PELTING RAINS REVIVE HOPES DRY SECTIONS

Cool Air From Rainy Areas Moves Toward Other States

SHOWERS FALL IN BOTH CAROLINAS

Relief Is Promised Tomorrow For Sections Suffering Most Serious Drought Results

Chicago, July 14.—(AP)—Pelting rain in three northwest states brought hope of general relief today from the lethal heat wave which gripped the nation for 11 days causing upward of 1,878 deaths.

Cool air masses moving eastward from the rainy area in the Dakotas and Minnesota bore promise of showers and cooler temperatures in the hard hit north central and upper great lake region.

Relief was promised by forecasters tomorrow in Illinois, contributor of almost 300 to the nation-wide heat death total, and Michigan, where more than 400 had died.

Forecasters J. R. Lloyd at Chicago said the break in the northwest provided evidence that the cool front was breaking its way through what he described as a circular wall of hot air piled up in the great central farm belt.

At the same time thundershowers fairly general over the Carolinas brought cooling temperatures on another front with more forecast for today and tomorrow.

At Colorado Springs, Col. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace announced the government was prepared to take care of the drought in 1934—and it is prepared to do this year.

Grain pit experts at Chicago calculated the drought losses at more than one billion dollars.

A. B. Corey Rows Hat Into Fight

The name of Arthur B. Corey was added today to the list of Pitt county "eligibles" who would like to occupy the First North Carolina Congressional seat should Lindsay Warren be named Comptroller General and resign his present position, and accept the post.

While it is being reported that Congressman Warren would be offered the position and would accept it, nothing definite has been announced from Washington.

The congressman told newsmen, when asked for a statement, that the report was news to him.

Nevertheless, a number of Pitt citizens are seeking the position on the assumption that he will retire from Congress and accept the post, appointment to which is for 15 years and carries an annual salary of $15,000, according to reports.

With the announcement of former State Senator Corey, at least five Pitt men have signified their desire to fill the post of congressman from this district should the post be vacated.

Those who have publicly expressed a "willingness" to fill the appointment are Mayor M. K. Blount, W. J. Bundy, J. Con Lanier, and F. C. Harding.

While several from this county are seeking the position, should it be vacated, other counties are centering their efforts on one man, A. G. Gentry, who was elected to the post.

A number of prominent Pitt citizens have expressed the opinion that if a possible successor was to come from this county, the entire populace should concentrate on one man and boost him for the post.

Candidate Corey said he had been requested to seek the office and confirmed the report that he would welcome the honor.

FARMER HURT IN CRASH DIES AT MOREHEAD CITY

Morehead City, July 14.—Ferne C. Jones, 33-year-old farmer who was critically injured in an automobile accident near Swansboro on June 21 when a truck he was driving crashed into an auto owned by Mrs. Jones which was said to have been parked on the highway, died yesterday in Morehead City hospital.

HOME-GROWN BEAN BAGS SOUGHT FOR MANCHOUKUO

Thinking, (AP)—Extensive cultivation of the kenaf hemp plant is being promoted in south Manchoukuo in an effort to provide a home-grown supply of gunny-bags in which to market the huge annual soy-bean crop.

Bulging with beans, sacks made of native kenaf recently were hauled three times back and forth between Harbin and Darlin to prove they could "take it."

It is hoped that the new crop will save Manchoukuo from importing an annual $3,000,000 worth of jute fibre from India.

Grocer Finds Snake In His Cash Drawer

Jim Smith, who conducts a grocery store and filling station near Ayden, was surprised when he attempted to put change in his cash register Monday morning. He pulled out the drawer, which had stood open during the night, and found a large white oak snake quietly keeping vigil.

Jim has seen experience along the firing line, heard the thunder roar and seen the lightning flash; all these did not give him the excitement as did the snake in his cash register. Jim said he could not decide which was the more frightening—the snake or the snake.

ANOTHER CASE OF TERRORISM IN THIS STATE

Flogging is Reported From Lower Section Columbus County

VICTIM RESIDENT NEIGHBOR STATE

Farmer Bares Back Before Officials To Exhibit Marks Left by Night Riders

Wilmington, July 14.—(AP)—Another flogging was reported from the lower section of Columbus county today on the heels of an inquiry into the depredations of a band of girl-whipping "night riders."

Monroe Fowler, a 40-year-old South Carolina farmer who lives near the state line, walked into the sheriff's office, at Conway, S. C., and said he was flogged four nights ago by a band of 25 masked white robed terrorists.

The farmer bared his back and exhibited a mass of deep, livid whelps—the marks he said of the vigilantes' lash.

"I was whipped with a belt six inches wide," he said. "I was blindfolded and held against a tree. They whipped me until I fell to my knees nearly unconscious and then they jerked me up and beat me again."

Fowler lives between Conway and Tabox, N. C. He said he had gone to Tabox and was returning home when the hooded procession seized him and whisked him to his swamp and applied the lash to his bare flesh.

The latest victim said he did not know who he was seized and flogged.

Solicitor J. J. Burney said today he had no comment on Fowler's report, but that "if" and when G. Floyd Ford, solicitor at Conway, makes an investigation "he would follow up the inquiry in his province."

PLAN TO TEST SERVICE SAYS TOBACCO SEED CROPS BETTER

Samples Gathered From Weed's 'Native Homes' Cotton, Tobacco And Corn Shown To Have Improved

Washington, July 14.—(AP)—Six hundred samples of seed collected from what the agriculture department believes to be the "native homes of tobacco" have been planted at the department's Arlington farms here and on experiment station farms in tobacco states.

Dr. E. E. Clayton, tobacco disease specialist in the department, is seeking tobacco resistant to disease. He has collected the seed from Mexico, Central America and northern South America and hopes from them he may find tobacco which will resist wildfire, blackfire, mosaic, mildew (blue mold), wilt, stemrot, blackshank and rootknot.

Experiment stations cooperating with the Arlington farm include those at Raleigh and Oxford, N. C.

PLANT SHRUBS, TREES TO PREVENT EROSION

Raleigh, July 14.—Approximately 53,000 shrubs and trees were planted this spring in the Davidson County erosion control demonstration area. Most of the plants, which were one-year seedlings, were collected locally during the fall of 1935, according to E. C. Jernigan, project manager.

Species used in planting across gully channels were burning bush, privet, coralberry, cherry, red cedar, wild plum, wild rose, blackberry, mimosa, red bud, white mulberry, false indigo Scotch broom, bush lopedeza, hawthorne, Siberian pea tree and pecan, while some Scotch broom and bush lopedeza were used in the heads of gullies.

Experience has proved, said Jernigan, that clumping the plants, rather than planting them individually, proves of greater benefit in controlling erosion and producing food and cover for wildlife over 15,000 plants were used in developing field borders.

In terrace outlets and gull spot planting over 2,800 plants were used.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG News Behind The News

Washington By IRA BENNETT LIQUOR: Prohibitionists are playing a canny game—take it from the liquor and hotel-restaurant-club interests. Instead of working from the top down, as in the Eighteenth amendment stunt, they have copied the grass-root idea of prohibitionists and are working upward.

Here a village, there a village, here a county, there a county—all going dry and staying dry because public opinion wants it so.

A hotel paper circulates its patrons, telling them to go softy, not to overdo liquor parties and especially to be careful about women and minors. The drys are after them! The circular reminds hotel men that liquor interests never know when they are well off—that they always overplay their hand.

Grass-root workers in dry ranks are enthusiastic over the progress of localized prohibition. They think they see national prohibition coming, with public opinion behind it this time.

VOTING PROBE IS LEFT UP TO LOCAL BOARDS

State Elections Board Instructs Counties To Investigate

R'QUIRE REPORTS TO BE IN WRITING

Clyde R. Hoey And W. P. Horton Certified as Nominees Despite Protests

Raleigh, July 14.—(AP)—Raymond C. Maxwell, secretary of the state board of elections, said today he would forward instructions at once to seven county boards of election to investigate alleged irregularities and illegalities in the July 4 run-off Democratic primary.

After an all day session yesterday, the state board ordered county inquiries but certified as the nominees Clyde R. Hoey of Shelby for governor, W. P. Horton of Pittsboro for lieutenant governor and Thad A. Eure of Winton for secretary of state.

Dr. Ralph W. McDonald of Winston-Salem, who trailed Hoey by 50,000 votes, and Paul D. Grady of Kenly, who was whipped by Horton by 8,800 ballots, asked the board to make a "summary investigation" of the voting.

Counties in which local boards are to investigate are Cleveland, Yancey, Clay, Forsyth, Rowan, Surry and Buncombe. Evidence concerning alleged irregularities in other counties was presented orally at the hearing. Maxwell pointed out, but not in writing.

