FOUR VESSELS BEARING JAPS LAND IN CHINA

Additional Troops Arrive at Chief Port Entrance

TO BE LOCATED OUTSIDE OF CITY

Resentment in China Against Actions of Japanese Reaching Menacing Stage

Tientsin, China, May 29.—(AP)—Four Japanese army transports bearing 2,000 additional cavalry and infantry troops for North China garrisons arrived today at Tangku port entrance to Tientsin and Peiping.

Upon their arrival at Tientsin, the majority of the troops will proceed to new Japanese barracks outside the city.

The new arrivals brought the total of Japanese forces in North China to nearly 10,000, or a full division, in the face of repeated protests from the Chinese nationalist government. Japan's latest action aggravated acutely the present Sino-Japanese tension, which apparently was reaching gradually the breaking point.

The crisis was viewed all the more grave because of alleged Japanese support for smuggling in North China and Japanese military encroachments in North China and Inner Mongolia.

Peiping and Tientsin authorities, acted with firm determination to suppress students' demonstration such as those which sent a shiver of apprehension through Tientsin yesterday.

A proclamation announced the bureau of public safety, organized by the military, would take control of all schools and universities "if need be."

Resentment against Japan for the alleged smuggling activities and troop reinforcement appeared to be reaching menacing proportions through China. A renewal of a previous boycott of Japanese goods was feared in some quarters.

Many Civil Cases Aired During May High Court Terms

County Sessions to Be Resumed Next Tuesday; Another Superior Court Term in August

Three weeks of civil court were held in Pitt county during May, which saw many cases removed from the docket through settlements and jury trials.

Two divorces were granted as this week's term, presided over by Judge Marshall T. Spears. Divorces were granted to Lois Elks from Peggy Ann Elks, and Mildred Leggett Hardee from Lyman Hardee, both white couples.

The next term of court is set to begin August 24, with Judge N. A. Sinclair presiding. The first week will be devoted to civil cases, with criminal cases to be aired the second week.

The County court docket has piled up during May, only one day having been devoted to this court because Superior terms were underway. The court will be resumed Tuesday, however.

MORE STRIKES ARE REPORTED

New Disputes Occur to Offset Other Settlements

The threat of new strikes and intensification of old ones today offset scattered settlements of labor disputes in 20 states.

The Southern Tenant Farmers Union, threatening a general strike in northeastern Arkansas cotton fields unless cotton choppers are paid $1.50 a day, announced a partial victory in one county where they said planters had agreed to pay $1 for 10 hours work and $1.25 for 12, plus transportation.

At the same time the leaders of the insurgent of the international seamen's union in New York, announced settlement of the east coast seamen's strike. Union members voted to call it off last night.

Picket lines at the Remington Rand factory in Syracuse, N. Y., which was reported reopened yesterday, continued today as many strikers refused to return until demands were met.

Virtually all strikes are for higher wages, probable result of re-employment of 1,500,000 during the last year and, for the first time in five years, sinking of the unemployment figure below 12,000,000, according to figures released today by William Green, A. P. of L. president.

Only one new principal will make his appearance in the Pitt county school system next fall, unless some of those who have accepted change their minds. It was made known today by D. H. Conley, superintendent of the county schools.

D. T. House, who resigned as principal of the Chicod school to enter the race for membership on the Board of Commissioners, will be succeeded by Newman Lewis, who was principal at Belvoir the current term. A successor to Mr. Lewis has not been named as yet.

Mr. Conley also announced that there would be a turnover in the teachers of only approximately 10 per cent. Some of those not returning to their duties, he said, are either getting married or retiring from the profession.

The superintendent said he was not ready to announce definitely what vacancies would be in the system, but added he would devote much of the next month or two in aiding in securing teachers to replace those who are not returning.

Most of the schools in the county ended this year's work last week with Stokes, Pactolus and Bethel completing the term this week.

Big British Vessel Is Setting New Record

The Queen Mary's average speed during the period up to noon was 29.76 knots.

Scouts Descend On City For 1st Annual Camporee

Public Invited to View Boy Scouts From This and Neighboring Counties During Two-Day Encampment Here

Boy Scouts by the hundreds converged on Greenville today for the first annual Patrol Camporee of the East Carolina Council to be held on the old Model school playground this afternoon, tonight and tomorrow.

Ralph W. Mozo, assistant Scout executive, said this morning 250 registrations had been received up until that time and added he expected up to 500 boys from several Eastern counties to attend the event.

The public is invited to view the Scouts in camp, and are urged especially to attend the campfire program from 8 to 10 o'clock tonight back of the high school, across the street from the Camporee site.

The entire program for the two-day event has been outlined. It called for registration by 3 o'clock this afternoon. Immediately after that time the Boy Scouts were scheduled to set up their tents and prepare for the first inspection.

Supper, to be cooked on the grounds by the boys, was set for 5 o'clock. Each Scout patrol was instructed to be prepared to present a stunt at the campfire for 8 o'clock. Taps will be sounded at 10 o'clock.

The boys are due to arise tomorrow morning and be ready for breakfast at 7 o'clock. After the meal, the boys will be taken on a tour of the campus of East Carolina Teachers College. At 9 o'clock the program calls for various patrol projects, with campcraft demonstrations set for 10 o'clock. Mass games are on tap for 11 o'clock.

Patrol camp cooking and dinner will be at noon. One of the features of the Camporee will be the parade through the city at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The parade will be led by the band.

Following the parade the Scouts will participate in a treasure hunt. The boys are scheduled to break camp after the hunt and then clean up for the final inspection, set for 5 o'clock.

Roy M. Campbell of Greenville is Camporee chairman. Instructions as to patrol organization and equipment call for leaders in various phases of Scouting and outlined duties of each. A patrol leader heads each unit. He is assisted by an assistant leader, scribe, quartermaster, signman, first aid officer and woodsman.

The various Scout units will vie with each other for honors. Awards will be made, blue streamers going to those units scoring 450 points, red streamers to those scoring between 350 and 449 points, and yellow streamers to those scoring between 250 and 349 points.

Points will be credited on inspection, first and final, campcraft, equipment, food, scoutcraft, safety and sanitation, program and activities, project and campcraft demonstration.

No Scout will know in advance which project he will be called on to participate in. Patrol leaders will select participants for each project with only five minutes notice.

WAYNE SLAYER DIES IN CHAIR

Wayne County Farmer Executed At State's Prison

Raleigh, May 29.—(AP)—Marvin Batten, 29-year-old Johnston county farmer, was put to death by gas at state's prison here today for the murder of Mrs. Lydia Daughtry.

Gas was administered for 15 minutes and 10 seconds before Dr. G. S. Coleman, pronounced the man dead. Batten entered the death chamber at 10:37, accompanied by H. M. Grizzard, undertaker from Kenly.

Thirteen witnesses watched the execution as that number continued to play a fateful part in Batten's life history.

Batten killed Mrs. Daughtry on December 13, 1935. He was first sentenced to die March 13, 1936, but received a reprieve while alienists studied his mental condition.

Batten is survived by his widow and two children. Batten closed his eyes as he sat down in the center chair of the gas chamber, only one in the east, and his lips moved as he apparently prayed.

