

LAUNCH PLAN FOR WILD LIFE

Nation - Wide Movement is Considered Significant

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel, Raleigh, Feb. 19.—Launching of a program to form a nation-wide organization to work for the preservation and rehabilitation of wildlife resources, J. D. Chalk, State game and inland fisheries commissioner, said today is one of the most significant results of the North American Wildlife Conference recently held in Washington at the call of President Roosevelt.

The choice of J. N. Darling, former chief of the U. S. Biological Survey and popular cartoonist, as temporary president of the newly formed organization places an able and dynamic figure in leadership, according to Mr. Chalk. Darling has exhibited a deep personal interest in wildlife as well as giving a progressive leadership to the Biological Survey during his tenure of office.

Numerous organizations seeking to assist in wildlife problems are in existence but no general group has had the authority to speak for the millions of sportsmen and wildlife enthusiasts, according to the commissioner. He believes the proposed association will provide a means of accomplishing effective results in the interest of wildlife.

"This new organization," Mr. Chalk explained, "is to be a coordinating agency or general clearing house for all present agencies, organizations and individuals engaged in the restoration of wildlife."

"The purpose as outlined by the temporary officers is to start with the counties, thence into congressional districts and finally into State organizations. Federal and State departments are not directly included in the operations—they are on the sidelines so to speak—but, of course, will be interested in the progress of the organization and will be in readiness to assist in every way in helping the group to function properly."

Talks To Parents

EARLIEST INFLUENCES

By Brooks Peters Church
To offset the now pretty well explained theory of pre-natal influences, there has arisen another which gives food for thought.

Doctors and psychiatrists are more and more of the opinion that children are affected even more in the cradle by what goes on around them.

Conscious memory probably does not begin before four with most children. Sometimes a child will recall isolated events earlier.

Long before conscious memory begins, however, a child is capable of receiving impressions the traces of which will linger on in some locked cupboard of his mind and may emerge in later years to condition his whole life. The tiniest baby in arms will react to noise and the danger of falling. Who can be sure that some of the unaccountable fear of high places is not due to a forgotten episode of these early days?

How soon other impressions impinge on the baby is so uncertain and depends so much on circumstances and the individual child that parents cannot begin too early to watch their words and actions in the presence of these inscrutable little creatures. Harsh words, quarrels, tears—to all these a child reacts when he is still far too young to grasp their meaning, and if he reacts to them it means that somewhere an impression—and an unpleasant one—is being stored away in his memory.

Later on, before he can express himself in words, he is probably able to understand much of what is said in his presence, and these remarks, often only half-comprehended, are also engraved on his memory. People would watch themselves closely if they knew there was a dictaphone in the room. The child may be acting as one, but what his records will be like, no one knows.

How's Your Health?

Cato the Elder used to end his speeches with "Delenda est Carthago." He sought to stimulate the people to destroy Carthage, which he considered Rome's most dangerous enemy.

In somewhat the same spirit the New York State Medical society has undertaken to arouse the people to "wage war on colds." The common cold, warns the society, "is serious. Communicable disease and should be handled in a manner similar to measles and scarlet fever." The society is conducting an educational campaign addressed to public and physicians. Dr. Russell L. Cecil, chairman of the pneumonia committee, writes: "The layman must be warned of the dangers of an acute cold or cough with fever. He must also be taught that when he has fever with a cold, he should remain in bed and call a physician." Pneumonia now ranks with heart disease and cancer as one of the three most prevalent causes of death in the United States. The prevention of pneumonia is closely tied up with prevention of the common cold. Dr. Cecil states "primary pneumonia without any preceding cold or gripe attack is rare. Prevention of the mild infections would reduce greatly the incidence of the severe infections."

Prevention of acute infections of the nose and throat may seem an almost hopeless task, because of our constant exposure to infected individuals in everyday life. However, there is more to the prevention of colds and gripe (the common colds) than merely dogging the micro-organisms that cause them. The general health of the individual and hygiene of throat and sinuses are important factors, and a proper balance of vitamins may be influential.

Most important is the prevention of exposure to wet and inclement weather. For exposure to cold is the surest way to catch a cold.

Dr. R. W. McDonald Is Assembly Speaker At the College Here

Dr. Ralph MacDonald, guest of the college yesterday as speaker at the assembly hour and for luncheon, greeted the students as "A group of optimists," as ninety percent of them are planning to become teachers. From that start, he gave a stirring talk on the status of educational affairs as they now exist in North Carolina, reviewing briefly the two stages preceding this. He referred to the excellent beginnings when there was a wave of interest under Aycock and declared that was "only one leg of the foundation." In the ten years from 1918 to 1928, he showed that while the State made the most rapid strides forward that any state had ever made in a like period, climbing from next to the bottom to the 39th place. But there were still only eight states, he pointed out, and we are so far from the top we were actually only at the beginning of an adequate school system. Then came the slump period when we fell to the bottom. We are there because we are measured by three of the most important measurements that could be found. These are: No state stands below this in amount of money spent per child per day in the teaching load, and in the proportion of high schools falling below the regional standards.

