DROUGHT LEFT BILL OF SOME $200,000,000

Ultimate Effect of Dry Spell As Yet Undetermined

SOME SECTIONS MAY BE AIDED

Price Movement Due to Short Crops Seen as Possible Boost to Some Sections

Atlanta, Ga., July 22.—(AP)—Drought left a bill for some $200,000,000 on southern farmers' doorsteps before it was routed by rains in the past fortnight, agriculture officials estimated today. But they could not estimate the ultimate effect of Dixie's 1936 farm income.

Lack of accurate data on crops actually destroyed, uncertainty still surrounding maturing growths, price movements and other factors all made it impossible to determine the net losses, but increased prices were expected to help offset some of the damage.

Some sections were expected to slide to prosperity unknown in recent years on their crops and weather-bred prices. Other sections within a relatively few miles may find thousands of farmers depending on relief through summer and winter.

Agriculture officials in Georgia and North Carolina stuck to roughly figured damage tolls of $50,000,000 for each state, but would make no comparative estimates on total farm income.

Agriculture commissioner O. E. Van Cleave said Tennessee's damage would not quite reach a previously set toll of $50,000,000.

South Carolina authorities said prospects there were for no more than 50 per cent feed crops and 30 per cent food crops, with 40,000 farm families needing relief.

July 1 estimates of $30,000,000 damage in Alabama wouldn't hold now, but none could say what the net loss was since recent rains.

Virginia authorities expected a drop in farm income of some $7,000,000 to $10,000,000.

Louisiana officials were hopeful of good sugar cane and cotton crops and Mississippi saw the possibility of a "one-hundred-million dollar" cotton yield, best in years.

Pitt School Board To Meet Thursday Set Opening Date

All Persons Not in Favor Beginning 1936-37 Term on September 1 Asked Submit Opposition

The Pitt County Board of Education will meet here Thursday with the selection of an opening date for schools this fall one of the chief matters to claim the attention of the members.

It was announced that tentative plans called for beginning the 1936-37 term on September 1, and only persons opposed to the plan were asked to submit their opposition in writing to the offices of the Board before the date of the scheduled session.

D. H. Conley, superintendent of the County school system, said there were three main reasons for desiring to open schools on the first of September this year, a week or so earlier than has been the custom in the past. He said it would enable a half year's work to be completed before the Christmas holidays; would not put the schools so late in closing next spring in case they have to shut down during the winter on account of bad weather; and would give children who do not have adequate clothing a chance to go to school a longer period during warm weather.

SHERIFF CASTS DOUBT ON WOLLNER'S ALIBI

Castings doubt on the alibi offered by Mark Wollner, concert violinist questioned in the slaying of Helen Clevenger at Asheville, N. C. Sheriff Lawrence Brown said he had eight witnesses disputing it. Wollner said he spent the night of the murder at the family home, (right below) of Mildred Ward, where he stayed. Miss Ward (left below) supported the alibi. The two women at upper left, however, offered contradictory evidence. Miss Lavada Whitaker (left) said she saw Wollner arrive here at 6:30 a. m., and Mrs. Roy Bailey (right) said she saw him leave the house a few hours later. Charles English (upper right), a waiter, said Wollner came into the cafe in which he works at 6 a. m. following the night of the slaying. (Associated Press Photos)

RECOVER BODY MISSING MAN

Sam Coward of Near Vanceboro Found Dead Near Home

The body of Sam Coward, 80-year-old resident of near Vanceboro, was found today in a cleared section surrounded by woods. The man had been missing since Tuesday, July 14, when he left his home to visit a neighbor.

No evidence of foul play was found and it is believed the man probably suffered a stroke of paralysis or a heart attack.

The aged man had been living with his son, Bob Coward. The body was found about three and one-half miles from the home place. In order to reach the home of the neighbor whom he started out to visit, Mr. Coward had to pass through a wooded stretch. It was indicated from the position when he was found that the man got lost and wandered into another stretch of woods, and was unable to reach either his home or that of neighbors.

Residents of the vicinity had been aided in the search for the man by members of a nearby Civilian Corps camp. The body was found about noon by Earl Taylor and other neighbors who were aiding in the search.

Interment was made in the family cemetery at Littlefield this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Surviving are four sons, Bob, John, Heber and Sam Coward; two daughters, Mrs. John Smith, Mrs. Tom Sutton; one brother, William, all of whom live near the home place.

The plaintiff alleges that he was jailed and denied bond or legal aid without proper course of law and is asking for $5,000 actual and $5,000 punitive damages.

Heaviest Loss Felt in Hassel and Bethel Sections

Between 300 and 400 acres of tobacco and cotton were destroyed by a hail storm yesterday afternoon between Hassel and Bethel, R. H. Salisbury, Hassel merchant and farmer, reported today.

