Former Capone Gunman Assassinated By Trio In Recreation Center

Shot Down Early Today in Typical Gangland Fashion

WIDOW IS TAKEN FOR QUESTIONING

Wife of "Machine Gun Jack" McGurn Sobs as She Says "Big Shot" Died Broke

Chicago, Feb. 15.—"Machine Gun Jack" McGurn, notorious terrorist of the old "Scarface Al" Capone alcohol mob, and once indicted for the Saint Valentine's day massacre of seven rival gangsters, was assassinated in typical gangland fashion early today in a northwest side second story bowling alley.

The deliberate killing at the hands of three men who followed him into the recreation room came just an hour too late to fall on the seventh anniversary of the massacre of which he was accused. The state quashed the indictment after its principal witness was slain.

As Capone's chief machine gunner in prohibition days, McGurn was reported to have amassed several thousands of dollars. He died on a blood soaked floor with $3.25 in his pockets.

His widow, the "blonde alibi," credited with saving him from prosecution in the massacre, sobbed hysterically as the police took her for questioning. She said the former Capone "big shot" had fallen into low estate and that they were "broke."

McGurn, who was about 32 years old, was the Beau Brummel of the Capone mobsters. In his last years he retained his flare for good clothing. Blood from his wounds smeared a well-tailored gray suit, a good green shirt and bright red tie, red suspenders and pearl gray spats.

The gangster's death came with the same dramatic suddenness as did the Saint Valentine's day massacre. While McGurn and two unidentified companions sat in the second floor bowling alley awaiting their turn to play, two men entered the place and ordered "stick 'em up. Stand where you are."

McGurn, his back to the three men, stood erect. Without another word the trio opened fire with .45 calibre pistols. One shot struck McGurn behind the right ear and another in the lower part of the neck.

Influenza Cases On Decrease At College

The number of cases of mild influenza and of bad colds among the College students has been so greatly reduced in the last day or so that college authorities feel assured that the peak of the epidemic has passed.

While there have been a number of cases, the percentage of students having flu has not been great at any time. There have been none seriously ill, and the schools of classes and campus activities has not been interrupted.

The girls living in the dormitories are not leaving the campus this week-end, as those in authority believe there is greater danger in changing from heated buildings and getting out in the weather than from staying on the campus.

BOND SET FOR 'BUCK' TAYLOR

Held Under $5,000 Bail For Trial For Manslaughter

A coroner's jury late yesterday afternoon ordered J. C. "Buck" Taylor held under $5,000 bond for trial at the next term of Pitt County Superior court on charges of manslaughter and hit and run driving in connection with the death last Saturday night of Jesse Jones.

Taylor confessed to local police yesterday that he was driving the car that struck Jones, fatally injuring him. A coroner's jury impaneled to consider the death of Jones was assembled and Taylor was put under the heavy bond. It was furnished by Julian White, employer of Taylor.

Jones' body was found about 18 feet off the Washington highway just east of the city Sunday morning. Officers had been conducting an inquiry since that time. They developed that Taylor had been on that road about the time of the death and Chief George Clark of the City police inspected Taylor's automobile, finding a broken glass and human hair on the upper hinge of the left door.

Taylor was summoned to police headquarters and confessed to striking Jones. He said that he hit the man as he started to pass another car going in the same direction. Two women were in the car and Taylor said he intended returning to the scene after he brought them to Greenville. He explained that he started back, but lost his nerve and returned to this city.

Evidence brought out at the inquiry showed that Jones was in a drunken condition about the time of the wreck.

KIWANIS HOLD LADIES' NIGHT

Program of Club Turned Over To Entertainment

Wives and sweethearts of Kiwanis were given their annual treat last night when the club held its regular ladies' night program.

Business was disposed with and the entire program was devoted to entertainment and a beautiful feast.

The welcome of the fair visitors was made by the club president, J. C. Galloway. Mrs. J. A. Melver responded. R. C. Deal, chairman of the program committee acted as master of ceremonies and did a fine job of it, making all feel perfectly at home. Mr. Deal kept things moving at a rapid pace and did not let the program drag for a minute.

Immediately after the banquet, the program got underway with J. D. Simpson rendering two solo numbers. He was accompanied by Miss Marion Wood. Wesley Banksion presented two numbers on the harmonica.