The county boards must report their findings in writing within 30 days, Maxwell said.

Charges Joe Lewis Was Given 'Shot' Denied By Sister

Story Carried by Chicago Evening American That Fighter Was "Needed" Immediately R-futed

Detroit, July 14.—(AP)—Eulalia Barrow Gaines, sister of Joe Louis, denied today that she had charged her brother was "given a shot of dope" just before his recent fight with Max Schmeling.

Chicago, July 14.—(AP)—The Chicago Evening American in a copyright story today quoted Eulalia Barrow Gaines, of Detroit, sister of Joe Louis, as saying the fighter was given a "shot of dope" the day he was knocked out by Max Schmeling.

A sworn affidavit containing the charge as set forth by Louis's sister was mailed from Chicago today to John J. Phelan, chairman of the New York State Athletic commission. The American says.

The document, which was requested by Phelan and puts the commission in the position of having to force a showdown on the charges, was signed by Sheridan A. Bruseau, head of a private detective agency.

His affidavit states that the charge that Louis was "needed" on the day of the fight in the Yankee stadium, which Louis lost by a knockout in the 12th round, was made by Louis's sister on the night of July 2 in a hotel in Chicago.

Insists Her Story Was Not a Hoax

Washington, July 14.—(AP)—Angrily stamping her foot, 23-year-old Jean Bell sat in a circle of skeptical detectives today and denied after hours of questioning that her story of being branded by a vice ring "killer" was a hoax.

"Isn't it all a hoax," one of the shirt-sleeved policemen shot at her. "No, it most certainly is not," she answered.

After 16 hours of continuous questioning by several detectives the girl still stuck to her accounts and the questioning was recessed shortly before seven a. m. until later in the day.

"She has made within the last few hours several conflicting statements," said Chief of Detectives Bernard Thompson.

Although still checking all the leads she gave them, New York and Washington detectives were concentrating on trying to break down her tale that the killer bound her, carved initials and numerals on her thigh and abdomen and turned on the gas in her apartment.

The police intensified their questioning on hearing from Florida that a girl using the same aliases had caused police there to launch investigations of slaying that never happened.

The girl acknowledged, detectives said, that she was the same girl mentioned in the Florida cases.

New York police reported they were holding two men for investigation in the case.

The girl was found in her apartment here early Sunday morning, semi-conscious as gas seeped from opened jets in a nearby kitchen stove and with blood dripping from her thigh and abdomen, where the initials "C. L." and the numerals "3-12" — presumed to be code for the same initials as the third and 12th letters of the alphabet — had been carved.

Miss Bell—also known as Jean Lewis, Jean Arnold and Margaret Lewis—told police she was a former "employee" of Luciano, convicted head of the prostitution racket in New York, and had testified against him in a grand jury investigation. Apparent discrepancies in her story of the assault upon her here confused investigators.

Heavily abandoning a tour of the city's "hot spots" when she said she saw a member of the Luciano mob in one club, the girl said she fled to her apartment. Soon after arriving, she said she answered a knock on the door and a gangster struck her a hard blow in the face.

ANOTHER NAVY SPY ARRESTED BY OFFICIALS

John S. Farnsworth Charged With Selling Naval Secrets

ARREST FOLLOWS SECRET ACTION

Justice Agents Had Shadowed Suspect On Journeys Into Several Parts Of Country

Washington, July 14.—(AP)—John S. Farnsworth, former lieutenant commander in the United States navy pleaded innocent today to charge of communicating confidential naval information to a Japanese agent.

The former naval officer, arrested secretly here last night by navy representatives and J. Edgar Hoover's agents, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Turnage set his bond at $10,000, which he was unable to make immediately.

Preliminary hearing on the charges against Farnsworth was postponed until July 29.

Roger Robb, assistant United States district attorney, said Farnsworth would be taken to Gallinger hospital for treatment because of "his highly nervous condition."

Robb said that Farnsworth, who was discharged from the service nine years ago on charges of conduct prejudicial to the navy, was accused of sending confidential naval publications to an agent of the Japanese navy May 15, 1935.

The Japanese officer alleged to have received the confidential publications from Farnsworth was not named by Robb, but he intimated that his name was known to American naval authorities. An early arrest was hinted.

Washington, July 14.—(AP)—J. Edgar Hoover, chief of justice department agents, said today that John S. Farnsworth, formerly lieutenant commander in the United States navy, had been arrested on a charge of selling naval secrets to the Japanese.

The arrest, which followed months of undercover activity, was made here last night with the utmost secrecy, but the news leaked out and was confirmed also by Capt. William D. Puleston, chief of naval intelligence.

Naval officials said Farnsworth had been discharged from the navy nine years ago on charges of conduct prejudicial to the naval service.

Agents of the navy and Hoover's "G-men," who were said to have shadowed Farnsworth on journeys into several parts of the country, made the arrest shortly before midnight.

All officials steadfastly declined to reveal the nature of the decessed prisoner was accused of selling.

The seizure followed by only 19 days the unprecedented case of another former navy man, Harry Thomas Thompson, who was sentenced to serve 15 years on July 3 after conviction in Los Angeles of selling confidential fleet data to a Japanese secret agent.

St. Paul, July 14.—(AP)—Alvin Karpis, debauched king of gangland pleaded guilty to conspiracy in the $100,000 ransom kidnaping of William Hamm, Jr., St. Paul brewer, as his case was called for trial in federal court today.

Federal Judge M. M. Joyce deferred sentence until the conclusion of the trial of Edmund G. Bartholmey, former pastor of Bethesda, Minn., and John P. (Jack) Magner, St. Paul night club owner, whose trial on similar charges opened this morning. Thomas J. Newman, attorney for Karpis, told the court his client, one of the actual kidnapers of Hamm, desired to plead guilty.

FRANK MURPHY URGED RETURN

Parallel To Lehman Draft Seen in Urgent Pleas

By PRESTON GROVER
Washington, July 14.—A parallel to the Democratic strategy behind the draft-Lehman movement, which persuaded the New York governor to seek re-election after he had announced he would not run again, is seen in the drive to get Frank Murphy to give up his Philippine post and head the Democratic ticket in Michigan.

Murphy was a commanding and popular figure among Democrats in Michigan during his service on the bench and later as Mayor of Detroit. President Roosevelt chose him to be governor general of the Philippines, from which place he moved over to become high commissioner when the islands took steps toward independence.

The drive that ultimately caused Governor Lehman of New York to capitulate seems to have turned in large degree upon Murphy.

Those intimate with Murphy said he was adverse to quitting the $18,000 a year high commissioner post in the islands, with a large executive mansion well staffed. Michigan pays its governors $5,000 a year, with an additional $2,500 for service on the state executive board. It provides no well staffed mansion.

With Murphy at the head of the ticket, a few Democratic leaders pictured possibilities of taking Michigan as in 1932, regardless of the fact powerful Republican Senator Couzens is a candidate this year for re-election.

In fact, the drive for Murphy was paralleled by efforts to put Rep. Prentiss M. Brown, Michigan Democrat, in the field against Couzens. Close political friends say Brown was not eager to take such a step because of high regard for the senator. For some time, however, he has been known to harbor ambitions of succeeding to the senate.

Republicans, while delighted at what they accepted as Democratic admissions of alarm, appeared glad to have two sees of its own in Michigan, Senators Couzens and Vandenberg.

Study of the Murphy situation, however, may cause Republican leaders to recalculate just how often they can afford to take Vandenberg out of Michigan on national speaking tours, as afore planned.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood—Grist to the movie mills:

It seems to be "visitor's day" on the "Dodsworth" set where Walter Huston, Ruth Chatterton, David Niven and dozens of dress extras are being directed by William Wyler. Frits Lang, another director, is there, and a party that includes Natalie Moorhead and five others is seated close to the action. Mary Astor, not in this scene, is showing new pictures of her little girl to a friend who is visiting her.

Huston, who has done his role on the stage so long he practically is Dodsworth, likes an audience. "Bring 'em on," he tells attendants when they inquire cautiously the first time whether visitors will be permitted. Stage stars can't take over that movie star trick of being exclusive while emoting.

Huston has taken over no movie tricks. He and his wife, Nan Sunderland of the stage, do not even live in Hollywood. They own a home in the mountains near Lake Arrowhead. While Huston is working he lives in his studio dressing quarters.

We can look around and study the people who aren't stars. Those two bartenders, for instance, Harry Tagg and Ralph Hessong, mixing movie cocktails at the C.T.'s bar, are new to the movies. They are real bartenders, services obtained thru the Bartenders' union. Hessong has been producing liquid miracles for 25 years.

Tagg has tended bar on boats almost exclusively. Three times while at his work, his ship has been wrecked. He was engaged at his trade one fateful day when maritime hell broke loose. Because he swam long and sturdily, his name was listed among survivors of the Vestria.