The depression was not the biggest factor in the slump, he declared, as the proportion was not kept in the appropriation for schools. The drop was made from the nineteenth state, with $3.06 out of every hundred dollars spent on schools, to the forty-seventh place, with only $1.90 on every hundred. He gave figures showing that the appropriation for schools was not only reduced from seventeen and a half million dollars to sixteen million, but also they lost the $6,700,000 they had had from local taxes. The majority in the general assembly of 1933, he asserted, fell into two groups, one identified with the bond-holding interests and the other with the large corporate interests, with only a small number genuinely interested in the public schools. He gave a vivid account of the old game of snipe-hunting and used that to show how the teachers had been left with the bag to hold. They worked hard to help pass the sales tax, which cut off all local support for schools, he said, and result was not only the above reduction in appropriation for schools, but the two interests carried their points. Bonds appreciated a hundred and ninety-one million dollars and the taxes of the larger corporations were greatly reduced. The schools had a greater relative reduction than had ever been made before by any state or civilized nation by deliberate act.

The time has come, he believes, when steps should be taken to help clear up the situation and getting teaching on a professional level is the best way to do this. "There are three things needed for this, he believes. First, an adequate salary scale that would insure decent living standards, would encourage the best teachers to remain in the profession, and would do away with the fly-by-night teachers. In the second place, there should be a tenure law, and third, a retirement plan so that at a reasonable time teachers could retire with a reasonable income. All these things could be done if the State were reasonably liberal to its schools."

As he said, he came with no Pollyanna message, but the thousand prospective teachers followed him with as great interest as if he were telling a thrilling story.

Dr. MacDonald is the first of three candidates for governor to speak, by invitation, to the East Carolina Teachers College students, but the other two are scheduled for later dates, so the students have the opportunity of hearing all of them. It has been the policy of the Assembly Committee for the past year to bring to the college from time to time prominent people as guest speakers.

Dr. Adams, speaking for the committee, introduced Dr. MacDonald.

Siberian Singers Friday
Tickets will be placed on sale at eleven o'clock tomorrow morning for the concert by the Siberian Singers at the College on Friday night, and will be sold at the place and the hours advertised. The box sheet will be in charge of students from the Student Budget Committee of the College. Season ticket-holders must secure seat tickets, as all seats are reserved.

The folk songs will perhaps be the most popular part of the program, as those are the songs Russians have sung and loved for generations, and have become popular in this country.

The "Pirate Song" is a Volga legend of the pirate hordes that swept down the river "Mother Volga" under the great chief, Stenka Razin. When he hears the murmurs of his men, whom he seems to have forgotten while he is feasting and rejoicing with his beautiful captive, a Persian princess, he flings her into the river and swears nothing shall ever come between the pirates and their chief.

The music of the song, "Jolly Merchant," gives the various episodes of a merchant, at first tender and yearning, gradually changing its mood until it is heard in the freedom of the dance.

In the Siberian "Prisoners' Song" the bitterness for the misery fate has given them is accompanied by the clanking of the chains as they march into exile. "Laughing Polka" is the favorite dance of the young folks of the small villages.

The gypsy songs are those very dear to the Russian gypsies, who wandered from village to village entertaining people with their songs.

TALKS TO PARENTS

A SOUND MIND
By Brooke Peters Church
Most of the schools in the country have trained nurses on the staff to safeguard the health of the children. Many of these nurses are visiting nurses who go to the homes of the pupils and try to improve living conditions where necessary. As a general rule, the physical health of the school children is carefully watched.

The Siberian Singers, the famous Russian Male Chorus that will give a concert in the Campus Building of East Carolina Teachers College, on next Friday night, February 21, in the national costume of Old Russia in which they will appear when they sing the folk songs.

maladjusted with special departments. And in fully three-quarters of the cases which come under their care the roots of the trouble lie in the patient's childhood.

A sound mind in a healthy body has long been the ideal towards which man strives. The healthy body was usually looked upon as the pre-requisite. From physical well-being, it was thought, the sound mind naturally would result. Today it is realized that without a sound mind the body cannot be healthy. The two are dependent on the other, and no one can be sure which comes first.

It is useless to insist on cod-liver oil, fresh air, sleep and a balanced diet, and neglect the fact that the child whose health is in question is living in an environment of mental odds, his mother a neurotic, his father a habitual drinker, his brothers and sisters unkind, he is apt to grow up dwarfed and twisted, certainly mentally, and perhaps physically also.

Visiting teachers, skilled in their knowledge of human nature, and tactful in their approach to others, possibly teachers trained in psychiatry, are quite as essential in the schools, as nurse, if the children's whole health is to be cared for.

Gubernatorial Candidate Makes First Campaign Talk

Reflector Bureau.
Sir Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, Feb. 19.—Advocacy of the adoption of a state-wide liquor control and liquor stores law, under which any county in the state might vote to sell liquor legally in North Carolina, by John A. McRae, Charlotte in his first campaign speech as a candidate for Governor there last night, has caused political circles here today to sit up and take notice.

It is agreed here that McRae has taken the most flat-footed stand on the liquor issue of any of the four candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor. Heretofore Lieut.-Gov. A. H. (Sandy) Graham has been regarded as being the most outspoken on the liquor issue, although he has not yet said whether he favored state control or county control and county stores.