The gas machine was started and within less than 30 seconds he apparently was unconscious. The administration of the gas for more than 15 minutes, however, was the longest necessary in the six gas executions performed here. The previous record was about 10 minutes.

Wearing a ring on his left hand which he said the woman he killed had given him, Batten explained her correct name was Lydia Daughtry, thought the record listed it as Lyda.

Grizzard, who claimed the body, also conducted funeral services for Mrs. Daughtry, at Batten's direction.

May Fight Black Legion With Syndicalism Laws

Threatens to Invoke Statute Drawn Combat Communism

Detroit, May 29.—(AP)—Michigan's criminal syndicalism law, enacted to combat communism, may be invoked against the Black Legion whose members are accused of flogging and even slaying in the guise of defense against communists.

Prosecutor Owen Dudley of Jackson county said today he contemplated the prosecution of 13 men, whom he described as the "board of directors" of the night riding terrorists in that county under the statute.

At least two grand jury investigations of the vigilantes was imminent, while both houses of congress had before them resolutions demanding congressional inquiries.

Proposed legislation to curb the order was in preparation at the national capital and the internal revenue bureau considered a suggestion that it inquire into the income tax returns of a reputed leader of the Black Legionnaires.

Wayne county (Detroit) Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea prepared to assemble for submission to United States Attorney General Homer S. Cummings evidence he said showed the order is active in at least 15 counties. "The hauling of bodies across state boundary lines" was one of his charges against the legion.

Evidence of federal law violations was requested by Cummings in his reply to McCrea for request for the aid of federal bureau of investigation agents.

COMMITTEE IN AGREEMENT ON REVENUE BILL

Compromise Bill Approved After Last Minute Changes

POST IS VOTED FOR SUR TAXES

Acting Chairman Kinz Asserts Measure Be Brought To Senate Immediately

Washington, May 29.—(AP)—After a last minute change that would increase individual income surtaxes except in the lowest surtax brackets, the Senate finance committee today approved its compromise tax bill.

Acting Chairman King D. Utah said the measure would be brought to the Senate floor "as soon as possible."

No accurate estimates of the yield as available, but on the basis of the latest treasury computations which are subject to revision, the bill would produce around $620,000,000 of permanent revenue—the amount requested by President Roosevelt.

But it would bring in only an estimated $82,000,000 of temporary funds against $517,000,000 sought by Mr. Roosevelt.

The boost in income surtaxes was estimated to produce upwards of $50,000,000.

Another change was made in a lengthy closed committee session. It would place the normal corporate income levy on a graduated instead of a flat basis.

Accompanying that alteration was an agreement to remove a $1,500 tax exemption which would have been granted corporations with net income not exceeding $15,000.

The committee rejected by a 13 to 5 vote a final attempt by administration forces to swing the committee over to higher graduated levies on undistributed corporate earnings. Senator Black (D-Ala.) a system for retaining the present 12-1-2 to 1 per cent corporate levy with a surtax graduating up to 30 per cent on undistributed income.

The committee agreed, however, to stand by its flat seven per cent levy on undistributed earnings.

King said he believed the bill would "bring in more than $600,000,000 of permanent and temporary funds."

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG News Behind The News

Washington By RAY TUCKER TROUBLE: A fresh crop of old-fashioned Democrats irritated by the administration's economic experiments has arisen to plague President Roosevelt on the eve of the campaign. Unlike the Smith-Raskob faction, these new conscientious objectors are close personal friends and are close of FDR.

It is hinted that Gov. Herbert Lehman's refusal to run again for Governor of New York springs from his family's opposition to the SEC and other forms of regulation. When a recent Lehman issue sagged in price even before the dealers had disposed of it to the public, the bankers had to beg the Lands agency for the right to support the stock. Another Democrat reportedly quoted is Owen D. Young, frequently but vainly mentioned as a Lehman substitute on the New York state ticket. Recent invitations to the White House have not mollified him.

The reason why the President and ex-Reserver R. W. Morrison have not observed the ritual of exchanging letters of resignation and congratulation is because the Texan's "I'm through" note was so hot Mr. Roosevelt could not make it (Continued on Page Seven)

BORAH'S ANGER AMAZES PARTY

Idea That Idahoan May Bolt Party Is Bolstered

By PRESTON GROVER

Washington—Associates of Senator Borah have expressed some amazement at the wrath generated in the Idahoan by his Republican primary tilt.

They find him still rarkling at the conduct of the Ohio campaign, his ire only partly assuaged by the percentage of the Republican vote he received.

Those in the party who would like to see him come into the convention, put his ideas into the platform as fully as his foes will permit, and then "go down the line" for whoever is nominated, are of the opinion he may not do that.

Some associates have expressed belief that Borah considers Governor Landon as harmonizing with the factors in the party he would like to drive out.

Borah has announced his intention of speaking again about June 1. He brushes aside questions as to whether at that time he will discuss Landon.

There is still scattering debate also just how badly Borah was beaten in Ohio. He won only five delegates of the 52, but on the delegates-at-large, involving a state-wide vote, he accumulated about 35 per cent of the Republican vote.

His backers argue that he actually may have received more votes than any other candidate. Their argument is based on the presumption that he was compelled to contest "against the field," including not only Robert A. Taft, the "favorite son," but other principal candidates.

Their displeasure was heightened by receipt from an Ohio friend of a printed card which they assumed was one of a number distributed before the primary. It stated it was "issued by the Republican state primary campaign committee, Ed D. Schorr, chairman."

At the top of the card was printed:

"If you favor Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas, or Colonel Frank Knox of Illinois, or Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, or Senator L. J. Dickinson of Iowa, or any other person excepting Senator William E. Borah, for the Republican presidential nomination, mark 'X' before each of the following names.

Then were listed the candidates pledged to Taft as a "favorite son."

USE TRICKERY KEEP LICENSE

Disbarred Drivers Unsuccessful, However, in Attempts

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, May 28.—Drivers who have had their driving permits revoked for one year because of convictions for drunken driving or following two convictions for reckless driving, use every known trick in an effort to get their licenses restored or to obtain entirely new licenses, Director Arthur Fulk of the highway safety division of the Department of Revenue, said here today.

But so far all of these tricks have failed, due to the fact that the highway safety division is taking no chances and is "wise" to most of the tricks which are tried.

The effort being made most frequently now by those who have had their driving licenses revoked is to make new applications in which they change their names or initials slightly, Fulk said. Within the last day or so a new application was received which seemed to look all right.

But in order to play safe, every new application is checked against the files of all those whose licenses have been revoked or suspended. And when this was checked, the name was almost identical with that of a man whose license had been revoked only a few weeks before.

An initial had been inserted, when the name had been given as "Fred" instead of "sandy." Accordingly, a highway patrolman was sent to investigate and found that the new application for a driver's license had been sent in by the same man whose permit had been revoked for one year. He was immediately indicted for attempting to secure a new license by fraudulent means and these charges are now pending against him.