Now that they have found out about movie acting, Tagg thinks he would like to stay in pictures.

And this tall, white-haired distinguished actor, sleekly dressed as a guest at the ship's hall, is a story in himself. Once William Worthington was a director of silent films. He made all the early Sesue Hayakawa films, among others. Twelve years ago, Bobby Webb was his prop boy and little Willie Wyler was his script boy.

Worthington obtained his bit in "Dodsworth" because Bob Webb, working on the picture, remembered him. His director is "little Willie Wyler" grown up.

SCRIBE LUCAS FIGHTS ALONE

Raleigh Newspaper Man Out for Committeeman's Post

Reflector Bureau, Sir Walter Hotel.
Raleigh, July 14.—Raleigh Scribe Wade H. Lucas, managing editor of the Raleigh Times, says that in his aspiration to be made National Committeeman for the Young Democrats of North Carolina, he does not have the blessings of Mrs. Besie Phoenix, president of the Young Democrats of North Carolina or of United States Senator Josiah William Bailey.

Mr. Lucas does not see Mr. Bailey's hand except through the Bailey factotum Herbert G. Gulley, roving representative of the senator. The Raleigh reporter had set out for his vacation, but decided that he could not rest while there was a big fight going on. A few weeks ago he announced that he is going to try for the national committeemanship. He has discovered, he says, that he did not consult Mrs. Phoenix and Mr. Gulley. And both, he thinks, are reminding him that he is a forgetful, if not a disobedient young man.

Mr. Lucas is headed toward Greensboro this week when the Young Democrats meet and map out war, William Wellons of Smithfield and Thomas A. Banks of Raleigh have been mentioned as possible opponents of Mr. Lucas. Each could get the ups on Mr. Lucas if all sought the Phoenix-Gulley support, the Raleigh editor says, but neither seems to care for the honor.

Mr. Lucas does not know why he is not in the favor of the two Raleigh magnates mentioned. The scribe recalls that he has taken digs at Senator Bailey and probably has not depleted his supply of superlatives on Mrs. Phoenix and Mr. Gulley. But Mr. Lucas regards himself pretty regular and he did not expect the fight to develop here in his home.

And then Raleigh and Wake have a habit of turning upon their own

Defeat Of Sen. Gore Feared As Bad Omen

Raleigh, July 14.—Long-lookers in politics studying the recent first poll of the Roosevelt-Landon strength and comparing it with the senatorial primaries in Oklahoma, were not so certain that the retirement of Senator Thomas Pryor Gore is a happy man.

This thing happened once before to Senator Gore. He was an original Woodrow Wilson man, but opposed the President violently on some of the war policies. Mr. Gore did this so often that he eventually became one of the Wilson's "wifuls" and in the next primary Senator Gore was retired from the senate. He was beaten by an individual in no sense a world character. The Wilson people took the defeat as a salubrious circumstance.

But the result was quite different. Senator Gore's successful opponent was beaten at the polls and Oklahoma went Republican. So far from reflecting dissatisfaction with Mr. Gore, the general election resulted in putting into the senate a man wholly committed against Wilson, Democrats and Republicans are wondering if that is not to happen in the poll to be held in November.

For Oklahoma is one of those border states. It is full of Southern people but likewise well populated with independents. Senator Gore never went back on Wilson nor on Roosevelt, but found himself so often at odds with both as to make himself a shining mark for the rab-

Democrat, at least, are hoping that the Gore defeat may not be the prognostic of a general renunciation, some signs of which are revealed in the recently conducted poll, not to mention the internal outbursts which almost invariably operate against the party in power. Visitors throughout the country assure the Democrats that Roosevelt is all right, but Oklahoma is too near Missouri to give complete comfort to people as far away as North Carolina.

son avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Forrest were married on Friday evening, July 3rd at the home of Rev. J. A. McIver, pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church. Mr. McIver united them in marriage.

Mrs. Forrest, the former Miss Minnie Bell Craft, is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Craft of this city.

Mr. Forrest is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Forrest of Fountain. He has been employed in the local post office for several years.

Miss Hobgood Honored.

Greensboro, July 14.—Among the most interesting events in the younger set during the week was the tea at which Miss Paula Hobgood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Hobgood, received Friday afternoon at her home on Courtland street to honor her cousin, Miss Ernestine Hobgood, of Greenville, who will be through this week.

About 75 girls called between 4 and 6 o'clock to greet the visitor. Miss Emily Harris, wearing a flowered chiffon gown, welcomed them and presented them to receiving line which was composed as follows:

Miss Paula Hobgood, in a gown of yellow net and lace; Miss Ernestine Hobgood, in green organza; Miss Dorothy Pearl, in flowered crepe, and her guest, Miss Doris Gambrell of Charlotte, in yellow crepe; and Miss Irma Gray Hornaday, in green crepe. All the girls in the reception group wore single gardenias.

Snappdragons, roses and a mixture of garden flowers made a bright background in the living room where the guests were received. Miss Mary Blake Partin showed the way to the dining room after callers had registered with Miss Betsy Doubles. Mrs. Hobgood, mother of the hostess, and Mrs. J. Edgar Holt, had charge of the tea table. They were assisted in serving frozen punch by Misses Betty Hornaday, Margaret Holt, Martha Manget and Nancy Byrd Miles.

The lace-covered tea table had a center bowl of snappdragons and gladioli, about which green candles burned in crystal holders. Mixed flowers filled bowls about the room. Goodbyes were spoken from the side porch by Miss Mary Jane Mims and Miss Doris Nowell.

Three popular visiting girls shared honors yesterday afternoon when Miss Mary Elizabeth Murphy and Miss Catherine Miller entertained at bridge at Miss Murphy's home on South Cedar street. The honorees were Misses Sara and Jane Dixon Hewitt, of Rural Retreat, Va., guests of Misses Kathryn and Helen Berry, and Miss Ernestine Hobgood of Greenville, guest of Miss Paula Hobgood.

An abundance of phlox and mixed bouquets of garden flowers made a colorful background in the rooms where five tables were arranged for the young players. After the game the hostesses, aided by their mothers, Mrs. J. M. Murphy and Mrs. C. E. Miller, served an ice course.

At bridge play best score was made by Miss Lois Shields, to whom the hostesses gave a box of bath powder. Each of the three honorees received a handkerchief. Those making up the tables were as follows:

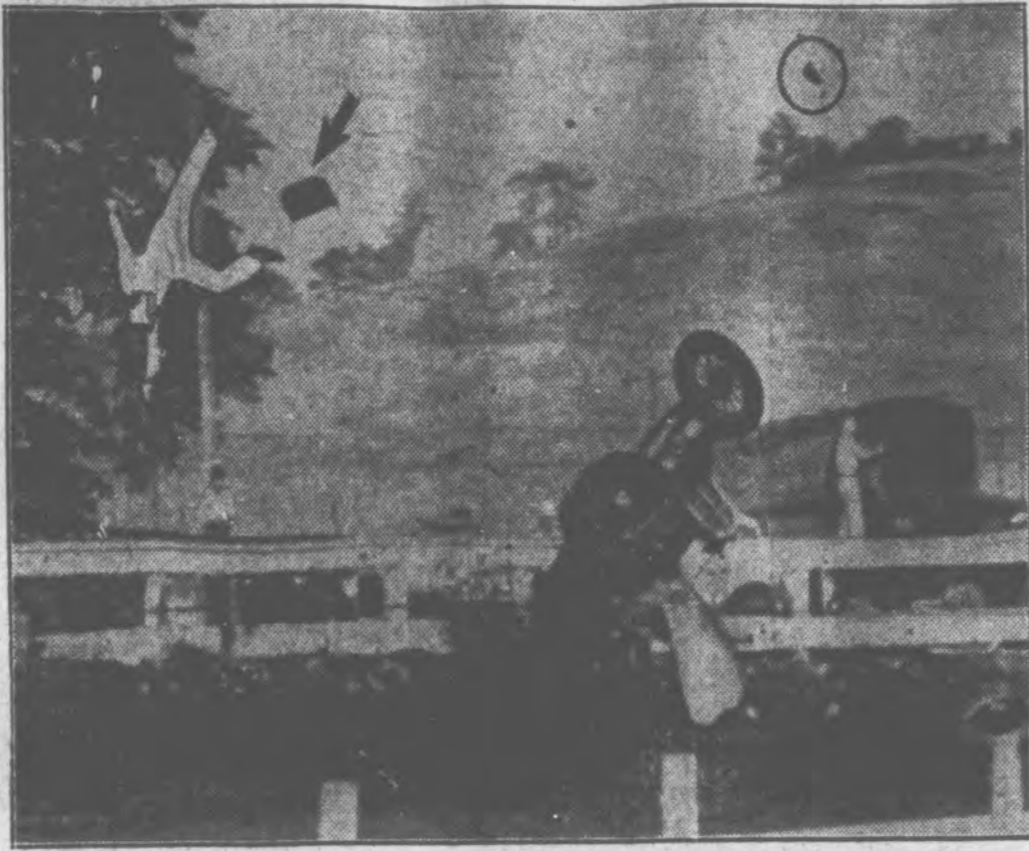

Misses Sara and Jane Dixon Hewitt, of Rural Retreat, Va.; Miss Ernestine Hobgood, of Greenville; Misses Paula Hobgood, Kathryn Berry, Helen Berry, Lois Shields, Olivia Boone, Lois Moffitt, Marie Young, Sadie Emma Burgess, Mary Jane Mims, Doris Nowell, Mary Frances Wyrick, Betsy Doubles, Mary Blake Partin, Martha Manget, Mildred Archer, Christine Schlosser and Dorothy Mae Clymer.