The liquor control and liquor stores plan advocated by McRae, if he is nominated and elected Governor, is as follows:
1. Education of the children and you of the state concerning the evil and dangers of alcohol.

2. Adoption by the legislature of a local option control and liquor stores act, similar to the Virginia liquor control law, which would provide that:
(a) Any county in the state might have the right to say by a majority vote, whether liquor stores should be set up in the county. No liquor store could be set up in any of the 83 counties which voted against repeal of the 18th Amendment unless first submitted to a vote of the people.

(b) All liquor stores must be manned by persons of good moral character, and sell good grades of liquor profit in order to curb bootlegging.

(c) Advertising of liquor in newspapers and in the windows of liquor stores would be prohibited, in order to reduce the appeal to the youth.

McRae said he would also advise better enforcement of the laws laws against public drunkenness, driving while drunk, bootlegging and other similar offenses.

The distribution of the profits from the sale of liquor, he would leave to the "sound judgment and discretion of the members of the legislature." McRae said with regards to whether the state, the temperate climate and not engaged in manual work requires 2,400 calories a day. When the individual does muscular work he should supplement this basic caloric intake in amounts providing from 50 to 200 added calories an hour of labor, according to whether the work is light, moderate or hard.

At least half or more of the basic diet should be composed of foods generally designated as "protective." These foods are the foundation of the daily diet to which the rest of the caloric intake may be added according to choice. These dietary fundamentals are:
• A pint of milk, 4½ ounces of meat, fish or poultry, one egg, one ounce of cheese, 3½ ounces of green and leaf vegetables, 9 ounces of potato, and an appropriate dose of cod-liver oil or other vitamin-D-containing food or substance.

This basic diet will provide approximately 1,400 calories and contain adequate amounts of calcium, phosphorus, iron and vitamins A, B1, B2, C and D.

To complete the diet as far as caloric requirements are concerned, one may add cereals, fats and sugars, and such additional quantities of the goods indicated above as income dietary habits and personal preferences dictate. To avoid outlined diet readily substitute equivalents.

HOW'S YOUR HEALTH

DIETARY FUNDAMENTALS
There is a desirable happy medium between excessive preoccupation with and total indifference to one's diet. In this happy, medium certain dietary fundamentals are kept in mind.

On fundamental concerns the caloric intake. Too little and too much caloric intake have each their disadvantages. More public emphasis has been placed on overweight than underweight. Yet underweight associated with undernutrition has its significant drawback in the lack of nutritional reserve against emergencies and in the absence of the protective layers of fat, as essential to good appearance as comfort.

As to calories: an adult male or female living an ordinary life in a counties or both the state and counties would share in the revenue from the liquor stores. He intimated that he would be opposed to dividing the revenue from the sale of liquor with the counties.

James S. Ficklen Delivers Speech to A. A. U. W.

International commerce is the basis of all international relations and therefore the most important of all, according to James S. Ficklen, who lectured on Monday evening to the A. A. U. W. and their guests.

Miss Mamie E. Jenkins, the president, in her introduction, referred to Mr. Ficklen as a man who had been to "Asia, Spasia, and all other foreign countries." His well organized, definite, informative talk showed clearly a thorough understanding of the problems of international commerce and an enthusiasm for the work of facing and helping to solve these problems.

The speaker began by explaining the similarity between domestic and foreign commerce and the necessity of promoting foreign trade if a high standard of living is to be maintained.

Because tobacco is the product exported in greatest quantity from this section because he is most familiar with this business, and because the problems involved are practically the same as those met in other foreign trade, Mr. Ficklen spoke largely in terms of the international aspects of the tobacco business. He made clear the difficulties of tariff and foreign exchange, he called attention to the complexity of the related political questions, and he emphasized the necessity of a better understanding and a keener appreciation of the customs, traditions and nature of foreigners.

After the lecture, the hostesses—Misses Cassidy, Williams and Grubby—served refreshments, and the group enjoyed a social half-hour.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical—only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

Headache

that may help you ...

The first step toward relieving simple headache is to understand its cause. Pain is the cry of over-taxed nerves for rest. And when we realize that the nerves spread throughout every part of the body (see head diagram) we understand how serious a nervous disturbance can be.

In selecting a remedy for headache, periodic pain, and other nerve pain use one that soothes the tense nerves. Capudine is ideally suited for simple headache, neuralgic pain, rheumatic, or periodic pain because it relieves high nerve tension and brings welcome relaxation. No narcotics or opiates. Ask for Capudine Liquid or Capudine Brand Tablets.

CUT THE RED TAPE

It is our belief, that the American Legion is absolutely right in deploring the excessive amount of red tape that surrounds supplies that lie idle in this community...

For some time the local commissary was stored full of food with none being given out and the rats feasted on it while many families in this community went in want.

The matter of the clothing has not yet been straightened out and all the dresses and other clothing made by WPA workers in the sewing rooms from ERA materials since last July are on hand while the two departments seek to settle their differences.

We congratulate Legion members on their courage to raise a howl about the manner in which these things are being handled (or not handled) and it is to be hoped that through their efforts something will be done about it without further delay.