Those who have lost their driving permits have no recourse under the law, and no one has authority to restore them after they have been revoked, Fulk pointed out. Some still continue to get them back, however, either by appealing to the safety department, by employing lawyers or by appealing to Commissioner of Paroles Edwin Gill or direct to Governor J. C. B. Ehrhrens. But all of this effort is wasted, since not even the Governor can restore driving licenses which have been revoked.

SPORT SLANTS

by PAP

Tony Lazzeri was on the sunset side of his baseball career and the Yankees were in the market for a replacement. The legs were less spry, the batting eye somewhat dimmer . . . they thought Push-'Em-Up Tony was just about through.

Then in one day against the ill-fated Athletics, the old Lazzeri rose up and knocked major and American league batting records all over the place. It was a field day for all the Italian-derived stock dressed in the Yankee livery — DiMaggio, Crosetti and Lazzeri, and Tony led all the rest in a salvo that more than matched the last great day of Ruth when the Bambino, wearing the unfamiliar trappings of the Boston Braves, got three homers off Red Lucas and Guy Bush in a single game at Pittsburgh on May 25, 1935.

Ruth's last great stand was a year, almost to the day, before Tony's great day. The Ruthian bat is stilled now, but Tony's partisans figure there's plenty left in his big stick, that the blast against the A's is not his final salvo.

This new order in the Yankee setup, sparked by young Joe DiMaggio, the prize rookie from the coast, is bringing memories of that old murderers' row — Gehrig, Ruth, Meusel and this same Lazzeri who won attention back in his Coast league days by socking out 60 homers in one season.

The Yankees, who were supposed to be overstocked with experience and a bit light on agility, now are thinking they may take the American league flag away from the floundering world champion Detroit Tigers—and the new triumvirate is expected to lead the way.

Young Joe, no doubt, is getting a lot of good advice from his countrymen, and their own work is improving on a comeback scale at a hot pace. Lazzeri batted a mere 273 last season, and Crosetti 256—signs that they were getting near the old-age limit so far as baseball usefulness is concerned. With young Joe as their protege, the old masters are taking a new lease on life and having a lot of fun out of slamming the Yankees to the top of the heap.

At 32, Lazzeri collected all sorts of batting marks against the Athletics in that wild, 25-2 game at Shibe Park, which Connie Mack didn't even attend.

Tony belted out three homers, two of them in succession, and missed another by inches, the hit going for a triple. The bags were loaded when he got two of these round-trippers and two Yanks were aboard when his triple fell short of a homer, thus giving him the American league record of 11 runs batted in in a single game.

The major league marks Tony set in his recent great exhibitions included: Most homers with bases filled, single game, 2 (Babe Ruth is closest to this mark, with homers while the bags were loaded in two consecutive games on two occasions, in 1927 and 1929).

Most homers in four consecutive games, 7 (The batter mark of 6 was made by Babe Ruth, Ken Williams, Chuck Klein, Jim Bottomley and Bill Terry).

Most homers in three consecutive games, 6 (The previous mark was 5 by Babe Ruth and eight others).

Most homers in two consecutive games, 5 (This tied the mark made by Pop Anson in 1884 and Ty Cobb in 1925).

It's still Push-'Em-Up Tony, now with the batting firm of Lazzeri, Crosetti and DiMaggio.

OFFENDED MAN SERMON TOPIC

Naaman The Syrian Discussed by Dr. J. W. Ham

"The Man who became offended before receiving his blessing," was the topic discussed by Dr. John W. Ham, at Memorial Baptist church last night. Using the description of the experience of Naaman the Syrian, recorded in II Kings 5:1-12, as the basis for the message, Dr. Ham presented this person to the audience in a most graphic manner.

Naaman was a retired captain of the host of Syria, and occupied an important position in the military machine of the Syrian government. He was wealthy, and stood high in the social scale of his day. He was reputed to be a man of valour, although he was personally egotistical to the cure. In the terms of spiritual experience he was a materialist, and valued everything from the standpoint of money.

However, this man had one condition in his life that unfitted him for the enjoyment of many other things in life. He was a leper. That necessitated a voluntary ostracizing of himself from all others. Into his home had come a little Jewish maid, the captive of a previous battle between Syria and Israel. This maiden observed her master's condition and gave expression immediately to her unbounded faith in the representative of Jehovah down in Israel. Her testimony is startling, revealing a sublime faith in the God of the impossible. Naaman heard of her faith, and finally orders were given to prepare for a journey to Israel. Among other things was included a letter of introduction from the King of Syria to the King of Israel. The letter greatly disturbed the King of Israel, but he directed Naaman to the house of Elisha, the prophet. Upon his arrival at the door of the house, a servant was dispatched to deliver the sermon to the Syrian leper, saying: "Go and wash in Jordan seven times and thy flesh shall come unto thee and thou shalt be clean."

Here was a demand for personal cooperation in these instructions. A Divine blessing is promised, the very thing for which this man searched. But the method of realization enraged him. It called for cooperation different to that which he had planned. Obedience is required on the part of the seeker before blessing can be experienced. God has endowed us with intelligence, will and emotion. He has given us liberty to choose our destiny, and our decision will settle the matter.

After much persuasion to do as he had been commanded, Naaman carries out the instruction given him. Seven times he dipped in the Jordan. Instantly the miracle of cleansing was wrought, which cleansing was two-fold. His body as cleansed from the malady of leprosy, and his soul as cleansed from pride, self-will and egotism. Humility, gratitude and rejoicing now characterizes his soul. He comes leaping out of the water giving praises unto God.

We get God's best when we give him our best. He waits for complete obedience before restoring and healing the spirit. Obedience is the pathway to blessing and power. We need not go to the Jordan's waters. But it is necessary that we plunge by faith into the fountain filled with blood. There is no other method of cleansing the souls from the malady of spiritual leprosy. It's that or nothing.

Tonight, Dr. Ham will preach on the subject: "Five Words of the Cross." We urge our members to be present. You will be blessed in this service.

Rev. L. R. Ennis of Farmville will present special music by members of their choir which you will be happy to hear. Be sure to enjoy it.

This morning Dr. Ham gave the last of the series of messages on the "Seven Ages of Man." "The Reign of Christ on Earth" was the topic of the morning Bible study. The course of instruction has been most helpful and inspirational. We look forward to the three services Sunday. Morning Worship at 11:00 A. M. "The Central Theme of Revelation" being the subject of the sermon.

3:00 P. M.—The meeting for Men Only, the subject to be discussed: "Mussolini, Hitler and Satan." This topic is of especial interest to men, and you will profit by planning to be present.

8:00 P. M.—The Closing Service. Dr. Ham preaches on the subject: "Saying 'Good Bye' to God." The ordinance of Baptism will be administered.

CHIEF CLARK EXPLAINS ISSUANCE SLOT MACHINE LICENSES

In the Editorial appearing in the Reflector May 28th it was intimated that the City had deliberately issued 14 licenses for slot machines on May 8th knowing that an order would be immediately thereafter issued by the Chief of Police to confiscate said machines.

Chief Clark in his reply says: That he had no knowledge whatever of the Tax Collecting Department having issued to anyone a license to operate an illegal machine but that he did know it was a custom of the City's Tax Department, following the State Law, to issue a privilege license for musical machines, candy machines and such other machines as were operated by a slot giving a fixed return in value for every coin deposited.

