before the Liberty League, praised the group of anti-new deal Democrats who have met country above party, and delivered stinging comments on Senator Robinson's address last night.

The 1928 Democratic presidential nominee said he would make no specific reply to Robinson's address—which seemed smothered of "about-face in politics and beliefs."

"I was an unhappy surprise to hear him read off his speech over which he stumbled so that I felt sure it was canned and did not come from the heart of the Joe Robinson that I have known."

"Poor Joe—I am sorry for him. They put him in a tough spot. He did the best he knew, but it was no answer. As I said in my speech there at the Liberty League dinner—there is only one man who should answer me."

Democrats Asked Join Revolt Against New Deal By Governor Talmadge

MOVE PLANNED AGAINST F. D. R.

Insurgent Southern Democrats Organize Against New Deal

Macon, Ga., Jan. 29.—(AP)—Insurgent Southern Democrats, rallied by the cry of state's rights, organized at grass roots mass meeting in Macon's million dollar auditorium today for a drive against the nomination of President Roosevelt for a second term.

Resolution bitterly condemning the administration records were presented and the Roosevelt policies were assailed in speeches by Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, himself a tentative candidate for the Presidency, and John Henry Kirby of Houston, Texas, a head of the southern committee to uphold the constitution.

"The thing President Roosevelt is providing for us," Kirby told the assembly, "is some fashion of contempt all-oppressing bureau. The Security it may give will be no better than that found behind the walls of the Atlantic penitentiary."

"No real democrat can or will endorse Mr. Roosevelt."

The platform committee headed by Hugh Howell, chairman of the Talmadge-controlled Georgia democracy, (Continued on page six)

ALFRED SMITH FEUD RAGES ON

Roosevelt Forces and Al Smith Remain Far Apart

Washington, Jan. 29.—(AP)—The furious feud between the Roosevelt forces and Alfred E. Smith raged on in undiminished acrimony together with the new deal officially labeling the former New York governor as a man who has deserted progressivism and gone "over to the camp of the enemy."

Any likelihood that the administration would seek to bridge the chasm between it and Smith appeared to dwindle away in view of the reply delivered last night by Senator Robinson. (D-Ark) to Smith's recent speech before the American Liberty League.

The Capital awaited Smith's next move, watching to see what effect the attitude of administration forces would have on the ex-governor, who has threatened to "take a walk" from the Democratic National convention.

To Smith's charge that the new deal had tossed aside the party platform and become socialist, Robinson replied that this was "warring against his own people no against the men and women with whom he fought shoulder to shoulder in the past."

SEEK PROVIDE NEEDED RELIEF

Plans Formulated to Raise $2,000 Provide Fuel, Food

At a preliminary session yesterday afternoon and a general meeting this morning of Greenville officials and prominent citizens, plans were formulated for providing fuel and food for needy families in the city.

It was decided to attempt to raise $2,000 to provide these necessities for the city's suffering. The current cold wave found many people in the city without fuel or clothing and no means of securing these bare essentials of life.

In addition to the $2,000, which is expected to be raised with little difficulty, a sum of cash left over from a similar drive three years ago is on hand to be used in the program.

City officials pointed out that they were flooded with reports of people suffering from cold and lack of food and that there was no means for the city itself providing these necessities.

Provision will be made for recreation and entertainment as well as for serious work. A number of outstanding attractions will be offered in the entertainment program, plans for the usual barbeque, meals on feasts, and other social affairs are being made. President Meadows said that he can promise that there will be at least 1500 meals raised for the summer school students.

Announcements giving detailed information about the Summer Schools will be made later in the term.

Montana reported a general increase of 38 per cent in harvesting her principal crops in 1935.

Declares That States' Rights Hanging in Balance

INTIMIDATION IS CHARGED

Says Cabinet Trying Force Governors and Legislatures Pass New Deal Acts

Macon, Ga., Jan. 29.—(AP)—Gov. Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, called upon southern Democrats at their anti-Roosevelt meeting here today to join "our brothers in the east and north and west" in a revolt against the new deal.

"The state's rights are in the balance today," he said, "more than they were in the days of 1861." Talmadge declared in a broadcast (CBS) address that "if the new dealers can pick their own supreme court, the wheels of our democracy would catch fire and burn down our freedom."

"The supreme court has come to our rescue," Talmadge said in charging the Federal government is working to "tear down state's rights."

"We owe it to the north and east and the west to help in this fight to see that no communists nor socialist steal the Democratic nomination and mocks you with smiles and tears by telling you the south is always solidly democratic."

Governor Talmadge charged cabinet officers at Washington had tried to "intimidate governors and legislature to pass their new deal legislation in order to centralize government in Washington."

"The governor said he was sad to say that some governors had "gone stepped" in the line and saddled on their states and counties taxes that "it will take a century to pay, giving over the freedom and sovereignty of their states to boards or bureaus in Washington."