It was estimated that at least 200 acres of tobacco was completely destroyed by the storm. A section four or five miles long was hit by the worst of the storm, Mr. Salisbury reported over long distance telephone today.

He said that the section was visited by strong winds, but added little damage was caused by this, however, said a number of tobacco barns and trees were blown down near Bethel.

Mr. Salisbury listed the following land-owners as among those who suffered complete or partial losses to their crops: D. R. Edmundson, Ed Purvis, W. R. L. Purvis, Howard Keel, W. E. White, Joe Keel, W. L. Dowdy, R. P. Chance, N. C. Everette, H. L. Everette, Dr. Nelson, John Carson, George Johnson, J. W. Eubanks and John Staten.

While the storm did not strike the city of Greenville, it was evident that it was nearby.

H. L. Andrews, county tax collector, reported today he witnessed much damage wrought by the storm. He said the farms of F. L. Andrews and D. L. Baker in the Bethel community suffered heavy losses. A number of tobacco barns were blown down and trees were uprooted in the section, he declared.

According to various reports reaching the city, it appeared that the storm struck near Bethel and then jumped to the Hassel community before doing much more damage.

Judge F. M. Wooten, who was traveling in the vicinity of Bethel brought back reports of the storm. On his way from Bethel to Wilkesboro.

SECOND SIEGE OF HEAT SEEN

New Torrid Wave Is Predicted for Much of Corn Belt

Chicago, July 22.—(AP)—A new heat wave with temperatures from 100 to 105 degrees will spread over the corn belt tomorrow, Government meteorologist J. R. Lloyd predicted today.

Lloyd said the hundred mark would be exceeded in Kansas, Nebraska, Western Iowa and Northwestern Missouri. States to the east, he said, could expect the mercury to climb to the lower and middle 90's.

It was warning up today in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Southern Nebraska, Illinois, Indiana, and lower Michigan, he said.

There were no showers in sight for any of the North-central states except in Michigan and the area immediately around the great lakes, said Lloyd.

A cool wave from the North will bring lower temperatures tomorrow to the Northern tier of central states, the forecaster said.

Lloyd added that the great Northwestern drought area had little respite from the heat and aridity.

Ankara, Turkey (AP)—More than a thousand white Russian families exiled since the Soviet revolution have now been granted Turkish citizenship through intervention by the Nansen international office for refugees, set up by the League of Nations. A hundred others, however, have been designated "undesirables" and asked to leave Turkey as soon as possible.

Jane Darwell, the character actress, has had a movie role.

SHERIFF SAYS SPOTLIGHT ON HOTEL WORKER

Asheville Hotel Slaying Continues To Baffle Officers

BREAK EXPECTED AT ANY MOMENT

Chief Investigator Declares He Thinks Witness Is Getting Ready to Talk

Asheville, July 22.—(AP)—The spotlight in the baffling Clevenger murder case shifted suddenly today to Daniel Gaddy, the 28-year-old night watchman at the fashionable hotel where the girl was slain.

Sheriff Lawrence E. Brown, who hinted he is about ready to "crack" the mysterious slaying of the blonde New York university co-ed, Helen Clevenger, said "Gaddy is the key to the whole case."

"When Gaddy talks," the sheriff said, "we will know something and I think he is getting ready to talk pretty soon."

The sheriff, chief investigator of the murder case, reiterated an earlier belief that Gaddy had no direct connection with the crime, but said that the watchman might have "forgotten some of the things that happened at the hotel that night."

Gaddy is one of the five persons the sheriff has taken into custody and ordered held incommunicado for questioning since the pretty 18-year-old girl was found slain in her room Thursday morning.

None of the five faces a formal charge.

Gaddy is one of three of the hotel's employes detained. The others are Edward Fleming, bellboy, and L. D. Roddy, elevator operator, both negroes.

The sheriff or his deputies questioned all the five prisoners last night.

He did not, however, disclose the nature of his questioning nor what, if anything, he learned.

The others held in the case are Mark Wollner, 35-year-old violinist, and Mildred Ward, 19, daughter of his landlady.

Mrs. Nannie Barnhill Rites Here Tomorrow

The body is expected to arrive in this city tonight and will remain at the funeral home until the funeral. Brief services were held in Charleston this morning, immediately after which the cortege left for Greenville.

Unable Guarantee Safety For Americans In Spain

Officials Two Cities Advise American Representatives

Washington, July 22.—(AP)—Officials of two Spanish cities have advised American consular representatives that they cannot guarantee safety of Americans and other foreigners.

This word was received by the State Department shortly after Secretary Hull, at a press conference had indicated a possibility that the generally uncertain European situation might impel the United States to establish a naval squadron in foreign waters.