He laid them on the table beside her—between the darned egg and a little pin-cushion full of needles and shaped like a tomato. He lighted the cigaret she had extracted, and picked up the pin-cushion. She watched him examine it. Presently she laughed.

"You're funny," she said. "Funny?" asked Dirk. He was smiling, too. Her laughter was infectious.

"Curious," she explained. "There's not anything you miss."

"Oh, yes, there is. Lots."

"Well, perhaps there is. But I didn't think you knew it. That cushion, now. You look at it, and you see how worn it is, and all the needles. And you conclude, 'What a domestic female she is.' Which is all very well, but your premise is wrong. The cushion is Mary's."

"I see," Dirk said, and put the cushion down. "I shouldn't have started from wrong premises."

In the suit enjoining the Town from the confiscation of the said machines it was alleged that there were 68 of the so-called illegal slot machines in operation in Greenville and just why no application was made for the others this Department has no knowledge.

On May 3rd certain statements were made at Police Headquarters by me and from that rumors spread that the illegal machines would be barred from operation and thereafter on the night of May 7th a lady whom I had all reason to believe and have since upon investigation satisfied my mind was a representative and in the employ of the party owning these machines, came

Gypsy Weather

By MARGARET BELL HOUSTON

SYNOPSIS: In an effort to improve Hope Joris' health and perhaps to solve some of the mystery surrounding her, Dirk Joris has sworn her father to come on from Texas. He proves a singularly juggling wistler, and the interview seems likely not to be a success. Hope, who married Dirk's older brother the night he first saw her, is very anxious to get her father out of the house, but when he leaves she insists his visit helped her. Mary, the servant, is not so sure. She heard strange words in Hope's room.

Chapter 33

ENIGMA

DIRK did not hear Devine go out. He had dismissed him in a measure with Mary's report that Hope would be glad to see him. Next morning, before having breakfast, he inquired of Timothy if Mr. Devine had spent the night, learned that he had not, and made further inquiries of Mary.

Mary's report was rather rose-colored. Mrs. Joris was much better since her father's visit. But he had been obliged to go back... last night.

Dirk, still skeptical, knowing Mary's gift of credence, said: "Does she really seem better?"

"But she does, sir," Mary answered brightly, and with traces of amazement at what she had to announce. "She was playing her guitar this morning." An emphatic nod as Dirk stared. "And singing, sir," she added.

This was too much. "I'm going in to see her," said Dirk.

"Not now, sir," pleaded Mary.

"I don't mean now. I mean during the afternoon. I expect to be home early."

Dirk stood thinking, and Mary asked: "Did you telephone Miss Isabel, sir? She called up again last night."

"I shall," Dirk said.

"And do you know how Mister Rupert is, and if there's any chance of his being home soon?" Mrs. Joris asked this morning.

"No, I don't," Dirk answered. "Perhaps I'll know today, when Mr. Sanford Joris comes back. Say to Mrs. Joris that I'll be in to see her. This afternoon, about three o'clock."

Hope was up when Dirk came in. She sat in the big gilt and tapestry chair, mending a stocking. Her hair was smooth, the bruise-like shadows beneath her eyes were not so dark, and there was a trace of rouge on lips and cheek.

She wore the same pale yellow dress with the fur about the throat. Not far away the electric-stove poured warmth from its fire-colored bowl, glowing like a great tropical flower.

"Too much?" she asked, indicating the stove.

And Dirk, who had come in tingling with cold, and full of fresh air, replied that he would get used to it. Mary, however, turned off the stove, and no one objected.

Dirk took the chair beside Hope's. "Running up to Albany early to-morrow morning," he explained. "Be gone all day, and had to know about this sudden improvement. . . . You are better," he added, having looked her over.

The Rev. Devine, he had discovered, was actually on the way back home, having checked out of the Pennsylvania and taken a train shortly after midnight. That his visit had done Hope good, there was no question.

"So you forgive me for wiring him," he said, as if he had followed his thoughts. "For wanting to share my responsibility."

"All's well that ends well," she answered, as if she had indeed followed his thoughts. "Got my cigarettes?"

HE laid them on the table beside her—between the darned egg and a little pin-cushion full of needles and shaped like a tomato. He lighted the cigaret she had extracted, and picked up the pin-cushion. She watched him examine it. Presently she laughed.

"You're funny," she said. "Funny?" asked Dirk. He was smiling, too. Her laughter was infectious.

"Curious," she explained. "There's not anything you miss."

"Oh, yes, there is. Lots."

"Well, perhaps there is. But I didn't think you knew it. That cushion, now. You look at it, and you see how worn it is, and all the needles. And you conclude, 'What a domestic female she is.' Which is all very well, but your premise is wrong. The cushion is Mary's."

"I see," Dirk said, and put the cushion down. "I shouldn't have started from wrong premises."

In the suit enjoining the Town from the confiscation of the said machines it was alleged that there were 68 of the so-called illegal slot machines in operation in Greenville and just why no application was made for the others this Department has no knowledge.

On May 3rd certain statements were made at Police Headquarters by me and from that rumors spread that the illegal machines would be barred from operation and thereafter on the night of May 7th a lady whom I had all reason to believe and have since upon investigation satisfied my mind was a representative and in the employ of the party owning these machines, came to see me. She stated very confidentially that she had secured from a cousin in Virginia a marble machine of the so-called illegal slot machines were then in operation in three different places in Greenville and wanted to know just what the attitude of the Police Department would be in allowing these machines to continue. I then defined, and emphatically advised her that all illegal slot machines would be seized and barred from operation within the next few days. This very clearly accounts for the prompt action on the part of the owner of these machines the next day. May 8th in securing licenses for 14 of his machines. On May 11th notice would tell me, that is, just what sort of girl you really are."

His smile might have robbed the statement of any significance. She returned his smile.

"Confide in you? But why not?" She leaned toward him. "I don't even own a needle," she whispered. "And here's the way I darn. Well," as he stared. "What do you think of it?"

"I'd say," testified Dirk, "that you ride better than you sew."

"Horses," she admitted. "Yes, I know horses."

"You must miss them," he said. "We'll go for some rides when you get well."

"No," shaking her head. "I don't miss them. . . . Did Isabel get you?"

The leap from horses to Isabel was sudden, but Dirk made it.

"I called her this morning," he said. "The message was for you as well as for me. She wanted to remind me of a dance tonight, and to ask me to bring you. I suppose you got the invitation. The Vincents' dance."

"I suppose so. I haven't opened any mail of that sort. Is Isabel your social conscience?"

"She is, rather. I'm apt to forget things. Joe Vincent is one of Isabel's good friends. It's his sister's debut. Do you feel like going?"

"Do you?" she asked. "With Rupert so ill?"

"Rupert's better," Dirk answered. "He wouldn't want you to stay in on his account."

She crushed out her cigaret. "I'm glad he's better. But I couldn't go."

"You don't want to, you mean?" "I do want to. I've got a new dress. Want to see it?"