Talmadge said that when he refused to goose step he was labeled by a member of the cabinet (Sec. Tokes) as "his chalangang excellency whose word is no good."

The Governor said he hoped forces was listening to his speech because he wanted to tell him.

"The people of the United States are going to answer in November of this year by driving him and all of his cohorts from Washington and never allowing them to return."

Extensive Plans Made By College For Extra Session

Summer School Faculty Nearly Completed by President Meadows of East Carolina College

Extensive plans are being made for the Summer School of East Carolina Teachers College, which President Meadows expects to be one of the largest in the history of the school. He will soon have his faculty list completed as he has engaged a number of the teachers and is negotiating for others.

The commercial courses, which are being offered this term for the first time and are proving to be very popular, will doubtless attract a number of students.

The field trips, which were offered last summer for the first time, will be extended this year. Not only will tours to the northeastern part of the United States and Canada, similar to those of last year, be offered, but a longer tour through the southwestern part of the United States and Mexico, going as far as Mexico City, has been planned. These courses are outlined by the departments offering the field trips and college credits will be given those who fulfill their requirements of the courses are given by qualified instructors.

Provision will be made for recreation and entertainment as well as for serious work. A number of outstanding attractions will be offered in the entertainment program, plans for the usual barbeque, meals on feasts, and other social affairs are being made. President Meadows said that he can promise that there will be at least 1500 meals raised for the summer school students.

Many Duties Lifted From The Widow Of Late British Monarch

By MELVIN E. COLEMAN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

The quiet, conservative family life which she and King George struggled to maintain amid the pomp and circumstances of a royal court, is a promise of the future for Queen Mary.

The year of mourning—nine months of it—decreed by her son, Edward VIII, naturally reduces to the minimum of necessity the public appearances of the bereaved royal family, but once that time is over, the new king, his brothers and their families probably will be plunged into a strenuous round of social and official affairs.

Court Affairs in Past
Not so their "queen mother." In her new status she will no longer be required to attend courts and stand while long lines of debutantes and matrons advance before her, curtsy and retire.

Visits from officials and royalty of other nations, openings of parliament, trooping of the colors and all the other official "occasions" at which the queen was expected to be at the side of a reigning sovereign, will no longer require her presence.

She went through many years of this, determined to be a real queen to her people and a genuine helpmate to her husband. How she succeeded has been testified by British records and contemporary historians.

Quiet Hobbies Pursued
Henceforth she will be virtually free to pursue her own quiet hobbies.

Needlework and the collection of antiques, and especially fans, have been her chief avocations. She could seldom resist the temptation to look into every antique shop to which she came.

Also she has been a confirmed shopper. Her purchase of long "woolies" for King George a few years back was recorded around the world. Her ability to drive a bargain was known, and sometimes dreaded, by shopkeepers and clerks.

Always she insisted upon "Buying British." Imported stuffs and articles had little appeal to her either as an Englishwoman or as the thrifty soul she always has been.

Also she likes to read. Her memory is stored with the results of this habit.

Management of her household was trained into her in girlhood. Her parents, the Duke and Duchess of Teck, were far from wealthy and frequently were hard put to maintain their social position. "May" therefore helped her mother, not only in planning the family expenditures, but also by undertaking some of the duties that ordinarily might have been performed by secretaries.

She has some favorite charities, of which she has given both money and inspection. The must be efficient to continue to receive her support.

Finally there is her church. She is a devout communicant of the Church of England, but prefers "low" services to "high church" ritual.

The death of King George of Great Britain has changed the status of his widow. She now is "queen mother," a passive role which probably will free her from many of the formal public appearances which she had to make as wife of the reigning monarch.

There are still some who think he would make a fair race for the gubernatorial nomination, pointing out that in addition to having contact with the public through the life insurance agents of his company in almost every city and town in the state, the company either owns or had mortgages on farms, homes, factories and other property in all most every section of the state—all of which would be of benefit in a political campaign. It is even reported that the Jefferson Standard owns the controlling interest in one railroad—the Atlantic and Yadkin—and two bus companies. So it is agreed that Price would have had a lot of things in his favor if he should have become a candidate for Governor.

But there are two principal reasons why Price will not run for Governor, according to political analysis here. The first is that too many of his friends who otherwise could be depended upon to support him are already supporting one of the other candidates for Governor, chiefly either Clyde R. Hoey or Shelby or Lieutenant Governor A. H. (Sandy) Graham of Hillsboro. For it is agreed that those who would support Price belong to the class who are opposed to the nomination of Dr. Ralph W. McDonald of Winston-Salem. Thus if Price should become a candidate for Governor his candidacy would only serve to further split the element opposed to Dr. McDonald and make the nomination of McDonald more likely. It is maintained in most political circles.

The second principal reason Price is not going to be a candidate for Governor, according to most opinion here, is that if he did get into the campaign he would have to make a vigorous fight on McDonald and his whole platform, including the sales tax and the schools, and thus run the risk of antagonizing the element in the state to whom the Jefferson Standard sells most of its life insurance—the middle and working classes. It is hence understood that his advisors and fellow officials decided that from a financial and business standpoint it would be too big a risk for Price to run for Governor, even if he should be nominated. And indications are that very few besides himself thought he could be nominated, if he ran.

