Invitation For Germany To Join In Discussions Is Accepted By Hitler

Hitler's Right Hand Diplomat to Represent Reichsfuehrer

SOLUTION IS SEEN AS A POSSIBILITY

Acceptance of Bid Made by League of Nations Comes in Midst of Crisis

London, March 17.—(AP)—Reichsfuehrer Hitler today accepted an invitation by the League of Nations council to discuss the international crisis brought about by his placing an army back in the Rhineland.

The league secretariat received a telegram from the German government announcing that General Joseph von Rippertrop, Hitler's right hand diplomat, would represent Germany at the council table.

Hitler's answer to the league invitation came in the midst of a critical day.

Great Britain who would seek to study Hitler's proposal for peace, had been almost in a deadlock with France, which was insisting that Germany be branded a treaty violator by the League.

Great Britain was reported, without confirmation, to have attempted to smooth over the difficulty by proposing a reinforced Locarno treaty with Germany participating under the framework of the League of Nations.

Authoritative sources said that Hitler's reply had opened a wide new possibility for a solution of the European crisis.

(Copyright By Associated Press) London, March 17.—(AP)—French sources announced that Foreign Minister Pierre-Rene Flandin at an audience with King Edward, III, today would make a "last appeal" to Britain to honor the Locarno obligations.

Although the audience was described official as a "courtesy visit," a French spokesman said "that does not prevent an important exchange of opinions from taking place."

Flandin, it was understood might press for application of economic and financial sanctions against Germany for the Reich's occupation of the Rhineland, March 7, in violation of the Locarno pact, and Versailles treaty. Informed sources however, said there was little hope of united action.

British, French, Belgium and Italian representatives reassembled at the foreign office to continue their discussion of the new security proposal Adolph Hitler extended simultaneously with his breaking of the old pact, and to study what should be done about his denunciation of the Locarno pact.

The representatives of the Locarno signatories, facing an open breach on Hitler's proposal, recessed after a one and a half hour session until late tonight, hoping in that time to smooth out their grave differences of opinions.

No communication was issued following the session, but it was stated authoritatively that the British tried unsuccessfully to win at least partial approval from France and Belgium for discussion of the Hitler suggestions.

A French source hinted that a communication of some sort had been received from Berlin in which the German stand was expressed as "slightly more favorable."

A French spokesman frankly declared his belief that the gravest moment in post-war history was reached with today's meeting of the Locarno power as the council session, coupled with Flandin's audience with King Edward.

Questioned in Connection with Brooklyn Payroll 'Job'

New York, March 17.—(AP)—Detectives today questioned seven men and three women in an effort to connect them with the $427,000 payroll holdup of an armored car in Brooklyn two years ago.

The suspects were captured in a dawn raid on a rooming house on the upper West Side which turned out to be a miniature fortress replete with sawedoff shotguns and a short wave radio transmission set.

One of those arrested after a tussle with detectives was William O'Brien, 25, whose fingerprints, police said, match those on a card at headquarters marked wanted in connection with the spectacular (Continued on page six)

Politics Gaining Steam As Headquarters Are Opened

Raleigh, March 17.—With the campaign headquarters of two of the candidates for Governor already open and a third expected to open in the next week or ten days, all in the Sir Walter Hotel here, the political wheels are expected to turn faster and faster as the various candidates get up more steam.

The campaign headquarters of Lieutenant Governor A. H. Graham, on the tenth floor of the Sir Walter Hotel, opened late last week and Campaign Manager Lon Folger is being kept busy meeting the steady stream of callers and answering the hundreds of letters already pouring in. On the floor below, in Room 904, the headquarters of Clyde R. Hoey are getting down to business with Campaign Manager Hubert Olive of Lexington on the job.

The Hoey headquarters did not open until yesterday and Manager Olive and his assistant, Robert L. Thompson, formerly of The News and Observer and now in charge of the Hoey publicity, have not yet got their headquarters completely organized and ready for business. But they are expected to have a

Educator Who Served as Intermediary Declines to Amplify Brief Statement

New York, March 17.—(AP)—Dr. John F. Condon, returning to New York from a Panama vacation, was quoted by a fellow passenger on the liner, Sanga Inez, today as being "very" willing to discuss the Lindbergh case with Governor Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey in Dr. Condon's own Bronx home.

"Jafsie" himself declined to comment whatever on the last month's efforts of Bruno Richard Hauptmann to escape execution for the kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh baby.

But the Rev. Henry Beets, director of the Presbyterian mission in South America, quoted him as having said:

"I will be very glad to receive Governor Hoffman at my home in the Bronx, which would be a very lovely place now that spring is here, and give him a good dinner and talk with him over the cigars as long as he pleases, but I don't see any reason why I should go to New Jersey.

The gray-haired educator, closeted in his home, consistently refused to amplify his earlier statements of "no comments," made when he and his daughter were met on the ship by newspapermen.

"The elderly Jafsie" entered an automobile immediately after his vessel docked, and was whisked to his home.

"Will you confer with Governor Hoffman?" he was asked and "will you accede to the requests of Hauptmann for a death house interview?"

He merely shook his head and remained silent.

Greenville Couple To Leave Tuesday for European Trip

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Garrett to Sail From New York on the Night of March 18 for Liverpool

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Garrett will leave here tonight for New York City from which place they sail on a trip that will take them to London and other European places.

Mr. Garrett is making the trip in the interest of the Person-Garrett tobacco company, of which he is president.

Mr. and Mrs. Garrett will sail from New York on the night of March 18 on the S.S. Berengaria, of the Cunard Line. They will disembark at Southampton and go to London, where they will visit friends.

The couple will tour England, Ireland, Scotland and France, spending about five weeks in the countries before they return to the states. They are expected to return to the city about May 1.