MARY had gone out some time before. Hope rose and, going to the old kas, took from it a gown of diaphanous yellow, splashed with little gold stars. She spread it on the bed, looking down at it, standing with clasped hands, an attitude, it seemed to Dirk, of worship.

"I could get drunk on clothes," she said.

A slip of paper had fallen from the dress, an open bill whose figures Dirk could not help seeing as he picked it up. They surprised him, being small indeed.

"I didn't get it," she explained, "at the shop Rupert sent me to. Their label costs too much. I got only one dress there. . . . the one I wore to Elinor's dinner. This one is just as pretty, don't you think?"

"Prettier," Dirk said sincerely. "And here are the slippers that look as if they were made of green-gold beetles' wings. And Rupert said he was going to get me some big bracelets of hammered gold. They sounded savage and wonderful, like the ones Isabel wore that night at Adelaide's, when you danced with her so much. But I guess he forget that, too."

Dirk said impulsively: "I'll get you some savage bracelets."

She smiled, wistfully touching the starry gown.

Why wouldn't she go? he wondered. Was she afraid, fearful of meeting some acquaintance out of her old life?

It was not that. Something told him it was not that. Perhaps she was not so well as she pretended.

"Have you strength enough to go?" he asked.

"I have," she said. "But I have to save it."

Mary came into the room, and contrived to give Dirk a warning look.

"I'm not suggesting that you dance," he explained to Hope. "I told Isabel you wouldn't be up to that. I asked her to pick you out a box, where you could sit and look on."

Hope laughed. "Along with the dowagers."

"I could carry you to the car," he urged. "And the elevators are near the ball-room. Couldn't you make it?"

She was looking at him. He had never seen her eyes so soft and wondering.

"I couldn't go," she said, "and keep from dancing. Not when I heard the music. But I want. . . . Still the soft and wondering look. "I want you to know that I appreciate. . . . your thinking of it, your wanting me to see the lights and all." She faltered. Her hand rested on his sleeve. "I appreciate it," she said again.

Her eyes disturbed him as always. He managed a casual:

"That's nothing. But you mustn't mind not dancing."

She watched Mary go out of the room. Then she sat down in the big chair. She touched the other chair.

"Please, Dirk. I want to tell you something."

Hope tries hard, tomorrow, to tell Dirk something important.

was given through The Daily Reflector that all illegal machines found operating in Greenville after 36 hours would be confiscated and warrants issued for the owners and operators thereof. A check-up was immediately begun and no trace of the three machines claimed to have been secured from the Virginia Cousin and operated in Greenville could be found. I am not undertaking to justify the issuance of the licenses on the part of Mr. Patrick, the Assistant Tax Collector, but I do know that it has been customary to issue licenses for slot machines of the legal type and as described herein. Mr. Patrick knew nothing of my activities and plans to confiscate these machines and I am positive from my investigation that the securing of 14 licenses on the day after my talk with the lady was nothing more than a pretext on the part of the owner to shield and guard himself in the action which he knew was forthcoming from the Police Department.

It is strange that your Paper would undertake to write an article which does not state the facts and when no investigation has been made by you or courtesy extended to the City Officials. Certainly you could have ascertained the facts by calling the Tax Collector or other officials of the City. You stated that the Tax Collector solicited payment for the licenses on May 8th and that the Collector notified the owner of the machines that the license would be issued and mailed thereafter.

My investigation discloses that this is absolutely untrue and false. The owner of these machines the next day after my talk with the lady above referred to, called the Tax Collector with reference to these licenses and the licenses were never mailed but were delivered in person on May 8th and the said owner of the machines representing at all times that they were legal machines and not of the gambling type.

It is not my purpose to get into any argument and this is the first time I have made any statement to a newspaper but I do feel that before Editorials are written criticizing the City that the Editor should at least try and make some investigation and present the facts as they are. My interest in the matter is solely for the purpose of enforcing the Law and preventing as far as possible what have become prevalent crimes which have become prevalent among us.

The citizens of the Town and County are invited to be present at the Hearing before Judge Frazier in the Court House here to-morrow at 10:30 a. m. at which time the facts with respect to this gambling racket will be fully heard and argued.

Conventions That Made History

William Jennings Bryan Wins a Presidential Nomination With His Silver Tongued Oratory at The 1896 Convention in Chicago

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE

Washington, May 29.—(AP)—The ghosts of great convention figures of other years, led by the silver-tongued William Jennings Bryan, will march in many memories as the nation watches the making of new political history at Cleveland and Philadelphia.

Drama-packed conventions of both major parties have become almost commonplace but probably the No. 1 Thriller of all was a one-man performance—Bryan's capture of the Democratic presidential nomination at Chicago in 1896.

When the convention opened, young Bryan was given little or no consideration as a possible nominee. Representative Richard P. Bland of Missouri, farmer-leader of the silver forces, was rated the favorite candidate and Horace Boies of Iowa was figured a second choice.

A Bryan Stampede
But on the fateful afternoon of July 9 "the boy orator of the Platte" marched to the platform and stamped the delegates with a torrent of eloquent attack upon the gold standard, the Republican protective tariff and Wall street.

Twenty thousand listeners sat spellbound as that classic, fiscal peed fell from his lips: "You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns; you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold."

"There was an instant hush," said a press description of the scene. "Then a storm burst whose fury seemed to sweep everything before it."

Burly, black-bearded delegates wept.
The balloting began the next day, and on the fifth ballot Bryan received an overwhelming vote. At 36 the Great Commoner had become "the peerless leader of the plain people." By force of his eloquence alone he had won a presidential nomination.

Republicans Name McKinley
Under the guidance of sagacious Mark Hanna, placid William McKinley of Ohio won the 1896 Republican presidential nomination and became Bryan's opponent.

Silver Republicans bolted the Republican convention and some of them supported Bryan's candidacy. Gold Democrats threatened to put a third ticket in the race, many of them abstained from voting in the election and some supported McKinley.

The voters of today may notice a familiar tone in the charges and counter-charges of 40 years ago. Senator "Pitchfork Ben" Tillman of South Carolina lambasted the industrial east and "money barons"; conservative Democratic newspapers in New York called Tillman "a Communist and an anarchist." New York labor leaders, backing Bryan, said it was a fight of the rich against the poor.

It was the "bicycle age" in America, and a national organization of wheelmen asked the Democrats to put a good roads plank in their platform. Competing with the presidential race for popular attention in the big cities was the battle between the Baltimore Orioles and the New York Giants for the National League pennant.

CHICAGO TAX COLLECTOR ADDS 24,000 TO LISTS

Chicago—(AP)—Income taxes are being paid by 24,000 more persons than last year in the Chicago revenue district, reports Carter H. Harrison, collector of revenue.

Taxable incomes this year total 148,000, he says—a 19 percent increase over the 1935 total of 124,000.

Harrison reported to Washington taxes amounting to $29,834,223 paid in at his office from January 1 until mid-March. That figure represents an increase of $8,840,148 or 29 percent of the amount collected during the same period last year.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By PRESTON GROVER

Washington — The substitute Guffey coal bill, to many competent observers, seems to have been drafted to test the limit the extent to which the supreme court will permit regulation of the coal industry.