District Masonic Meeting

It was a delightful event, good fellowship, good barbeque, good attendance. Grand Master J. O. Hudson and Grand Secretary, Jno. Anderson and District Deputy Dick Bundy were present.

Cantata At College.

The cantata given by the East Carolina Teachers College chorus at the college last night, "The Three Springs," was beautiful indeed to both ear and eye.

The music was tuneful, the singing marked by beautiful tone quality, and the dances were graceful and airy.

Both music and dances interpreted clearly the story of water, as it went from its source down to the ocean and back again through the clouds to its springs.

It was difficult to tell which was the most beautiful, the "Proluque," the clear, calm "Pool," the rippling "Brook," the dancing, sparkling "Three Little Falls," the gentle rowing of "Middy on the Rives," the dashing and running of the "Great Waterfall," or the triumphant "Finale."

The music was luscious, sparkling, gentle, calm, turbid, or restless, just as the water would be, and the changing tempo matched the movement of the water perfectly. The rhythms of the dances presented these changes to the eye.

The singers, dressed in evening dresses, were seated below the stage which was left clear for the dancers, who were dressed in the colors for which they were named, Blue, White, and Gold, and all together, with the lights thrown on them made a beautiful picture.

Miss Eugenia Thomas directed the chorus and Miss Janie Gold Hardee the dancing. The dancers were Miss Hardee, the Blue Spring; Miss Odell Armstrong, the White Spring; and Miss Theima Dawson, the Gold Spring.

The members of the chorus were as follows:

First Sopranos—Mildred Clarke, Jeanette Colbert, Bettie Cooper, Davis Sara G. Deaton, Bertha Godwin, Bonnie Mae Hall, Elizabeth Howie, Mrs. Blanche Lane, Marceline Langston, Geraldine Mayo, Hilda Modlin, Ida Roberts, Edna Pheasant R. Rogerson, Delilah Whitfield.

Mezzo Sopranos—Maribland Albritton, Ruby Cone, Louise Groce, Marjorie Groce, Betty Herring, Louise King, Bernice Lee, Ursula Marshall, Louise Sitterson, Thelma Smith, Letha Swain, Evelyn Tugwell, Sue Allen Warren.

Altos—Georgia Buff, Mrs. Hubert Dixon, Mrs. Leon Fountain, Virginia Harrington, Mary Humphrey, Hazel Moye, Myrtle Leigh Peacock, Mrs. Eva Person, Florence Woodard, Miss Nola Waters was accompanist.

In Canada.
Toronto, July 14.—(AP)—Extra grave-diggers were called yesterday to bury Canada's heat victims. The mounting toll was estimated at 450 persons, while a forecast of "somewhat cooler" weather today brought hope that the six-day heat wave would be dissipated in the prairies and central Canada. Funeral directors in Toronto were using hearses brought in from outside the city to conduct burials.

A large meteor fell near Farmville, N. C., causing earth tremors that were felt throughout the community.

CHICAGO LEGISLATOR SLAIN IN GANGLAND STYLE

Resorting to gangland's typical manner of warfare, gunmen chased State Legislator John M. Bolton (left) through the streets of Chicago and shot him to death. At the right is the wreckage of his automobile which crashed into a trolley post when a blast of shotgun slugs ripped through his head. One police theory is that gangsters killed him because he sought to legalize handbook betting in Chicago. (Associated Press Photos)

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES:
 The F. Clark Co., Inc., New York, Chicago, Indianapolis, Philadelphia, Kansas City.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

Several "national advertisers" have cut off their advertising allowance pending scrutiny of the anti-chain store law. They will advertise, but they may change their methods and accounting. More than one concern has adopted the rule of one price to everybody hereafter—wholesalers as well as retailers, regardless of quantity. "I'd like to give you a special price, old man, but this new law prohibits it."
 Concerns that habitually make large contracts with the government are worried over regulations that may be made by the Secretary of Labor regarding working conditions and minimum wages. These regulations will bind every purchasing agency of the government.

STRIKES: A new law imposes heavy penalties upon transport of strike-breakers across state lines. Depend upon strikers to see that the law is observed. "Peaceful picketing" promises to become a more powerful weapon under this law. Employers are nonplussed by the new form of strike, in which workers shut down at the plant and refuse to budge.
 "Sit-down" strikes are effective in preventing steamers from keeping schedule time. Agitators in maritime unions are extremely active in preparation for widespread strikes. As usual, communists butt in with violence as the objective.
 Communist schools for seamen are a new wrinkle. Under skilled teachers, workers in every branch of the marine industry are taught the technique of strikes having a revolutionary objective. Headquarters of this activity are at 140 Broad street, New York.

EFFICIENCY: It's an old rule that the War and Navy departments shall be directed by civilians, the idea being that militarists would run amuck if given power. Grant, Sheridan and other soldiers were temporary heads of the War department, and now Admiral Standley, Chief of Operations, temporarily acts as Secretary of the Navy, Secretary Swanson being convalescent and an assistant secretary not yet having been appointed.

Admiral Standley is a fast worker. He got through an authorization for new battleships and a liberal supply of cruisers, submarines, torpedo boat destroyers, and such. He is building up the Navy to treaty strength and has his eye on the time when the treaty will expire and permit the U. S. to put on 16-inch guns. Big orders for naval planes are under way, besides construction of a huge base at Alameda.
 In the meantime Admiral Standley operates the Navy as a going concern. Ships turn up where they are wanted.

CO-OPS: If cooperation experiments among farmers prove disappointing it will not be for lack of money with which to make experiments. Besides $5,000,000 given to agricultural experiment stations, part of which goes into cooperative studies, Secretary Wallace has a lump fund of $5,000,000 with which to make researches into "the basic laws and principles relating to agriculture," as well as a special fund of $800,000 for special research. He has also $554,000 with which to develop "farmers' cooperative demonstration work" in addition to $126,000 for salaries. He has funds with which to employ experts in marketing and economics, besides $756,000 for research into the marketing of farm products.
 Several studies are being made of cooperative systems in Europe, especially Sweden and Denmark. Suspicious anti-New Dealers think they foresee a drive for cooperatives as the best panacea for farm adversity.

Cooperative systems in Europe seem to be far more advanced than American farm cooperatives, but allowance must be made for the vast disparity of territory, population, and farming conditions.
 New York
 By JAMES McMULLEN
 MONEY: Financial circles are quite worked up about widely circulated reports from Washington to the effect that Roosevelt intends to inaugurate managed money on the British model if he is re-elected. This would imply restoration of a free gold market in this country, with private citizens allowed to buy and sell the metal. Of course the Treasury would control the gold price level whenever it wished—as the British government does—by its own purchases and sales.

If FDR really were planning such a move, it would be of major importance. But the best posted New York sources are extremely skeptical. They point out that this would be exactly in line with the ideas of Professor Warren and the Committee for the Nation—for which Mr. Roosevelt has shown no enthusiasm whatever in more than two years. Furthermore, with the possible exception of Secretary Morgen-thau's alleged interest in it has never been satisfactorily confirmed. So unless the President has undergone a sudden and complete conversion by unknown missionaries, the story just doesn't make sense. We feature it here because you will undoubtedly hear a lot about it.

"INSPIRED": Keen New York observers figure the genesis of the story this way. The big farm groups strong for managed money, represent thousands of voters in key states. The main reason the Republican platform hedged so carefully on sound money and omitted all reference to gold was to win the support of these groups. Then along came candidate Landon with his personal definition of sound money as a currency convertible into gold. Even though he adorneed that statement with reservations, he didn't exactly help to clinch the farm vote for himself.