The former college professor who is now one of the three leading candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor, is also going to open his headquarters in the Sir Walter Hotel, probably on the seventh floor, although the exact location has not yet been determined. But he has made arrangements to open his headquarters here, probably within the next two weeks, although he has not yet announced the selection of a campaign manager. Announcement of a campaign manager by McDonald is expected in the very near future, however.

Whether John A. McRae, of Charlotte, the fourth candidate for the nomination for Governor, will open headquarters here has not been learned, but so far there is nothing to indicate he contemplates such action.

In spite of the reports from certain street-corner "straw" polls which have been made in some sections of the state and broadcast over the radio to the effect that Hoey and McDonald are running almost neck and neck in many sections, the (Continued on page six)

The Smith-Ely Reed faction have agreed that they can't "stop Roosevelt" at Philadelphia. It would not be surprising if they backed a Republican, especially if Alf Landon should be the nominee. Although it isn't generally known, several anti-Roosevelt Democrats like Gov. Landon best of the Republican lot. So some shrewd and unemotional observers look for a wideopen split in 1940.

SNOW AND SLEET FALL IN STATE

Reports to Weather Bureau in Beaufort Tell of Forty-Mile Southeaster

Charlotte, March 17.—(AP)—A storm moving up the eastern seaboard crossed the Carolinas today bringing high winds, heavy rains and low temperatures.

Snow and sleet fell in the mountains of the west but melted almost as fast. Hendersonville reported snow there throughout the morning.

High winds at Hendersonville cracked windows and blew down signboards and trees.

Strong, shifting winds also swept the central parts of North Carolina and a warning issued by the United States meteorological station at Fort Bragg said they possibly would reach hurricane strength in the afternoon.

Reports to the weather bureau at Beaufort said a 40 mile southeaster, ripped hard by rain and thunder, was sweeping coastal points with gale forces predicted for tonight.

A storm warning flew at Beaufort and from Hatteras to Jacksonville.

The forecast was for fair and colder tonight and the United States weather bureau here said the temperature possibly would drop to freezing.

Governor Outlines Plan For Voluntary Reduction Of Tobacco Crop In 1936

WOMAN TRIED KILLING MATE

Entire Morning Session Consumed in Hearing One Case

The entire morning session of Pitt County Superior Court was consumed today in hearing the case charging Martha Little, negro, with killing her husband, James Little.

The case was placed in the hands of the jury shortly after midday. It was the first case to be tried today. The jury was still out this afternoon.

At the beginning of the trial, Solicitor D. M. Clark announced he would not seek a first degree verdict, but would ask for a verdict of manslaughter or second degree murder.

The negro woman is charged with killing her husband with a knife about a month or so ago. They lived in Pactolus township. State's testimony set forth that the woman went to the home of a neighbor and fatally wounded her husband who died a short while after he was injured.

At the afternoon session yesterday, Lester Lechworth was brought to trial on a charge of abandonment. He was ordered to pay for the upkeep of his family, $25 at the present time, $25 on or by December 1 and pay $2.50 each month until January 1, 1937.

Bill Sermon withdrew his appeal from a conviction of driving drunk and the county court judgment was ordered invoked.

Mr. Hart was married and had several children. The body was taken to Ayden, former home, shortly after he died for last rites.

J. C. Lanier of Greenville Warns of Big Crop Tobacco

WINSLOW ASKS ABOUT COMPACT

Governor Declares That He Does Not Know That Such Legislation Evident

Raleigh, March 17.—(AP)—North Carolina farm leaders met with Gov. Ehringhaus here this afternoon to lay plans to reduce the 1936 flue cured tobacco crop in the state.

Governor Ehringhaus outlined the purpose of the gathering to discuss ways and means to control production and presented a tentative voluntary contract to be signed by growers to limit their crop to 70 per cent of the base acreage determined by the AAA.

Dean I. O. Schaub of N. C. State college, outlined plans for a statewide campaign next week by county agents in behalf of the new federal soil conservation program. County agents will meet here Tuesday to study the plan and starting Thursday seven teams will tour the state to explain it to farmers.

The proposal, Dean Schaub said, will be to pay around five cents a pound or from $35 to $40 an acre as rental for land changed from tobacco production to soil improvement crops.

The contracts Governor Ehringhaus presented contained stipulations growers would not purposely increase the number of pounds grown per acre by close planting or by use of excessive fertilizer.

J. C. Lanier of Greenville warned that without the sign-up for reduction there would be a crop "at least as large, maybe larger, than the 303,000,000 pounds of last year."

"If we don't have a sign-up we are going to have to stew in our own juice and I am not ready to do it," Lanier continued.

"If the farmers plant tobacco it will stay in the ground and we can pass laws until dooms day but it will be harvested."

J. E. Winslow of Greenville, head of the State Farm Bureau, federation, asked "Aren't we headed toward state compacts in North Carolina, regardless of what is done now?"

Governor Ehringhaus replied: "I don't know."

Winslow insisted he believed the ultimate aim for tobacco control was state compacts.

Clinics Scheduled For Children Who Plan Enter School

All Children Expected to Enter School Next Fall Urged to Take Advantage of Examination

Tentative plans were announced today by Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, County health officer, for a pre-school clinic to be held in the county during the week beginning March 30.

Parents of all school children entering school next fall for the first time are urged to take their children to their respective schools on the date announced and receive the free examination.

Health and school authorities pointed out the advantages of children being examined before they enter school so that no time will be missed later on while the examinations are being made.

A complete physical examination will be made with no cost to the children or the parents. The only cost involved is the cost of vaccine for diphtheria vaccinations and this is only 10 cents per dose.

In addition to children entering school next fall, all children over six months of age will be eligible for the diphtheria vaccination.