Next on the program was Miss Sarah White Rhyme who sang and whistled several popular airs. With the exception of J. D. Simpson, all the entertainers were accompanied by Miss Billie Williams.

Prof. H. A. McDougle led the members and guests in the singing of several numbers. Mrs. Ray Tyson, the club's regular pianist, furnished the music.

The attendance prize was given by Dick Bundy and was won by W. H. Woolman.

Each woman present was given a ruff, presented by the Kiwanis club.

ATTEMPT HALT BORDER CLASH

Japanese Express Confidence Peaceful Settlement

Tokyo, Feb. 15.—(AP)—The Domei (Japanese) news agency reported today from Hailar that another Mongolian force estimated at 1,000 men attacked a Japanese-Manchoukuo military post at Asalsumu as high Japanese government officials expressed confidence that the border clashes might be settled peacefully.

The attack on the military post, located at the northern end of Lake Bor, was repulsed, the agency reported. Details of the assault and any casualties were not immediately ascertained.

Reports of the attack came coincident with strong indication that the Tokyo government, even the militarists, were anxious to halt the border conflicts.

Pressure was being brought to bear on General Jiro Minami, commander-in-chief of the Japanese military forces in Manchoukuo, it was indicated, to control the Marshall's orders of his subordinates and to curb bellicose statements of Manchoukuo officials.

Foreign minister Koki Hiroki told a cabinet today that he was confident Manchoukuo's situation could be improved through negotiations with Soviet Russia.

Rep. Marcantonio Arrested In N. Y. With Four Others

New York, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Representative Vito Marcantonio, (R-N. Y.) and four others were arrested today in Madison Square park when they attempted to lead several thousand persons in a parade against police orders.

Three hundred and fifty detectives and police restored peace after fist fights and intense excitement prevailed for several minutes.

Marcantonio and several leaders of the Joint Relief Committee had spoken at the demonstration in the park and had denounced Mayor LaGuardia and others for refusing to intervene in their behalf against the police order forbidding a parade.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

News Behind The News

WASHINGTON By Ray Tucker 1940: Gill-edge Progressive leaders have junked their third-party plans for 1936. In back-stage powwows they have agreed to unite more or less solidly behind FDR against the threat of an alliance of conservatives in both major parties.

But in 1940 they plan to part from both the old-line factions—forever, they hope. In that year they will try to organize on a scale that will dwarf the Bill Moseley and LaFollette-Wheeler breakaways. The LaFollette sons—Bob and Phil—are furnishing the most active leadership in current parties and "Young Bob" may be their nominee four years hence. They have their eyes on John L. Lewis' mine workers as shock troops, especially in view of their decision to enter politics en masse behind the President. Farmers and urban workers are counted on to fill up the files.

Mr. Roosevelt's policies are responsible for the agreement to postpone their tryout. But they can't picture his party as a liberal white hope after he quits the White House. So they are quietly making far-sighted arrangements elsewhere.

Winds And Floods Strike From Atlantic To Pacific

Ships Tossed on Sea, Buildings Cave in On Land

Chicago, Feb. 15.—Storm winds and flood waters lashed the land and churned the sea today from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Ships were tossed by raging waves, buildings caved in by snow, lives were lost in the cold while towns were marooned by floods and snow-drifts.

Fear of deaths from disease, escaping gas, and fuel and food famines was felt in various places as a new cold wave advanced from the Rockies eastward.

Zero weather, already gripping the west, was expected to chill the east before the week-end passed.

Landslides and floods harried California as rains continued on the Pacific coast. Epidemics of influenza and colds spread in the wake of the storm.

Flood waters smashed a 125-foot bridge over the Corralitos creek, isolating 50 ranch families and 100 federal transient workers near Watsonville, Calif.

Landslides cut 140 CCC boys off from the rest of the world at Placerville.

Fifty persons were believed snow-bound on a highway east of Lava Hot Springs, Idaho.

The bitter cold circled the Dakotas and Minnesota in deep white snow. Plows and relief parties started off in three directions from Rapid City and Sturgis, S. D., to isolated communities in Meade county.

Rashionings of food and fuel began in south Minnesota towns, cut off by deep drifts.