The first of two American warships which have been dispatched to Spanish waters to pick up United States citizens can not reach its destination at Gibraltar before Friday, officials said. Preparations are being rushed for the other to depart tomorrow from Cherbourg, France, for Bilbao on the northern coast of Spain, near strife-torn San Sebastian, summer home of American ambassador Claude G. Bowers.

Consul Lynn W. Franklin reported to the American embassy at Madrid from Barcelona that he had been informed by the president of the Catalan government of which Barcelona is the capital that the Spanish revolution made it impossible for him to give any assurance for the safety of Americans and other foreigners in the city.

Reporting directly to the state department consul George M. Graves at Malaga said the civil governor there had acknowledged his inability to extend effective protection to foreign nationals.

Both men reported that so far they had received no information of any harm having befallen Americans in Barcelona or Malaga.

County Home Canning Winter Food Supply

When the winter months arrive the Pitt county home will be found with enough canned goods to go a long way in providing food for its inmates.

Up to last Saturday night 1,064 cans of vegetables had been put up for use at the home. They included: beets, 253; squash, 461; corn, 330; and tomatoes, 30.

MORE REPORTS OF UPRISINGS

With About 1,000 Deaths Accounted For in Official Estimates, Struggle Appears to Be Developing Into Battle Between Fascists And Marxists. With Latter Predicting Victory Despite Reports of New Outbreaks

(Copyright by Associated Press) Madrid, July 22.—(AP)—Extreme reports were reliably reported to have constituted a "red committee" for Madrid today as the leftist government moved field guns to the outskirts of the capital to bar the way against a rebel advance.

With official estimates showing about 1,000 persons killed during the five days of fighting between rebellious Rightists and Leftist supporters of the government, the struggle appeared to observers to be developing into a battle for supremacy between Fascists and Marxists.

The latter predicted victory, although new uprisings were reported.

Shortly before noon the government issued a statement that it had crushed uprisings in Barcelona, Gijon, the Balearic Islands, Almeria, Malaga, El Pardo and Madrid.

Meanwhile, radio stations seized by the rebels denied official reports that the rebels had been defeated in Barcelona and in other cities.

(The function of the red committee was not immediately explained. It was assumed by observers familiar with the situation in Spain, however, that the committee was formed to take over the power of the government should the present regime collapse.)

The government announced it was waging a fight to the finish against "three rebellious strongholds, mainly Seville, Valladolid and Zaragoza."

It said that the "monarchy of the Republic" were still holding out at these points, although "their defeat is imminent."

Suspended Officer Is Defense Witness In Kidnaping Case

Estimated Policeman Denies That He Received $25,000 of the $100,000 Hamm Kidnaping Money

St. Paul, Minn., July 22.—(AP)—Tom Brown, suspended St. Paul police officer and a former chief of the police, denied from the witness stand in Federal court today that he received $25,000 of the $100,000 William Hamm, Jr., ransom money.

He testified as a defense witness in the trial of John (Jack) Peller, former night club operator, on kidnaping conspiracy charges.

Brown denied previous testimony that he told Tom Dahl, former chief of police, who was an earlier government witness, that "the people at 294 Vernon avenue had no connection with the Hamm kidnaping" after he made an investigation.

Byron Bolton, principal government witness, had related on the stand last week that $25,000 was set aside for Brown and $10,000 for Peller.

FIVE CHARGED LEGION DEATH

Defendants Stand Mute While Arraigned in Court

Detroit, July 22.—(AP)—Five men charged with killing a negro world war veteran "just for fun" during a Black Legion drinking party a year ago, stood mute today at their arraignment on murder and kidnap charges.

Pleas of innocence were entered for the five and all were held without bail for examination July 28.

The first almost incredible account of the shooting of the negro came from Dayton Dean, confessor of Black Legion deeds of violence.

Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea said last night, however, he had obtained a corroborating statement from one of the men Dean named.

That statement, the prosecutor said, came from James Roy Lorraine, and like Dean's account named Harvey Davis, the reputed Black Legion "colony," John Bannerman, Ervin D. Lee and Charles House as the other persons present when Silas Coleman, world war veteran, was shot to death in a marsh near Pinckney, Michigan.

THE NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

News Behind The News

Washington By IRA BENNETT

MARITIME: At the last session of the recent session of Congress President Roosevelt gave the war to tired and befuddled House members that the shipping bill must pass. This bill had been the subject of so much pulling and hauling by genuine supporters of private owned and operated ships versus government ownership enthusiasts that most members thought the bill was to go over. Hearing the White House "must," they put it through without knowing what was in it, and caring less.

It's a good law—that is, if administered properly. But it also opens the way to government ownership operation of the merchant marine if any President so desires. Upon the choice of members of the new United States Maritime Commission hangs the fate of the merchant marine.