On the other side you have Father Coughlin and his Union party, with a platform chock-full of managed money theories which might reasonably be expected to attract many agricultural votes.
 So insiders dope it that some source high up in the administration started an "inspired" rumor about the President's monetary plans—the idea being that the hope of managed money under New Deal auspices would appeal to the farm groups in contrast to Landon's at-frighten conservatives—but the New Dealers have given them up as hopeless anyway.

MASTER: Astute New York observers figure that President Roosevelt made a shrewd move when he granted Jim Farley leave of absence as Postmaster General instead of accepting his offer to resign.
 Outright resignation would have given "Three-job Jim" critics a sweet chance to whoop. Such an apparent surrender to opposition clamor would have seriously impaired Farley's value as a political chief by shattering his prestige. Also it would have hurt Farley's personal ambitions. As this column has reported before, he hopes that eventually the Postmaster Generalship will bring him a first class business connection. It would have been an ungrateful reward for loyal service to have deprived him of this opportunity.

Landon would also prevent an exodus of managed money extremists to the Coughlin army. It may be as it is, Farley remains a Cabinet officer close to the President, thus enhancing his stature as national Democratic chairman. At the same time, he is free to devote all his energies to political matters for duration of the campaign. Comment runs that the master politico in the White House has discovered how to eat this cake and have it too.

UNDERSTANDING: About a year ago Father Coughlin, in his quest for labor support, urged workers in the automobile and other industries to organize, though he was not overly specific about the type of union they should join. Since then he has avoided the subject and has been conspicuously silent since John Lewis launched his mammoth battle to unionize the steel, motor, textile and rubber industries.
 There have been several indications of a working understanding behind the scenes between Lewis and Coughlin. Evidence to this effect was noted in this column some months ago. Yet it is now apparent that Coughlin will take no public stand in support of Lewis at this critical stage of the latter's activities.

Informed and reliable sources attribute Coughlin's disinterested attitude towards the union problem to an even more satisfactory working understanding he is said to have reached with people of great importance in the motor world.

BASE: Pan American Airways is quietly making preparations for transatlantic airplane service. It has acquired—at a bargain—a seaplane base at Port Washington (Long Island). The property used to belong to an aviation concern long since gone broke.
 The base isn't suitable for a terminus, as it is too far from New York City. But it will come in very handy for maintenance and repair work which will have to be done in this neighborhood. Meanwhile Pan American is making the property earn its keep by renting anchorages for yachts.

Japan's Trade Hits Portuguese
 Lisbon, July 13—(AP)—Representatives of Portugal's textile industries recently asked the government to aid them in meeting Japanese competition in Portuguese colonies. The industrialists said the Japanese are flooding colonial markets with cheap goods in an effort to annihilate Portuguese industries.

MURDER TONIGHT

BY LAURENCE W. MEYNELL

SYNOPSIS: Inspector Hylton is sent to an exceedingly tricky job to learn who murdered the miserly old Arthur Burdett, detained by just about as it pinned on Dale Shipley, half nephew of Burdett and until a few days before, Burdett's heir. He still believes Shipley may have had a hand in it, but now an appointment card from a hardware store found outside the room in which the murder was committed, connects Mary Fenton with the deed in some way. Hylton means to find out how.

Chapter 27 NEW STORY

A GREAT deal of business was done in Fenton's store on Saturday. The busy time had hardly started yet, and Hylton was the only customer in the shop. John Fenton's eyes took an uneasy look when he saw who had come in.

"Anything I can do for you, sir?" he asked.

"I want a word with you, Mr. Fenton. In the back room will be best, won't it?"

"Just as you like sir."

Hylton followed the storekeeper into the small living room at the back so perfect in the unhygienic hideousness of its smug Victorianism that one felt it could have been watched only by a deliberately, and rather cruelly, designed stage set.

"Mrs. Fenton?" he asked.

John Fenton hesitated. If ever a man's expression pleaded for life not to badger him any further he did at that moment. "Well, sir, I suppose she's somewhere round at the back," he said at length.

"Ask her to step in, would you?" Fenton went to the door, poked his head into the passage and called "Mother."

"Mary Fenton was busy in the kitchen."

"Coming John," she called in the very words and tone with which she had answered him for thirty years. The rustle of her black dress could be heard in the passage, and she entered the living room. Her eyes went at once to the Inspector and all the color drained from her face.

John Fenton crossed over to her and he took her hand, patting it kindly. "Now, Mother, don't take on," he begged. "This gentleman wants to ask us a few questions I expect."

"I do, though I hadn't said so," Hylton smiled.

Mary Fenton sank into one of the worn, red-plush chairs and nodded.

"What was it you were wanting to know sir?" John asked.

"Not a great deal. Did Mrs. Fenton have her hair done in the Luxor saloon in Morechester on last Monday afternoon?"

"Yes I did sir," Mary answered.

"Good. And did you have an appointment card to remind you of the time you were to go there?"

"Oh, yes, they always give you that when you book the time."

Hylton produced his notebook. "Is this the card?"

"Where are my glasses, John dear?" John knew where her glasses were, he should have done if habit counts for anything. Mary put them on with fingers that could not help trembling and John heartened her with his hand on one shoulder.

"That's better," Mary said, inspecting the appointment card once more. "Yes, I suppose this is it; it says Monday at 2:30, doesn't it?"

"Now Mrs. Fenton, that card was found outside one of the windows at Enderston Court—how did it get there?"

"Oh."

MARY FENTON grasped John's comforting hand with her own; when she spoke it was in a controlled and purposeful voice.

"Mr. Burdett was a hard man, sir. He never thought of anything but money."

Hylton nodded. "Go on."

"John, you tell the gentleman about the shop and all."

The Inspector listened to the history of Fenton's Stores—a dream of thirty years duration, a story of five minutes telling.

"That was how it stood, sir. Mr. Burdett wouldn't listen to anything but the money; and it wasn't as though he needed it all that badly. I told him it meant the end of Fenton's Stores if he let the Coastal people rent next door, and he didn't care if it did."

"That's what I couldn't stand," Mary broke in, "when I saw him that Monday in the Square I thought: 'It isn't right of God to let things be like that; oh I felt awful about it.'"

"My dear, my dear," think perhaps it couldn't really be so bad. I thought surely Mr. Burdett couldn't do what he threatened if he really understood what it meant. John wouldn't go and see him any more, he said he had done his best and it was no good."

"So I suddenly thought I'd go up to the Court myself. On Monday Mr. Steeble always has a women's service at a quarter to eight, so I set off as usual at half past seven, and of course John thought he knew where I was going; but I never went near St. Leonard's, I went straight up to the Court. I went up the back way because that's the nearest for us—"

"What time did you get there Mrs. Fenton?"

"It was eight o'clock, sir, as I rang the bell; I heard St. Leonard's strike, and I thought what Mr. Steeble would be thinking about me not being there."

"What happened when you rang the bell?"

"Nothing, sir. I rang and rang and nobody came. Well, I wasn't going to be beaten, sir, and I walked round to the side of the house. There was a light showing in a window. Knowing what he was, I thought the light would never be burning unless he was there, so I thought I'd tap the pane and attract his attention that way."

"And did you?"

"No sir, I got right up to the window just going to tap it, and there was a bit of a crack between the curtains and I could see right into the room—"

"Well?" Hylton prompted gently.

"Well, sir, I saw him dead, across the table and his head all—"

"You never went into the house?"

"That I didn't sir. I was so upset I dropped my bag outside the window and had a business to get it again. I was particular careful when I got back here to see if I had lost anything, but I never thought of that appointment card."

"Why didn't you tell somebody about it, Mrs. Fenton?"

"Well, sir, I was very upset in the first place about going to speak to Mr. Burdett without a word to Mr. Fenton, and then what I saw there put me out altogether, as I think you will understand. Next morning, of course, it was all over the village and I thought I'd do best by not saying anything."

Hylton nodded; he was genuinely relieved to find that this old couple were not criminally involved in the affair.

He rose to go; he didn't think there would be any more fish to catch in this pool.

"Now, Mrs. Fenton," he said kindly but quite firmly, "you were very foolish not to go straight away to the Sergeant and tell him all you've told me—"

"I'm sure I was, sir," Mary sobbed.

"But better late than never, so don't worry any more—"

"It's all right then, sir, is it? I shan't be taken up for being an accessory after the fact or whatever they call it, shall I?"

"Good Lord no. The Law's there to help law-abiding people like you, you know. One thing I do want you to help me in though—"

"What's that, sir? I'm sure I'll do anything I can."

"You're quite sure about the time when you rang the bell at the Court?"

"Oh, I'm sure of that sir. I heard St. Leonard's striking the hour as plain as plain, and I thought I ought to be sitting in church listening to Mr. Steeble instead of being where I was. Oh I'm sure of that."