Before the test is made, it is possible that changes in the personnel of the court may occur, and that the new justices will entertain different views from those held by their predecessors.

The majority justices held invalid the labor sections of the act. These vanished, almost entirely, from the new bill.

The majority did not rule on compulsory fixing of coal prices intended to guarantee profits to owners and better wages to labor. The minority trio and Chief Justice Hughes, on the other hand, said it was permissible under circumstances outlined in the act—so this feature was included in the new draft.

The majority said the penalty tax designed to compel compliance was invalid as employed in the bill. They seemed not to go so far, however, as utterly to outlaw its use in enforcement of practices legal in other respects. So the tax language was retained in the bill.

Proponents of the measure predict that if it passes it inevitably will be subjected to a supreme court test, probably within six months to a year. To some that points to a possibility that due to the advanced age of several of the justices changes in membership may intervene either through retirement or death.

The number of five-four and six-three decisions indicates mathematically that a complete change in the prevailing philosophy of the court might result even from one vacancy.

Serious students of the situation have been speculating as to what effect the coming election might have upon the type of personnel selected to fill any vacancies occurring.

They propound two questions: Would re-election of President Roosevelt make it likely that within the period up to 1940 one or more liberal members would be appointed to the court whose philosophy would convert the present liberal minority into a majority?

Would election of a Republican president continue, by the same means, the court's present disposition?

SALARY BOOST DUE ON JULY 1

All State Employees Slated to Get Small Raises

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.

Raleigh, May 29.—All state employees will get a salary increase of 5 per cent of the salary they were receiving as of June 30, 1935 or of 4.16 per cent of their present salaries, effective July 1, 1936, the Budget Bureau has just advised the heads of the various state departments and institutions in a special budget memorandum dated May 25. It was learned here today.

The memorandum states that indications now are that the anticipated revenues for the fiscal year 1936-37, beginning July 1, will be sufficient to grant this additional salary increase as directed by the 1935 general assembly.

The appropriations bill as enacted by the 1935 general assembly provided that all state employees should get a salary increase of 20 per cent effective July 1, 1935 and an additional 5 per cent effective July 1, 1936, if in the opinion of the Governor and the Advisory Budget Commission, the anticipated revenues would be sufficient to grant this additional pay boost. This memorandum indicates that the Governor and Advisory Budget Commission have decided that the revenues will be sufficient.

In order that the scheduled increases may become effective on July 1, the heads of all departments, institutions and other spending agencies are asked to submit complete lists of all the employees to the Budget Bureau by not later than June 15, showing the monthly pay each is now receiving in one column and in another column the new rate of pay that will prevail after July 1. This new rate will be determined by adding 4.16 per cent to the present monthly pay rate.

In order that the pay increase may be as uniform as possible, no attempt will be made at this time to reclassify any of the present state employees, with the result that the existing salary of every state employee will be increased 4.16 per cent, or 5 per cent above the salary which prevailed on Jun 30, 1935, the memorandum set forth.

LEGISLATURE HOLDS POWER

Membership of General Assembly Important Matter

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.
By J. C. BASKERVILL.
Raleigh, May 29.—The personnel and make-up of the 1937 general assembly is really more important than who is elected Governor, since it is the general assembly rather than the Governor which repeals or enacts new taxes, determines the size of appropriations and decides what kind of taxes shall be imposed and on whom, those who are really familiar with the mechanics of state government in North Carolina know.

They also know that there is not another state in the Union in which the Governor has less to say about legislation and less real authority than in North Carolina, since this is the only one of the 48 states in which the Governor does not even have the power to veto legislation of which he disapproves. The result is that the legislature is virtually absolute in its authority in state matters, while the only influence the Governor has is what he may possess as a result of his prestige and personality.

Accordingly, it would be a good thing for the people of the state to stop and think a little bit about the men and women who are candidates for the general assembly, as well as about those who are seeking the nomination for Governor, the more thoughtful observers here are convinced. For a carelessly selected general assembly can make it impossible for any Governor to carry out his program and instead of becoming an aid to the executive branch can become a veritable millstone about the Governor's neck. It is generally agreed.

One of the biggest dangers in any election is that so many new members will be elected to the legislature that it will get tangled up in its own inexperience and lack of knowledge and enact legislation likely to prove more harmful than beneficial. Almost any man or woman who has served in a session of the general assembly will readily admit that a new member can accomplish very little his first session, and that it requires months for a new member to become acquainted with all the intricacies of legislative procedure and become accustomed to all the ropes. Most of these will also agree that the counties which usually get the most favorable legislation out of the legislature are those which have established the precedent of sending the same representatives back to the legislature year after year.

The reason for this is that these experienced members know the ropes and know how to get their bills introduced, know how to steer them through the committee hearings and then on to enactment before the legislature. The inexperienced members even learn how to get their bills properly introduced, those who have watched numerous legislative sessions agree.

One reason the eastern counties have been so successful in dominating past sessions of the general assembly and in getting most of the cream while the other counties have gotten only the milk, is because the eastern counties for years have sent the same representatives back to the legislature term after term. In the Senate, for instance, the first district sent: both Dudley Bagley and Lloyd Griffin as its senators for two sessions in succession, while the Second district sent Carl Bailey back twice and A. D. McLean once after he had served three terms in the Senate. It is now running for the Senate a third time as one of the two senators from the Second district. The Fourth district has sent W. G. Clark of Tarboro to the Senate for the last five sessions as one of its two senators and indications are that he will be nominated for a sixth term next week. In the Fifth district, Arthur Corey of Greenville has been the senator for the last two sessions of the general assembly and is now seeking a third term.

If these more experienced men and men of equal experience are nominated in the primary next week to represent these districts, it can be expected that they will "bring home the bacon" for the counties in these districts, especially if the counties nominate representatives with previous legislative experience. But if they desert their former cratom and nominate entirely new and inexperienced men, the chances are that the balance of power on both the House and Senate of the 1937 general assembly will pass into the hands of the Piedmont and Western counties and that for the first time in years the east will be jolted out of the legislative saddle, observers here agree. But the eastern counties are usually just a bit more canny politically than the others, who are in the habit of changing representatives often. As a result, most of the observers here are betting that the eastern counties will again pick their senators and house members with the usual care and stay on top.

Prospecting With Electricity Honolulu, (AP)—Prospecting for water by discharging electric currents into the earth is being tried here by Joel Schwartz, senior geophysicist of the federal bureau of mines in Hawaii. Sugar growers are operating in the search for a new supply, inasmuch as 500,000 gallons of water are required to produce a ton of sugar.

TAJ MAHAL COPIES TO ADORN BATH IN MANSION OF AMERICAN HEIRESS

Marble panels copied from the wonderful traceries in stone which have made the Taj Mahal one of the world's masterpieces, are being shipped from India to the Florida home of the James H. Cromwells. She is the former Doris Duke, heiress of tobacco millions. The costly panels will be installed in a bedroom and adjoining bath.

Delhi, India (AP)—American wealth, drawn from the tobacco fortune of the former Doris Duke and her husband, James H. Cromwell, has saved India's ancient art of marble-carving as exemplified in the beautiful Taj Mahal.