PRACTICABLE: This commission takes over all authority over American shipping, broadly speaking. It consists of five members. The President appoints them and names the chairman. They must be men who have had no pecuniary interest in shipping for at least three years. They must be appointed with "due regard for their special fitness" and not more than

ALL CONTESTS RAINED OUT IN COASTAL LOOP

Greenies Meet Snow Hill Here Today; Martins in First Position, Locals Next and Ayden Third

Rain blocked all contests in the Coastal Plain League yesterday, but a game will be played at the Third street stadium here—if it doesn't rain this afternoon.

The local baseball aggregation went to Snow Hill yesterday afternoon with the intentions of pulling a winner, but old man weather intervened.

A win by the local baseballers against Snow Hill this afternoon and a loss by the Williamston Martins would give the locals their former top rung in Coastal Plain League standings. However, the Martins are up against the Kinston Eagles—who sometimes hand opposing teams a fast one. The Greenies haven't gotten over the shave given them by the Eagles in their last contest, although the local nine was victorious—by one run.

The Greenies have more games with the Williamston Martins this week than any other team in the Coastal Plain League.

The next home game of the week comes off Friday, at which time the Greenies battle the league leading Williamston Martins—if they remain leaders until then.

William Howes, No. 2 Mail Man, Rates High As 'Trouble Shooter'

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE (Associated Press Staff Writer) Washington, July 17—(AP)—Rund William W. Howes, first assistant postmaster general, is a soft-speaking, eas-moving lawyer-politician rated high in administration circles as a level-headed executive and a sagacious political adviser.

No. 2 man in "the world's largest business establishment," he saw the spotlight turned full on him by reports that his chief, James A. Farley, would step from the cabinet to concentrate solely on the Roosevelt reelection campaign.

As vice chairman of the Democratic national committee, Howes was Farley's right-hand man during the last three months of the Roosevelt campaign in 1932. As first assistant postmaster general since early in 1934, he has been Farley's right-hand man and "trouble shooter" in the postoffice department.

Big Administrative Job

The publicity given the tremendous political power wielded by a postmaster general often has tended to overshadow the business aspects of the job.

Today a postmaster general directs a network of 46,000 postoffices and mail routes covering more than 500,000 miles. He heads the railway mail, ocean mail and air mail services, the first of these alone distributing and redistributing some 15 billion pieces of mail yearly.

Although he has been in the post office business only three and a half years, Howes is said to have played an important role in determining departmental policies.

Traveling in railway mail cars, he associated with the crew to learn their problems. He has ridden with the air mail on virtually every route in the country and numbers many pilots among his friends.

Asks For Suggestions

He has met thousands of postal employees and has invited them to suggest ways of improving the service, from the standpoint of both their own and the public's welfare. He has an apparently genuine liking for people, enjoys going to dances, baseball and football games and horse races.

His favorite avocation is public speaking. He has addressed hundreds of gatherings, including graduating classes, Fourth of July celebrations, political meetings and conventions of letter carriers.

Howes, 49, has been a Democratic wheelhorse in South Dakota, once predominantly Republican, since his election to the state senate in 1918. He was a candidate for governor in 1920, became state chairman of his party in 1922 and was elected to the Democratic national committee in 1924. He was reelected in 1928, 1932 and again at the Philadelphia convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Howes maintain a residence in Huron, their home city in South Dakota. They have one daughter, Mary Senate, who is a capital debutante recently graduated from National Park seminary.

William W. Howes, first assistant postmaster general, is second-in-command of "the world's largest business."

Horses For America.
London (AP)—Twenty-three thoroughbred horses of the 'Suffolk punch' breed have been purchased by Harry Linn of Des Moines, Ia., and shipped to New York. This is the first shipment of its kind to the United States in nearly twenty-five years. "These horses will be used principally for farm work in America and also for breeding purposes," said Linn.

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

SPORT SLANTS

Interest in the National League pennant race does not stop with the torrid battle of first place being waged between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Chicago Cubs. The remarkable improvement of clubs like the Cincinnati Reds and the Boston Bees cannot be overlooked.

The Bees have made a remarkable recovery from the form they showed in the race last year. They have already won more games this season than they did in the entire 1935 campaign. Not only that, but Manager Bill McKee's charges have been moving at close to a 500 clip, and that is not to be sneezed at by a team which a year ago was firmly entrenched in the cellar and was destined to set a new modern record for games lost in a single season. In 1935 the Bees won only 38 games. Now McKee's team is going around predicting they'll win twice as many this year.

The general keeper of the Bees has set the first division as his goal this year. His self-appointed task is anything but impossible the way his team has been hustling of late. The boys have been overcoming leads and bearing down so hard in crucial spots that their opponents have been forced to give ground. Their starting pitchers have been nothing to boast about—but the relief corps has not failed.