But neither of these factors would prevail if Price should become a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, it is maintained. At first there were indications that the business interests of the state were going to center on Senator W. P. Horton for Lieutenant Governor. But reports now are that the railroads, the big textile and other manufacturers run for Governor, even if he should be nominated. And indications are that very few besides himself thought he could be nominated, if he ran.

who ship by rail and the other interests which usually stick with the group, are refusing to back Horton because of his past connections with the North Carolina Truck Owners Association and his legislative efforts in their behalf. It is also reported that none of these interests are inclined to switch to George McNeill of Fayetteville another candidate for Lieutenant Governor, because they do not think he can make the grade. They are opposed, of course, to Senator Paul D. Grady of Johnston county, the third candidate who is running on an anti-sales tax ticket, similar to McDonald's.

Accordingly, it is reported here that if Price will become a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, he will get the combined support of most of those who are supporting both Hoey and Graham for Governor, with the result that he would be almost sure of getting the nomination without having to oppose or antagonize any of the candidates for Governor, not even McDonald. So it would not surprise very many here if Price should lower his sights and announce as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, the not far distance future.

POWER FIRMS BACK COUNTY

Reported to Favor County Liquor Control Plan

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
By J. C. BASKERVILL.

Raleigh, Jan. 29.—If sentiment is growing steadily over the state in favor of county liquor stores and county control, instead of for state liquor stores under centralized state control—and reports heard here from many parts of the state indicate that this is true—the reason is not Grape Nuts.

The principal reason for the change in sentiment, according to reports gaining circulation here, is that the big power companies of the state have started to get behind the county liquor stores. Liquor control plan as one means of warding off any interest on the part of cities and towns in municipal power plants. The theory seems to be that if the counties are permitted to operate liquor stores and divide the revenue from these stores between the county and the towns in which they are located, that the towns will not have to look for any additional means of increasing their revenue and that hence will not think it worth while to build any municipal power plants.

In substantiation of the contention that the big power interests in the state are already actively backing the county liquor stores plan instead of a state liquor stores and control plan, it is being pointed out that already half a dozen candidates are out for the general assembly on platforms favoring county liquor stores instead of state stores. It is also pointed out that quite a number of these candidates are regarded as being quite friendly towards the power interests. And to all intents and purposes, the movement for county liquor stores and county control will appear to be a movement originating from and in the counties, because of the large amount of revenue which the 15 counties now operating liquor stores are getting from them. Accordingly, the public would never suspect that the power companies

JULIAN PRICE CHANGES MIND

Greensboro Man Not to Seek Gubernatorial Nomination

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
By J. C. BASKERVILL.

Raleigh, Jan. 28.—Julian Price of Greensboro, president of the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company there, will not be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, as much as he would undoubtedly like to become Governor and in spite of the reports heard from time to time that he may get into the race, according to the opinion in most political circles here. But there is a strong possibility that Price may become a candidate for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor, quite a number here believe.

Mr. Price would much rather be Governor than Lieutenant Governor, it is generally believed and until recently was giving serious consideration to becoming a candidate.

Mr. and Mrs. Adkins Honored.
Mrs. E. R. Byrum and Miss Carrie Twine were joint hostesses at a lovely shower last Friday evening honoring Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Adkins, recent bride and groom.

The guests arrived at eight o'clock and a short but appropriate program was rendered. Those taking part in the program were W. B. Peele, Misses Helen Bunch and Louise Carson. After the program Miss Carrie Twine presented the bride and groom with a large basket filled with many beautiful and useful gifts. The bride then opened each package with wild excitement and thanked each giver in a pleasant manner.

Mrs. Byrum served hot tea and coffee with cakes and sandwiches. She was assisted by Mrs. J. W. Bunch and Mrs. H. C. Baker. Then came the fun of cutting the cake. Miss Clara Williams got the ring. The cake was beautifully decorated, having a miniature bride and groom in the center.

The dining room presented a cheery scene with lovely evergreens artistically arranged.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bunch, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Peele, Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Conway, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. First Church of Christ, Scientist.
"Truth" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all churches and societies of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, January 26.
The golden text was from Isaiah 25:1: "O Lord, thou art my God; I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name; for thou hast done wonderful things; thy counsels of old are faithfulness and truth."
Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "The preparations of the heart in man, and the answer of the tongue, is from the Lord. Commit thy works unto the Lord, and thy thoughts shall be established. A man's heart deviseth his way; but the Lord directeth his steps." (Prov. 16:1, 3, 9).
The lesson-sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The divine demand, 'Be ye therefore perfect,' is scientific, and the human footsteps leading to perfection are indispensable. Individuals are consistent who, watching and praying, can run, and not be weary—walk, and not faint; who gain speed rapidly and hold their position or attain slowly and yield not to discouragement. God requires perfection, but not until the battle between spirit and flesh is fought and the victory won. To stop eating, drinking, or being clothed materially before the spiritual facts of existence are gained step by step, is not legitimate. When we patiently on God and seek Truth righteously, He directs our path."