The tentative schedule for the examinations follows: Monday, March 30th.—Grifton, 9:00 a. m.; Ayden, 1:00 p. m. Tuesday, March 31st.—Bethel, 9:00 a. m. Wednesday, April 1st.—Farmville, 9:00 a. m.; Fountain, 1:00 p. m. Thursday, April 2nd.—Winterville, 9:00 a. m.; Arthur, 1:30 p. m. Friday, April 3rd.—Chicod, 9:00 a. m.; Ormesland, 1:30 p. m. GOVERNOR MAY TAKE BANK JOB

Refuses, However, to Comment on Report on Intentions

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, March 16.—Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus today declined to either affirm or deny the report that he would accept a position with the Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. of Winston-Salem, probably as head of the Raleigh branch, after he completes his term as Governor.

"I can't keep folks from speculating on what I am going to do after I get through being Governor," was all Governor Ehringhaus would say. "I have not made any definite plans whatever."

This statement has only served to strengthen the belief in most circles, and already verified from reliable sources, that Governor Ehringhaus has already been offered a position with the Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. to become effective as soon as his present term as Governor expires. It is also believed that the exact position will be as the head of the Raleigh unit and of the campaign for new business which the Wachovia bank is now carrying in eastern North Carolina. It is recalled that the vacancy left by the death of Frank Page as vice president in charge of the Raleigh branch of the Wachovia has not yet been filled, also that the Wachovia is reported to have paid Page a salary of $15,000 a year.

It is pointed out here that Governor Ehringhaus knows eastern North Carolina, its values and especially tobacco, its major crop, much better than Page knew it, also that he has a better, more friendly personality and is a much better "mixer." So if Page was worth $15,000 a year to Wachovia, many think Ehringhaus would be worth at least $20,000 or $25,000 a year, both for his ability as a lawyer and financier and for his personality and promotional ability. There is no doubt that a proposal has already been made to Governor Ehringhaus, although no details are known.

It is no secret that Wachovia is planning to greatly extend its business activities throughout eastern North Carolina and has hopes of making its Raleigh branch as large if not larger than its Winston-Salem branch. It seems to have at least waked up to the fact that there is more money and more buying power in the east than any other section—provided tobacco prices hold up.

Washington—If the privately expressed opinions of administration leaders in congress can be taken at face value the President's forthcoming message on relief is causing them more concern from a political standpoint than his tax recommendations.

As sweeping as the latter were, the general opinion here seems to be that Mr. Roosevelt executed a master stroke in his tax message. As expressed by one insider: "It's a political natural. The Democrats will now be able to go before the country in the coming campaign and say to the average voter: 'Look what the President did for you. He had to raise more money by the imposition of new taxes. But did he crack down on you? No, to pay the bonus and farm bills he advised dipping into corporation profits and stockholders' dividends—sources best able to pay.'"

It's not difficult to see the effect of such an appeal on the average citizen. And politicians will be quick to capitalize on it.

With the question of federal relief, however, another problem is presented.

Present indications are that the President's recommendations in this respect for the coming fiscal year will reach congress late in March or early in April. Estimates as to the amount he will ask range up to two billion dollars.

Administration leaders anticipate no trouble in persuading congress to vote the money. Aside from the fact the problem of relief continues a pressing one, members of congress will give their approval because they'll not be asked of vote taxes to foot the bill.

The chief cause of worry is that

tion of a constitutional amendment whereby the federal government will be permitted to tax the income on subsequently issued state and local securities and likewise fix the taxation by state and local governments of future issues of federal securities."

One of the staunchest supporters of the move to tax government securities is the soft-spoken, smiling Senator Byrd of Virginia. Already chairman of a senate committee studying reorganization of the government with the view to either coordinating or abolishing agencies and bureaus, Byrd is prepared to lead the fight.

Byrd Takes Action

"Any real reform in the tax system," he says, "must be based upon taxation of tax exempt securities. Without such taxation those best able to pay will escape."

Within a few days after the President made his tax recommendation last June, Byrd introduced two bills in the senate to carry it out.

The first, allowing subsequently issued federal securities to be taxed by the federal government and by state, local and territorial taxing authorities, is before the finance committee of which he is a member.

His joint resolution for the necessary constitutional amendment is in the senate judiciary committee.

He has moved to have them sprung from committee in time for consideration along with the President's tax proposals.

Byrd has marshaled imposing statistics in support of his stand. He figures that for every two dollars the federal government spends; one dollar and ten cents is added to the public debt. In other words, he says the federal government is spending $13,000 every minute, day and night, including Sundays.

He estimates that in every one of these minutes, $7,000 of financing is being done by selling tax exempt government bonds.

"The result is, we are not only increasing the public debt at this astounding rate but providing a tax refuge for the well-to-do to receive interest from the government and escape burdens of taxation," he asserts.

It's not difficult to see the effect of such an appeal on the average citizen. And politicians will be quick to capitalize on it.

With the question of federal relief, however, another problem is presented.

Present indications are that the President's recommendations in this respect for the coming fiscal year will reach congress late in March or early in April. Estimates as to the amount he will ask range up to two billion dollars.

Administration leaders anticipate no trouble in persuading congress to vote the money. Aside from the fact the problem of relief continues a pressing one, members of congress will give their approval because they'll not be asked of vote taxes to foot the bill.

The chief cause of worry is that

Washington—If the privately expressed opinions of administration leaders in congress can be taken at face value the President's forthcoming message on relief is causing them more concern from a political standpoint than his tax recommendations.

He had to raise more money by the imposition of new taxes. But did he crack down on you? SEEK ENFORCE DRIVER'S LAW

Intensive Drive Started Today by Highway Patrolmen

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, March 16.—The intensive drive to enforce the state driver's license law started this morning by the State Highway Patrol, with the result that drivers in all sections of the state can expect to be stopped at any time by patrolmen and asked to show their driving permits. Patrolmen will also test the cars for faulty breaks, lights and other equipment.

The purpose of this check-up, however, is not to arrest drivers, but to require all drivers who do not yet have their driving licenses to get them without further delay.