Jordan's Singles Help

It took the Bees two games beyond mid-season to tie the number of wins the Braves of 1935 turned in. Outside of the first two weeks of the present campaign the Boston club has played better than 500 ball. They dropped eight of their first 11 games but won 35 of the next 68 played.

Baxter Jordan's consistent batting has been one of the factors responsible for the Bees' new-found success. The lanky first-baseman is right up with the league leaders in grinding out hits and boasts an average of about .350. The timely hitting and steady fielding of Joe Cozart has given impetus to the team's spurt. The addition of Ray Mueller, rushed from Knoxville, to the catching staff, has proved a big help.

Rabbit Warstler has helped fill in the shortstop hole created when Bill Urbanski bruised his finger. The enforced rest won't do Bill any harm—he can stand a little vacation. Meanwhile, Warstler looked good against Cincinnati. Ben Cantwell's steady relief work has saved a number of games for the Bees.

Keeps Batting Eye

They say the last thing a real hitter loses is his batting eye. There must be something to this for old Rags Stephenson, former slugging outfielder of the Chicago Cubs, is still pounding the cover off the ball in the Southern Association. If it were not for the fact that he had showed up in the field "Old Hoss" would very likely be wielding his big bat in the majors.

Rags is playing-manager of the Birmingham Barons now and boasts an average of close to .360. This mind you, despite a "very poor start due to an early season illness since he has regained his health he has made life miserable for Southern association pitchers. Batting in cleanup position, he has been an inspiration to his teammates. If he is able to play out the season he is certain to give Freddie Simpson, the Chattanooga Lookouts' league-leading slugger, a close run for top batting honors.

At 42, Clarence Mitchell, former major league spitball pitcher, still goes merrily on his way twirling—and winning, ball games. Clarence

Tea For Mrs. Buchanan

One of the most attractive of the many social affairs of the summer was on yesterday afternoon when Miss Lelia Higgs and Mrs. Louis B. Thornton were hostesses at a lovely tea honoring their sister, Mrs. Lionel Meredith Buchanan, who recently married. Receiving guests at the front door and inviting them into the hall, beautifully decorated in red gladioli, were Mrs. Charles W. Howard and Mrs. Novella Moye Williams.

Mrs. J. H. Rose introduced guests to the receiving line, composed of Mrs. E. B. Higgs, Miss Lelia Higgs, Mrs. Louis B. Thornton, Mrs. Lionel Meredith Buchanan, Mrs. A. C. Liverman of Scotland Neck, Miss Geneva Benthale of Woodland, whose engagement to be married to James S. Liverman of Scotland Neck was recently announced. The receiving line stood in the library where masses of rich yellow summer flowers against a background of brown and putty were used.

Miss Annie Shields VahDyke and Mrs. William Tyson received in the living room where Miss Elizabeth Smith introduced guests to a second receiving line which stood against a background of lavender and pink dahlias and phlox.

In the line were Mrs. Joseph Whitehead of Washington; Mrs. H. H. Duncanson, Mrs. Vann Stator, Jr., and Miss Agnes Waddington. In the gift room were the lovely gifts were displayed were Mrs. M. B. Massey and Mrs. Burke Stancil, Mrs. P. L. Goodson and Mrs. C. W. Hearne received in the rear hall, where Mrs. Helene Kirkpatrick and Mrs. E. W. Griffin registered the several hundred callers.

Mrs. Herbert ReBarker and Mrs. James Johnston directed guests to the dining room. This room was especially pretty, with tea rose gladioli and delphinium. From the attractively appointed table with its exquisite center piece, Mrs. Preston Tyson of Wilson, and Mrs. E. L. Henderson served an ice course. They were assisted in serving by Miss Mary Dorcas Harding of Wilson, Miss Florence Pittman of Scotland Neck, Miss Gladys Best Tripp of Ayden, Miss Francis Spillman and Miss Florence Moye.

In the music room, Mrs. Curtis Perkins, Mrs. George Hadley, Mrs. J. H. Waldrop and Mrs. M. K. Blount served punch. Yellow and white dahlias were used in this room.

Good byes were said by Mrs. Jesse Moye and Mrs. Carl Adams.

STEEPLE YIELDS OLD COINS. TO ENRICH GERMAN HAMLET

Rebersheim, Germany, (AP)—Repairs to the church steeple of this old Franconian village disclosed that the ball below the weather vane contained historical documents and some coins, some dating back nearly 300 years.

Of special interest to numismatists were medals struck to commemorate the "hunger years" 1771 to 1773, on which the then current prices for bread, corn and meat are recorded.

Pastor Stark of the village hopes to arouse the interest of coin collectors in the treasure trove, as the village is a poor one.