CANDIDATES CROSS PATHS

Leading gubernatorial Candidates Meet in Raleigh

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, Jan. 29.—The three leading candidates for Governor were all in Raleigh during the first two days of this week campaigning and conferring with their supporters. Clyde R. Hoey of Shelby was here Sunday and Monday, Lieutenant-Governor A. H. Graham was here Monday and Tuesday, while McDonald was here for a short time Monday. McDonald also spent considerable time here Friday and Saturday of last week.

All three candidates expressed satisfaction as to the manner in which their campaigns are progressing. While Hoey has not made any campaign speeches as yet, he is getting about the state more than ever making non-political speeches before religious and fraternal meetings—he spoke here Sunday afternoon before the state meeting of the Baraca and Philathea Sunday School Class movement—and conferring with his supporters. Current reports are that Hoey is rapidly perfecting a very strong organization extending into almost every county in the state. He indicated he would open his campaign about the middle of February with a speech in Charlotte in which he would state his position on all of the issues in the campaign.

Lieutenant Governor Graham was much in evidence Monday night and Tuesday at the various sessions of the state convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in session at the Sir Walter Hotel here. His supporters maintain that Graham has been making very substantial progress during the past four or five weeks, especially in the western part of the state and that he is daily becoming a more and more formidable candidate. They also maintain that he has built up a strong organization. Dr. McDonald is as enthusiastic as ever, if not more so, and maintains that he is piling up more and more votes every day. It is readily conceded here that McDonald has probably covered more of the state, met more people and made more campaign speeches than either of the other two candidates to date. He is more confident than ever that he will be nominated.

PIE POINTERS MAKE CRUST LIGHT, FLAKY

When baking pies such as pumpkin and custard, roll the crust. Line the pie plate with this and pour melted butter inside. Let this stand five minutes. Then pour in the mixture prepared for the pie, and bake. In this way, the under crust will never be heavy. If you wish the under crust better browned than usual and very flaky and delicate, butter the pie tin before putting in the crust.

When making any kind of fruit pies, it helps to have the syrups kept on hand. Make these ahead of time. Two cups of granulated sugar and a quarter of a cup of water boiled five minutes will do the trick. Sweeten fruit pies with this syrup and the results will be excellent.

THE BOOMERANG CLUE BY AGATHA CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS: Bobby and Frankie are trying their best to determine just whether there was murder done in the matter of the man who fell over the cliff, second, what Bassington-French's connection with the matter was; third, how it happens that the photograph found later in the dead man's pocket was not the one Bobby saw there in the first place. Is Bassington-French guilty? Are the cousins mixed up in it? Who tried to poison Bobby? What do the dead man's enigmatic last words mean?

Chapter 12 DEDUCTION

ACCORDING to our present theory it goes like this, Bobby continued. "Dead man X is deliberately pushed over cliff—presumably by B. F. (pardon the initials). It is important that X should not be correctly identified, so the portrait of Mrs. C. is put in his pocket and the portrait of Fair Unknown removed. Who was she, I wonder?"

"Keep to the point," said Frankie sternly. "Mrs. C. waits for photograph to appear. Then turns up as grief-stricken sister and identifies X as her brother from foreign parts."

"You don't believe he could really have been her brother?" "Not for a moment! You know, it puzzled me all along. The Caymans were a different class altogether. The dead man was well, it sounds a most awful thing to say and just like some deadly old retired Anglo-Indian—but the dead man was a pukka sahib."

"And the Caymans emphatically weren't!" "Most emphatically."

"And then, just when everything has gone off well from the Caymans' point of view—body successfully identified, verdict of accidental death, everything in the garden lovely—you come along and mess things up," mused Frankie.

"Why didn't they ask Evans?" Bobby repeated the phrase thoughtfully. "You know I can't see what on earth there can be in that to put the wind up anybody."

"Ah! that's because you don't know it's like making crossword puzzles. You write down a clue and you think it's too idiotically simple and that everyone will guess it straight off, and you're frightfully surprised when they simply can't get it in the least. Why didn't they ask Evans? must have been a most frightful significant phrase to them, and they couldn't realize that it meant nothing at all to you."

"More fools they." "Oh, quite so. But it's just possible they thought that if Pritchard said that, he might have said something more which would also recur to you in due time. Anyway they weren't going to take chances. You were safer out of the way."

"They took a lot of risk. Why didn't they engineer another 'accident'?"

"No, no. That would have been stupid. Two accidents within a week of each other? It might have suggested a connection between the two, and then people would have begun inquiring into the first one. No, I think there's a kind of bad simplicity about their method which is really rather clever."