Commissioner of Revenue A. J. Maxwell pointed out today: "Nor have those drivers who have already applied for licenses but who have not yet received them, have any cause to worry. All patrolmen will be supplied with blank affidavits and cards and all any person who does not have a driving permit, but has already applied for one, will have to do will be to sign an affidavit to the effect that he or she has applied for a permit but not yet received it. The patrolman will then issue a card to this effect, which will take the place of a driving permit until it is received. Commissioner Maxwell said:

Nor will those found without any driving permits be arrested at first. All that will be required will be for the driver to pay the patrolman $1, and fill out the required application form for a license. The driver will then be given a card by the patrolman, showing he or she has made application for a license. Patrolmen will make arrests only in cases where drivers fail to show they have made application for licenses or refuse to pay $1 and to make their applications as requested, or where it is evident they are operating under fraudulent licenses. Commissioner Maxwell said:

While more than 600,000 driver's licenses have been issued so far, it is estimated that there are at least 100,000 drivers who have not yet even made application for their licenses. This enforcement drive, starting today, is primarily for the purpose of compelling these 100,000 or more drivers to get their licenses at once and thus make the law effective.

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington, March 13 — President Roosevelt's long-awaited tax message to congress, in which he recommended sweeping changes and revision in present policies, prompted members of congress to dust off his message on the same subject delivered last June.

A recommendation he made then promises to figure prominently in all discussions as to ways and means of supplying the huge sum demanded by the President in the present instance.

Last June Mr. Roosevelt recommended "submission and ratification of a constitutional amendment whereby the federal government will be permitted to tax the income on subsequently issued state and local securities and likewise fix the taxation by state and local governments of future issues of federal securities."

One of the staunchest supporters of the move to tax government securities is the soft-spoken, smiling Senator Byrd of Virginia. Already chairman of a senate committee studying reorganization of the government with the view to either coordinating or abolishing agencies and bureaus, Byrd is prepared to lead the fight.

Byrd Takes Action

"Any real reform in the tax system," he says, "must be based upon taxation of tax exempt securities. Without such taxation those best able to pay will escape."

Within a few days after the President made his tax recommendation last June, Byrd introduced two bills in the senate to carry it out.

The first, allowing subsequently issued federal securities to be taxed by the federal government and by state, local and territorial taxing authorities, is before the finance committee of which he is a member.

His joint resolution for the necessary constitutional amendment is in the senate judiciary committee.

He has moved to have them sprung from committee in time for consideration along with the President's tax proposals.

Cites Figures

Byrd has marshaled imposing statistics in support of his stand. He figures that for every two dollars the federal government spends; one dollar and ten cents is added to the public debt. In other words, he says the federal government is spending $13,000 every minute, day and night, including Sundays.

He estimates that in every one of these minutes, $7,000 of financing is being done by selling tax exempt government bonds.

"The result is, we are not only increasing the public debt at this astounding rate but providing a tax refuge for the well-to-do to receive interest from the government and escape burdens of taxation," he asserts.

Washington—If the privately expressed opinions of administration leaders in congress can be taken at face value the President's forthcoming message on relief is causing them more concern from a political standpoint than his tax recommendations.

As sweeping as the latter were, the general opinion here seems to be that Mr. Roosevelt executed a master stroke in his tax message. As expressed by one insider: "It's a political natural. The Democrats will now be able to go before the country in the coming campaign and say to the average voter: 'Look what the President did for you. He had to raise more money by the imposition of new taxes. But did he crack down on you? No, to pay the bonus and farm bills he advised dipping into corporation profits and stockholders' dividends—sources best able to pay.'"

It's not difficult to see the effect of such an appeal on the average citizen. And politicians will be quick to capitalize on it.

With the question of federal relief, however, another problem is presented.

Present indications are that the President's recommendations in this respect for the coming fiscal year will reach congress late in March or early in April. Estimates as to the amount he will ask range up to two billion dollars.

Administration leaders anticipate no trouble in persuading congress to vote the money. Aside from the fact the problem of relief continues a pressing one, members of congress will give their approval because they'll not be asked of vote taxes to foot the bill.

The table was covered with a cloth of lace and centered with a silver candelabra holding candles in the pastel shades, flanked by silver vases of sweet peas and snapdragons. A variety of sandwiches, wafers, cookies, cakes and nuts were served.

The lower floor of the home was very attractive with early spring flowers in the pastel colors.

EFFECTS OF ALCOHOL
(By Jane Hardee)
A man who alcohol controls is very low indeed,
Wandering away from the sacred fold
Forsaking his family in need,
Ruining the thoughts of a beautiful mind,
His health, his happiness too;
His friends are leaving him far behind
Their goal they try to pursue.
Let's offer a prayer for this lowly man
As farther downward he trends;
He is falling low as he possibly can
Let's show him the way to God.
The above poem, written by Jane Hardee of the Intermediate Department of the Jarvis Memorial Sunday School, won first prize in a contest at the recent district Missionary meeting held in Kinston.

RYAN SPEAKER TO ROTARIANS

Speaker Holds Some Justification For Nazi Actions

By WYATT BROWN

The present crisis in Europe is an over manifestation of the pressure in Europe of population pressure and the struggle of State Nationalism against Proletarian Internationalism. Reverend William A. Ryan brought out last night at the Rotary Club in his present International situation induced by German occupation of the demilitarized Rhineland. Reverend Ryan predicts that the common pressure of population would see to the alignment of Japan, Italy and Germany which alignment would effect a new set up of the smaller European nations.

The speaker held Germany's action more justifiable than street conversation admits. He cited the antecedents accruing from the unbearable Versailles impositions upon Germany, the claim of German that France's bilateral treaty with Soviet Russia constituted repudiation of the Locarno Pact thus rendering the Locarno Pact imperative and Germany's occupation of the Rhineland thus took place after the Locarno Pact was no more. Further, Rev. Ryan indicated that repudiation of treaties has been characteristic of Soviet Russia and France rendering Russia and France dwellers in glass houses in which less said about treaty repudiation the better for the safety of said glass houses of repudiation precedent.