VESSELS FACE NEW DANGERS FROM WATERS

Ice Jam Break in James River Threatens Boats

ICE, SNOW WALL LASHES SHIPS

Tug Sinks, Steamship Grounds and Tanker Sweeps Out of Control at Richmond

Richmond, Va., Feb. 15.—(AP)—Battered by an 18-foot wall of ice and water from an ice jam break in the James river here near midnight, a dozen or more vessels today faced new dangers from rising flood waters.

The United States weather bureau at Richmond said another pack being formed in the city harbor by the ice-jammed river which had risen six feet here in the past 24 hours and was still rising.

A tug was sunk, a steamship of 2,000 tons swept aground on a sand bar and a tanker carrying 246,000 gallons of gasoline swept down stream out of control due to the sudden break of the jam. There was no loss of life, however.

A small tanker, the Texas company's Haven Belle, was tilted to a dangerous angle by ice beneath its bow and today lay atop ice directly in the path of the rising water.

Smaller craft were smashed and thousands of dollars damage done by three barges smashing through the side of a Buxton line warehouse.

Going out without warning, the dammed up ice and water tore the vessels from their moorings and sent them tossing down the stream amid the grinding ice. The tug, the Mary Belle, was sunk in 'the midst of the pack.

ISSUES ORDER PITT SCHOOLS

All Units Not to Open on Monday as Scheduled

Rains last night and today caused D. H. Conley, superintendent of Pitt county schools, to decide not to attempt to open the county units Monday as had been expected.

Mr. Conley said it appeared now that a whole week of good weather would be necessary before the schools in the county would be able to resume work.

"Reports coming to my office on the condition of the roads in rural districts continue to show that extensive mileage of school bus routes are absolutely impassable," a statement issued by the school head said.

"Sunshine yesterday caused local school officials to send out notices of better road conditions to such an extent it was hoped to be able to open schools Monday," the statement said.

"Since yesterday's weather reports indicate more bad weather in prospect for the first of the week, it has been decided to cancel the order for schools to open Monday and to operate only those units where trucks may be traveling the paved roads, get sufficient number of pupils to enable the school to operate. Notices as to what schools will open Monday will be given by the local principal or board of trustees."

In addition to the problem of bad roads, school officials are faced with fuel shortages in several large units. Mr. Conley pointed out. Orders for fuel placed three weeks ago have not been filled.

Epidemics of sickness are causing much concern.

JURY UPHOLDS DAVIDSON WILL

Returns Verdict In Case Shortly Before Noon Today

Carthage, Feb. 15.—(AP)—A rural jury today refused to set aside the disputed will of Mrs. Elva Stalter Davidson leaving her estate to her husband, H. Bradley Davidson, Jr.

After holding the case since 6 o'clock last night the jury returned a verdict shortly before noon holding the will valid.

Relatives of Mrs. Davidson contested the last testament alleging it was made under "undue influence" from Davidson and from W. Barton Leach, Harvard law professor and her financial advisor.

When the verdict was received their attorneys filed notification of appeal to the state supreme court.

Davidson was the only principal in the court room when the jury filed in with the verdict.

"It is gratifying to know that others think the way I know," he said.

There was no word from the jurymen as to how they had stood on earlier ballots or how many were taken during the 18 hours they held the case.

New Deal Forces Declare Intention Fight For Policy

Aver They Will Carry to Supreme Court If Necessary, Fight to Retain Present Policies

Washington, Feb. 15.—(AP)—Startled by a legal blow threatening to scramble its four billion dollar work relief policy, the New Deal laid its plans today to fight the issue up to the Supreme Court if necessary.

No sooner had Federal Judge George W. Welch ruled in Philadelphia yesterday that war veterans and their dependents must be given preference on work relief jobs, even if that means dismissal of non-veterans now working, administration officials went into hurried conferences.

They announced last night they would carry an immediate appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals in case Judge Welch refused to stay execution of his injunction.

This injunction prohibits the Works Progress Administration from employing or paying anyone in the Philadelphia area unless veterans, their wives and widows are given preference.