"Right. Now, not a word about this to anybody else and—"

"Pings!"

"—and there's someone in the shop," Hylton concluded with a kindly smile, "so just let me out the back way and don't worry."

The Inspector walked straight from Fenton's Stores as fast as his long legs would take him towards Fielden Cottage, thinking furiously all the time. He did not grudge the time spent in listening to Mary Fenton's somewhat verbose explanation, for one vitally important fact had been established by it. Arthur Burdett was dead at eight o'clock. Lumsdale could not have reached the Court in time to do the murder. Hylton looked forward eagerly to his interview with Dale Shipley.

Nor could he resist a smile at his own expense. Clus after clus melted under his fingers—it was almost as if his duty suddenly had become to absolve rather than to convict.

first native born Idahoan to be elected governor, and the first to win a third term.

Ross is expecting a former political foe to help him defeat Borah. Byron Defenbach reportedly is contemplating a stout independent campaign for the Senate at the head of a Townsendite ticket. Defenbach once ran as a Republican for governor and was beaten by Ross. Now, however, Ross is looking to Defenbach to pull some of the Republican votes away from Borah.

Idahoans seem a bit puzzled by the type of campaign in prospect. Borah always has talked on national and international issues. He

SYNOPSIS: His by his, Inspector Hylton has eliminated every person he suspects of the murder of old Arthur Burdett, until only Dale Shipley, Burdett's half nephew, is left. And he has plenty of evidence to justify arresting Dale, part of it acquired by an accidental meeting with a tramp. Hylton has hurried as fast as possible to Shipley's cottage, after talking with the last of his "suspicious list."

Chapter 28 FLIGHT

THE door of Shipley's cottage was opened a foot or so by Mrs. Somers who, when she saw who the visitor was, showed no inclination to increase the aperture.

"Mr. Shipley in?" he asked.

"No—he isn't in."

"Do you know where he's gone?"

"I can't say that I do."

"What time did he go out?"

"Well—I! The faithful Mrs. Somers seemed nonplussed, and a wild inspiration, such as had saved him more than once before, came to Hylton.

"I suppose he slept last night here, didn't he?" he asked.

Mrs. Somers turned brick red. "I never said he didn't," she stammered.

"No, you don't." Hylton frustrated her determined effort to slam the door in his face by a lightning-like forward movement of his foot. The Inspector forced his way into the hall.

"Now look here Mrs. Somers," he said, "you're acting like a fool. You know who I am and what business I'm here on. If you won't talk to me here I shall have you taken to Morechester Police Station and we'll keep you there until you do talk; so make up your mind."

The embarrassed and indignant red of Mrs. Somers' countenance had suddenly given way to dead white.

"What is it you want to know?" she asked woodenly.

"I want to know everything you know about Shipley's whereabouts."

"I've no idea where he is."

"But you know something," Hylton said brutally, "and you'll tell it to me now."

"Mr. Shipley went off yesterday evening."

"Went off?" Hylton was on the words like a ferret. "Where to?"

"I tell you I don't know."

"Tell me what you do know, Mrs. Somers, and quickly please."

"About six o'clock yesterday evening, it was, Mr. Shipley said he was going up to London for a bit and didn't know when he'd be back. That's all I know."

Hylton almost gasped with delight as he stared at his reluctant informer. Young Shipley had not, always the most foolish and desperate thing a criminal can do. Hylton's brain was working like a fury.

INSPECTOR HYLTON.

He wheeled round astonished. Nancy Featherstone in her best tweed coat and skirt was standing at the open front door.

"Hallo Miss Featherstone."

"Good morning."

Nancy looked the picture of calm collectedness, but appearances are apt to be deceptive sometimes.

"I was looking for you, Inspector Hylton."

"For me?"

"Yes, I wanted a word with you, please."

"Right—O. There's a telephone call I want to make first, but it—"

"I think, perhaps, you'd better hear what I've got to say first—"

"All right, Miss Featherstone."

way to a solidly built, square house standing well back amid evergreens and trees.

Nancy produced a key from her bag and opened the front door. "My maid's out for the day," she said, "so will you let me get you a glass of sherry or something?"

"It's very kind of you Miss Featherstone, but I won't bother you, thanks; all I want to do is to have a word with Mr. Shipley."

They were in the hall now at the foot of the stairs and Nancy hesitated. She stood there eyeing the Inspector in a curiously speculative way.

"Of course," she said, coming to life with a sudden snap. "But it's a little awkward; you see, I'm afraid he isn't quite sober at the moment."

Miss Featherstone at the door.

"Er—oh—I—um."

"But perhaps he's well enough now for you to see him and ask some questions—you want to do that, don't you?"

"Yes I do."

Nancy nodded brightly. "Come along then," she said, "and we'll see how he is."

Hylton followed her upstairs, turning over in his mind the old, old truth that queer though nature may be in parts there's nothing as queer as folk.

Nancy led him along a corridor off the main landing, and halted opposite a door half way down it. She stooped to one side.

"If you wouldn't mind going in there," she said, "and seeing what you can do with him, I'll be downstairs whenever you want me."

Hylton smiled at her. "Right—O Miss Featherstone, thank you very much."

He found himself in a small compartment with a faintly musty smell about it; it was in semi-darkness, being lighted only by a narrow slit of a window very high up. Over in the far corner was something that might be a bed, but which turned out to be an old-fashioned ottoman with some apparently discarded clothes on it. Except for this the room was empty, and Hylton, slightly surprised, went back to the door to seek Miss Featherstone's advice.

A sudden stab of recognition's went through him—although he must give no indication of it, he all at once felt convinced that Miss Featherstone knew perfectly well that the room was empty when she admitted him. He wrestled with the door.

ingly defeated by Borah so he could not present such a formidable front to Pope in 1928.

Republican leaders in Idaho are confident Borah will be re-elected. Ross' supporters see prospects of a victory if President Roosevelt runs strongly in the mountain territory.

Talk at one time that the Democratic national organization would step in to help Ross apparently faded in the face of threats by certain Democratic senators to campaign for the Idaho senator if such a step was taken.

POLITICS at random

By BRYON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

The dry spell in the west will have its political side, unquestionably. To date there is much dispute who will benefit, but the connection between the weather and the election returns is so well established as to be beyond controversy.

It used to be that good weather and good crops always were counted assets for the party in power, and vice versa. They meant farm prosperity, and that meant better business. In flush years the voters were inclined to let well enough alone, and a party out of power was out of luck.

But that was before the days of recurring farm surpluses. When farm production passed the saturation point of consumption, and stayed there year after year, the bottom dropped out of prices, and bumper crops no longer were welcome politically. The farmer not only was disgusted, but he was broke as well, and the curtailment of his purchasing power made everybody unhappy.

The psychology of the situation turned a rather sharp corner early in the depression. The attempt to do something about the surpluses and to cultivate prices instead of production, began in earnest with the Hoover farm board. It continued by different means under the Roosevelt A. A. A. and nature seems to be taking a hand, too.

Will political psychology change again? Many politicians wish they knew.

One way of looking at it is to suppose that what has happened over a considerable area of the west will be a double blessing for the Democrats—that it will curtail production and raise prices at the same time it is giving the administration an opportunity to allot new benefits to the farmer.

In fact, some political thinkers have advanced the theory in recent weeks that a good weather map might be President Roosevelt's worst handicap in the farm country; that if crops were good and prices went down, the farmers would lose all confidence in Democratic assurances that the new soil erosion program offered an effective way out of the farm problem.

The other way of looking at it is to infer the dry weather will greatly help the Republicans. On this side the argument already is being made that the Roosevelt crop curtailment policies have greatly aggravated the effects of the drought and that the combined result may be to reduce available forage and other production to a hazardous point.

Besides, it is argued on the anti-administration side that still greater relief spending now will be forced, and that such spending has ceased to be popular.

Anyone who is interested can take his choice of these opposing arguments, but about one thing everyone can agree:

The drought has brought home once again the vital place of agriculture in the national economic structure and has demonstrated the political boss of agriculture is the weather man.

Whatever successive administrations may do, however they may figure it out according to the text-books or political expediency, the balance of power still rests with the sunshine and the rain, the floods and the dust storms, the eternal variety of nature.

It would appear that if these hazards ever are to be overcome, and if man ever is to become master of the forces of nature, the way will be pointed by science rather than by politics. That is so elemental even the politicians agree to it.

Yet what is being done about taking the farm problem out of politics? With every national campaign, it becomes more and more a part of politics, more and more a political issue; and the inexorable natural law which insures tomorrow's sunrise is no more of a certainty than is the prospect that the dry spell of 1936 will be in the center of the politics of 1936 before the campaign is much older.