SPOTLIGHT ON STATES' RACES

Local Campaigns Claiming Attention Major Parties

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of the Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Special measures to buttress the Democratic ticket in New York and Michigan serve as a reminder that state as well as national politics is having its field day in 1936.

Thirty-six of the 48 states choose governors. Elections to state legislatures and to local office are legion. One-third of the states will vote for United States senator, and a representative in congress is to be selected in every congressional district.

While, for understandable reasons, popular interest focuses chiefly on the presidential campaign, there are reasons why the politicians are deeply interested in all classes of local political battles.

Because the national house of representatives is the point of origin of "money" bills—measures dealing with taxation and spending—it is a matter of more than ordinary interest just now whether the nominee who is elected President shall have a house of his own political faith.

An extraordinary situation also exists, from the Democratic viewpoint, in the purely state elections. Many of the Roosevelt policies depend on a measure of state cooperation. Naturally the Democratic national administration is interested in having as many Democratic state administrations as possible.

No one doubts, of course, that the presidential campaign was the thing foremost in the minds of the Roosevelt managers when they persuaded Governor Lehman to run again in New York, and Frank Murphy to become a candidate for governor in Michigan.

There was no secret that the Roosevelt men felt that the names of Lehman and Murphy on the ticket would help to attract strength to the Democratic emblem, and that the President's reelection chances would benefit thereby.

But, unquestionably, less-talked-of considerations also entered into the picture. One of them was the desirability of having Democrats in as governors of important states should Mr. Roosevelt be reelected. Another was the hope that Lehman and Murphy would help to pull through some additional Democratic candidates for congress.

Besides all of this, there was the purely party view. No party which hopes to remain in power at Washington can afford to neglect the constant building up of its state organization. Even in national defeat, the survival of strong state organizations is an insurance of hope for the future.

There can be no question that, correctly or not, the national Democratic leaders believed that Lehman in New York and Murphy in Michigan offered the best possibilities for solidifying party strength in their respective states.

For special reasons, New York and Michigan furnish the most prominent examples of this sort of political dovetailing, but they by no means stand alone. One lesser instance is Nebraska, where unusual measure have been taken to induce George W. Norris to stand for reelection to the senate.

By and large, however, the senatorial situation will figure less in the 1936 campaign than it usually does in presidential years. The explanation is that the Republicans have no outside hope of capturing a senate majority.

Only one-third of the senators come up at a time, and the Democratic preponderance among the hold-overs is so great that even if every Republican senatorial candidate running this year were elected, the senate still would remain Democratic. The best Republican managers can do is whittle down the opposition as much as possible as a help in future years.

It is with respect to the house and the governors, aside from the presidential contest itself, that the campaigning will be heaviest. And especially with respect to the house.

CHINESE MONOPOLY ON ANTIMONY LOST; TEXAS PLANT BUSY

Laredo, Tex. (AP)—The only antimony smelter on the western largest in the world is in operation here, making mostly ore from Mexico, but with some from western United States, Bolivia and Peru.

Before the smelter was established in 1931, the world depended on China for 70 to 90 per cent of its antimony needs.

Antimony, used chiefly as an alloy to give strength to type metal, also is used in machinery bearings, storage battery plates and electric cable sheathings.

H. P. Henderson, native of Massachusetts, conceived the idea of smelting antimony here in 1929. About 170 men are employed at the plant now.

WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By PRESTON GROVER

Washington — Opinion is divided in Washington on how reports of improvement in business will affect the two parties.

Some Republicans — and others — have been wondering whether evidence of approaching good times will cause many voters to frown upon anything which might disturb it, such as a drive against "economic royalists."

From the very beginning, Democratic spokesmen have attributed the rise out of the depression largely to administration agencies, even some of those which operated only for a time before they were thrown out by the courts, such as NRA.

They argue further, that improvement started by such agencies might be jeopardized by a change of policy — i.e., election of a Republican administration.

Headlines Tell Improvement

But the other giant has been taken by those speculating on the effect of two lines of anti-New Deal attack. One line of attack has been employed by many Republicans in calling the Roosevelt tendency "radical." Another has been somewhat indirect, through defense of industry and business policies under fire by the New Deal.

A half dozen headlines from a single financial page of a newspaper attest to improved conditions, whatever the cause.

American Telephone and Telegraph company reports 651,000 more telephones in service than a year ago, a 28,000 increase within a month.

Result Still Disputed

Hardware sales continued "unexpectedly better," during the early summer weeks. "Building mounts sharply in south," says another headline. The market value of stocks on the New York exchange climbed nearly a billion dollars during June to $50,912,398,000, compared to $36,227,069,000 a year ago.

Which party will get the benefit of stocks on the New York exchange climbed nearly a billion dollars during June to $50,912,398,000, compared to $36,227,069,000 a year ago.