Copies of some of the carved windows, inlaid doors and panels of the famous temple at Agra have been completed and are on their way to the United States to adorn a bedroom and bath in the Cromwells' palatial home at Palm Beach, Florida.

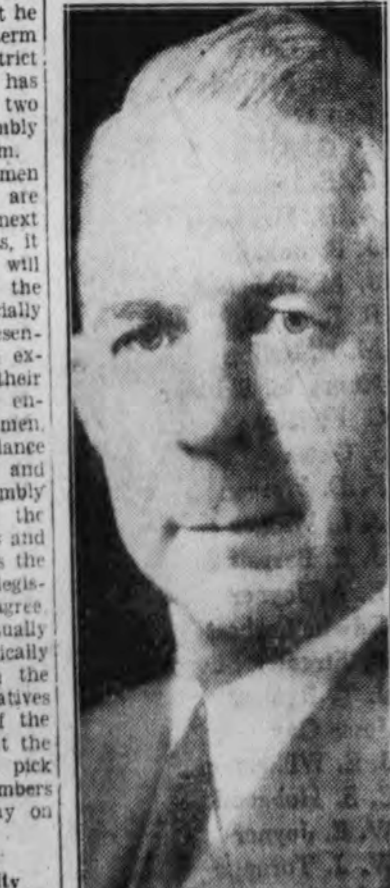

They were ordered by the couple while visiting India on their honeymoon last year, thereby providing an impetus for the centuries-old industry which had almost dried out in modern times. Only a few descendants of the craftsmen who fashioned the Taj Mahal in Shah Jehan's time, still carried on a precarious living by making small inlaid souvenirs for visitors to the temple.

Experts Marvel at Work The marble panels, as ordered by Mrs. Cromwell, form a dado about two and a half feet high, with each panel a floral picture. Experts pronounce the workmanship as a miracle of skill. Semi-precious stones—jade, cornelian, agate, malachite, lapis lazuli and mother-of-pearl—are fitted into the petals of the flowers and the curves of the stems. The natural veining of the stone has been utilized to stimulate the markings of flowers and leaves.

The stones were cut to the minutest fraction, for no cement or adhesive material of any kind could be used to hold them in position. The result is a transparency and brilliancy unrivaled, say experts, since the dynasty which produced so many marvels of architecture in India.

Famous Screen Copied The panels will be installed in a marble bedroom and marble bathroom in the Cromwell home, with eight of the huge carved masterpieces going into the bedroom. Traditional geometrical patterns

BRAWNY U. S. PENITENTIARY GUARD WINS PRISONERS WITH HIS POETRY

Atlanta, Ga. (AP)—When his bread-winning labors at the United States penitentiary are finished, John S. Madden, lieutenant of guards at the institution, likes to steal away home to write poetry. Tall and athletically built, Madden, through the medium of a column he writes regular for an Atlanta newspaper, is known as one of Georgia's most prolific writers of verse.

He has acquired another large literary following by reason of his frequent contributions to "Good Words," a pamphlet printed monthly largely by and for penitentiary inmates. The booklet also goes into the homes of prisoners—scattered throughout the United States—and is read by a large number of their relatives. Madden says he frequently gets letters expressing appreciation of his work from members of the families of prisoners and from the inmates themselves.

"That, perhaps, is the greatest satisfaction I derive from my literary endeavors," he said. The poet-guard says his position is no handicap from a literary standpoint, but that the prison locale—with its varied types of character—often is a source of inspiration for a poem.

There's a little box of pine
Going back to Casoline
And in it is a youth unknown
To fame;
There's no one here to weep
O'er his last long, quiet sleep,
For he only had a number, not
A name.
By an old ramshackled gate
A grey-haired mother waits

Where the roses and the honey-suckles twine,
And her loving heart will break
With a ceaseless, gnawing ache
When they bring her back that little box of pine.

And a little mountain girl
With her wind-tossed, tousled curls
Will no longer count the days
'til his return;

For her dreams are all in vain
And her tears fall like the rain—
She has only memories now that bless and burn.

In a quaint little church lot
Where the wild forget-me-not
And the mountain laurel bloom in summer tie
They will lay this lad away
Where the songbirds through the day
Will sing sweetly o'er that little box of pine.

Madden has written more than 500 poems by a summary in prose. "I never re-write a poem," he declares, "and actual composing time of a work usually is about an hour."

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

(Continued from Page One) public. He's withholding it till he can persuade the ranche-banker to soften it. These defections are deepening the furrows on backstage brows.

PROFIT: President Roosevelt's boost in the duty on Japanese textiles reflects the Democrats' fear of Republican revival of the tariff issue in the presidential campaign. The increase was sold to FDR by Secretary Roper over the mild protests of Secretaries Hull and Wallace.

Politico-economists brand the move as a mistake, economically and politically. Domestic mills suffering most severely from Japanese competition are situated in southern states which will probably go Democratic, anyway. New England textile interests were quick to declare the higher rate would not help them. Mr. Roosevelt's shift is the more puzzling because not so long ago he spent forty minutes explaining to the press that the imports were "infinitesimal" and due to "obsolescent machinery" in American factories.

Import-export statistics suggest that the United States stands to lose in the long run if Japan retaliates by purchasing raw cotton elsewhere. In the first six months of 1935 Japan exported $1,000,000 of finished textiles to the U. S., probably $2,000,000 for the full year. But in that same period Nippon bought $90,000,000 worth of raw cotton from our producers. From 1929 to 1934—the period in which Japan halloped its export business—the balance of trade shifted from $178,000,000 in favor of Tokyo to a tidy profit of $91,000,000 for the U. S.

FIGHT: The contest for Controller General J. R. McCarl's 15-year, $10,000 job has assumed Donnybrook proportions behind the scenes. Publicly the candidates are engaged in a dignified rivalry, but privately they are lining up political backers on Capitol Hill and squabbling bitterly over his semi-judicial post.

Three avowed candidates are William McReynolds, administrative aide to Secretary Morgenthau; Col. O. R. McGuire, general counsel to McCarl; and Frank Yates, Assistant to the Controller. Mr. Morgenthau has formally recommended Mr. McReynolds, a veteran public servant. Forty Senators, including some influential ones, have plumped for Col. McGuire. Mr. Yates is backed by Senator McNelly of West Virginia and James L. Baily, who handles personnel for McCarl. Mr. Baily has many inside pipelines through his appointment of Democratic Senators' friends. Senator Pat Harrison could probably walk into the job if defeated next fall, but his reelection seems to be in the cards.

The famous McCarl-Norris feud over TVA figures in the fight. Though Mr. McCarl was once the Senator's secretary, he framed reports savagely attacking the Tennessee experiment. Mr. Norris understands that the Baily-Yates faction was responsible for the assault on his pet project. And the Nebraskan will try to spike anybody even remotely connected with TVA's accounting troubles.

EARNEST: Landlubbers are condemning navy moral and mechanism because of reports of breakdowns to two battleships during current maneuvers in the Pacific. Though the navy press office discreetly veils the facts in secrecy, the inside story is that mishaps resulted from the high command's insistence on simulation of battle conditions.