"And yet you said just now that morphia wasn't easy to get hold of." "No more it is. You have to sign poison books and things. Oh, of course, that's a clue! Whoever did it had easy access to supplies of morphia."

"A doctor, a hospital nurse, or a chemist," suggested Bobby. "Well, I was thinking more of illicitly imported drugs."

"You can't mix up too many different sorts of crime," said Bobby. "You see, the strong point would be the absence of motive. Your death doesn't benefit anyone. So what will be the police think?"

"A lunatic," said Bobby. "And that's what they do think."

"You see? It's awfully simple really."

BOBBY began to laugh suddenly. "What's amusing you?"

"Just the thought of how sick-making it must be for them! All that morphia enough to kill five or six people—and here I am alive and kicking."

"One of life's little ironies that we can't foresee," agreed Frankie.

"The question is what do we do next?" said Bobby practically.

"Oh! lots of things," said Frankie promptly.

"Such as—?"

"Well—finding out about the photograph that there was only one out two. And about Bassington-French's house hunting."

"That will probably be quite all right and above-board."

"Why do you say that?"

"Look here, Frankie, think a minute. Bassington-French must be above suspicion. He must be all clear and above-board. Not only must there be nothing to connect him in any way with the dead man, but he must have a proper reason for being down here. He may have invented house-hunting on the spur of the moment, but I bet he carried out something of the kind. There must be no suggestion of a 'mysterious stranger seen in the neighborhood of the accident.' I fancy that Bassington-French is his real name, and that he's the sort of person who would be quite above suspicion."

"Yes," said Frankie thoughtfully. "That's a very good deduction. There will be nothing whatever to connect Bassington-French with Alex Pritchard. Now if we knew who the dead man really was—"

"Ah! then it might be different." "So it was very important that the body should not be recognized. Hence all the Cayman camouflage. And yet it was taking a big risk."

"You forget that Mrs. Cayman identified him as soon as was humanly possible. After that, even if there had been pictures of him in the papers (you know how blurry these things are) people would only say, 'Curious, this man Pritchard who fell over a cliff is really extraordinarily like Mr. X.'"

"There must be more to it than that," said Frankie shrewdly. "X must have been a man who wouldn't easily be missed, I mean, he couldn't have been the sort of family man whose wife or relations would go to the police at once and report him missing."

"Good for you, Frankie. No, he must have been just going abroad, or perhaps just come back (he was marvellously tanned, like a big-game hunter—he looked that sort of person), and he can't have had any very near relations who knew all about his movements."

"We're deducing beautifully," said Frankie. "I hope we're not deducing all wrong."

"Very likely," said Bobby. "But I think what we've said so far is fairly sound sense—granted, that is, the wild improbability of the whole thing."

Frankie waved away the wild improbability with an airy gesture. "The thing is—what do we do next?" she said. "It seems to me we've got three angles of attack."

"Go on, Sherlock."

"The first is you. They've made one attempt on your life. They'll probably try again. This time we might get what they call a 'line' on them. Using you as a decoy, I mean."

"No, thank you, Frankie," said Bobby with feeling. "I've been very lucky this time, but I mightn't be so lucky again if they changed the attack to a blunt instrument. I was thinking of taking a great deal of care of myself in the future. The decoy idea can be washed out."

"I was afraid you'd say that," said Frankie with a sigh. "Young men are sadly degenerate nowadays. Father says so. They don't enjoy being uncomfortable and doing dangerous and unpleasant things any longer. It's a pity."

"A great pity," said Bobby, but he spoke with firmness. "What's the second plan of campaign?"

"Working from the 'Why didn't they ask Evans?' clue," said Frankie. "Presumably the dead man came down here to see Evans—whichever he was. Now, if we could find Evans—"

"How many Evanses," Bobby interrupted, "do you think there are in Marchbold?"

"Several hundred, I should think," admitted Frankie.

"At least! We might do something that way, but I'm rather doubtful."

"We could list all the Evanses and visit the likely ones."

"And ask them—what?"

"That's the difficulty," said Frankie.

"We need to know a little more," said Bobby. "Then that idea of yours might come in useful. What's Number 3?"

"This man Bassington-French. There we have got something tangible to go upon. It's an uncommon name. I'll ask Father. He knows all these county family names and their various branches."

"Yes," said Bobby. "We might do something that way."

"At any rate we are going to do something."

"Of course we are. Do you think I'm going to be given eight grains of morphia and do nothing about it?"

"That's the spirit!" said Frankie.

"And besides that," added Bobby, "there's the indignity of the stomach pump to be washed out."

"That's enough," said Frankie. (Copyright 1935-36, Agatha Christie)

Frankie gets some information from her father, tomorrow, and a short lecture besides.

INFRINGED: Senatorial silver-ites are sniping at Henry Morgenthau's now-90-see-it-now-you-don't policy of purchasing the metal behind their backs.