Certainly both parties dispute the point. Democrats contend improvement began from dead bottom March 4, 1933, because of President Roosevelt's radiant confidence. Republicans began early to pro-

HAIL DAMAGE TOBACCO IN PITT AND MARTIN COUNTIES

Hampton Judge Wooten encountered much of the storm. He said an area about one-half mile in length was completely wrecked, tobacco, cotton and corn being destroyed. He was unable to say how wide the stretch was.

Heavy rains were reported at Robersonville and also at Williams. Much hail also fell in the two places, but Judge Wooten said he did not see much damage caused by wind.

A traveling salesman reaching the city late yesterday afternoon said he saw a black cloud and heard a roar like a tornado, but encountered nothing more than strong winds, hail and rain.

EDGEcombe COUNTY HIT BY HEAVY CLOUDBURST

Tarboro, July 22.—A cloudburst accompanied by lashing winds did much damage to property, flooding homes, and stores and uprooting many trees here yesterday afternoon.

Telephone and power lines went down in many sections of the city but no immediate estimate of the damage could be obtained. City authorities blocked off sections where wires were down to prevent accidents.

The storm, which struck at 3 o'clock and lasted about 15 minutes, was accompanied by hailstones, some of which were three quarters of an inch in diameter. A hurried checkup surrounding sections, water rose to a depth of four feet in the streets in several parts of town, stalling a number of automobiles. Several downtown stores had water several inches deep on their floors during the downpour as storm drains failed to carry off the water.

The storm was ushered in by lightning and deafening thunder. One farmer, James Ruffin, reported that four mules and a horse were killed by lightning.

They may be appointed from the political party. This commission has power to promote or retard the national welfare in two vitally important branches - national defense and commerce.

PROBLEMS: Two diametrically opposed philosophies collided in the making of the merchant marine law. The collision resulted in compromise, as usual. It is embodied in the words "insofar as is practicable."

RESOURCES: About 80 per cent of the American merchant marine consists of pre-war ships averaging 10 knots an hour and costing to operate. They are trying to compete with foreign post-war vessels.

There are 1,800,000 tons of government-owned ships. At least 250,000 tons of new ships in this category should be built annually during the next six years. There are 30,000 tons of ships not receiving federal aid, and 2,300,000 tons of private.

The modern government aided at the rate of 250,000 tons a year for six years would cost $60,000,000 a year. To modernize the American merchant marine (tonnage fleet) at the rate of 1,000,000 tons a year for six years would cost $240,000,000 annually.

SPECIFIED: The Maritime Commission can build up the merchant marine, under the new act, in two ways: First, by granting construction differential subsidies to offset higher foreign construction, and second, by building ships and chartering them to private concerns, on terms that will give American concerns a competitive advantage in the overseas trade.

MURDER TONIGHT BY LAURENCE W. MEYNELL

Chapter 25 ADVICE TO DALE

HYLTON nodded and rose to his feet.

"Don't forget you're still under suspicion; if your story doesn't check up you're in trouble. Oh and by the way," he turned at the door to add his last words, "I suppose it has never entered your head to let a decent girl get hold of you and try to make something worth while out of you, has it?"

"What'd you mean?" asked Dale.

"If any girl had done for me what Miss Featherstone did for you today, Shipley, I'd go down on my knees to thank her; but you're so damned egotistical you're blind."

Hylton slammed the door behind him and left a surprised and crestfallen young man in the drawing room.

Nancy was waiting in the hall.

"Mr. Hylton," she said quickly, as he came towards her, "I want to apologize for what I did. Please don't think I'm running away from it, I'm only speaking personally now."

"Miss Featherstone," he said gently, "I've been cursed with a most curious memory. Do you know, I am beginning to think that I can forget all about what happened today—on one condition."

but there was a look about her, something wild and frightened and yet horribly triumphant in her eyes. He was just about to ask the woman what she wanted when she shook her head. She said nothing, but simply moved her eyes in the direction of the man who had just left the room, and back again to the Inspector nodding twice quickly; then she dropped her detaining fingers from his arm and noiselessly moved into the centre of the kitchen.

Hylton hesitated for a moment and then followed the Sergeant.

"I suppose you hung round the Hoops most of the day," he said after he had lit a cigar and made himself comfortable.

"A good part of it. I naturally didn't want to miss you."

"My fault entirely—as a matter of fact I had quite a peculiar day. I was up at Fielden Cottage early this morning and the first things I discovered there was that young Shipley had done a bolt."

JAMES WHITE seemed interested for the first time that evening. "Mr. Shipley bolted?" he asked.

"Whatever for?"

"Curiously enough, Sergeant, that's the very question I asked myself. Do you know anything of Miss Frances Lawson?"

"The Lodge-keeper's daughter?"