Swam engagements used to be no more exciting than picnics on the high seas. The admirals played bridge—or poker—on deck, and the same holiday enthusiasm prevailed below decks. But hard-boiled Admiral Reeves has insisted that the opposing forces exhibit the same dash and grimness they would show in war-time. He has stimulated sharp rivalry among officers and men. Congressional generosity has also put the seadogs on their mettle.

What appears to have happened is that the two battle-wagons flew at one another like fighting cocks. When veering off would not prevent a smashup, both signalled the control rooms to shift into reverse—a process like changing from third to reverse in an auto while speeding 35 miles an hour. The result was two sets of stripped turbines which sent the vessels limping into port.

New York

By JAMES McMULLIN VALUABLE: There is deft strategy behind Jesse Jones' campaign to have banks in which the RFC owns preferred stock replace the RFC equity with new stock issues to be marketed to the public. It's a propitious time for banks in a strong financial position to do this, with money cheap and investors clamoring for new and profitable outlets for their funds. And naturally banks that can retire RFC stock will be glad to get out from under the shadow of government control.

The important point is that Mr. Jones' activity along this line will help parry two of the heaviest punches in the anti-Roosevelt repertoire. Do Republicans hammer at the enormous burden of national debt piled up by the New Deal? Ah, but look how much of it is recoverable and should not therefore be counted debt. Observe the splendid record of RFC repayments already. Of course the more banks follow Mr. Jones' suggestion the better that record—and the more convincing the riposte.

Is the New Deal charged with socializing business? How absurd, when the RFC—a New Deal agency—is so plainly trying to withdraw its voice in the management of banks instead of seeking to augment it. Whatever the merits of these arguments, New York sharp agree that Mr. Jones is doing his chief a valuable political service.

FOUNDATION: A year ago shrewd New York observers privately expected Jesse Jones to emerge this year as the presidential candidate of a conservative Democrat: party on the order of the Palmer-Buckner ticket in 1896. The organization of refugees from other New Deal agencies which he built up in the RFC pointed that way, as did other internal indications. But now few members of the administration are contributing more to FDR's reelection than the selfsame Mr. Jones.

How come? New Yorkers in a position to know ascribe two reasons. One is that no adequate sponsorship—financial or political—developed in support of the conservative third party idea. The other is that Mr. Jones is understood to be privately cherishing serious aspirations for 1940, which would be wrecked if he stuck his neck out this year.

Meanwhile he is building a sound foundation for future conservative support by his business-like management of the RFC—especially in contrast to the inept handling of other federal agencies. He is in the New Deal—but not of it—which has advantages both ways.

SACRIFICE: The eastern railroads and the Interstate Commerce Commission are having a lovely game of pass-in-the-corner. The only trouble is that the railroads can't quite make up their minds which corner they want to occupy. They have gone to the expense of filing a suit to join the I. C. C. from enforcing its order that they must reduce passenger fares. That's a bold gesture—but the betting is 10 to 1 in informed quarters that it will be futile. It's usually hard to convince a court that a lower rate will ruin your business before you have even tried it. Moreover, the roads' legal departments apparently forgot to take the advertising departments into their confidence. Ads featuring cheaper fares as a selling point appeared in the same issues of newspapers as announcements of the suit.

Still further, the roads have petitioned the I. C. C. to keep the current high "emergency" freight rates in effect after July 1. Their plea is that they must have the assurance of high freight revenues to sustain them while they are experimenting with the new passenger rates. So if they get their injunction they sacrifice their main argument in a matter that is far more important to them. Some observers caustically remark that most eastern railroad managements would have been sight at home at the Mad Hatter's tea party.

AGGRESSIVE: A substantial number of the utility companies operating in the Tennessee Valley area are planning a new suit to test the constitutionality both of the law creating the TVA and of the Authority's operations. Utility leaders sponsoring this move are convinced that aggressive legal action is necessary to protect private power investments in that territory against future ruin when the TVA program really gets going. The recent Supreme Court decision validating TVA litigation, fundamental legal status of the government's right to sell power hanging in mid-air. It is true that no provable damages have yet been suffered as a result of TVA operations, and courts have not generally been receptive to suits based on alleged future harm. But the prospective plaintiffs hope to get around this by showing that the TVA is now actually competing for customers and that companies in the area are unable to refinance at prevailing low interest rates.

HAIRLESS SOUP FOR HUNGARIAN DINERS

Budapest.—(AP)—No longer will Hungarian restaurant patrons find a hair in their soup, unless it is their own.
 The government has decreed that every waiter and cook must shave every hair off his head.
 A storm of protests followed this measure of the health ministry, but as compensation it was ruled, waiters may substitute white coats and aprons for the previously required tuxedos or "tails."

 of Miss Gussie Kuykendall.
 The alumnae are coming in today. The honored classes, those returning for the twentieth, the tenth, and the first anniversaries, are guests in the college taking the places of the students who leave before commencement. A number of mothers of graduates are also guests of their daughters.
 Tomorrow former graduates are expected to come in from all parts of the state. The luncheon will be held at the high school and both dining halls will probably be filled. The members of the Board of Trustees and their wives will be guests at the luncheon. Class groups will hold their meetings immediately following the luncheon.
 The tea in honor of the parents of the graduates, given by the Normal School graduates, will be held at four o'clock and it will be in the campus woods near the infirmary, instead of at the lake, as announced.
 The members of the staffs of the two College publications, the Teocon and the Teo Echo, had a barbecue supper last night and a movie party afterwards.

SELF-MAIMING ACROBATS LAND IN FRENCH JAIL

Paris (AP)—Louis Birringer and Joseph Guerez, acrobats, have been sent to jail for a year on charges of repeatedly injuring themselves to collect accident insurance.
 The prosecution charged that Birringer had collected various sums by crushing his fingers in doors, spraining his ankle and letting valves fall on his head.
 Guerez, it was charged, went in for bigger awards. He was accused of hurling himself from moving trains four times, spending five months of the past two years in hospitals.
 Birringer, a former stage performer, was said to have taught Guerez the art of acquiring serious injury with death.

HELD FOR FEDERAL MAN'S DEATH

Edward asking: "And what, exactly, do you do here?"
 It's all part of the new king's effort to find out where his money goes.
 By voluntarily giving up his civil list of $550,000 King Edward's entire revenue is derived from the Duchy of Cornwall, and his income is smaller than that of King George.
 For this reason officers of the household have been instructed that expenses must be kept down.

Nazi Court Bans Free Matches

 WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

YES, we've made some proud statements about the great-powered valve-in-head straight-eight engine that gives Buick its standout performance.
 But wait until you've heard this beauty's reassuring murmur as you head it up a grade, or listened to its soft, unlabored purr as it crawls along through traffic.
 Wait until you've felt the surging lift that's there at any speed—when you want to go swinging past some slow-poke that blocks the way ahead of you.
 You'll hear the most important piece of news in the world of automobiles when you send this road-king into action and see how its performance outproves all our promises!
 There was a time when better-than-average smoothness, mobility and power-flow in a car belonged only to those of better-than-average wealth.
 But our prices are so close to those of the lowest-priced field there's no real reason why you shouldn't have performance that's fit for a king.