Benjamin J. Spang, crippled war veteran, who was denied a job on a WPA business census project because he had not been on the dole, obtained the injunction in Philadelphia and is fighting in the District of Columbia Supreme Court to have it applied nationally. This would force a wholesale shift in WPA plans unless the higher court upsets it.

Substitute Bill for Invalidated AAA Now Goes To House

PROMPT ACTION EXPECTED THERE

Senate Defeats The Amendment to Prohibit Grazing of Cattle on Lands

Washington, Feb. 15.—(AP)—The $500,000,000 farm bill to subsidize farm conservation — backed by the New Deal to replace AAA—was passed today by the Senate.

It now goes to the House where Democratic leaders forecast early consideration.

Washington, Feb. 15.—(AP)—After a warm debate marked by a defense of the Supreme Court, the Senate today rejected 45 to 28 a proposal which would have prohibited grazing of dairy cattle on lands taken out of production of crops under the soil conservation subsidy farm bill.

Offered by Sen. McNary, three Republican leaders, and supported by Democrats and Republicans from dairy states, the amendment was designed to forestall an "unbridled production of legumes" which may materially increase dairy production.

The amendment also would have barred the harvesting from soil conserving farms of any crops intended for sale.

McNary said soil improving crops should be plowed under to increase fertility.

The Supreme Court defense came from Senator George (D-Ga.) who said many attacks on the tribunal were, in his opinion, "without justification."

Opposing the amendment by Senator McNary, George said he regretted criticism of the court for its AAA decision, "especially" that from the "Democratic leadership."

He did not mention Democratic Leader Robinson by name.

George said the McNary amendment clearly would make the soil conservation bill unconstitutional.

"Whatever my party writes in the next platform, I will not support any program that looks to the elimination of the dual system of government," he said.

American Legion Sponsored Circus Will Open Monday

The circus will continue throughout the week, with special features planned for each night. Decorations for the event have been set up and the various organizations are completing final work on their booths.

Practically all space has been engaged. The booths will display activities and accomplishments of the Boy Scouts and Red Cross. In addition, a number of commercial booths will display various products, including several different automobiles.

A number of professional performers have been secured for the circus and some first class "Big Top" talent is booked.

SIMPLE CLOTHES PREDICTED FOR WIMBLETON CONTESTS

London (AP)—"Clothes for the 1936 Wimbledon championships will be very simple and well tailored," predicts Katharine Stammers, well-known British lawn tennis player.

"The day of fussy pleats is over. Tennis girls no longer look like ballet dancers. They insist on their clothes being as well cut as those of the men."

Like Dorothy Round, also a Wimbledon star, Miss Stammers has joined the staff of a sports specialist firm to design tennis wear.

WHAT KIND ARE YOU?

Here are the kinds of automobile drivers who cause accidents and are doing their part to increase the total number of killed and injured on our streets and highways each year:

The drunken driver. The road hog who wants his half of the road in the middle.

The speeder. The driver who passes on hills and curves.

The driver who makes turns without signaling.

The driver who dashes out of side roads or driveways.

The driver who weaves in and out among traffic.

The driver who always thinks he has the right-of-way regardless of conditions.

If you come under any of the above headings change your way of driving now in the interest of safer streets and highways for motorists and pedestrians.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

(Continued from Page One) decision to build many more vessels. Although it may not be announced formally—other nations will know it without written notice—the United States will allow Great Britain to retain the supremacy of the seas which the two countries have shared for the last three years.

Washington will make no effort to match the British as they whip into shape a fleet that faces a troubled continent and a dissatisfied Italy. The original ratio of 5-5-3 will eventually be transformed into one of 6-5-4, although Japan's strength may approach nearer to ours, possibly 4-5.

Domestically, America's slip into second place coincides with the neutrality decision not to abandon our policy of "freedom of the seas." But there are certain considerations behind the London outcome which definitely affect the new arrangement. Although no formal written alliance is contemplated, the Anglo-American attitude is based on the unacknowledged belief that the two English-speaking peoples will never fight. The U. S. will continue the three-year-old system of basing our main fleet in the Pacific, while Great Britain's ships will ride the Atlantic and the Mediterranean.

MYSTERY: President Roosevelt and William Edgar Borah chemist doesn't make Republican presidential-makers feel any kinder toward the mysterious Senator from Idaho. The Democrats dream of sensational possibilities in their speculations when they aren't referring to the Senator as the "Al Smith of the GOP."