The speaker explained that by population pressure he meant that a country gets to the point that its own natural resources, are not sufficient to support the needs of the population. In Germany the situation by the Versailles Treaty's taking away all her colonies, imposing heavy debt, erection of tariff walls and boycotting of Jewish program.

Italy too, the speaker said, feels the population pressure since her colonies are insufficient to provide her people with raw materials or places to send surplus population. Japan's occupation of Manchukuo was for additional resources but the pressure is not relieved — she needs territory more suited to Japanese settlement and Manchukuo climatically is not suited. Informal observers have been saying the Philippines were in line for Japanese occupation and then when England was busy on other fronts Australia would be taken.

Emphasis on family life and child bearing in Italy and Germany, the speaker explained, has been the outgrowth of the realization by those two nations that nations without man power are easily crushed by stronger nations. Hence they have increased their man power in order to be able to have a voice in International matters. Back of Hitler's taking of the Rhine, the speaker said in conclusion, was more than the mere retaking of a portion of the fatherland—it is population pressure and Hitler's taking up the bludgeon for the world against the culture which Soviet Russia would spread to bring about International proletarian rule.

Hugh Winslow was greeted as a "baby" Rotarian last night. Guests of the club were J. D. Simpson, and Stuart McArthur. S. G. Wilkerson won the attendance prize given by

To Deliver Sermons at Christian Church

The Rev. Fred W. Helfer of Hiram College, Ohio, who is the guest preacher conducting a preaching mission in the Eighth Street Christian Church, will deliver the first of a series of sermons tonight. The general theme of Mr. Helfer's sermons is "We Need Religion." The message for tonight will be on the subject: "We Are Hungry."

Mr. Helfer visited the minister of the Christian Church in October and occupied the pulpit at one Sunday morning service. The congregation was so delighted with him and his message that he was invited to return as guest preacher during the pre-Easter season. He will preach each evening at 7:45 and at both services on Sunday, remaining until March 27th.

The messages delivered during these special services will be of interest to all age groups and the people of Greenville are most cordially invited to hear them. Two of Mr. Helfer's pastorate have been in college churches, he has a particular appeal to young people. His messages are helpful, constructive and spiritual, being marked by a total

Wyatt Brown. The program was presented by Gilbert E. Combs, chairman of the International Service Committee. Bill Lee, president of the Club, presided. There is to be no meeting of the club in Greenville next week because the entire club is going en masse to an intercity meet at Englehard.

EPISODE OF DENTISTRY PAIN KILLER IN MARCH OF TIME

As men and women everywhere flock to their dentists to try out the recently announced Hartman Solution which makes dental work relatively painless, the new March of Time, opening Wednesday at the Pitt Theatre, presents the real story of Dr. Hartman's discovery, now hailed as an epochal contribution to human comfort.

The March of Time traces Dr.

absence of any denominational bias. He is interested in the church universal and this interest is manifested in the broad lines along which his work is done. The public is asked to remember that the evening services will begin at 7:45 rather than at 7:30 as previously announced. Music will be furnished by the choir of the Eighth Street Christian Church under the direction of Miss Eugenia Thomas, organist and choir director.

Hartman's work for nearly twenty years as he tried out and discarded a thousand formulas. It shows him as he moved from his little home-made workshop to the research laboratories of Columbia University in New York's great Presbyterian Medical Center where he invented many efficient instruments to minimize pain in drilling—including many of the standard instruments used everywhere by dentists today.

"Klondiking" SEASON ON FOR SEWER FISHERMEN Milwaukee (AP) — With snow and ice melted, the "Klondiking" season again has opened for Milwaukee sewer workers. "Klondiking" is "fishing" in catch basins for valuables dropped by the public—and the public, it seems, is always dropping something worth while.

Keys head the list, followed closely by rings, fountain pens, money and an occasional wallet. Last year a golfer reported losing his favorite masher down a sewer. First on the list of lost articles reported this year was a pair of false teeth which the sewer gang promptly recovered.

Wind Does Welder's Job Clovis, N. M., (AP)—A windstorm blew in two the smokestack on Bill Vaughter's plant. The break was at the exact spot Vaughter had asked a welder to cut it.

leaves failure to capitalize the Black Committee's confiscation of telegrams. Except for a few remarks by individuals, there has been no party move to picture the administration as setting up an OGPU.

What happened is that wiser heads decided it was an issue which could blossom without benefit of partisan fertilizer. Several Senators who had planned to ceremonialize the episode with orations were pulled off by the leaders. The latter pointed out that an attack on Black might place the G. O. P. in the position of defending the public utilities' forged and fake wires. So they permitted Senator Borah to rush in first with a demand that the FCC explain its activities.

Another reason for shying off was Joseph Shoups' haste in expressing his disgust with the whole business. Whereas G. O. P.-ers originally welcomed the American Liberty League's reinforcement, now they want a permanent divorce. Even when they seem to have a hot issue, Republicans prefer to neglect it rather than appear to tie up with the Shoups.

WARNING: FCC Chairman Anthony Prall is keeping a sharp eye on a new "radio racket." He has asked his lawyers to confer with SEC representatives to discover whether there is a legal method of checking it.

It consists of the sale of stock to the public by individual broadcasting stations. Although such issues might turn out to be good investments in some cases, there are numerous fly-by-night stations which could be utilized as stock-jobbing propositions. Moreover, each station must obtain renewal of its license every six months and it can be ruled off the air unless rigidly conducted. In his opinion, they offer a poor opportunity for the investing public.

First sale of stock in a large volume recently took place in a Middle Western city. What interests Mr. Prall is that it was handled by one of New York's leading brokerage firms. Now the same brokers are known to be canvassing other stations which might like to use their services. Good advice for would-be buyers is to consult the FCC first.