"I think you are a frightfully good sort."

"On one condition?"

"Yes. That you go, now, into that room, and tell Dale Shipley what you did and why you did it."

Nancy Featherstone stared at him; then she turned from white to brick red. At length she managed to blurt out:

"I—I think you are a frightfully good sort."

Kingsley Hylton smiled and went towards the front door.

"GOOD evening, Inspector."

Even in his own mentally agitated state, it was on the tip of Hylton's tongue to cry out "Good Lord, what's the matter with your wife?"

Alice White was standing in a corner of the room, poker-straight against the wall and looking as white as death.

"I went to the Hoops as you told me," Sergeant White said.

"Yes—I say, I'm sorry I wasn't there, as a matter of fact I've had rather an extraordinary day."

"Yes!"

The man's voice was so entirely wooden and uninterested that Hylton glanced up sharply.

"I say," he laughed, "I'm afraid I have interrupted tea. I'm sorry."

"That's all right, sir."

A long thin knife on the table caught Hylton's attention. He picked it up and said, "That's a useful looking sort of knife, Sergeant."

"Perhaps we better go into the office," White suggested.

"Right-o, let's. There are half a dozen things I want to talk about—"

He looked up with one of his quick smiles at the woman who had not yet said a word; she nodded, and when the two men moved across the room she followed them.

White led the way, and the Inspector was half through the doorway following him when "something plucked at his arm."

He turned to find Alice White standing there. She said nothing.

From what I can hear of her she's like the rest of women, take up with any man she can get hold of."

Hylton gave a full account of Dale Shipley's story, to which White paid so little attention that the Inspector was moved to break off and enquire rather sharply, "You listening, Sergeant?"

"Yes, I'm listening."

"And you think it likely or not?"

"Very likely I should think. Besides if Shipley cut and run because of this murder business he would hardly stroll back a day later, would he?"

Hylton was forced to admit the force of this. "Not unless he's very deep," he said. "I went straight to the Lodge and was lucky enough to catch Miss Frances alone. She came clean, and I must say her yarn fitted in in every detail with young Shipley's."

"Then it looks all right."

"It looks all right, certainly; but if Dale Shipley didn't do it—"

"I don't think Dale Shipley did the murder, Inspector."

"You've said that before, White. But if Shipley didn't do it, who the devil did?"

Any answer was forestalled by the shrill insistence of the telephone bell.

"The super at Morechester wants a word with you, sir," White said, handing the instrument over.

"Damn," Hylton said fervently, replacing the instrument after a moment. "They want me to go over to Morechester—started some hare-brained theory, I suppose, but I shall have to go; they're sending a car to the Hoops."

Sergeant White shut the door after the departing Hylton and went slowly into the kitchen.

He found it as he expected to find it—empty.

(Copyright, 1936, Laurence W. Meynell)

Hylton walks in the dark, tomorrow—and finds a man hanging.

An opportunity to address it personally. So he used the good offices of Gerald Smith—a gentleman with an eye to the main chance—to wangle a speaking invitation for himself. Once in Cleveland he put over a high pressure sales talk on Dr. Townsend and won the latter's personal acquiescence for the Lenka combine. Sources in a position to know say that the Doctor was more than a trifle bewildered by the rapid-fire tactics of the radio priest and his ally Smith; and was almost literally swept off his feet.

TENUOUS: Townsend did, however, retain the presence of mind to impose the condition that there should be no merger of his organization with the National Union for Social Justice. That's why Townsend called it his "happy privilege" to announce that each of the three participating groups would retain their own identity.

The "alliance" so suddenly and picturesquely cemented is a very tenuous affair—subject to equally sudden disintegration. There is ample evidence in the background of all three of the leaders to indicate that they are always ready to reverse their positions in a split second if they think it serves their interests to do so.

Both Coughlin and Townsend face internal instructions in their own houses. Coughlin will ignore or excommunicate his rebels. Townsend will have to temporize with his. Smith has no following worth mentioning. Many Townsendites are suspicious of Smith's quiet penetration of their inner councils.

SCATTERED: Leaders of the motor industry are taking the Lewis unionization drive far more calmly than their associates in steel and rubber. They know that union agents are busy among their workers. But the agents haven't made much progress and the management are confident they won't.

For one thing, they feel that they have been more progressive in labor relations than the other industries currently under union fire—and that their employees appreciate this. They have tried to pursue a policy of enlightened self-interest in raising wages. They have usually been willing to talk things over with their workers' representatives. Also they pride themselves that their labor has an unusually high average of intelligence, initiative and stability, and is therefore more likely to resist the blandishments of "outside agitators."

One other factor—the auto manufacturers have gradually decentralized their operations as much as they can. It is more difficult for the employes of a single company to work up a feeling of solidarity when they are scattered geographically.