Starting with the assumption that Mr. Borah is capable of any kind of somersault—and his angling for the nomination supports that belief—New Dealers whisper that he might back FDR if his Republicans turn him down and cause a "reactionary." It sounds fantastic but there are smart prophets who put stock in the prospect. On the other hand, if Mr. Borah should be named, will Al Smith "walk" into the camp of the man most responsible for Hoover's triumph in 1928?

Mr. Borah's wrinkled face was wreathed in smiles after his one-hour conference at the White House a few days ago. He smiled broadly when he heard that the President preferred him as the GOP nominee on the theory that the Senator would carry on New Deal ideas. Each agreed to give the other a ride on the presidential yacht if the 1936 election gives either one temporary ownership. And Mr. Borah attends White House dinners and receptions now, whereas he spurned them when Republicans were hosts.

THE BOOMERANG CLUE BY AGATHA CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS: Bobby Jones and Frankie Derwent have two promising candidates for the murder of Alan Carstairs—at least, they believe the murdered man was Alan Carstairs. One is Roger Basington-French, the other is Dr. Nicholson, who runs a drug cure near the Basington-French house. But Roger seems such a nice young man to Frankie, and none more so than Frankie, and she is afraid of him. Her story is impressive, partly because she is very beautiful indeed.

Chapter 27 NEW ANGLE

MOIRA'S brow furrowed as she tried to think. "It's possible," she said at last. "He asked one or two rather peculiar questions—but no, I don't think he can really have known anything about it."

"Would you call your husband a jealous man?" Bobby asked.

Rather to his surprise she answered, "Yes, a very jealous man."

"Jealous, for instance, of you?"

"You mean even though he doesn't care? But yes, he would be jealous, just the same. I'm his property, you see. He's a queer man—a very queer man."

She shivered. Then she asked suddenly, "You're not connected with the police in any way, are you?"

"I Oh, no."

"I wondered, I mean—"

Bobby looked down at his chauffeur's livery.

"It's rather a long story," he said. "You are Lady Frances Derwent's chauffeur, aren't you? So the landlord here said, I met her at dinner the other night."

"I know," he paused. "We've got to get hold of her," he said. "And it's a bit difficult for me to do. Do you think you could ring up and ask to speak to her and then get her to come and meet you somewhere outdoors?"

"I suppose I could," said Moira slowly.

"I know it must seem frightfully odd to you. But it won't seem that explained. We must get hold of her as soon as possible. It's essential."

Moira rose. "Very well," she said. "With her hand on the door-handle she hesitated. "Alan," she said. "Alan Carstairs. Did you say you'd seen him?"

"I have seen him," said Bobby slowly. "But not lately. And he thought, with a shock, 'Of course—she doesn't know he's dead.'"

He said, "Ring up Lady Frances. Then I'll tell you everything."

MOIRA returned a few minutes later.

"I got her," she said. "I've asked her to come and meet me at a little summer house down near the river. She must have thought it very odd, but she said she's coming."

"Good," said Bobby. "Now just where is this place exactly?"

Moira described it carefully, and the way to get to it.

"That's all right," said Bobby. "You go first, I'll follow on."

They adhered to this program, Bobby lingering to have a word with Mr. Askew.

"Odd thing," he said casually. "That lady—Mrs. Nicholson—I used to work for an uncle of hers. Canadian gentleman."

Moira's visit to him might, he felt, give rise to gossip, and the last thing he wanted was to let gossip of that kind get about and possibly find its way to Dr. Nicholson's ears.

"So that's it, is it?" said Mr. Askew. "I rather wondered."

"Yes," said Bobby. "She recognized me and came along to hear what I was doing now. A nice, pleasant-spoken lady."

Feeling that he had achieved his object, he strolled out.

He reached the rendezvous successfully and found her there waiting for him.

"There's an awful lot I've got to tell you," he said, and stopped awkwardly.

"Yes."

"To begin with," said Bobby, plunging, "I'm not really a chauffeur although I do work in a garage in London—And my name isn't Hawkins—it's Jones—Bobby Jones. I come from Marchboit in Wales."