The latest scheme to satisfy aaterial curiosity as to how many white chips he has piled up, where he is getting them and how much they cost is Pat McCarran's bill. Though seemingly innocent on its face (it simply provides for repeal of three silver sections of the original law), it repeals the provisions imposing a 50 per cent tax on all profits from sales of silver.

Americans can't dispose of their holdings under the law because it strips them of profits even at top prices. The result has been that the Secretary of the Treasury has grabbed silver in foreign countries, where dealers are free of the tax, and he won't divulge his overseas secrets to Congress. But they have not forced Henry's hand yet. Although the bill romped through the Senate, Mr. Morgenthau has some good friends in the House. They returned the measure to the Senate with the polite warning that it "infringed" on their right to original all revenue legislation.

IMPERSONAL: Though they would probably deny it, Morgan Partners Lamont and Whitney were shaking in their boots for fear Senior Partner J. P. Morgan would talk too volubly and violently during his appearances before the Nye Committee investigating the reasons for U. S. entry into the World War.

Chief reason for their worry is that Mr. Morgan feels deeply the charge that his firm involved this country in a conflict which cost so many American lives. Unlike his father, he is a simple, trustful, emotional man. He regards the suggestion of a Morgan hookup with war as a stain on his honor. At any time during the inquiry he might have violated the tradition which requires bankers to be calm in moments of stress. Even so, he was the only Morgan witness to exhibit personal indignation. He shook with anger several times but was sat upon figuratively speaking.

Even Nye Committee members feel that the House of Morgan registered well. The investigation's chief value, in their opinion, is in showing that the causes of war are impersonal, not individual. No one man—Morgan, Lansing, McAdoo, Wilson—whipped up the forces that pushed a peace-loving people into the war. We became involved thru circumstances which the proposed neutrality law seeks to circumvent the next time.

CHEER: Chairman Jim Landis has gained weight since he took over the troublous task of bossing the bulls and bears in Wall Street. He has conquered his shyness and nervousness. His only bad habit now is cleaning his plate before fellow-diners have finished the soup course.

The Securities and Exchange chief is losing no sleep over rumbling criticism he'd met in Manhattan or on Capitol Hill. Both "liberals" and "conservatives" are grumbling and he interprets that as a sign that he is playing fair to all comers. His latest act to stir up the bulls and Bull Moosers was his ruling on trading in unlisted stocks. He held that stocks listed on one exchange—which means that details on earnings, financial set-up and prospects must be publicized—could be dealt in on exchanges where they were not listed.

Wall Street howled because it meant a loss of business in stocks recorded only on New York's "big board." But the little fellows around the country—and their spokesmen in Congress—let out a low cheer for the chairman.

New York. By JAMES McMULLIN. READY: There will be a vigorous and concerted drive for a managed currency on the British model in this country—including further devaluation of the dollar—if the substitute AAA program flops, as insiders figure it probably will. The Committee for the Nation is already carrying a freshly lighted torch for the cause. But the real motive power will come from the large farm organizations.

Four of the "big five"—the Farm Bureau Federation, National Grange, National Cooperative Council didate who favors managed money. They are quite uneasy about this—so much so that they have privately consulted agriculture leaders about framing a monetary plank which would satisfy this sentiment without evoking savage protests from the sound money crowd. It will be a neat straddle if they can do it.

WRANGLE: The Republican tight-rope act will be all the tougher because those who are expected to provide the sinews of war have to be persuaded that monetary concessions to agriculture are necessary. This is like trying to sell Germany the idea that she ought to disarm.

Party agents who are working to achieve the diplomatic miracle have two main arguments. One is that even the fearful novelty of a managed currency is a cheap price for getting rid of Roosevelt and redemption. The other is that devaluation is the only hope of heading off printing press inflation within a couple of years—so why not make the best of it.

So far the big timers slated to play angel for the G.O.P. are unresponsive. They want a fixed gold standard and nothing else but. The situation presages a whale of a wrangle behind the scenes. It's a swell opportunity for any Republican genius who can figure out how to please the farmers and the contributors at the same time.

ADEQUATE: Financial circles get word that New Deal startegists are planning a headline play on a new program for subsidizing home builders. Secretary Morgenthau and his assistant Peter Grimm have wanted to turn housing promotion back to private initiative as fast as possible. It's understood that they will be over-ruled in order to make a political splash by encouraging low cost construction of better homes for people with small incomes.

A nest egg is already available for such a subsidy—thus averting a squabble with Congress about appropriations. $200,000,000 were set aside back in 1934 to cover losses to lending agencies on government insured bonds for home modernization. Losses have been remarkably small, so the fund is almost intact and a way can probably be found to transfer it to this new use.

This sum is small potatoes in these days of deficits measured in billions. But it would be adequate to finance a handsome gesture.

MULTIPLIED: New York conservatives are caustic about the council of mayors and their demand for federal handout of $2,340,000,000 to cover local relief needs—in addition to a carryover of $1,103,000,000 from existing work-relief funds.