THE BOOMERANG CLUE BY AGATHA CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS: Frankie Derwent just has observed Roger Bassington-French from the suspicion of murder she and Bobby Jones have held over him. He has explained everything about his connection with the corpse of Alan Carstairs...

Chapter 30 ANOTHER SNAG

"I THINK one was love and the other was business!" said Frankie. "Carstairs was carrying about the Cayman's photograph for a reason. He wanted it identified by somebody, perhaps. Now listen—what happens? Someone, the male Cayman perhaps, is following him and seeing a good opportunity, steals up behind him in the mist and gives him a shove. Carstairs goes over the cliff with a startled cry. Male Cayman makes off as fast as he can—he doesn't know who may be about. We'll say that he doesn't know that Alan Carstairs is carrying about that photograph. What happens next? The photograph is published—"

"Consternation in the Cayman ménage," said Roger helpfully. "Exactly. What is to be done? The bold thing—grasp the nettle. Who knows Carstairs as Carstairs? Hardly anyone in this country. Down goes Mrs. Cayman, weeping crocodile tears and recognizing body as that of a convenient brother. The two also do a little horus-pocus of posting parcels to bolster up the walking-tour story."

"You know, Frankie, I think that's positively brilliant," said Roger with admiration. "I think it's pretty good myself," said Frankie. "And you're quite right. We ought to get busy on the track of the Caymans. I can't think why we haven't done so before."

This was not quite true, since Frankie knew the reason quite well—namely, that they had been on the track of Roger himself.

"What are we going to do about Mrs. Nicholson?" she asked abruptly. "What do you mean—do about her?"

"Well, the poor thing is terrified to death. I do think you're callous about her, Roger."

"I'm not really, but people who can't help themselves always irritate me."

"Oh, but do be fair! What can she do? She's no money and nowhere to go."

"The truth of the matter is that you would find something to do," said Roger with decision.

Roger. It was clear, did not like them helpless. Moira, on the other hand, clearly did not think very much of Roger. She had called him weak and had scouted the possibility of his having the guts to murder anyone.

He was weak, perhaps—but undeniably he had charm. She had felt it from the first moment of arriving at Merroway Court.

Roger said quietly, "If you liked, Frankie, you could make anything you chose of a man..."

Frankie felt a sudden little thrill—and at the same time an acute embarrassment. She changed the subject hastily.

"About your brother," she said. "Do you still think he should go to the Grange?"

"No," said Roger. "I don't. After all, there are heaps of other places where he can be treated. The really important thing is to get Henry to agree."

"Do you think that will be difficult?" asked Frankie.

"I'm afraid it may be. You heard him the other night. On the other hand, if we just catch him in the repentant mood, that's very different. Hello—here comes Sylvia."

Mrs. Bassington-French emerged from the house and looked about her. Then seeing Roger and Frankie she walked across the grass towards them. They could see that she was looking terribly worried and strained.

"Roger," she began, "I've been looking for you everywhere." Then, as Frankie made a movement to leave them—"No, my dear, don't go. Of what use are concealments? In any case, I think you know all there is to know. You've suspected this business for some time, haven't you?"

Frankie nodded.

"While I've been blind—blind," said Sylvia bitterly. "Both of you saw what I never even suspected. I only wondered why Henry had chased so to all of us. It made me very unhappy, but I never suspected the reason."

She paused, then went on again with a slight change of tone.

"I should like to see you at the trial to obtain that vast amount at low interest rates, for an increase of only 1-2 per cent in the cost of money to the government would run into large figures. Most important of all, he impressed on them, was the psychological effect on business and industry and purchasers."

HOLD: Chairman John Fahy made himself solid by speaking up first. "The chip in $1,000,000,000," he said, referring to unused lending authorizations. RFC-er Jones promised to throw in a "couple of hundred million" and FIA-er Stewart

MacDonald matched him. It was the most plutocratic game of poker ever played in Washington and the "banker" was smiling broadly when his guests departed.

DRIVE: The administration's top notch experts in stocks and bonds are having a quiet laugh at the expense of Herbert Hoover. They rate the former President rather low as an investors' counsel.

They pass out word that he chose an unhappy moment to advise Leonard Stanford University trustees to

"As soon as Dr. Nicholson told me the truth, I went straight to Henry. I've only just left him now." She paused, swallowing a sob. "Roger—it's going to be all right. He's agreed. He will go to the Grange and put himself in Dr. Nicholson's hands tomorrow."

"Oh, no!" The exclamation came from Roger and Frankie simultaneously. Sylvia looked at them, astonished.

Roger spoke awkwardly. "Do you know, Sylvia, I've been thinking it over, and I don't believe the Grange would be a good plan, after all."

"You think he can fight it by himself?" asked Sylvia doubtfully.

"No, I don't. But there are other places—places not so well, not so near at hand. I'm convinced that staying in this district would be a mistake."

"I'm sure of it," said Frankie, coming to his rescue.

"Oh, I don't agree," said Sylvia. "I couldn't bear to have him go away somewhere. And Dr. Nicholson has been so kind and understanding. I shall feel happy about Henry's being under his charge."

"I thought you didn't like Nicholson, Sylvia," said Roger.

"I've changed my mind." She spoke simply.