Moira was listening attentively, but clearly the name Marchboit meant nothing to her.

"Look here, I'm afraid I'm going to give you rather a shock. This friend of yours, Alan Carstairs—he's—well, you've got to know—he's dead."

She was silent a moment or two, then she said in a low thoughtful voice, "So that's why he never came back I wondered."

Bobby ventured to steal a look at her. She looked sad and thoughtful—but that was all.

"Tell me about it," she said.

It's the latest political mystery.

BRAKES: Washington hears that Father Coughlin's superiors recently sought to tone down his politico-economic talks and to curtail his crusades for inflation. The wish may be father to the thought but the report gains credence in high circles here.

"He fell over the cliff at Marchboit—the place where I live, I and the doctor there happened to be the ones to find him." He paused and then added: "He had your photograph in his pocket."

"Did he?" She gave a sweet, rather sad smile. "Dear Alan, he was—very faithful. When did all this happen?"

"About a month ago, October 3rd, to be exact."

"That must have been just after he came down here."

"Yes, Oh, hullo! Here's Frankie." Frankie came hurrying along the path. Her face, at the sight of Bobby and Mrs. Nicholson sitting chatting together, was a study in conflicting expressions.

"Hullo, Frankie," said Bobby. "I'm glad you've come. We've got to have a great powwow. To begin with, it's Mrs. Nicholson who is the original of the photograph."

"Oh!" said Frankie blankly. She looked at Moira and suddenly laughed.

"My dear," she said to Bobby, "now I see why the sight of Mrs. Cayman at the inquest was such a shock to you!"

Moira was looking bewildered.

"There's such an awful lot to tell," said Bobby. "And I don't quite know how to put it all."

He described the Caymans and their identification of the body.

"And then," continued Frankie, "Bobbie was poisoned."

"Eight grains of morphia," said Bobby reminiscingly.

"Don't start on that," said Frankie. "You're capable of going on for hours on the subject, and it's really very boring to other people. Let me explain."

She took a long breath.

"YOU see," she said, "these Cayman people came to see Bobby after the inquest, to ask him if the brother (supposed) had said anything before he died, and Bobby said 'No.' But afterwards he remembered that the man had said something about somebody called Evans—so Bobby wrote and told them so. And a few days afterwards he got a letter offering him a job in Peru or somewhere, and when he wouldn't take it, the next thing was that someone put a lot of morphia—"

"Eight grains," said Bobby.

"—in his beer. Only, as Bobby has a most extraordinary inside or something, it didn't kill him. And so then we saw at once that Pritchard—or Carstairs, you know—must have been pushed over the cliff."

"But why?" asked Moira.

"Don't you see? I expect I haven't told it very well. Anyway, we decided that he had been, and that that Roger Basington-French had probably done it."

"I see," said Moira thoughtfully.

"And then," continued Frankie, "I happened to have an accident just here. An amazing coincidence, wasn't it?" She looked hard at Bobby with an admonishing eye. "So I telephoned to Bobby and suggested that he should come down here pretending to be my chauffeur and we'd look into the matter."

"Are you telling me the truth?" Moira asked. "Is it really true that you came down here—by accident? Or did you come because—because—" her voice quavered in spite of herself—"you suspected my husband?"

Bobby and Frankie looked at each other. Then Bobby said:

"I give you my word of honor that we'd never even heard of your husband till we came down here."

"Oh, I see." She turned to Frankie. "I'm sorry, Lady Frances, but you see I remembered that, on the evening when we came to dinner, Jasper—my husband—went on and on at you, asking you things about your accident, I couldn't think why. But I think now that perhaps he suspected it wasn't genuine."

"Well, if you really want to know, it wasn't!" said Frankie. "Whoof—now I feel better! It was all camouflaged very carefully. But it had nothing to do with your husband. The whole thing was staged because we wanted to—what does one call it?—get a line on Roger Basington-French."

"Roger?" Moira frowned and smiled perplexedly. "It seems absurd."

"But he must have taken that photograph," said Bobby stubbornly. "Listen, Mrs. Nicholson, while I go over the facts."

"I see what you mean. It seems very queer," Moira paused a minute and then asked unexpectedly, "Why don't you ask him?"