The opponent, who virtually is decided the Democratic nomination, is Governor C. Ben Ross, the

SPORTSLANTS

With the New York Yankees riding high, wide and handsome at the head of the American league parade and the Chicago Cubs threatening to repeat their National league pennant triumph of last year, the possible meeting between these rivals in the World Series looks mighty intriguing. It would be a "natural." A renewal of the battles which took place in 1932 would be particularly pleasing to both parties. And especially to Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees.

If there is one team in the National league McCarthy would enjoy meeting—and beating—in the World Series, that team is the Chicago Cubs. It is only natural that McCarthy should welcome a chance to show off before his friends in Chicago and at the same time strike back at the second guessers who were responsible, in a measure, for his departure from Wrigley field.

There have been changes in the personnel of both teams. Most of the old Chicago men have changed uniforms or have passed out of the big show, but there are still plenty of old-timers on hand who would welcome an opportunity to avenge the four straight trimmings the Yankees forced down their throats in '32—fellows like Manager Charlie Grimm, Gabby Hartnett and Charlie Root.

No Bushian Raids Now
The Cubs haven't forgotten the humiliation they suffered at the hands of the Yankees—and of Babe Ruth in particular. The Bambino added insult to injury when he called his shots and made good his boasts at the expense of Chicago pitchers. There would be no chance to even that little score, for the big fellow is out of the game. But there would still be plenty of satisfaction to be gained by turning the tables on the Yankees.

Nothing would delight McCarthy more than to lead his Yankee team, with its 1936 edition of Murderer's Row, into the Cubs' lair, Wrigley field. Whether the present crew is as devastating as that pummeling band—Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Bob Meusel and company—is an open question, but the 1936 Yankees have shown that they pack plenty of dynamite in their bats.

In the recent all-star game Charlie Grimm led the National

Tarboro-Ayden Game Rained Out; Locals Play League Leaders Today

Only two games were played in the Coastal Plain League yesterday. These were between Snow Hill-Kinston and New Bern-Goldsboro. The Greenies remained idle, but will meet Williamston here today. Ayden and Tarboro game came within one batter of being an official game, but the skies opened up at that point and the downpour washed out the day's doings so far as the records are concerned.

Robert Hampton, Snow Hill left-hander was the hero of his team's 4-3 victory over the Eagles yesterday and after the fourth the Kinstonians didn't get anything that looked like a hit.

Manager Ralph Williams' homer, a drive which barely cleared the fence in left field, won for Snow Hill in the 12th.

Egyptian Politicians Fight Control Throne

Cairo, Egypt.—(AP)—Lifted to the throne at the age of 16 by the death of his father, King Farouk of Egypt has had a full diet of turbulent Egyptian politics placed before him.

The youthful king, still busy with his school books, has become the prize in a closely veiled struggle for power between the Wafd, or nationalist party, and the court.

For the Wafd, in power again after six years, is determined that Farouk shall not, as did King Fuad for a time, become sole master of Egypt.

One of the intended Wafd moves it has been indicated, is the appointment of a "palace minister" for the purpose, say enemies of the Wafd, of gaining control over a young and inexperienced ruler.

Another plan charged to the Wafd is a law which would make it criminal for a minister of state to alter the Egyptian constitution.

of 1933. This would prevent a minority party leader, should such a party gain power, from abolishing the constitution and playing at dictator. The Wafd tried to make King Fuad sign such a law in 1930 but Fuad refused and the Wafd cabinet of that day resigned.

King Farouk relies on a tremendous popularity to carry him along until, as full-fledged ruler, he will be in a position to make his own decisions.

Today the young monarch is preparing himself diligently for the time, hardly more than a year hence, when he alone will sign decrees, organize cabinets and conduct state business.

He bears himself with simple dignity, a tall, well built youth, athletic in appearance and manner. A few months ago, junching with his sisters at Kenry House in London, as a student, he was full of fun and merriment.

Now, presiding over a luncheon table at which the guests are the three regents and his cabinet ministers, he smiles only occasionally.

He is greeted with spontaneous applause whenever he appears in public. His youth, handsome appearance and winning ways account for this. He is genuinely democratic, and will chat with the humblest servant in his palace.

Education is one of his principal tasks. Professors of economics, history, English, French, Italian are being invited from abroad. The new king also is learning Arabic, Turkish and Persian. The general plan of his education was mapped out by his father.

Each Friday at 11 a. m. he drives from Boubeh Palace, in one of the bright red motorcars his father loved so well, to a mosque to observe the Moslem Sabbath.

The poor crowd about him at the mosque. On one occasion he ordered his grand chamberlain to distribute $2250 among the poor, and chided a police officer who ordered his men to keep the crowd back.

Rosebush Blooms Half Century
Stephenville, Texas. (AP)—Mrs. W. W. Moores of Stephenville has a rosebush that has bloomed 56 years. It was transplanted once but the change did not affect its production of white roses.

Other voice-cylinders discovered were those of General Booth, Prince Louis Napoleon, Lord Roseberry and William Ewart Gladstone.

The appetizing array of cold cuts shown below is a feature of the July menu in the fashionable Louis XVI Dining Salon of Washington's Hotel Shoreham. Here Camels and good food go together. As Robert, watchful maitre d'hôtel, observes: "Camels are the outstanding favorite at the Shoreham."

MOST VALUABLE PLAYER in the National League last season—"Gabby" Hartnett. "I can smoke as many Camels as I like," he says. "A Camel with meals and after sets my digestion right!"

ON THE GO. Bill Ferguson, star salesman (right), says: "Camels give me an extra sense of well-being."

MISS UVA KIMMEY, daring girl parachute jumper. Miss Kimmey says: "I'm a Camel smoker. I like to smoke Camels at mealtime. They make food taste better and encourage digestion in a pleasant way. Camels don't jangle my nerves."

Camels add zest to eating—they set you right. No wonder smokers say:

"For Digestion's Sake... Smoke Camels!"

MEALTIME often finds us in a state of rush and tension. The excitement and nervousness slow down the flow of digestive fluids.

Remember, then, to pause for a Camel. When you smoke Camels at mealtime, the flow of digestive fluids is helped back to normal. Alkalinity is increased. You experience the well-being that follows a meal well digested.

Camels are gentle on your throat and they never get on your nerves. Enjoy them often for their cheery "lift"...for their unequalled taste...for digestion's sake. Camels set you right!

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

BLOUNT-HARVEY MODERNIZES SHOE DEPARTMENT

New Shoe Headquarters Modernistic Throughout

HIDDEN STOCK MAIN FEATURE

Building Joining Main Store Completely Renovated

The building adjoining the Blount-Harvey Co., on Evans street has been rebuilt and remodeled into a complete new shoe department for this well known department store.

A modern black glass and white beco front has been designed and installed, highlighted by a facsimile of the store signature. New windows and backgrounds have been built.

The entire floor plan, fixtures, lighting decorations and color scheme are new. The general decorative scheme has been designed on the theory that the immediate environment and background for all merchandise should be restful, harmonious and neutral. The color scheme strictly carries out this theory. A white ceiling to reflect all possible light, smoothly paneled rose-beige walls, reddish mahogany soft trimmings, upholstering of the modern chrome furniture—all combine to give a most attractive appearance to the interior of the new store.

In addition to being colorful and modern Blount-Harvey's new shoe department incorporates some novel display and promotion ideas. The stock is concealed behind walls. Indirectly lighted circular units in the walls are used for display of ladies shoes. The children's corner, distinguished from the rest of the store by a curved wall treatment extending from the ceiling is fittingly decorated with cut-out birds and children's figures. Men's shoes are displayed on slanting displays and in display boxes in the wall above the men's shoe cases.

The lighting of this new store was carefully planned. Modernistic light fixtures have increased the foot candlepower, decreased light glare and practically eliminated shadows. Ventilation is supplied by a huge fan which charges the air in the store every two minutes. Heat will be spread by a 3-spread fan heat unit.

The double-entrance between the main store and the shoe department, permits shoppers in the main store to go into the shoe department without going to the street. Of course, persons who wish to purchase footwear only, may enter from Evans street, and proceed cut again through the main store if they prefer.

Complete Stock Of Shoe Accessories

In Blount-Harvey's new shoe department will be found a complete stock of shoe accessories: shoe strings, heel grips and brushes, Ohe White, Cavalier Pandora, Griffin, Shu-Care brands of polish are carried. Also brown and black shoe dyes may be purchased at the store.

Arrangements Made For Dyeing Service

A dyeing service for fabric shoes is now offered in the new Blount-Harvey shoe department. New shoes, as well as old ones, are dyed to match any of 300 colors, the shoes being ready to be used after 30 minutes of drying.