LOVEFEAST: Political Generalissimo Farley's ruddy face is bright with smiles these days. He thinks he has suppressed incipient rebellion in six states where it was feared that anti-Roosevelt delegations might be chosen as a nucleus for Al Smith's prospective walk-out.

The Roosevelt slate's victory in New Hampshire augurs well for the outcome in Massachusetts, where Joseph B. Ely's friends were hoping to make trouble. Tammany has lined up in New York and Gov. Herbert Lehman, a strong vote-getter, has agreed to run again. In Maryland all the prominent leaders have taken the oath of fealty, now that Albert C. Ritchie is dead.

The National Chairman is still nursing the states of Georgia and Louisiana, but his worries there are over. His crowd defeated Gov. Talmadge so decisively in one Georgia election that the latter's friends are ducking another showdown. And the administration delegation from Louisiana will be seated even if the insurgents carry the primary. It looks as if the Philadelphia convention will be such a short-loveless occasion that the local promoters may not get their money back.

SYNOPSIS: Morgan Black and Iris Lanning have developed a comradeship; it has developed into more than comradeship for Morgan. He is courting Iris' Aunt Ella, who is being visited by her sister, Iris' Uncle William in his last moments to fill time and amuse himself and on the side he is trying to find Iris' brother Owen the very existence of whom Miss Ella has kept from the girl until recently. Morgan has gone to Roy Oliver's cocktail party, Iris is at home because she has nothing to do in town. The Lannings are over and she also shows to the memory of Iris' father whom Miss Ella considers to have been a great genius.

Chapter 10
LETTER FROM OWEN

KAY was warm and cheerful and friendly. She was honestly enchanted with the idea that she was getting a cocktail party; that she had on a brand-new maroon sheer with puffed sleeves and a lace tie, all tucked to look like waffles; that she had lost five pounds this last week (she was the stocky kind that has to watch pounds); that her brown hair was curled in three rows of tight little smart ringlets, and that Morgan Black had come to the party which could be heard yelling happily within the lace-draped windows of the Oliviers' handsome semi-detached stone house.

"I tried to drag her, but she had some work to do," Morgan said. "She said she could have come if it had been next week."

"I'll ask her for the very next one, then," said Kay, her eyes crinkling up with the pleasure of doing some thing nice.

You could do worse, if you were a simple honest small town lad, than go after Kay Oliver, Morgan thought, disinterestedly. You would always be sure of bounding physical good-nature, of kindness and efficiency, cheerful obvious jokes told with a burst of laughter, of—every thing.

And perhaps that blunt friendliness, and that nice friendly obviousness weren't the worst things in the world for that lucky small-town lad to have ahead of him. He slipped his arm through the one Kay held out to him and went inside and helped with the yelling.

There was a friendly rough-house going on inside. As one of the other men grabbed him it was leaping something to do with forfeits or some other parlor game, no gathered — a letter dropped from his pocket. He had stopped for mail at the post office, and then forgotten all about it. As he stooped to pick it up the name across the back caught his eye.

"Here, let me out of this," he said. "Got to read a letter."

IRIS went briskly home, her singing lesson once given. She was a little tired. But the men would be coming in soon. She would hear Morgan's quick light step, and Uncle Will's heavier one, on the creaking porch.

She sprang up, smiling a little at being so clever as to hear from her seat in the dining-room window; she ran out to the kitchen, where the kettle was boiling, and everything set ready for tea; sliced lemon, teapot, sugar, cream, and thin bread and butter.

She had been doing this for a month or two now. Morgan liked it, and Uncle William, tired from the day's work, was picked up by it; it made easy their two hours' wait for seven-thirty dinner, which Aunt Ella still kept to because Iris' father had preferred it.

She had the big defaced beautiful black japanned tray on a corner of the table by the time the men were with her. Before Uncle William could bend to kiss her, Morgan had her by the hands.

"Iris, I've found him!"

She did not need to ask whom. What she asked was "When? Where?"

Uncle William looked dispirited. "Your brother wrote me; I picked up the letter at the post office as I came by!"

Morgan dropped it in her lap. She stood nearer to the window to get the fading light, and bent her tossed dusky head above it. Her hands shook so she could scarcely hold the paper.

The writing and stationery were correct. He was no tramp, at least. Owen Lanning and his aunt, Miss Ross, would meet Mr. Black and, they hoped, Iris, at the Persia Hotel, at five-thirty on the day they received this. That was all.

"Am I to go?" was all she could find to say, now it had happened. It did not seem real.

"Yes, dear, you must go," her uncle answered, and Morgan was putting her into her heavy rough coat and pulling her beret down over her flare of dusky hair, even putting her gloves on. Both men were oddly quiet. She was frightened, and yet more excited than she had ever been in her life.

HER first impression was of the velvets and tapestries of the "private suite" of the hotel. She had never been inside it before. Her second was of a tall impressive slim woman rising with manner from a chair in the background, and then before her dizzying eyes a young man was coming to meet her, taking her hands in his hands as cold as excited as her own.

For a moment she did not dare look at him. And then, lifting her eyes, it was all right, for what she saw might have been the kind, wise the New Deal is destroying state's rights. But critics meanly point to the fact that Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Washington and New Mexico all have Democratic governors. They also detect similarities of wording in the six petitions which appear to infer a common inspiration. They recall the administration's protest about form letter protests against the holding company bill and make unkind allusions to pots and kettles. It remains to be seen whether the Supreme Court justices will be genuinely impressed by the interest of the states or view it as an artificial attempt to overawe them.

COSTLY: Insiders note a marked change in Governor Lehman's tactics recently which might have grave political consequences. He is using the whip instead of diplomacy to get what he wants from Democratic legislators. They will continue to vote for his measures. They can't very well do otherwise. But key party leaders are smarting under his rough treatment and in no mood to break their necks to help him get reelected.