There was a moment's silence. The position was awkward. Neither Roger nor Sylvia knew quite what to say next.

"Poor Henry," said Sylvia. "He broke down. He was terribly upset at my knowing. He agreed that he must fight this awful craving for my sake and Tommy's, but he said I hadn't a conception of what it meant. Oh, Roger, it seems so awful! But Dr. Nicholson was really kind. I trust him."

"All the same, I think it would be better—" began Roger.

SYLVIA turned on him. "I don't understand you, Roger. Why have you changed your mind? Half an hour ago you were all for Henry's going to the Grange."

"Well—I've—I've had time to think the matter over since—"

Again Sylvia interrupted. "Anyway, I've made up my mind. Henry shall go to the Grange and nowhere else."

They confronted her in silence. Then Roger said: "Do you know, I think I will ring up Nicholson. He will be home now. I'd like—just to have a talk with him about matters."

Without waiting for her reply he turned away and went rapidly into the house. The two women stood looking after him.

"I cannot understand Roger," said Sylvia impatiently. "About a quarter of an hour ago he was positively urging me to arrange for Henry to go to the Grange." Her tone held a distinct note of anger.

"All the same," said Frankie, "I agree with him. I'm sure I've read somewhere that people ought always to go for a cure somewhere far away from their homes."

"I think that's just nonsense," said Sylvia.

Frankie felt in a dilemma. Sylvia's unexpected obstinacy was making things difficult, and also she seemed suddenly to have become as violently pro-Nicholson as she formerly had been against him. It was very hard to know what arguments to use.

An airplane passed low overhead in the gathering dusk, filling the air with its loud beat of engines. Both Sylvia and Frankie stared up at it, glad of the respite it afforded, since neither of them quite knew what to say next. It gave Frankie time to collect her thoughts, and Sylvia time to recover from her fit of sudden anger.

As the airplane disappeared over the trees and its roar receded into the distance, Sylvia turned abruptly to Frankie.

"It's been so awful—" she said brokenly. "And you all seem to want to send Henry far away from me."

"No, no," said Frankie. "It wasn't that at all."

At a loss what to say or do next, Frankie relapsed into silence. Presently Roger came out again from the house. He seemed slightly breathless.

"Nicholson isn't in yet," he said. "I left a message."

"I don't see why you want to see Nicholson so urgently," said Sylvia. "You suggested this plan, and it's all arranged, and Henry has consented."

"I think I've got some say in the matter, Sylvia," said Roger gently. "After all, I'm Henry's brother."

"You suggested the plan yourself," said Sylvia, obstinately. She bit her lip, turned away, and went into the house.

shun government bonds for investment and put their money into better paying stocks. It coincided with a confidential report showing that institutions with funds to stow away had pursued an exactly opposite policy. Although more than nine billion worth of U. S. bonds have been issued in three years, individuals hold $500,000,000 less now than they did when Uncle Sam first went to market in 1933.

But Mr. Hoover's advice bears out reports that GOP strategists will stage a campaign to win over everybody who owns securities, savings accounts, life insurance policies. By emphasizing inflation's effect on purchasing power, they hope to drive O. U. into Republican stocks.

SPIES: There's a kink in the "navy mind" which makes admirals see spies in every waste basket, and communists in every umbrella stand. Even such a hard-bitten old salt as Admiral Standley, Chief of Operations, seriously believes that other nations' spies—one nation in particular—infect the U. S. So do several spy-chasing captains in the Naval Intelligence Service. They sold their fears to several patriotic and industrial organizations. Between them they whipped up a "scare" which produced the pending sedition-defection bill. Though some provisions would land a careless editorial writer in jail if strictly enforced, it almost sneaked through Congress on dull days when nobody was looking.

Then two House cubs—Rep. Mavrick of Texas and Marcantonio of New York—put their heads together. They dubbed it the "navy spy bill." Immediately its Senate sponsor—Senator Tydings—disavowed it. Other backers ran to cover. It's dead for this session unless resurrected. Before making their next maneuver, naval intelligencers await the return of Admiral Standley from the London naval conference. He may have some new ideas as a result of his experiences there.

PET: Our officials are too polite. PET: Our officials are too polite politics, but here's a story: Konstantine Umansky, a rising Russian, has been appointed to replace the affable Boris Skvirsky as counsellor of the Soviet embassy here. It happens that Mr. Umansky served as boss-censor at Moscow for many years. He worked at his job grimly. He slashed the dispatches of American writers until only a few commas remained and imposed conditions which they describe as "intolerable." It is noted that Foreign Commissar Litvinoff was allowed to learn the choice would be unfortunate. American correspondents have got journalistic knives instead of pens.

The explanation is that Umansky is the protégé of Commissar Litvinoff, who gave orders that the censor be shoved up the ladder at top speed. Rival Russians refer to the counsellor as "Litvinoff's fair-haired boy" when Gay-Pay-oo agents aren't listening. The young man has influence at court although such old-fashioned democratic things were supposed to have died with the House of Romanoff.