NEW YORK

By James McMillin. EXCITEMENT: Either or both of two important utility decisions will probably be handed down within a month. In New York final briefs have been submitted to Federal Judge Caffery in Commonwealth & Co. v. The Securities Commission act. The Judge's ruling is likely to cover the all-important question of the law's constitutionality.

The circuit court of appeals in North Carolina is also about ready for a decision on the American States Power case—appealed from Judge Coleman's ruling in Baltimore that was so hostile to the New Deal. The SEC is in a difficult spot here. Once again it appeared as a "friend of the court" instead of taking direct part in the suit.

The result is that the case will probably be appealed to the Supreme Court much sooner than the Commission desires. If it were a direct party to the suit it could refuse to appeal if it lost. But it can't help itself. Official disassociation from the case is necessary in order to protect its contentions—if the government loses all the way up—that this ruling is not binding upon it in the general application of the holding company act. These two cases will provide plenty of excitement—but won't settle anything finally.

personal contact is akin to genius. Practically every business man, politician and reporter who has come cut to Kansas to see him has gone back singing his praises. The list of converts—a number of whom want to scoff—includes authentic liberals as well as conservatives. He is a charming host—at his best in his own home. Moreover, people who have come from afar hoping to snatch a few moments from his crowded schedule have been agreeably surprised to find him willing to give them much more time than they expected.

But New Yorkers who first halted his radio talk with cries of delight are now beginning to wonder whether their enthusiasm was justified. The address registered well as to subject matter but his voice is admittedly not so good. This might be a heavy handicap in a campaign where radio will play such a vital part.

They are also nervous about his endorsement of William Randolph Hearst. Lots of G. O. P. leaders still regard that as a sure ticket to defeat. The Kansas governor continues to rate high in the financial district—but talk of him as a sure bet for the nomination has faded out.

NUCLEUS: Meanwhile Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan—whom many New York insiders now regard as Landon's most serious rival—continues to play a deft game. Some of his metropolitan friends have tried recently to induce him to declare his candidacy openly and wage into the battle for delegates. But he is adamant to all persuasion and insists he will not lift a finger to further his own cause.

'CANN' DENIES SLAYING LIGGETT

RIVALRY FOR NUDIST THRONE

Shrewd political analysts call this smart strategy. It keeps him out of pre-convention quarrels that might wreck his chances. Also it prevents his becoming a target for criticism—whereas Borah, Knox and Landon are under heavy fire behind the scenes.

G. O. P. leaders do not expect the Michiganite to show much strength on the first ballot at Cleveland. But the impression is growing that in a pinch every Borah delegate will be a Vandenberg delegate—which would be quite a nucleus.

OPENING: Endorsement of Gov. Harold G. Hoffman as "the titular bear of the Republican party in the state of New Jersey" by the executive committee of the New Jersey Young Republicans has started an inside row that is likely to reach serious proportions.

The Young Republicans are too strong a factor in state politics to be ignored. But the trouble is that a large number of the rank-and-file disagree with their executive council's action. Most of the local groups have side-stepped the Hoffman question entirely as too packed with dynamite to touch and opinions are sharply divided about his interference in the Hauptmann case. The Young Republicans are holding a state meeting on February 20th and there is an even chance that friction will develop to blow the lid sky high.

Such a family scrap might give the astute Democratic political boss Frank Hague just the opening he needs to steer New Jersey back into the Roosevelt column this November.

MOUTHPIECE: Scouts reporting midwestern and western reactions to Al Smith's Liberty League speech find greater hostility to him as the weeks wear on. The impression appears to be taking firm root in that section that he was just a mouthpiece for Wall Street.

SIDELIGHTS: A big Broadway movie house recently showed newsreel shots of Borah, Landon and Talmadge. On one occasion at least all three were greeted—not by cheers or boos—but by a hearty horselaugh. The national wealth is up $35,000,000,000 from the 1932 lows in Stock Exchange values alone.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER
New York—True, they never actually got around to triturating one another's features, but the recent impasse between Ely Culbertson, contract bridge authority, and Mike Jacobs, mentor of prizefighters, went a long way towards invigorating a scene that has languished too long for want of an old-fashioned pier brawl.