The Governor's altered attitude towards New York State farm groups may also prove costly. Until recently he followed the examples of his predecessors Smith and Roosevelt, who enlisted strong support from upstate farmers—traditionally Republican—by paying respectful attention to their legislative recommendations. But in the past year Mr. Lehman has virtually ignored the farm organizations and his Commissioner of Markets—Peter Ten Eyck—has rebuffed them openly more than once. If upstate farmers return to their Republican allegiance it might easily spell defeat for Lehman and Roosevelt both.

A keen observer comments: "Until lately Lehman handled his job like a business man. Now he is trying to act like a politician—and he just doesn't know how." This development has national significance, New York's 47 electoral votes may loom mighty large in November.

ABETTED: Informed New Yorkers learn that Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida—a faithful administration wheel-horse—is under fire in his home state from two angles. The Townsends and the people who are opposed to the New Deal's Florida canal have joined forces to run for his hide.

They are being abetted by Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York—who has a home in Florida and spends as much time there as he can. Copeland is showing marked sympathy for those who fear that a salt water canal will wreck a big section of the irrigation system. Copeland is a Tammany Democrat who broke with the New Deal long since and undoubtedly gets a kick out of helping to knife one of its senatorial mainstays.

The strong Townsend plan groups in Florida will tell you that Senator Copeland is a smart man.

No Democratic 'Machine' Really Exists In The State

Correspondent Cites McDonald Candidacy as Proof

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.
By J. C. BASKERVILL

Raleigh, March 16.—Although the so-called Democratic "machine" in North Carolina is one of the biggest issues in the present campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor, there is actually no such thing as a Democratic "machine."

The very fact that Dr. Ralph W. McDonald is a candidate for Governor and has become a real threat for the nomination, is regarded by many as conclusive proof that there is no Democratic "machine" any more, despite the fact that McDonald is directing a major portion of his campaign against this so-called "machine" and is maintaining that it is supporting what he calls the "other two major candidates," Clyde R. Hoey and Lieut. Gov. A. H. (Sandy) Graham.

If there was such a thing as a Democratic "machine" and if it was as powerful as McDonald says it is, the 33 year old college professor from Winston-Salem would not now be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, or even if a candidate, would not have a Chinaman's chance to win the nomination, it is pointed out.

The "machine" would either have prevented his entry into the campaign as a candidate, or would have him bottled up and blocked out long before this. Nor would he have permitted two candidates to oppose him, when one "machine" candidate would prove much more effective in plugging his guns and preventing his nomination. Political "machines" are not in the habit of putting two candidates in the field to beat the candidate they want to eliminate.

Not that there has never been a Democratic "machine" in North Carolina. No one who knows anything about North Carolina politics will deny the existence of the old Watts-Simmons "machine" which dominated North Carolina and the Democratic party in the state for many years. But this "machine" started to disintegrate even before the death of Watts and was so badly damaged with the defeat of Senator F. M. Simmons by Josiah W. Bailey in 1920, that to all intents and purposes it has not existed and has not functioned for the past six years. It went to pieces so completely and so utterly that no one has ever had any inclination to try to patch it up or even to build a new one.

Neither was there a Gardner "machine" nor is there now an Ehringhaus "machine," as Dr. McDonald is now trying to make people believe. In the first place O. Max Gardner was an anti-Simmons "machine" man and for that reason failed to be elected Governor in 1920 when he ran against Cameron Morrison, conceded to be the "machine" candidate at that time.

Then came Ehringhaus. It is true, of course, that Governor Gardner did support Ehringhaus and that he likewise used what influence he had in his behalf during the campaign and that this influence had a great deal to do with the nomination of Ehringhaus. But it was personal influence, almost entirely in those counties in the west in which Gardner was best known and his friends most numerous. It could not be called a "machine" since a "machine" must be state-wide in scope. It is only necessary to look at the vote which R. T. Fountain got throughout the east and other sections, to become convinced that no "machine" existed in the 1932 campaign, and that the Gardner influence was far from state-wide.

Those here who have watched Governor Ehringhaus for almost four years are only amused at the talk about an Ehringhaus "machine" and about his political influence. For if there was ever a Governor who was a poor politician and who does not know how to use even his influence which he has, Ehringhaus is that governor, according to most observers here. It is a well known fact that members of both the 1933 and 1935 legislature frequently became peeved at Governor Ehringhaus because he would refuse to advise them how to vote on various matters, even when they would seek his advice and direction.

erger needs of players and former players without means. Hall points out there have been 233 relief cases so far among the 1,652 members of the organization.

Game Brings $44,000
"Two wipe out the all-star game," he said recently, "would be to destroy the very sinews of the organization, the only one fostered by baseball players that has become permanent."

Last year the game brought $44,000 to the association and it annually takes care of a large part of the association's requirements. The organization's budget requires about $50,000 a year. Hall said about $30,000 was paid out in benefits last season, and in 11 years $117,000 has been distributed to members. Before the inauguration of the all-star game the major leagues paid $12,500 to the association annually, but this is no longer available.

"We have some peculiar emergency instances," Hall related. "Notably case No. 4 from Kansas City. This man had scarcely paid his membership fee of $5 when he suffered an accident that resulted in a blood disease, osteomyelitis. He had nearly a dozen operations and made four trips to a sanitarium. His total payments amounted to $9,037 and he is still receiving $50 a month."

"We have other extreme cases, but none so costly as this."
Hall, one-time pitcher, is the association's only paid officer. For several years he received only $75 a month. Now his nominal salary is $250 a month, of which he retains part to the association treasury during depression times.

That Gabby Guy
Gabby Hartnett has had his ups and downs in the 14 seasons he has worn the Cubs' uniform. It was remarkable the way he bounded to the top, or at least near enough to the top to catch the eyes of the baseball writers who make the annual selection last season. Gabby has been in organized baseball 15 years, and all of them have been spent squatting behind the plate. And yet the wear and tear the task of catching imposes on a player's legs apparently has not slowed him up to any noticeable degree.