CHILDREN'S CORNER FEATURE OF NEW SHOE DEPARTMENT

The children's corner in Blount-Harvey's new shoe department will feature a complete line of shoes for the growing child. The well known brands of Poll-Parrot and Tri-Tan will be supplemented by the addition of a new line, Simplex, for fall. Children's shoes will be carried in every width so as to give the proper fit for every pair of growing feet.

OTHER REMODELING OPERATION GOING ON

The former shoe department is now being remodeled and will be used by the curtain and drapery department, as well as the boys' department. The latter department has heretofore been divided—part on the main floor and part on the third floor.

Also on the main floor and adjoining the curtain and drapery department, a modern rest room for ladies is being constructed. This will prove convenient to mothers and children who have no need to go upstairs for shopping.

The knitting department, which for some time has occupied a space on the mezzanine, is being moved to the third floor and will be embraced with the new art department. The space now occupied by the knitting department will be used for the office of General Manager J. H. Blount. The store's main offices also occupy the mezzanine floor, and is accessible from both the main store and the grocery department.

The grocery department of the store also has not been overlooked. This has been thoroughly remodeled, repainted, and re-arranged, with modern show windows installed, together with new and better lighting effects.

B. H. STANCILL IS STORE HEAD

Personnel Composed of Only Experienced Salesmen

B. H. Stancill who was for several years past the manager and buyer of the old Blount-Harvey shoe department, has taken over his reins of duty in the new store and promises a beautiful assortment of shoes for fall.

S. H. Adams, formerly connected with prominent stores in Fayetteville, Rockingham, and Charlotte, is assistant to Mr. Stancill. Joe G. Proctor, licensed practitioner, has been with Blount-Harvey several years, the latter of which he has been in the shoe department.

Store Is Known As Foot Comfort Center

Blount-Harvey's shoe department with a complete stock of Dr. Scholl's Foot Appliances is fast becoming known as the foot comfort center of Eastern North Carolina.

Joe G. Proctor has recently graduated and received a diploma from the Dr. Scholl's School of Practipedics and is well qualified to give advice and consultation of foot troubles and foot needs.

BLOUNT-HARVEY OFFERS NEW X-RAY SHOE FITTING SERVICE

After August 1st all shoes fitted in Blount-Harvey's new shoe department will be fitted by X-ray. An X-ray machine has been purchased whereby the exact length and width of the foot may be seen in the shoe. This will do away with the misfits and foot troubles coming from them, and will guarantee a perfect fit for every pair of shoes purchased there.

Nationally Known Shoes To Be Sold

In commenting on the shoes being featured by Blount-Harvey's new shoe department, Mr. B. H. Stancill, buyer and manager, pointed out that such well known, nationally advertised shoes as Rice O'Neill, Florsheim and Paris Fashion shoes were to be shown for ladies. These shoes are fine quality, beautifully tailored, and backed by a prestige that only fashion can give.

Florsheim, Friendly, and Fortune shoes for men are also featured. Men everywhere are becoming more value conscious, and are demanding more value and more style in their footwear.

Blount-Harvey's new shoe department with a well balanced stock of these nationally known shoes will be sought by those men who demand these qualities in their footwear.

A MODERN STORE IN EVERY RESPECT

Entering the mercantile field in 1920, the Blount-Harvey store has grown steadily with Greenville and the surrounding trade territory. In fact, the store is the equal of any such institution east of Raleigh. Shoppers in ever increasing numbers from considerable distances are coming to Greenville and to Blount-Harvey for fashionable goods which are sold at prices within the reach of almost everyone.

The firm maintains a competent staff of buyers who commute to the great markets of the East at regular intervals to purchase such new merchandise as the trade of this section demands. The store maintains also a New York office, where manufacturers call with their samples.

The Blount-Harvey store employs approximately fifty persons, each of whom has a pardonable pride in his or her work with this up-and-going concern. Each customer who enters the store receives a cordial welcome, and is waited on in the most courteous manner possible. The store maintains a local delivery service for Greenville buyers, and much merchandise is shipped to out-of-town customers by express and mail.

"Business is good at Blount-Harvey," the management states. There are several reasons for this coming from them, and will guarantee a perfect fit for every pair of shoes purchased there.

New Store Offers Fine Hosiery Line

In demand to numerous requests for hosiery in the shoe department, a department featuring a popular brand, Roxy, has been installed. This hose retails for 75c and $1.00.

It is of 2 and 3 thread construction, 45 and 51 gauge. Beautifully sheer, it comes in all popular shades in knee length and regular length hosiery.

A total of 140 men have been executed in the electric chair at the North Carolina state prison since that method of capital punishment was adopted 25 years ago.

Majority Of Stock At Popular Prices

"Popular novelty shoes priced to fit everyone's budget, are going to comprise the majority of our stock," points out Mr. B. H. Stancill, buyer and manager of Blount-Harvey's new shoe department.

Individually selected styles from the nation's best shoe manufacturers will comprise the range from $2.95 to $4.95 shoes.

Smartly styled and quality made, they will provide a new standard of value for shoes for the entire family.

The first buildings at the University of North Carolina were erected to form a quadrangle in which the students were locked up at night.

One of the most expressive comments came from a customer of years' standing. Relaxing into one of the comfortable chrome steel, rust chairs, she looked around and exclaimed with a sigh of satisfaction, "I feel as though I'd just had my own home done over."

ROW INVOLVES WAKE FACULTY

Professors at College Disagree on Political Ideas

Reflector Bureau, Str. Walter Hotel. Raleigh, July 14.—Readers of the Biblical Recorder of Raleigh, are anxious to see what this week's edition to see what the Recorder will do about the recent communication of Dean N. Y. Guiley of the Wake Forest law school who takes the editor of the religious organ to ride for what the dean regards pretty raw comments on state politics.

The editor happens to be Dr. George W. Paschal, who is a member of the Wake Forest faculty charged with the duty of voting at the college and of writing for the denominational paper. In recent issues Dr. Paschal has written strong condemnation of Governor Ehringhaus. Later the editor gave handsome endorsement to the gubernatorial candidacy of Dr. Ralph W. McDonald. This brought Dr. Guiley to a contribution asking how far religious papers speaking for their denomination should go in discussing political affairs.

Dr. Guiley did not support Governor Ehringhaus, but the professor looks back and finds his excellency strong and courageous under pressure. The law teacher thinks the governor was correct in refusing to summon the general assembly back to Raleigh in special session. As a lawyer Dr. Guiley agrees with the governor that the proposed enactments would have been futile. Reviewing all the governors Dr. Guiley finds that Ehringhaus rates well with the best of them and the dean thinks he is entitled to the confidence of the state.

Dr. Paschal's editorship of the Recorder is purely an incident to his professional work. But the Greek teacher always has found himself on one or the other sides in these political controversies. In the old days he always had voted against Senator Simmons when that gentleman was in controversy. The doctor appears now to be getting along handsomely with the senator whom Dr. Guiley often has opposed with vehemence.

CHANGE ASKED PRIMARY DAYS

Politicians Do Not React Badly to Suggested Move

Reflector Bureau, Str. Walter Hotel. Raleigh, July 14.—Politicians visiting Raleigh since Saturday of last week do not react unfavorably to the suggestion of the North Carolina Press Association that primary elections be changed from Saturday to Tuesday and that the hours for the summer poll be changed to conform to the regular election days. The newspapers have advocated mildly this change, but made no fight for it. And there is a depressed objection to the change among some of the present day editors. However, the increasing number of accusations against the election officials, emphasizes one point that has been neglected—the opportunity for fraud permitted by the loss of one full day, Sunday. There is an invitation to tampering with boxes which are allowed to "lie in state" on Sundays. The newspapers also lose their opportunity to get the news quickly and accurately. Sunday adds little to the news and takes little from it. The Saturday night reports wind up things until Monday, usually. If there should be a change in hours so that summer and winter voting would be the same, there would be a premium on speed and all the weekly papers would share in printing the news while it is news.

Incidentally many of the politicians agree with the newspaper men that closing the polls earlier in June would also lessen the opportunity to commit frauds and would have a good effect upon those insurgents who feel that the primary laws are too loose for the public good. The newspapers are going to conduct a campaign for this change and expect to carry before the 1937 general assembly a memorial that will quickly result in the enactment of these amendments to the election laws. There does not appear to be any good reason for having an election day of 14 hours in June and only 10 hours in November.

Mining records of Japan go back to 500 A.D. when the first oil was produced in Echigo prefecture and presented to the government. Only 68 of the 170 members of the 1936 session of the North Carolina general assembly have had previous legislative experience.

Official estimates place the 1934 income of North Carolina farmers at $120,000,000 more than that of 1933. The "Old Anson Road," a highway built by Lord Cornwallis during the Revolutionary war, can still be seen in Chatham county, North Carolina.