We like fights in New York. The prospects of personal encounter make us whinny and tremble like high-strung colts. And I submit that for stage-one publicity nothing is more potent than the spectacle of one celebrity whaling the hide off another in public.

Sinclair Lewis came in for a lot of attention when he won the Nobel prize for literature, but those shavings were nothing to the layoffs given him when he accused another writer of plagiarism—and got slapped. Jim Tully and George Raft are others, who emerged from fistcuffs to find their names in the inky splendor of the headlines.

I am told that Mr. Culbertson, being something of an idealist, regretted the lengths to which Mr. Jacobs went in billyhoing the recent international bridge matches—held, it is true, amid much fanfare in a local hotel and in Madison Square Garden.

In time his fine but dissenting voice was borne to Mr. Jacobs, who forthwith summoned his ace ghost-writer and authored this masterpiece of sarcastic repartee:

"As one promoter to another, I am amused at your holy horror over the prospect of commercializing a sport which, I am informed, has given you a couple of million dollars."

Mr. Jacobs went on to assure Mr. Culbertson that the matches would go on. He closed with the cordial suggestion that Ely "drop in 'anytime' and enjoy himself."

What next?

If I were a fiction writer I would tell you that dawn brought brass knucks for two and coffee for one. But I am not a fictionist. I am only a Broadway reporter who must report the facts as they are.

Nothing came next. The promise of assault and battery which so whetted our appetites went no further than the parchment of personal notes. They contented themselves with ornate verbal barbs of verbs and adjectives.

Such softies!

Katharine Cornell's promised revival of George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" recalls that most hilarious of Shaw legends.

Wandering through Europe one day, the playwright came upon a little girl who was playing on the shore of the famous Volga river. They talked for some time. Shaw taking delight in chatting with so perky and animate a child. When finally, it grew dusk and time to go, Shaw said to her:

"When you get home, if your mother asks what you have been doing, tell her you have been walking along the Volga, talking with George Bernard Shaw."

Not to be out-done in courtesy, the little girl replied:

"And when you get home, if they ask you what you have been doing, tell them you have been walking along the Volga, talking to Soya Ibbenoff-kaya Deborrowitch."

N. Y. Stock Market

New York, Feb. 15.—(AP)—After a hesitant start, the stock market was given substantial lift today by a rally in steels, rails and other specialties.

U. S. Steel led the upturn as Wall Street entertained high hopes of expanding mill operations during the coming week. The carriers and various other stocks apparently were motivated by expectations of larger openings based in current activities. The utilities just about held their own.

At the firm close gains of a fraction to a point or more predominated with a number of issues settling in new high territory for the past several years. Transactions approximated 1,350,000 shares.

Family Kept From Rolls Of Relief By Loans For Farming

Mule and Fertilizer Furnished by Federal Agency Enable Farmer To Provide for Self

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Feb. 15.—How a mule and a small loan for seed, fertilizer and subsistence saved a North Carolina farm family from the relief rolls is related in a "typical case" report received by Vance E. Swift, state director of rural rehabilitation for the Resettlement Administration.

The aid given raised this family's morale, put food supplies in its larder for winter and kept the children in school, Swift pointed out.

"This family had no stock, no way of getting seed and fertilizer and no subsistence on which to make a crop," stated Thomas D. Anderson, rehabilitation supervisor, in his report to Director Swift.

"After making application thru the proper channels, the family was taken into the 1935 program as a rehabilitation client. During the year the Rural Rehabilitation Corporation—now operating under the Resettlement Administration—furnished this client about $107 in subsistence goods and a mule priced at $167. Since harvesting his crop, the client has paid his account in full for the subsistence goods and made a payment of $55 on the mule, which was the payment required the first year.

"After making these payments, an inventory of the clients assets showed that he had made considerable progress toward becoming self-sustaining. His assets of corn, hogs, hogs, cash interest in mule, potatoes, poultry, canned fruits and vegetables and winter garden, taken at a low estimate, showed a net gain of $250 above what he had at the start of the year.

"This same family tried farming the previous year and failed, due largely to the fact that it was unable to get the seed and fertilizer in large enough quantities to be effective. Therefore, the family feels that the rural rehabilitation program has been a great benefit and that without the aid of this program they would not have been able to make a crop during the past year."