NEW YORK By James McMillin UNACCEPTABLE: Last week's gestures of Republican hospitality lately stressed the growing demand to right-wing Democrats by Sentor Vandenberg and Chairman Fletcher settled a lengthy back-street argument. Some GOP inner councilors have favored such a move right along. Others feared it would convey the impression that the Republicans weren't strong enough to stand on their own feet. Vandenberg took the plunge on his own initiative. Fletcher and his advisers played echo.

But don't take this "coalition" stuff too seriously. Naturally the GOP-ers will welcome Democrat recruits. In the event of victory they don't intend to share any more of the spoils with temporary converts than necessary.

The suggestion that the Republicans choose a Democrat as vice-presidential nominee is positively out—although Liberty League circles have privately urged this as an election clincher. That's one reason the proposal isn't acceptable. If John W. Davis, Al Smith, J. M. J. Shouse, John J. Raskob et al want to help elect a Republican—that's fine. But they needn't expect to run the show—now or afterwards.

RIDDLE: A certain number of Democrats are expected to climb publicly on the Republican bandwagon for duration of the campaign. New York understands that one of them will be Judge Pattangall—one of the original proponents of a Jeffersonian Democrat third party. But the Judge will merely be returning to his first love. He started political life as a Republican—even though he switched to the Democratic side more than thirty years ago and has remained there ever since.

There are plenty of Democrats—especially in the South—who would like to get rid of Roosevelt and yet balk at swallowing the GOP label. Anti-New Deal leaders will continue their efforts to promote a conservative Democratic party for the benefit of this element. Such a party admittedly would not corral many votes. Yet it might serve a very useful purpose—as the Palmer-Buckner ticket did in 1896—if it drew enough ballots from Roosevelt to give the GOP a couple of doubtful states.

The big trouble is to locate a leader. Everyone approached in this connection who has the faintest claim to a political future has ducked the assignment as he would the plague. It savors too much of political suicide. So the promoters must pick the man who is politically dead and yet can command a public following. A number of big-time-brows are aching over this riddle.

FARMERS: The Republican high command doesn't intend to miss any tricks in its attempt to recapture the farm vote. New York insiders learn that L. J. Taber of Ohio—Master of the National Grange—has been sounded out on his willingness to accept the vice-presidential nomination. The Grange is one of the most powerful farm organizations and Taber is very popular with his followers. It would be a sweet stroke if the GOP could line it up to offset Edward A. O'Neal's Federation of Farm Bureaus—which is pretty definitely committed to support F. D. R. Taber is a Republican, so there would be no straining at party ties.

Reports indicate that Taber is not very receptive to the suggested honor. But a number of GOP chiefs still believe he can be persuaded.

BEWILDERED: This column has gestures of Republican hospitality lately stressed the growing demand for stocks by the general public as

PARTY CHIEF'S BROTHER INDICTED

Alex S. Howell (left), brother of Chairman Hugh Howell (right) of the Georgia Democratic Executive committee, was indicted by a federal grand jury in Atlanta on five counts charging filing of false claims against the government and violation of the Emergency Relief Act in using WPA workers to mail copies of the Georgia Woman's World, a publication alleged to contain political propaganda. (Associated Press Photo)

a more important factor than prospective inflation in the sustained strength of the market. Here's more evidence. Some of Wall Street's shrewdest operators have been fooled more than once in the past year. Gauging the market by past experience, they have several times unloaded their holdings, for cash—anticipating a corrective reaction that would give them a chance to repurchase stocks at lower levels. In each case such reactions were due by all established standards—and in each case they have failed to develop. So the smart boys have had to pay more instead of less when they reentered the market. This has hurt both their pride and their pocketbooks—and—until lately—they have completely been at a loss to account for it.

The answer is that the growth of public investment appetite has upset all traditional market calculations. For a while they refused to believe the public was really involved because there was no noticeable increase in margin buying. Moreover, skilled attempts to start a reaction didn't get anywhere. Small speculators have always run to cover at the first sign of stormy weather. It has finally sunk in that the new public buying is in cash and primarily for investment—and is therefore unruffled by tape action that used to scare the little fellows to death. This is all very irritating and bewildering to professionals. Their sure-fire tricks no longer work because the rising generation of customers doesn't know or care about them.

HARMONY: Last week's session of the New York County Republican Committee to choose delegates for the Cleveland convention was all sweetness and light—a marked contrast to the roughhouse attending the ouster of Chase Millen as Chairman at the last previous meeting. The miraculous restoration of harmony in this group has enormously encouraged the GOP hopes of capturing the state this fall. (Copyright McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

NEW BUILDING SHOWING GAIN

Permits issued in January Increase 60 Per Cent

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Feb. 17.—New construction work continues to grow in this state on the basis of the January building permits figures released today by Commissioner of Labor A. L. Fletcher, showing a total of $487,270 of new construction in January from 271 building permits in the 21 cities and towns in the state of 10,000 population or over.

This figure shows an increase of 60 per cent over the building permits total of January, 1935 and a gain of 115 per cent over the January, 1934 figure. It does not equal the building permits total for December, 1935, however, which amounted to $499,317, which represented an increase of 222 per cent over the figures for December, 1934.

The building permits totals for the entire year of 1935 amounted to $9,143,830 as compared with a total of only $4,103,409 for the year 1934, an increase of 123 per cent.