The hope is that they won't get it—or anything like it. The days of spending ad lib are over. Comment runs that the mayors must have been indulging in a little pushcart bargaining on the road old theory that you are more likely to get the price you want if you multiply it at the outset. Common Sense about HEADACHE

Usually a headache is due to high nerve tension. At such times all you need is a little Capudine. This remedy is very effective because it quickly soothes tense nerves and eases pain. Of course headache may come from more serious sources. Sometimes it may be an abscessed tooth, or some underlying cause which only your family physician can discover. Meanwhile, avoid suffering as much as you can by using Capudine. Capudine contains no narcotics. It acts quickly and gently. Ask for either Capudine Liquid or Capudine Brand Tablets.

Greenville High School To Play Duke Team Here

Duke College Team Here for Big Contest Tonight

The Greenville Greensies of the Greenville High will engage the Duke All-Americans from Durham tonight in the local high school gymnasium at 7:30 o'clock.

Cocher May stated today that he had arranged with the high school band to furnish the spectators with music, and he is controlling the interests to let every person attending rest assured of a real basketball game.

This is the first time the Duke All-Americans have played a basketball game in Eastern North Carolina, and every basketball lover of the city is urged to attend the game and support both the local boys' team as well as that from Duke.

Upon their arrival with the All-Americans today, George Barley and Wayne Ambler, baseball 10's in the Coastal Plain loop for the Greensies this summer, said that being in Greenville once more, was just like home.

Tonight is one of the biggest nights for the local basketball fans, and have failed to see them in action, be there tonight at 7:30, and see the locals on to victory. Support is one of the greatest assets the local quint has, so if you had rather see their playing ability increase than to become lower, give them all the support you can.

TEACHERS WIN OVER 'Y' TEAM

College Quint Defeats Rocky Mount Aggregation

The boys' quint of East Carolina Teachers College defeated the basketballers of the Y. M. C. A. from Rocky Mount in the college gymnasium last night by a score of 42-20.

The games started at 8:30 o'clock, and was witnessed by a very large crowd, consisting of the whole college student body of the college, and numbers of high school students.

Holloman was the high scorer for the E. C. T. C. collegians, making a total of 14 points, out of those obtained by the teachers. Jimmie Johnson, right guard for the locals proved to be one of the fastest players they had, and made a total of 10 points. Fleming and Hinton tied in making points for the teachers, obtaining a total of 4 points each. Following in their footsteps in making the same number of points were Ayers and Ridenhour.

Although he failed to score, Clarence Cunningham, right forward for the locals, proved to his team mates that he was a very efficient player.

Scoring for the "Y" boys were Thurman, Aldridge, Phiffer, and Adkins.

Large Entry List Expected for Meet Of Indoor Sports

Chapel Hill, N. These games will be held at the University of North Carolina on March 7, with events both afternoon and night.

Robert A. Pitzer, director of athletics at the University of North Carolina and chairman of the Southern Conference Indoor Games Committee, announced the program today.

The divisional champions are expected to seed teams in defense of their title. The University of North Carolina holds the Southern Conference crown, William and Mary three Non-Conference, Georgetown the Freshman and McKinley High School of Washington, the Scholastic title.

HIGHS DEFEAT ROCKY MOUNT

Local Team Wins Close Tilt by Score of 27 to 24

By JAMES L. WHITFIELD
The Rocky Mount "Black Birds" of the Rocky Mount high, who had lost only one game this season previous to last night, this to the strong quint of the Hugh Morson of Raleigh, collapsed in the hands of the Greenville Greensies in the local high gymnasium last night, and saw the Greensies win by a score of 27-24.

Last night's game was undoubtedly the most enjoyable one to be witnessed in the whole history of the local high according to comments by fans after the game, who shook the foundation of the building with cheers, and went away singing "Bye Bye Blackbirds".

Carl Pierce, left forward, for the local quint, was the first scorer of the game, and when the gong was sounded for the finals, he was high scorer, making a total of 8 points. The runner-up was Dubose Simpson, center, who tallied a total of 7 points, only one less than his colleague, Pierce. Harry Rountree, the lad who seen little action since his ankle injury received in the games with Washington, came through with flying colors last night and tied in making points with Parrish, each making four points. Although Lautares and Joseph Hatem were unable to make as many points as their fellow team members, they played a brand of basketball worthy of commendation.

The game at the half was 19-11 in favor of the Blackbirds, but the Greensies were running neck and neck with the visitors in the third quarter, and during the last few minutes the ball was in play, the local basketballers obtained a lead, and the boys from Rocky Mount could not score another point.