Hartnett's heavy hitting and brilliant catching were important factors in the down-the-stretch pennant drive of the Cubs during which they rolled up 21 straight victories. He set the pace for the Cubs in the regular playing season with an average of .344. Only Arky Vaughan of the Pirates and Joe Medwick of the Cardinals topped the veteran in the National League averages.

At the World Series Hartnett injected spirit into the Cubs from start to finish. He did a splendid job behind the plate and his throwing to bases during the big series was outstanding.

The all-star major league game, disparaged in some baseball quarters, is pictured by a prominent retired player as the last hope of the baseball veteran in need of relief.

Its discontinuance, asserts Russ Hall, secretary of the Association of Professional Baseball Players of America, would be a blow to the former players and to their organization. The association, little known to the fans, has for the past eleven years taken care of the em-

BETHEL BOYS WIN TOURNNEY

Stokes Girls Victorious in Pitt County Tournament

Bethel boys and Stokes girls won championships in the annual Pitt County high school basketball tournament, concluded last night with a pair of tie games.

Stokes girls defeated the Bethel sextet, 23-21, to give their school its first county championship. Bethel girls won last year. Stokes took a 15 to 8 lead for first-half play in last night's game. Eunice Butler, with 14 points, led Stokes. Velma Bland scored 13 to lead the losers.

Bethel boys retained their championship by defeating Winterville, 34-24, in the other event of last night's finals. Bethel led at the half, 19-11. High Smith, with 11 points, led Bethel; Nobles, with 10, led Winterville.

Championship and runner-up teams received awards. Fountain and Farmville school teams were awarded sportsmanship plaques. Fountain won in the division for schools with outdoor courts, and Farmville won in the division for schools with indoor courts.

POLITICS GAINING STEAM AS HEADQUARTERS OPENED

Graham headquarters here is not the least alarmed. It is being pointed out that virtually the only ones being contacted in these polls are either the voluntary or involuntary unemployed, to whom McDonald's program of more government and less taxes naturally appeals. It is also pointed out that a good many of these voters for McDonald in these street-corner polls are Republicans. One Republican here in Raleigh is reported to have admitted that he voted for McDonald three times in one of these polls here, and that others are doing the same thing elsewhere.

"Those who are supporting Graham are busy at work and not loafing around the streets," Lon Folger, manager for Graham said today. "If those conducting these so-called straw polls would go to the trouble to go along the business people and those who are at work, instead of those standing around on street corners, they would find that Graham had the most strength."

It is also contended by the Graham managers that in several counties where McDonald has been reported as being unusually strong, he is beginning to lose a great many followers, also that a majority of those who are deserting McDonald are going over to Graham rather than to Hoey. There is a definite and noticeable defection from the McDonald ranks under way both in Wake and Wilson counties, it is contended, with indications of other defections in other counties.

It is regarded as doubtful if Punderburk will be a candidate for president of the association anyway, since he has been quite ill for several months, with indications that his health will not permit him to undertake the strenuous work as president of the association.

Miss Lafferty has become known in all sections of the state as a fearless and militant champion of the classroom teachers. She made the entire state sit up and take notice, especially the superintendents and the politicians, when she led the fight for the full 20 per cent increase in salaries for all teachers last summer, and won out, even though the legislature intended otherwise. For it is the classroom teachers, with their 2,300 votes, which have the real political power rather than the 160 or so superintendents. And under the leadership of Miss Lafferty, the classroom teachers have at last waked up to this fact.

If the "old guard" in the education association decide to fight the classroom teachers and oppose their move to make Miss Lafferty president, this group is going to have a regular battle in the convention, it is already agreed. For the classroom teachers have been making their plans for this fight for months. It is expected, however, that the "old guard," composed of the superintendents and politicians who for years have been running the education association, will capitulate before the battle, and allow Miss Lafferty to be elected president without any opposition. For this group knows that without the classroom teachers, who contribute some $26,000 a year in dues to keep the education association going and

Supervisor of Census For Business Survey Asks for Cooperation

B. Robin Hood, Supervisor of the Census of Business, today announced that an effort is being made to finish the canvass in the first Congressional District of North Carolina. Within the next few days, he asked that all business firms cooperate by furnishing the necessary information as quickly as possible.

"We realize that some firms require more time than others in assembling the information," Mr. Hood said, "but it is imperative that the reports be sent to Philadelphia without delay so that the statistics can be compiled and issued by July."

"The timeliness of such statistics," he added, "greatly enhances their value. More than 5,000,000 reports must be handled by the Bureau, and delay in obtaining these reports delay the statistics for the entire State."

Mr. Hood declared that the Census now being taken is a continuation of the regular Business Census work of the Bureau of the Census, and is for business use, not for Governmental purposes. Its scope is the result of requests from business organizations, and it has the full support of all branches of business.

Hospital Conference Is Set For Richmond

Richmond, Va., March 16.—Important problems in the operation and management of hospitals and care of patients will be discussed by widely-known hospital executives and physicians at the annual Tri-State Hospital Conference, which convenes in the Hotel Chamberlain at Old Point Comfort on April 16 for a two-day session.

One of the outstanding speakers on the conference program is Homer F. Sanger, member of the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association, Chicago.

Mr. Sanger will discuss the activities of the American Medical Association on behalf of hospitals throughout the country and will point out the benefits that hospitals can obtain through closer cooperation with the association.

POISONING FROM MUSSELS LAID TO PHOSPHORESCENCE

Berkeley, Calif. (AP)—Phosphorescence so much admired by ocean travelers actually is a deadly poison which has taken an uncounted number of human lives, researchers at the University of California say.

Tiny protozoa, called gonyaulax, cause the display. These are eaten by mussels, and wherever that mollusc carries the danger of infection, said Professor Charles A. Kofoid and W. Forest Whedon of the university who have traced the gonyaulax to human beings, where it causes quick paralysis and often death.

There is no known remedy, they said.