Of the new construction started in January of this year, about 55 per cent consisted of repair work, about 35 per cent new residential construction and only about 10 per cent non-residential. Comparing the 1935 with the 1936 figures for January, they show that the dollar value of new residential building increased 138 per cent, additions, alterations and repairs increased 131 per cent, while non-residential building decreased 47 per cent.

Charlotte heads the list with the largest amount of new building in January, with $131,387 as compared with $64,158 in January, 1935. Winston-Salem comes next with $80,394 last month as compared with $24,212 for the same month last year. Salisbury is the third place with $66,420 in new building last month as compared with $5,700 in January, 1934. Durham is in fourth place with $33,400 in new building in January as compared with $37,690 in January, 1935.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORG ETUCKER

New York—A returning pilgrim adds this chapter to the already incredible lore of Hollywood fantasia. Determining upon a vast production schedule, an executive summoned his ace scenarists and told him to write the story of the fine economic comeback the country has made since the depression. He suggested emphasizing the growing confidence and pointed out the desirability of painting a promising future.

"It will be our great recovery picture," the mogul declared.

Retreating to his studio, the author toiled late and diligently until, at the end of six weeks, he had a scenario he felt sure would qualify. He was somewhat bewildered at the reasons advanced when it was rejected.

"It's too Utopian," the executive criticized. "It will make the public too optimistic."

Having shaken that out of my calls, I'll remind you how cruelly absent-minded this metropolitan community can be. There was the statue of that Civil war veteran which stood, a forgotten man, in Harlem river for 38 years. Thousands passed it every day but none knew or cared what it was.

"Might be Columbus," one citizen hazarded. Another thought it was a hero of the Mexican war.

Now comes J. R. Canny who wearily explains. This statue, a Yankee soldier, was originally intended for a federal graveyard, but somehow lost a foot and the G. A. R. rejected it. Stuck with it, Canny's father-in-law and two other gentlemen gave it footing on a wooden bridge then spanning the slender Harlem. This was in 1898. Now it stands on a submerged mound, but the bridge is gone. Canny hopes this will clear the matter. I wouldn't have brought it up, but can you imagine the people of Atlanta or Richmond, not knowing what a Confederate statue was?

Now that the movies are really going to release it, one harks back to a happy dawn when Sheila Barrill, who mimics famous folk in the Rainbow Room, first learned that they were going to make a picture of "Anthony Adverse."

"You can't do a picture of that runs on for hundreds and hundreds of pages."

Assured that such was the case, she explained her enthusiasm to the group of Broadway reporters with whom she had been chatting most of the night.

"I've been reading that book for seven months," she chirped, "and I'm still on the first page." This was nearly two years ago, and I've got it figured out that if the movie people hold off the release till July, Sheila will just about make it.

Wednesday night amateurs at the Apollo are returning the septa to its former glory. These frothy theatricals are being fast-dressed by whites t. Harlem for these weekly jamborees which Eddie Canilro believes reveal more talent than many Broadway revues. It costs 25 cents to get in, the theater seats

2,000 and hundreds are always turned away.

Doug Fairbanks (pere) continues to grow more moon-faced. The actor is aglow with health, but the lean jaw that movie audiences knew in the exciting days of Zoro, is no more, which may account for his sudden decision to give up acting and confine himself to production.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in that certain deed in Trust executed and delivered to J. J. White, Trustee, on the 3rd day of July, 1933, by Justus James and wife, Allie E. FARMER URGES LOWER COURTS

Highway Patrol Chief Says More Needed In State

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Feb. 19.—More county Recorder's Courts with general county jurisdiction are needed in order to dispose of traffic cases if nothing else, according to Captain Charles D. Farmer, commander of the State Highway Patrol.

At present the patrolmen are being hampered in many counties because they must wait for weeks and sometimes months before those arrested for traffic violations can be tried, because of the absence of any county Recorder's Courts.

"There are numerous counties in which there is no general county court, with the result that when a patrolman makes an arrest for an offense outside the jurisdiction of a Justice of the Peace, he must wait until the next term of Superior Court before the case can be tried," Captain Farmer said. "In some of the smaller counties, there are only two or three terms of Superior Court a year, with the result that we must sometimes wait as much as six months before those arrested by patrolmen can be brought to trial."

In the larger counties, there are frequently two or three Recorder's Courts with county-wide jurisdiction. Here in Wake County, there are five Recorder's courts, one in Fuquay Springs, one in Wake Forest, Zebulon, Wendell and Apex, in addition to the city court in Raleigh, which has county-wide jurisdiction only in cases involving amounts ranging from $200.00 to $500.00.

If there was at least one general county court in every county with county-wide jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases involving misdemeanors, they would save a great deal of time in the handling of traffic cases and likewise prevent much of the congestion in the superior courts in these counties. County Commissioners now have authority to establish general county courts in any counties where none now exist, it was pointed out, so that special legislation is not necessary. These courts would make better law enforcement possible in all these counties, especially better enforcement of the highway and motor vehicle laws.