Felton, Wink, and Daniels were the only members of the visiting team to run up any points for them. Greenville Rocky Mount Lautares T. F. Felton Pierce L. F. Wink Simpson C. Harris Parrish R. G. Felton Hatem L. G. Daniels

DR. McDONALD PLACES BLAME

Contends Forces Behind Sales Tax Wrecked Schools

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

By J. C. EASKERVILL
Raleigh, Jan. 27.—The charge being made by Dr. Ralph W. McDonald of Winston-Salem in his campaign for Governor that the sales tax forces in the 1933 general assembly wrecked the schools and deprived them of $8,200,000 of revenue from property taxes which the schools had previously had from 31 to 33 is causing much interest in political and governmental circles here. It is also causing much searching of old files and records in an effort to get at the real facts in the case.

Those who have been digging into the journals of the 1933 house and senate and who recall the happenings in the now historic 1933 session, so far are not finding much to support the contention of Dr. McDonald that the ones who favored and finally enacted the 3 per cent sales tax were the ones who battered the school appropriation down and thus deprived the schools of $8,200,000 in revenue which they formerly were getting. The conviction persists in most of the unbiased minds here of those who followed the activities of the 1933 session that if the anti-sales tax forces had won in the 1933 general assembly—the 82 members of the house—who formed the "Bowie bloc" and for months held out for nothing more than a state-wide six months school term and a state appropriation of not more than $10,000,000 a year—the schools would have been cut back to a six months term including the nine months city schools. Some of this group favored and even introduced a bill to close all schools for one year.

Yet, in talking with this correspondent here a day or so ago, Dr. McDonald reiterated his previous statements and said again: "The real school tragedy of 1933 was the reversal of the state's policy with regard to encouraging local interest in schools. The state's appropriation for schools was not increased, but $1,500,000 in state encouragement funds and $6,700,000 in local school support (raised from local property taxes) were entirely removed from the picture. The result was a very greatly reduced quality of education, due to the reduced salary scale, increased teaching loads, curtailed curriculum, reduced teaching supplies and other stringent restrictions."

Dr. McDonald pointed out that between 1931 and 1933, the general assembly provided an equalization fund of $16,000,000 a year, a tax reduction fund of $1,500,000 a year and that the schools received in addition to this money from all taxes levied and collected in the counties, cities and towns, all of which is readily admitted by every one. But Dr. McDonald has not been pointing out that under an act of the 1931 general assembly, the Governor was not permitted to curtail the state appropriation for schools, as he was required to do for all other purposes and that as a result it was necessary for the state to borrow $12,000,000 between 1931 and 1933 to meet its payments to the schools.

Nor does Dr. McDonald mention the fact that the counties as well as the state were unable to collect taxes in 1932 and 1933, either because people could not pay taxes or because they refused to. As a result, a majority of the members of the general assembly—many of them opposed to a sales tax, but who realized the fact that property taxes could no longer be depended upon to yield enough to keep the schools open more than four or five months a year—finally decided the only way to keep the schools open was to operate them with state funds and without a property tax.

The next question to be decided was the length of the term. The rural members for the most part would have been satisfied with six months term, but the cities and towns wanted at least an eight months term. But the rural members were determined that they should have as much as they city and town cousins and insisted that the term should be uniform. So it was finally agreed that the eight months term should apply to the entire state. It was then also agreed that in order to insure some property tax reduction in all the counties, that no supplemental taxes could be issued for school purposes in any other subdivisions.

This move came almost entirely from the rural counties and was put over because the rural counties always have a majority in both houses, in spite of bitter opposition from the group from the larger cities and towns.

ROBINSON CRUSOE

ADAPTED from the Daniel Defoe classic

The rural county group of course, was at the beginning of the session the group most opposed to any form of sales tax. But as the session advanced and as it became more and more apparent that it would not be possible to reduce local property taxes in all the counties, not just on railroads and corporations, as McDonald now claims, there was a gradual swing over to the belief that the sales tax was the only means of bringing about a reduction in property taxes and of eliminating the necessity for local taxes for schools. So it finally passed the sales tax, first in order to reduce local property taxes, and second, to provide state support for the schools.

Dr. McDonald maintains, however, that the 1933 general assembly passed the sales tax solely to relieve the big corporations of the property taxes they had been paying for schools and disregards the tremendous demand for property tax reduction which was then coming from every county in the state, especially the agricultural counties. And under the state constitution the general assembly could not reduce the taxes on the property of the farmers and home owners without reducing it the same amount on corporate property. So in one sense, the corporations did benefit somewhat from this reduction. But they were neither the instigators nor the sole beneficiaries of this reduction in property taxes, as McDonald now contends.

It is also maintained by Dr. McDonald that if the 1933 general assembly had not enacted the sales tax, even if it had appropriated only $10,000,000 for schools, that it would have left the counties and towns the right to keep on levying supplemental property taxes for schools, so that it could have continued to impose $8,200,000 a year in ad valorem taxes for schools. But those who went through the 1933 session, and knew the temper of its members do not agree with this view. Its members were intent—first on reducing local property taxes, and second, in providing as much as it possibly could for the schools without any property taxes.

all those familiar with the session agree.

According to the belief of most of those who have studied both sides, is that Dr. McDonald is merely getting all excited over an empty rat hole.