State Bank Department Collected $70,275,847

Liquidations Net Nice Sums Since Work Taken Over

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, Feb. 19.—The state banking department has collected a total of $70,275,847 in the course of liquidating closed banks since that task was made a duty of the department in 1927, Commissioner of Banks Gurney P. Hood announced today.

The period over which the collections were made is from January 18, 1927, to December 31, 1935. Of this $70,275,847 collected in this entire period, $10,083,186 was collected during the year 1935, Commissioner Hood pointed out.

During this nine year period, the state banking department has written and issued 591,043 checks, of which 101,896 were written during 1935. A total of 185 banks have been turned over to the banking department for liquidation during this period, of which 133 have been completely liquidated, the figures released today show. During the past year, the liquidation of 40 banks was completed, leaving only 52 banks not yet completely liquidated. The department expects to complete the liquidation of these remaining 52 banks this year, Hood said.

The cost of collecting this $70,275,847 from the creditors of closed banks for distribution to depositors averaged $3.42 for each $100 collected during the nine year period, the report shows. The income from the various funds held in trust during the process of liquidation amounted to $5.04 for each $100 collected, however, so that the net cost of collecting this money amounted to only 20 cents per $100, Hood pointed out.

The salary cost per $100 collected during this period was only $1.58, the audit expense only 30 cents, attorneys fees 91 cents. An average of $8,024 was paid to the depositors in the 133 banks liquidating during this period for each $100 due them, the report shows.

During the year 1935, when $10,083,186 was collected by the department from closed banks, the cost of collections was $6.26 per $100, and the income $5.74, so that the net cost of collections was only 52 cents per $100, Commissioner Hood pointed out.

Transactions approximated 5,000,000 shares.

ITALIAN FORCE REPORTS GAIN

Penetrate Northern Ethiopia Behind Airplane Bombs

(By The Associated Press)

A further infantry penetration of northern Ethiopia behind the bombs of airplanes was reported today by the Italian military command to its government in Rome.

This penetration was regarded as the preliminary to a new major offensive before the advance of the spring rains.

The government at Rome announced it had received a note from France placing that nation shoulder to shoulder with Great Britain in the agreement for mutual assistance in the Mediterranean.

The Earl of Stanhope, British undersecretary for foreign affairs, told the House of Lords that "threats" from Italy were the real reason why the British fleet had been set from Malta, close to Sicily, to the Eastern Mediterranean.

Two Deeds Recorded in County Last Week

Only two real estate transfers were recorded in the office of Pitt county Register of deeds last week. It was the smallest number recorded for any one week in some time.

A tract was deeded by Alonzo Cherry, et als, to Louise Peyton, for $100 and other considerations, and E. D. Sutton transferred two tracts of property to Beniah Tripp for one dollar and other considerations.

No Substitution of PWA Projects

Chapel Hill, Feb. 19.—Returning from a series of conferences in Washington, Dr. H. G. Batty, PWA State Director for North Carolina, announced today that no further substitution of public works projects will be permitted and that communities which do not accept at once offers already made by PWA are likely to lose their projects through revocation of allotments by the Administrator of Public Works.

The State Director said that he had been advised by Administrator Harold L. Ickes, that communities which have selected PWA projects and have received allotments for them from the 1935 appropriation must now proceed with those projects or miss their opportunity in the current PWA program.

RALEIGH TEAM HALTS LOCALS

Greenville Drops a Thrilling Game by Narrow Margin

By JAMES L. WHITFIELD

The eighth of the Greenville high school was halted by the state champs in basketball, the Raleigh high here last night and dropped a game to the visitors by a score of 30-24.

The boys from Raleigh have been victorious over the many quints of the state for the past three years, however, the margin win over the Greenvies was somewhat less than the gains over other teams of the State.

One of the largest crowds of the season turned out for the game, and it was the opinion of the spectators that they had witnessed one of the best basketball games in some time between two high school teams.

Every member of the local bunch played a fine game, with Carl Pierce topping the Greenvies with the highest number of points by tallying a total number of ten. George Lautares and Thomas Parrish came through with flying colors last night, with Lautares making 7 points and Parrish 6. Parrish sunk one of the prettiest field goals seen in some time to run up the score of the local basketweavers. Joe Hatem was the only other member of the locals to score, however Dubose Simpson and Harry Rountree did exceptionally well.

Every member of the Raleigh outfit scored, with Uage, right guard for the visitors, leading with ten points.

In Maryland and Kentucky, tobacco is air-cured in specially ventilated barns.

In Virginia and the Carolinas, "Bright" tobacco is fire-cured by heat in log barns.

In Turkey and Greece, tobacco is sun-cured by hanging on racks in the open air.

We cure each tobacco in a Chesterfield the way that is best for that tobacco

... another reason why Chesterfields are milder and taste better

When we say that a tobacco is good enough for Chesterfield cigarettes, we mean just this—

... TOBACCO that is ripened in the sunshine, then picked, leaf by leaf, when fully ripe.

... TOBACCO that is cured just right by the farmer—flue-cured, air-cured or sun-cured to seal in its good aroma and flavor.

... TOBACCO that is aged and mellowed in hogsheads or bales for two years or more until free from harshness or bite.

That is the kind of tobacco we use for Chesterfields—mild, ripe tobacco, cured just right and aged for flavor and taste.
